In both the east and the west Hitler and Tojo should see the signs of impending doom. The Allies are battling up through Italy against the Germans. Russian troops are sweeping forward in great movements which will have a disastrous effect upon the Germans at the front and the people at home in the Reich. The Reds are approaching the territories which Hitler snatched. They have already gone into Poland. They have cleared the Germans out of a large section of territory in Russia, have bottled up 175,000 Germans in two sectors of the Ukraine and in others have the enemy retreating westward. Hitler should know his map better now, for the war is in Poland and is nearing his satellites and in fact the Russians are on their march to Berlin. Hitler knows the Poland whose boundaries he violated in 1939 and he remembers where the German army went into territory where the Russians were in 1941. The Fuehrer's brain cannot overlook the significance of this push with the Russians near his gate.

Neither can he overlook the pulverizing of his capital. the levelling of his chancellery and the systematic destruction of German cities playing part in the making of war. Overhead the squadrons of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. and the U. S. Army Air Force dominate the Germanic skies.

Nor can the would-be overlord fail to regard the morale of the associates in the Axis, the Bulgarians, the Finns, the Hungarians and the Rumanians. And in the Balkans things are going awry as the Partisans of Tito are playing havoc with German communications.

Hitler cannot forget that Britain has warned Spain that she expects her to remain neutral.

In the Pacific the successes of the Americans in the Marshall Islands form a strategic advantage for the United Nations which Tojo cannot disregard. Tojo's airplanes and ships have been suffering heavily with their offensive power broken.

This brace of dictators and tyrants can look on the world scene and find everything going amiss against their calculations. Japan's spread across the Pacific is now undergoing a process of shrinking which she cannot avoid. The swing has been and is now against the Japanese. Just so Hitler's expanse of overrun Europe has shrunken in the past year greatly and from the way in which his German armies are heading, the world is convinced that the Germans will be forced to pull back more and more.

The trend is so heavily against the Germans and the Japanese that this year may well be looked upon as a year of great achievements and climax as far as the Allied war against Germany is concerned. The United Nations are confident and with their confidence they have the power to enforce that confidence against the despicable and mad Hitler and his ilk.

Many believe that this year will see the coup de grace or deathblow given Germany and with it the Nazi gangsters, Hitler and all of them.

Coventry

At Coventry, England, which came through the experience of bombing, will be seen after the war a joint step of various church communions towards rendering religious service to the people of the city and making the Coventry Anglican Cathedral a "people's cathedral." The new structure to replace the old will include a Christian service centre for the whole community in full partnership with the free churches. Coventry like so many cities has become the home of a large number of new citizens which the war brought to that centre and of these it is said four-fifths are without church membership. These have created a problem and the churches are going to meet it.

One of the main features will be the placing of the altar in the centre of the new church according to the manner of the early Christian era and because as the Bishop of Coventry said "the altar belongs to the people as well as to the clergy" and "let the people gather around it."

The tradition of the old burned Anglican cathedral will remain in the old tower and apse which survived the bombing by the enemy.

The step is one that will attract attention among members of the churches and others not only in England but in America. It is unprecedented, it is said, in the church history of England. There is seen a growing tendency towards unity as well as a desire to serve the entire community with the ministrations of the churches, serving the needs of all the people whatever their denominational affiliation for the underlying aim of all is to help the people.

Planning for Gardening

What with the mild weather and the lack of snow in any quantity, the winter is passing swiftly and is more advanced than many persons can conceive. Six weeks from today will see the official opening of springtime and four days before that will be St. Patrick's Day, a forerunner of spring.

Many will accordingly be turning their thoughts to the spring activity and the program for the year in the garden. It would not be surprising if there are more gardens in use this year than hitherto, particularly in lines of vegetables which were not very plentiful this past year.

Those who have the space or can secure the land may find a great deal of interest in agriculture on a small scale in the back yard or the nearby vacant lot. Every garden helps much when there is a heavy demand for vegetables.

There are pleasures in gardening which include exercise, improved health and the delight of doing something new, though the occupation is as old as man.

In Europe are many parts where the residents would only be too happy if they were privileged to grow vegetables and benefit by gardening without the Hun looking on ready to confiscate everything. Canadians can grow and watch their gardens come along without molestation, they can reap a crop worth while for a little effort.

Dignity in Humble Tasks

(Montreal Gazette)

In the field of human endeavor a train porter has a humble role. He is the fellow who make up the berths at night and gets his pay partly in tips. He is the servant of the travelling public. Yet a porter can be a gentleman and do his job with dignity.

A correspondent recently told us of a porter who served him on a recent overnight ride. His menial tasks were performed with the air of the perfect host. Summoned by the bell, he was courtesy personified. There was a dash of gallantry in the way he fixed the ladder to the upper berth. Even when he accepted the tip the transfer was as man to man.

Porters and their kind are too often taken for granted. It is they who put the little touches of comfort in travel. It is they who keep the quality of human dignity alive.

Indispensable

(New York Sun)

It may be as the sages said that there is no such creature as an indispensable man, but in the present juncture of international affairs Winston Churchill comes as near that designation as makes little difference . . . Apparently he is not only indispensable but is also indestructible. It is good to know that the hand of the master is again holding the reins in Downing Street. All of us, Americans as well as Britons, feel the safer for it.

We should be as careful of our words as of our actions and as far from speaking ill as from doing ill.—Cicero.

YOU

What books you'll read, how much you'll learn,
How long you'll toil today,
And will you straightway walk or turn,
Is left to you to say.

How much for any goal worth while
Of strength you'll care to pay,
To walk or not that extra mile
Is left to you to say.

Will you the burden bear or drop,
And will you flee or stay,
And where along the road you'll stop,
Is left for you to say.

For each man has this choice to make
Of what he'll be and do.
Life offers several paths to take,
Which one is up to you.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEB. 8TH., 1924.

Local Intermediates led by Bill Green defeated Peterboro in a whirlwind game at the arena. Those who failed to see the game missed more than a mere hockey match; they missed seeing one man hold an entire team at bay, score three of the five local goals and stand up under punishment and the killing pace set by the fast visitors and come back asking for more. Bill Green, the local defence man extra-ordinary, certainly gave the fans something to reminder long after this season's hockey has become a memory. Bill played goal, forward and defence all rolled into one. Many times the fast Peterboro forwards would come flashing down the ice with only Bill to beat, stick handling like champions, only to find that they had two goalies to beat. Falling flat on the ice, batting the puck like a baseball with his stick, catching them on the fly no matter how hard they were driven, he put up an exhibition of defence play has has seldom been seen in amateur hockey, or any other, for that matter. Nurse, Finkle, Frechette, Weir, Whalen, Hagerman and Canning, were all stars and every one of them was in there fighting and put up a grand game, but Green certainly was a super-star. The final score was 5 to 3 in favor of Belleville; three of the goals were scored by Green, one by Finkle and one by Frechette. The referee was Herb Matthews, a former St Michael's star. The following composed the teams: Belleville: Nurse, Green, Finkle, Hagerman, Weir, Frechette, subs, Whalen and Canning. Peterboro: Dwyer, Parker, McMartin, Collins, Burgess, and Jacobi. Subs. Halpin and Rose.

Japanese Supply Bases on 1,500 Mile Front Hit

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 8 — (AP) — Japanese air and supply bases from Tanimbar Islands in the Netherlands East Indies to Kavieng, New Ireland, along a 1,450-mile front, took heavy poundings in Allied aerial attacks reported by the high command today.

Eighty-one tons of bombs, the heaviest load of all the raids, were dropped on Momote airdrome and nearby supply areas in the Admiralty Islands northeast of New Guinea.

Two raids Saturday on Lakunai airdrome at Rabaul, New Britain, destroyed gun positions and started fires in supply dumps, and 39 tons of bombs churned the airfield.

In the Cape Gloucester area on the northwest coast of New Britain, American Marines extended their patrols across Borgen Bay to range in the vicinity of Cape Gauffre and as far as six miles south of the bay.

Farther down the coast, at the neck of the Huon Peninsula, Australian ground fighters have closed the gap between themselves and American invasion troops at Saidor to less than 16 miles.

The Treatment of High Blood Pressure

So as many older and even middle-aged individuals now die from brain stroke or heart stroke, blood pressure has become an everyday topic of conversation. It is not unusual for business men, professional men and others to discuss the exact readings of their blood pressure as given them by insurance, army, or their family physicians.

What many of us forget is that high blood pressure just tells the pressure at a certain time. Just what we have been eating, what work we have been doing, what mental or emotional problems we have been trying to solve are recorded in the blood pressure reading. If we have been resting, have not recently eaten, and have nothing on our minds, we get the true or real blood pressure. And even if it is high at such a time it may be because some organ such as the kidneys is temporarily obstructed and not because the blood vessels themselves have become hardened from loss of some of their elastic tissue.

In an article on the treatment of high blood by Dr. Samuel Proger, professor of Clinical Medicine, Tufts College Medical School, in Medical Clinics of North America, after outlining the medical and surgical treatment of high blood pressure we read that general methods of treatment are more important.

"Overstrain, physical or mental, is known to raise the blood pressure even in normal persons; in patients with high blood pressure the effects are even greater". This means that the physician will have to work out a plan of living for each individual in which there will be periods of complete relaxation and freedom from responsibility. They should be taught that they must withstand or absorb some mental and emotional shocks". It is surprising how often patients when they learn they have high blood pressure can train themselves to absorb emotional shocks knowing how these shocks affect their blood pressure".

As patients with high blood pressure are often sensitive and exacting, the efforts of the physician are directed "toward training the patient to recognize the unimportance of unimportant things".

Many of us even in these war days allow tiny annoyances--pin pricks—to so disturb us that our blood pressure is often 10 to 20 points higher than it needs to be.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Like the brave of our own time, the early settlers were always ready to lead the way in tasks requiring fortitude and courage. They have their recognition in the chronicle of colonial achievement.

* * *

Most of the folk who passed over the narrow wooden bridges of pioneer times have left no record of brilliant exploits in war or peace, but all had their share of adversity in carving homes for themselves in the new world. To many of these frugal people the payment of the bridge toll was a real economic setback. It was teasing, as well, to the spirit.

* * *

How much was levied? Well, to cross the wooden structure that used to span the Cataraqui, in Upper Canada, one "coughed up" for horse and vehicle the sum of 4 pence. A two-horse carriage exacted 7 1-2d. To go on foot cost a penny, and to ride over on horseback, 5 times that amount....Many old-time bridges were roofed. Children delighted in the echoes that followed close upon their shouts and laughter.

* * *

In those far-off days everybody owned a root-house. There are, however, but stray allusions in the narratives of colonial life to this storage-place for turnips, potatoes and fruits. But shreds of information inform us that the building was somewhat aloof from house and barn, and half dug in the ground, banked carefully with earth above and roundabout. Today many up-to-date housekeepers dote on similar "hibernating" dugouts for their hardy vegetables and fruit.

GENEROUS WORKERS

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 8—(AP) —"Just to see what would happen," women assembly line workers at Bell Aircraft Corp. pasted $18 on the skeleton fuselage of an Airacobra P139 for smokes-for-soldiers fund. Six days later when the plane rolled off the line it bore contributions from pennies to a $100 bill and totalling more than $4,000.

HOUSES SETTLE SIX INCHES

Gillespie, Ill., Feb. 8 — (AP) — Three square blocks of a residential area settled six inches to three feet yesterday, caused, Mayor Theodore Frey said, by a mine "squeeze." He estimated damage at $75,000 to $100,000. Under the city are several abandoned coal mine tunnels.

WHISKY GIFTS BOOST SALES

Rushville, Neb., Feb. 8 — (AP) — Sales of $1,000 war bonds are proving popular here says the State War Finance Committee. Tavern keeper Sam Hian is giving each purchaser of a $1,000 bond a quart of whisky and says the offer will hold good until Feb. 15 — or until his supply of whisky is exhausted.

In the Bible story of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden the serpent is referred to as "more subtle than any beast of the field," and it was condemned by God to crawl on its belly and eat dust all the days of its life for meddling in the domestic affairs of the first man and woman. Jesus, according to Matthew: 10: 16, said his twelve disciples: "Behold, I send you forth as sheep into the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves."

Suction is not what it sounds like. The principle of what is popularly called suction is best explained by illustration. Suppose an upright pipe is inserted in a vessel of water. Then further suppose that the air is removed from the pipe, thus creating at least a partial vacuum. The water will rush up in the pipe. Although this phenomenon is called suction, the fact is that the water is pushed into the vacuum instead of being pulled up as commonly supposed. It is the pressure of the atmosphere bearing down on the water surface of the entire vessel that forces the water into the vacuum in the pipe. Sucking with the mouth is on the same principle. By muscular action a partial vacuum is created in the forepart of the mouth. Atmospheric pressure then forces the liquid into the mouth.

ASSEMBLY

Mr. Youdale, Guest Conductor

Due to the absence of Mr. Maybee at the last Assembly period, Mr. Youdale took over the duties of band leader and pianist. In both positions he performed admirably, as was shown by the two fine numbers given by the band, and by the amusing sing-song that he prepared for the students. His energies were by no means wasted as the choral session was thoroughly appreciated by everyone present.

Friends, Romans . . .

Rousing speeches were delivered at our regular Assembly on Wednesday morning by Gordon Bankier and Bruce (Zeke) Philp. The first was to encourage the students to invest twenty-five cents apiece in the basketball-and-dance night, which was held last Friday evening, February 4.

The second speaker was Bruce Philp, his wake strewn with split infinitives and dangling participals, to suggest that all boys over 14 1-2 and not older than 17 1-2 years of age join the Air Cadets. He gave a rosy picture of life in this unit, and doubtless many prospective fliers will heed the call. An interesting aftermath came the next day, when all the Air Cadets wore their uniform to school. Notable exception—Bruce.

The Lucky Number Is . . .

This photo had been presented to the school by the travelling troupe, and the Junior Red Cross had sold tickets on it to see who should be its final owner.

After the Assembly period, Grant was found standing with the picture in one Hand, two battered ticket stubs in the other, and a downcast look on his face. Questioned about his gloom, after having just won that priceless picture, Grant displayed his true Scottish ancentry as he loooked up, bit his lip, and replied: "I guess I should be happy, but I can't think why I bought that other ticket!"

SPORTS

Collegiate Leads Hockey League

The B.C.I.V.S. Senior Hockey squad grabbed first place in the Senior Interschool Hockey League last Tuesday, when they defeated a much-improved Albert team 6-4. With the addition of Jack Boyd to the team, Albert seemed determined to carry off the first game, and victory seemed sure when early in the first period Boyd broke away, skirted the lone B.C.I. defenceman, and drove a shot from close in. But the Collegiate, also intent on winning, put Lyall on his tail, and Boyd was kept off the scoring sheet from then on. Bill Holway tied up the score when he drove one from behind the net, and on the next play Bishop put B.C.I.V.S. out in front 2-1, and once out in front they were never headed. Bailey made it 3-1 before the diminutive MacDonald scored the first of his two goals. Zeke Philp, using his tactics from last year, made two quick goals before Lyall ended the scoring in the third period when he drew the Albert goalie out, and flipped one past him. It was a typically exciting Albert-Collegiate game, with referee Jack Doran handing out only two penalties.

B.C.I. Loses, Wins

On Friday night, the two gymns were the scene of one of the most successful school events ever staged in our Collegiate. The double-header basketball game and dance had been well-advertised, and close to three hundred people were crowded into the Boys' Gym to see, first, our Senior Girls lose a closely contested decision to Trenton, and then the Senior Boys gladdened the hearts of the home fans by defeating a small but courgeous Cobourg team.

In the first quarter of the Girls' game, Margaret Taylor made a spectacular shot from the black line, scoring the first basket for the Belleville team. Trenton evened this score before the end of the first quarter. The second quarter was marked by a basket being scored by Alice Vandervort, and Trenton soon matched this. At the end of three-quarter time, the score was 6-6, Vera Flindall having scored for B.C.I. In the last quarter Trenton really loosed all their forces, raising the score to 14-6. Trenton's centre forward scored three of the baskets.

The Collegiate boys found the range of the basket early in the first quarter, and surged into the lead, never to be headed. The visitors put a light, but fast, squad on the floor, and from time to time they had our boys dizzy with their passing plays. Gordon Bankier was in rare form, and he stood out as the finest player on the floor, scoring 26 of the 36 points. Mason and Garrow scored four points, and Smith had two.

The Collegiate should be proud of its team, for they won against a tough, fast and clever opponent. The score—oh yes, it was 36-25.

After the games, the audience streamed into the Girls' gym, where Harry Denton and his record-player were ready with a grand evening of dance tunes. The crowd was large, but after a short while, there were few wall-flowers.

The whole affair seems even more successful when we remember that on the same evening, IX-A, IX-C, X-B, X-C, XI-A and XI-B all had form parties.

Careful Record Kept of Graves Of Canadians Killed in Action

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(C. P. War Correspondent)

With Canadian Forces in Italy, Feb. 8 (CP) — Parents and other relatives of Canadians killed in action need not worry about their men's graves being forgotten. A permanent record of each grave has been made since the 1st. Division landed in Sicily and fought its way to Ortona.

Two Canadian army graves registration units move forward with the troops, ensuring that every grave, no matter how isolated or overgrown by weeds, is recorded for the time when the body it contains can be moved into an Italian cemetery set aside for Canada's war dead.

One unit, under Capt. Malcolm Gray, Port Credit, Ont., is supervising burial in a Canadian cemetery of Canadian soldiers who died in Sicily. No site yet has been chosen in Italy, but it is understood that any decision will wait until after the war.

Many graves now dot the countryside — evidence of the Canadians' winding path through Italy. But the people of Canada can rest assured that the plots, whether they are neat regimental cemeteries containing 100 or more bodies or bare, wind-swept mounds by the wayside, have been located by the registration units.

The job of recording Canada's war dead in Italy is being done by a unit, commanded by Capt. H. H. Oiraker, Vancouver, which recently arrived from Britain.

Armed with compass, map, pencil and paper, they go out daily—almost into the front lines — to hunt for graves from information supplied by regimental padres. If they come across the burial place of any other body, Allied or enemy, the location is also recorded. Only a few have been found with the word "Unknown" inscribed on the cross which stands as a headstone.

"Everything humanly possible is done to identify bodies," said Lieut. Bentinck. "If a soldier is too badly mutilated or burned to be recognized, his equipment, or what may be left of it, is scoured for identification. It is surprising the number which have been identified by merely a number or letter on a belt or bit of webbing."

Since Italy was invaded the Canadian registration units have been baffled by the few German graves. Those they have found usually contained bodies buried by the Canadians.

"It's a big mystery to us," said Bentinck. "It adds up to the conclusion that the Germans don't bury their dead. It's our theory that all bodies are cremated in a mobile crematerla, which as the Nazis have used on the Russian front."

The War Today— Japan Sees Proof of Allied Power In Marshalls and at Paramushiro

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Japanese government has warned its people that "the Pacific war situation is becoming more serious" and that "the enemy's offensive throughout the entire Pacific is about to be strengthened another step"—which seems to sum up the situation very well.

This statement, part of a broadcast, was evoked by seizure with almost unbelievable ease of the heart of Nippon's powerful Marshall islands defences, and the sensational feat of the United States Navy in bombarding Paramushiro island. An Air Force also bombed Paramushiro.

Now these are no ordinary events. The Marshalls are a vital plate in the armor which shields the Japanese homeland, and the broadcasting spokesman took the pains to tell his listeners that these islands are "only 11 hours from Tokyo by the Flying Fortress of the enemy."

Part of Nippon Itself

Paramushiro, although some 1,280 miles northeast of Tokyo in the Kurile chain, is geographically part of Nippon proper. Also it's the chief Japanese naval base in this strategic zone.

As the harassed Japanese broadcaster surmised, probably further Allied operations are impending in the whole Pacific area. I don't think we should jump to the conclusion that this means the great, all-out drive against the Mikado's forces is about to begin. There still are many preliminaries to be carried out, and anyway we probably shall have to await the end of the European conflict to release equipment for the final attack.

Further Major Steps Possible

However, American naval and air superiority in the Pacific make it possible to undertake further major operations at any time. The Anglo-American forces under Lord Louis Mountbatten in Southeast Asia presumably also are ready for preliminary activities.

The position has been vastly strengthened by the amazing conquest in the Marshalls-achieved, comparatively speaking, with infinitesimal loss. Almost the whole Kwajalein Atoll is in Allied hands, and so far as concerns any little islands still unoccupied, there are no causes for worry. As Rear Admiral Richmond K. Turner remarked of these secondary isles at the time of the invasion:-

"We can take them or let them wither on the vine."

How Much is a Dollar Worth?

A dollar is worth as much as it can buy. For instance, during the last world war people paid .65¢ for a pound of butter . . while you pay around 38¢ today. It is the same with shoes and the other necessities of life. In 1917, they paid $15.00 and you now pay $8.00 for the same quality. This means your dollar is worth more than the dollar of 1914-18. You get more for your money —because price ceilings and other anti-inflationary measures have kept the value of your dollar HIGH! And you will keep your dollar high in value by using money wisely. You protect your dollar's worth every time you buy a bond. . Pass up some needless luxury . . Pay off a debt . . Refuse to hoard goods . . . And refuse to frequent black markets. That's how to make money with your present dollars! Remember, dollars are worth less if they buy less.

Make This Pledge Today!

I promise to give my support to keeping the cost of living down. I will buy only what I need. I will observe the ceiling whether buying or selling goods or services. I will pay off old debts, save for the future, invest in Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates. And I will support taxes which help lower the cost of living.

Keep Your Dollar Value High!

Printed Story

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS YEAR'S crop of print frocks is a bumper one. Even women who aren't always for prints are likely to fall for the new designs, which are beautifully printed on colorful fabrics and made upon very smart lines.

Joseph Halpert, one of America's successful designers, comes along with this good luck horseshoe and four leaf clover print on a black ground. A cascade of bows falls from the surplice style bodice to the hem of the skirt.

Mrs. Isaac Fairbanks, of Kingston, is spending a few days visiting friends in Belleville and Trenton.

Mrs. H. MacDonald, 22 Bettes St., received a cable from her husband, Flt. Sgt. H. MacDonald, telling her of his safe arrival overseas with the R.C.A.F.

According to the society news in The Toronto Daily Star of Monday night, Miss Phillipa Burrows, of Belleville, was seen supper dancing in the Royal York Hotel on Saturday night. Her sister, Sheila, was visiting her in Toronto for the weekend.

Chief Shipwright Gordon Russell and Mrs. Russell of the east coast, spent Monday with the latter's sister, Mrs. G. T. Bristol, Boswell St., stopping in Belleville enroute to Toronto.

Miss Madeline Walden goes to Montreal each week to take her second course of dancing teachers' work from the Evans sisters.

WEDDINGS

ALLISON—McPHEE

Calla lilies, snapdragons, daffadils, carnations and ferns formed the effective floral background in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Saturday, February 5, at two-thirty o'clock when the Rev. J. G. Hornsby united in marriage Clara Lucille McPhee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. D. McPhee, to James Cleland Allison, R.C.A.M.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Allison.

Professor V. P. Hunt presided at the console of the organ and Miss Margaret Houston delightfully rendered "Because."

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Harold N. Carr, the bride was lovely in a gown of white slipper satin, accented with love knots and lilies of the valley of brocaded velvet. It was classically simple in style, fashioned with bracelet-skirt and V neckline complimented length sleeves, softly gathered full by a single strand of pearls. Her cape length veil of tulle illusion draped gracefully about her head from a halo effect headdress. She carried American Beauty roses with orchids and maiden hair fern.

Miss Evelyn Allison, sister of the groom, as maid of honor, was wearing a blue lace dress, made with sweetheart neckline and full skirt of net and taffeta. A matching chapel length veil was caught to her hair with a coronet of similar material and she carried an arm bouquet of Talisman roses.

Miss Doreen Prophet, of Toronto, as bridesmaid, was attired in a frock of turquoise hue fashioned similarly to that of the maid of honor. Her headdress was also the same and she carried Talisman roses.

Groomsman for the occasion was R. W. McPhee, R.C.N.V.R., stationed at St. Hyacinthe, Que., and the ushers were Flt. Lt. Lyle Harvey, No. 5 I.T.S. and Mr. Vernon Weir.

For the reception at the home of the groom's aunt, Mrs. E. A. Barr, the bride's mother received the guests wearing a gold crepe ensemble with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother attired in a Skipper blue crepe suit, black accessories with corsage of pink roses.

Following the reception, the bridal couple left on a wedding trip to Northern Ontario, the bride selecting a gold crepe dress, black accessories, black seal coat and wearing an orchid corsage and gold locket, gift of the groom. On their return they will reside on the Indian Road, Toronto.

Gifts to the maid of honor and bridesmaid were silver mesh evening bags; to the groomsman, a navy ring and to the ushers, silver cigarette boxes with Air Force crests.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Toronto, Campbellford and North Bay.

HOBROUGH—BRANT

Mohawk Reserve—St. Peter's Anglican Church, Toronto, was the setting for a lovely mid-winter wedding at one-thirty o'clock on Saturday afternoon, February 5th, when Helen Marguerite, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Brant, of the Mohawk Reserve, became the bride of Gilbert Louis Hobrough, Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwick Hobrough. The Rev. J. H. Barnes, rector of St. Peter's Church officiated. The altar flowers were pink and white antirrhinum and the chancel was effectively decorated with potted palms.

The youthful bride was attired in a floor-length gown of ivory bridal satin, with shirred bodice and sweetheart neckline. She wore the customary veil of embroidered tulle with orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of red roses, bouvardia and fern. Her only ornament was a two-strand necklace of pearls, the gift of the groom.

The bridesmaid was Miss Mary Shedidan, Orillia, who was wearing a long bouffant frock of blush pink chiffon, with insets of matching lace, and pink tulle shoulder-length veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of harmonizing flowers.

Mr. George Harris attended the bridegroom and during the signing of the register, Mr. Robert Harris sang "Because."

After the ceremony, which was attended by many friends of the young couple, the wedding party was given a reception and luncheon at Cole's Tea Room, where Miss Harvey, an intimate friend of the family, was hostess.

Later in the afternoon, Mr. and Mrs. Hobrough took the train for the bride's home, where her parents gave a sumptuous wedding dinner. Covers were laid for fifty guests. After a brief honeymoon here, Mr. and Mrs. Hobrough will make their home in Toronto.

SIMMONS—GREATRIX

Christ Church, decorated with yellow daffodils and ferns, was the setting for a charming wedding on Saturday evening at eight o'clock when Elaine Lillian (Betty) Greatrix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Greatrix, became the bride of Earl Gordon Simmons, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Simmons, of Lindsay. The Rev. G. G. Wright officiated at the ceremony. Mrs. Grace Calvert played softly through the ceremony and during the signing of the register, Miss Marion Dudley rendered "Because."

Entering the church on the arm of her father, the bride was a radiant picture in her gown of white sheer and finger-tip veil of silk net caught to her hair with an array of orange blossoms. She carried Bettertime roses.

Mrs. Clayton Burley, as matron of honor and Miss Anna Greatrix, maid of honor, were wearing turquoise and pink sheer frocks respectively with matching shoulder-length veils caught to their hair with headdresses fashioned in Mary Stuart design. The matron of honor carried Rapture roses, while the maid of honor carried Talisman roses.

Mr. Benson Kilpatrick acted as groomsman for the occasion and William Greatrix and George Hammett, Jr., as ushers.

For the wedding reception at the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother was attired in a two-piece dress, the skirt of which was black crepe and the top figured blue jersey. Her accessories were black and her corsage of Briarcliffe roses. The groom's mother was wearing a wine crepe ensemble with black accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

On the wedding trip to Toronto and Lindsay, the bride donned a poudre blue wool dress, muskrat coat and brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests were present from Picton, Toronto, Tweed, Kingston, Trenton and Lindsay. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons will reside in Belleville.

Colorful Picture of Life in Chile Given Women's Canadian Club

Mrs. Dorothy Thomson of Belleville Speaks From Experience of 17 Years' Residence in South America

VIVID DESCRIPTION

A vivid, colorful and realistic picture of our southern neighbor, Chile, in the continent of South America, was given by Mrs. Dorothy Thomson to the Women's Canadian Club in St. Andrew's Church Hall on Monday afternoon. This meeting proved even more significant in the fact that Mrs. Thomson was not only being welcomed to the Women's Canadian Club for merely an afternoon, but it was an occasion of welcoming her to the city of Belleville, where she has come to reside.

Introduced by Mrs. W. H. Finkle, Mrs. Thomson has recently come from Chile after being there for seventeen years. During that time, she was a teacher and her husband was connected with the mining industry. She is, at present, War Secretary of the Y.W.C.A. War Services in Belleville.

Living in the town of Tocopilla, in Northern Chile, Mrs. Thomson told how she got to know and love the Chilean people. "The real Chilean is of Spanish descent," she said. The women are petite and lovely and the men, gallant and gay. As for the countryside, Chile could be divided into three sections, as it is very diversified. In the north, the country is of a gray hue because of the mountains, but as one travels into the interior, the picture assumes a shade of green. Then on the southernmost tip of the country, there are the Antarctic eternal snows.

Description of Country

Continuing, Mrs. Thomson spoke first of the northern section in which she and her husband had lived. The length of Chile is 2,800 miles and the average width 200 miles. The foothills run down by the ocean. Beyond the foothills is a plateau which extends for 150-200 miles to the Andes proper. The Andes Mountains form the boundary between Chile and Argentina. Between the two stands a statue of Christ made from a bronze cannon by the women of the two countries to commemorate peace between the two countries following the war that was fought between them.

"The resources of the country," stated Mrs. Thomson, "are very interesting." The north has its minerals, copper, tin and zinc, the central section, its farming, and beyond that, fruit, of the most luscious flavor. Chile is advancing slowly but surely. About 22 years ago, nearly everything pertaining to industry had to be imported. Today, there is an enormous difference. Industries have progressed marvellously, and over the years there has been a decided improvement in them.

Compulsory Education.

"In the year 1930, education was made compulsory," Mrs. Thomson went on to say. Schooling is now free, and Chile is proud to boast of three fine universities.

The whole population of the country is four and a half million people scattered over the many miles from north to south. The peoples are of various races, Indians, Spanish settlers and Europeans. The government of the country is republic.

Industrial Life.

As for industries, continued the guest speaker. Chile is the second largest copper country in the world. The largest copper plant has an output of 700 tons of copper a day. In religion the country is mostly Catholic, and the missionaries do wonderful work, especially among the women who are more conscious of it than the men. The homes of the north lack nothing inside, but their outside appearance closely resembles mere huts. When making gardens, every bit of soil has to be made and the rocks blasted in order to lay out the gardens Nevertheless, they produce flowers of the finest species.

Climate.

"The climate of the north is considered the most perfect in the world," said Mrs. Thomson. It rains there for a period of four or five days only once a year. Six weeks to two months following the rains, the cold grey hills have soft downy moss in the valley sections where there are found the most beautiful flowers of the orchid variety.

Going from the northern section to the central part, she told of the lovely churches, parks, market gardens and homes. Spanish architecture predominating with all its magic and beauty there. The very finest of schools are found there too. In the southern section, there is the untamed countryside with its gorgeous panorama of color. Everything is so crude in that section modern methods have not been adopted and plant life grows at a great rate. The lakes are divine, unique and invariably bordered by snowcapped volcanoes. "They truly form a vista of all colors," stated Mrs. Thomson.

Water Piped From Andes.

Returning to her description of the northern country in which she lived, she told how the water was piped from the Andes Mountains 300 to 350 miles away. A series of pictures, illustrating the colony in which Mrs. Thomson had lived, others showing photos of fishermen, huge fish, ghamas and southern scenery of Chile, were passed among the women.

In Chile, earthquakes are most frequent, but luckily Mrs. Thomson said that the north only feels the tremor of those which shake and disrupt the earth further south.

In speaking of the women, she went on to say that they do not hold a very prominent position but that the men feel the superior race.

The modern Chilean girl has just begun to take debates and study politics in school. In universities, their education is more classical than scholastic. When going out, the women must be escorted. The better class of people guards its children and escorts keep them where they belong. The home, too, holds a very high place. Thus, the children have a sense of duty and responsibility, and as a result, there is very little juvenile delinquency among the educated peoples' children.

Social Laws.

Before closing her subject of Chile, Mrs. Thomson spoke briefly of the Social laws. She mentioned first the Retiring Fund. When one enters the employ of a company, a contract is drawn up and an agreement made by the two people. The employee is compelled to set aside five per cent of his income immediately and the company adds five per cent to it and four and a half per cent compound interest. Every increase of salary in the first month goes to this fund and at the age of fifty years, the employee can collect it. If one should want to invest in property, one can use it and pay it back to the government. If one becomes sick or decides to travel out of the country the money cannot be touched until one is out of the country for the period of a year. Mrs. Thomson also touched lightly on the Indemnity Fund which provides that a month's salary be set aside every year for as many years as one is employed with a concern.

MARSH HILL W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the Marsh Hill W.M.S. was held on Feb. 1st, at the home of Mrs. Bert Searles. Due to the absence of the president, Mrs. Howard Dafoe, 1st Vice-President, was in charge of the worship service and business, the theme for the worship service being, "The Bible, the Common Possession of the World Church." Mrs. Frank Finkle gave a temperance reading. Mrs. W. Lindenfield had charge of the program. She discussed the fourth chapter of the study book, "Grace for Living Together," pointing out that love is the only possible basis of human unity and that enmity and estrangement make freedom impossible. She also stated that the leaders of movements declare that the followers of Christ must bring His commands clearly before men, until those commands become a part of public opinion. The church must become the church of the brave word. Mrs. Searles gave a reading, "A Cripple in China; A Cripple in America; Faith; the First School for Cripples in China." Mrs. L. Finkle gave a reading, "A Substitute for Initiation Ceremonies."

Louella Tells All!

"The Gay Illiterate" is the challenging and delightful title of Louella Parsons' colorful life story, just published. And her book is as frank and piquant as its title.

It is a warm, chatty, intimate little volume, in which you hobnob cosily with all the glamour people you've always wanted to meet and know, from Clark Gable and Paulette Goddard to Jimmy Walker, Fanny Ward and Lord Northcliffe; from Marion Davies and Greer Garson to John Galsworthy. Yet it is not merely a galaxy of glittering names and personalities; but a holding story of the life, loves, struggles and adventures of a spirited career-woman, who won her spurs.

Any teen-age girl in bobby-sox, who is yearning to be a popular columnist or a movie-critic should read this book with much profit. For she would learn exactly "what it takes"—what special gift of mental alertness, what energy and strength of character and above all what self-sacrifice and hard work—to reach the heights of success, which Hollywood's First Lady Columnist has attained.

"The Gay Illiterate" is such an audacious title, such a waggish and pungent caption, that I, who am a title-fiend, howled with appreciation when I first saw it. Yet I have always wondered why Louella was so modest about her own gift of writing and her style. She has a spirited dash-of-the-pen that has made her popular and carried her readers happily along with her for twenty years.

But the daring title disarms the critical, right at the start. For that Louella's style has always been spontaneous, readable and highly entertaining, nobody can deny. Her book, like her column, is diversified to please a wide audience of all types. It has a very human story, humor and much intriguing gossip of the great ones behind the scenes and with their make-up off. And while the author is appealing to the orchestra chairs in one paragraph, she has something to stir or amuse the gallery in the next.

"If I have any particular style," says Miss Parsons, "it is a form of 'chatting' with my readers about the best-known glamour personalities in the world. Such 'chatting' has to be informal—all the best gossip is, whether it is in a column or over the back fence." Well, so is all good writing today—"easy reading."

Nobody ever went to sleep reading one of Louella Parsons columns and nobody could possibly go to sleep over any of the entertaining and intriguing chapters of her book. Her life has been fuller and more colorful than that of any woman I know. It makes swell reading!

I predict that "The Gay Illiterate" will be up among the best sellers!

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

With the R.C.A.F., in Britain, Feb. 8. (CP)—The Canadian Red Indian Squadron led by Sqdn. Ldr. Jimmy Lambert of Winnipeg received many congratulatory messages after its feat of destroying seven Nazi aircraft in a single operation in December. One of the latest was a telegram from Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair.

"Congratulations to all taking part in the destruction of seven enemy fighters", the message said. "This resounding feat of arms, coupled, as it was, with damage to three other enemy fighters, makes a proud record in the annals of your squadron.

FO. J. V. E. Craig, of Abbey, Sask., is enjoying an operational rest, but he's piling up flying hours at an accelerated rate as a Transport Command pilot. His ports of call a couple of years ago were Brest, Kiel, Emden, and other hot spots in Europe and his cargoes were high explosives, but now they are Malta, Tunis, Algiers, Fez, Gibraltar, Port Lyautey and other Mediterranean centres, and he carries supplies instead of bombs.

His one hope is that some day he'll drop in on Montreal, which he hasn't seen since mid-summer 1941.

"This transport work has been interesting work—I've done 15 trips", he said. "Once my aircraft looked like a flying nursery. I came back from Malta with three mothers and five babies, and one cried quite a bit"..

With the winter months being strictly non-conducive to sunning oneself on beaches and such, many R.C.A.F. members in England and Scotland are spending their leaves at various universities in Britain, taking advantage of special one-week courses for service people.

Flt. Lt. Herb Bell of Minnedosa, Man., former professor of English at a Manitoba college and now an administrative officer with the City of Toronto Mustang Squadron, has just returned after being a "Canadian at Oxford" for a week, and considers it seven days well spent.

The crew of a Canadian Halifax bomber turned the tables on a Nazi night fighter. Usually, it is the fighter that attacks the bomber—but NOT so this time.

The bomber had dropped its cookie on Berlin when the rear gunner, Sgt. R. E. Hazall of Windsor, Ont., spotted a night fighter just below the bomber on the fringe of the target. "To make sure he wouldn't give us any trouble we went down after him", said WO2. W. E. Woodward of (45 Olmstead St.) Ottawa, the pilot. "The rear gunner gave him a burst as we closed in, but apparently he had spotted us and broke away into the clouds and we didn't see him again".

In the aircraft with them were PO. J. Lyng (4627 des Erables St.) Montreal, bomb aimer; PO. L. L. Anderson, D.F.M., (506 Balmoral St.), Winnipeg, wireless operator; Sgt. D. Harrison (45 Van Brugh Ave.), Scarborough, Ont., flight engineer; Sgt. A. L. Gabel, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., mid-upper gunner; and PO. W. R. Knowlton, Amherst, N.S. navigator.

Letter From Eire

By SEAN O'CATHAIN
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Dublin, Feb. 8. (CP) — In the hands of Dr. T. F. O'Higgins, leadership of the Fine Gael Party, principal opposition group, in the Dail (Parliament) should lack no virility or forcefulness. He is recognised by members of his own party and government members as being one of the strongest speakers on the opposition benches.

O'Higgins is only the House Leader of the Fine Gael, succeeding W. T. Cosgrave who retired because of ill health. Gen. Richard Mulcahy was elected Jan. 26 as Party leader but holds no parliamentary seat.

Like so many other Irish leaders, O'Higgins' background is the volunteer movement for Irish freedom and the Dail.

His father, Dr. O'Higgons of Lei, was shot and killed in 1922. His brother, Kevin O'Higgins, vice-president of the Executive Council and Minister for Justice in the Cosgrave Government, was murdered by unknown assailants at Booterstown in 1927.

A colonel in the Free State Army and director of Army Medical services, he resigned that post in 1929 and was elected to the Dail as member for North Dublin. From 1932 onwards he represennted his native Lei, officially.

Cosgrave Was One of Main Leaders.

Cosgrave's surprise resignation may be said to close a chapter in Irish history because it removes from the political scene —except as a back bench member of the Dail—in the person of the small, almost timid, always courteous Cosgrave, one of the leading architects and builders of the Irish Free State.

Like many who surrounded him later in the Sinn Fein Movement in the early years of the century, Cosgrave entered public life through the Dublin Municipal Council in 1909. He later was one of the first to join the militant side of the movement for Irish Independence. He fought in the Dublin Union during the 1916 Rising, was captured, sentenced to death and, following commutation of sentence, spent a period in Portland prison. Shortly after his release in 1917, Kilkenny elected him a member of the House of Commons, pledged not to attend the British Parliament and when the first Dail was constituted he became minister for local government.

In Armed Strife.

Still later, as president of the executive council, he engaged in armed strife against his old friends and colleagues, steadfast in the determination that the State which had been accepted by the majority of the people should be maintained and permitted to function.

When Cosgrave's government fell in 1932 it was generally attributed to its public safety act which set up a military tribunal for trial of political offenders and since that time Prime Minister Eamon de Valera has led the Eire government.

John Carroll, chairman of the Irish Livestock Exporters' and Traders' Association, told the annual general meeting of the association that "in the realm of Irish farming the year 1943 was one of outstanding achievement in the production of essential food for the needs of our people".

TWO MEN ARRESTED WANTED IN 12 CITIES

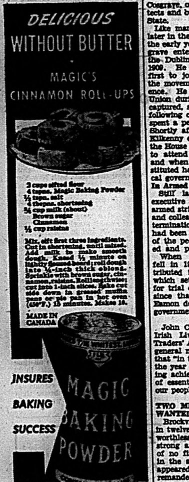
Brockville, Feb. 8. (CP)—Wanted in twelve Ontario cities for passing worthless cheques, Matthew Armstrong and Francis McDonald, 27, of no fixed address were arrested in the act here Saturday. They appeared in court today and were remanded until Feb. 12 for sentence after pleading guilty to 25 charges of false pretenses.



2 cups sifted flour
4 tspns. Magic Baking Powder
½ tspn. salt
4 tbspns. shortening
¾ cup milk (about)
Brown sugar
Cinnamon
½ cup raisins

Mix, sift first three ingredients. Cut in shortening, until mixed. Add milk to make smooth dough. Knead ½ minute on lightly floured board; roll dough into ¼-inch thick oblong. Sprinkle with brown sugar, cinnamon, raisins. Roll lengthwise; cut into 1-inch slices. Bake cut side down in greased muffin pans or pie pan in hot oven (450°F.) 15 minutes. Makes 18.

Why VICKS VAPORUB Is So Good For Relieving Miseries of Childrens Colds

More than two generations ago—in grandmother's day—mothers first discovered Vicks VapoRub. Today it is the most widely used home-remedy for relieving miseries of children's colds. And here is the reason . . .

The moment you rub VapoRub on the throat, chest and back at bedtime it starts to work two ways at once—and keeps on working for hours—to ease coughing spasms, help clear congestion in cold-clogged upper breathing passages, relieve muscular soreness or tightness. It promotes restful sleep. Often most of the misery of the cold is gone by morning! That's why VapoRub is so good to use when colds strike. Try it!

Mutual Life Reports Unbroken Record of Growth

Waterloo—Mr. Louis L. Lang, President of The Mutual Life of Canada, when addressing the policyholders during the 74th annual meeting at Waterloo on February 3rd, pointed out that since its organisation the company has disbursed almost $300,000,000 to policyholders, and that over 35% of the new business issued during recent years had been purchased by existing policyholders. In 1943 the company maintained its unbroken record of growth and entered its 75th year, providing protection for more than 180,000 policyholders.

Praises Canada's War Work

Mr. Lang spoke in high praise of Canada's war work, and of the armed services in particular. He pointed out that Canada's accomplishments and those of all democratic and freedom-loving peoples have, in times of peace and war, been based on the broad foundation of individual effort and free enterprise, and added:

"A yearning for the security of one's family moves men to exert themselves beyond the requirements of mere survival. Pride of work, pride in the superiority of their product, the doing of a better job than the other fellow, prestige of position—all these are aspirations that motivate men's actions. Initiative finds its expression in competition, and competition is possible only where there is a freedom of choice and action. Where men are denied freedom of choice and action initiative disappears, slowly, it may be, but surely, and gives way to inertia and inefficiency. When the opportunity for improving one's lot is narrowed men are apt to lose the interest in their work essential to progress."

Should Reduce Controls After War

Referring to governmental controls and restrictions, he stated it is desirable that they should be reduced to a minimum degree consistent with the national welfare, particularly in the post-war period.

The likely problem of finding post-war employment for almost half of our able-bodied population of working age will fall on the shoulders of private enterprises, said Mr. Lang, adding:

"There is not even a faint hope that the state can make work for all these citizens of ours, and if it could, this type of work is a most costly method of absorbing labour, and is not economically sound. Consequently, anyone who uses the talents God gave him to torpedo free enterprise is, in effect, without realising it, talking himself out of a job."

Must Have Agents

He emphasized the fallacy of the argument that it is not necessary for a life insurance company to employ agents, stating that attempts have been made to do this, without any reasonable measure of success. Life insurance salesmanship today has reached the status of a profession, the degree of Chartered Life Underwriter being awarded to those who pass exacting examinations.

Mr. Lang closed his address with the observation that imperfections in an economic system do not necessarily mean that the system is wrong and that free institutions must be abolished, or that it would be wise for the government to take over operations in many fields. The principles which actuated the founders of The Mutual Life — a determination to take care of their own domestic responsibilities and be independent of paternalistic benevolence—is the thought that should be repeated throughout this country, said Mr. Lang, who added: "I prefer to think that we in Canada choose to be free men and that we will continue to do our building on this foundation."

General Manager's Address

Mr. W. H. Somerville, General Manager, reported that assurance in force increased by $41,499,837 to a total of $680,026,296. New business for the year, excluding annuities and revivals, amounted to $63,366,773. When commenting on the new insurance sold, and the terminations, Mr. Somerville said:

"The type of policy sold will largely determine the length of time it will remain on the company's books. Persons buying life insurance do so to meet varying needs. . . . In view of the varying purposes which people have in buying insurance, many of the so-called terminations have fulfilled the insurance needs of the owners of these policies—in fact, many such terminations are involuntary, such as those caused by the death of the insured, by the maturity of endowment contracts, or by the expiry of term insurance, taken at low cost for temporary protection.

The needs of beneficiaries are frequently just as varied as those of the policyholders, after the original policy has served its purpose. Many of the terminations shown in the assurance account merely record the transfer from one form of contract to another."

Avoid Lapsation

With reference to the subject of lapsation, Mr. Somerville said:

"Every possible effort is made to avoid the lapsation of policies as, contrary to much prevailing opinion, lapsed policies are a financial loss to the company, and often cause dissatisfaction. It is doubtful if our company's lapse record is excelled on this continent, and this stands as a tribute to the fine quality of our field representation."

In view of recent comment on the effect which the use of more modern mortality tables would have on life insurance rates, Mr. Somerville pointed out that the company is using tables which reflect modern experience.

Insurance Reserves

Of special interest is Mr. Somerville's explanation of the nature of life insurance reserves:

"In Banking, Rest or Reserve, is regarded as consisting of the profits remaining undivided after payment of dividends, or, in effect, as surplus. In life insurance, the term "Reserve," has an entirely different meaning. It is the amount of funds which with future premiums and accumulated interest, will enable the company to meet all future obligations to policyholders. Accordingly, the amount of Reserve in our statement is not a distributable sum, except to the extent it is drawn upon to meet claims."

Loans Reduced

Loans to policyholders, secured by the cash value of policies in the company, are lowest since 1929, and were reduced $2,077,968 in 1943.

The rate of interest earned on invested assets during 1943 was 4.56% as compared with 4.57% in the previous year. Mr. Somerville pointed out that the rate is better than might have been anticipated, having regard to the relatively low rate obtainable on new investments and the substantial reduction in mortgages, sale agreements and policy loans.

Mr. Somerville commended the company's representatives in the field for the valuable service they have given in increasing the security which life insurance provides for Canadian homes, in enlarging the flow of money into channels which assist in preventing inflation, and in aiding the government in the sale of Victory Bonds; and referred to the large number of representatives and other members of the company's organization who are serving with the armed forces.

Archbishop McGuigan's letter said a campaign to set up a fund for construction and equipment will be conducted in the Toronto archdiocese during the Lenten season.

177 Hostages Shot by Nazis

London, Feb. 8 (CP)—The Polish telegraph agency said today 177 hostages were shot by the Germans in Warsaw the last two weeks in October.

Details of the shootings have just come from Poland, the agency of the Polish government in London said, listing Janina Aszkenacy, daughter of Dr. Simeon Aszkenazy, Polish historian and delegate to the League of Nations, as among those executed.

"The hostages were shot on Warsaw's main streets in bunches of 10, in full view of the rest of the populace," the agency said. "The shootings were ordered by Hans Frank, Governor General of the occupied country, as reprisals for guerilla sabotage

"Two, women, who kneeled in prayer over the bodies of one group of victims, were also shot down."

The agency asserted five women and a large number of youths were among the hostages killed.

Six-Ardees Trounce Mountain View Bombers 7 to 3 to Move Into Tie for First Place

Teams Play Even Hockey Until Third Period When Winners Score Four

BOYS GET TOUGH

Carrying too much speed all along the line coupled with some strong fore-checking No. 6 Repair Depot well-earned a 7-3 win over the Mountain View "Bombers" in a scheduled Quinte service league hockey match at the Hume Arena Monday night. Over 600 fans saw action personified as the "Six-Ardee" lads literally skated the Bombers into the ice in the last period when they scored four goals. The period scores were 1-1 and 3-3, before the winners broke away in the final stanza.

The game was not without its moments as a free-for-all scrap broke out in the middle session with players dropping their puck cudgels to select opponents and commence swinging. In the mellee even officials went to the ice in their efforts to break up the fight. No great physical damage resulted and four players were banished to the sin bin to cool off.

Hunt and Landriault with a brace of goals each paced the No 6 Depot on the attack. The Bombers scoring was evenly divided between Cowley, Aube and Boudreau with one each.

Scoring Even in First.

Scoring was even in the initial period as Hunt rang the bell for the winners and Boudreau scored for the Bombers. Landriault put Coach Bud Corbett's Repair boys one up in the second, before Aube broke away and following the fistic outbreak Cowley snagged the face off and raced through to put Coach "Dutch" Cain's Bombers one up, but Feldman's long shot was allowed, dehpite hectic protests on the part of the Bombers and the period ended one all. The Repair depot boys ran amok in the third stanza to score four goals, as Worrall, in the winners' nets, was invincible before the Bombers' attacks, led by Aube and Boudreau.

In winning the No. 6 Depot sextette moved into a tie for first place in the league standing with the Trenton Flyers. A doubleheader of service league hockey is being proposed for Thursday night at the Hume Arena.

The lineups:

No. 6 Repair Depot: Goal, Jackson; defence, Derry and Feldman; centre, Hunt; wings, Dixon and Pfaff; subs, Stewart, Campbell, Landriault, McInnis, Goddue and Howes.

Mountain View: Goal, Worrall; defence, Barker and Cowley; centre, Aube; wings, Duguette and Boudreau; subs, Fuger, Platt, Michinick, McReavey, Brock and Savard.

Referees: St. Louis and Holway of Belleville.

Summary:

1st. Period.

1..No. 6 Depot: Hunt (Dixon) 6.11
2..Mountain View: Boudreau (Aube) .................... 9.55
Penalty—Cowley.

2nd. Period.

3..No. 6 Depot: Landriault McInnis) .................. 6.11
4..Mountain View: Aube ...... 6.59
5..Mountain View: Cowley .. 11.05
6..No. 6 Depot: Feldman .... 17.35
Penalties—McReavey, Fuger, Pfaff and Derry.

3rd. Period.

7..No. 6 Depot: Hunt (Dixon) 2.01
8..No. 6 Depot: Landriault (Goddue) ................ 4.15
9..No. 6 Depot: Dixon (Feldman) .................... 13.45
10..No. 6 Depot: Howes ...... 18.55
Penalty—Derry.

ALLIED PUGILISTS READY FOR BOUTS

Allied Headquarters, Altiers, Feb. 8 —(AP)— Allied Pugilists of all weights and ranks began arriving today for their final tuneup for the free-for-all Allied championship bouts scheduled to start in Algiers next Monday.

Many of the fighters, professional and amateur, were pulled out of the fighting fronts especially for these bouts. Some still wore the dirt of the bitter campaigning around the Cassino (Italy) sector when they checked into fight headquarters at nearby Palm Beach, a palm-fringed rest camp by the sea.

Cpl. Charles Sherman, of Greenville, Miss., is regarded as a dark horse in the lightweight class. He scored a stunning upset in the early eliminations when he defeated Pte. Vincent J. Gawlatto, of Philadelphia, who twice had reached the finals of the Golden Gloves and Diamond Belt Competition in New York and Philadelphia.

There will be in all 84 finalists among American, British, French, Polish, Greek and other Allied troops. Each bout will consist of three two-minute rounds. In event of a draw an additional round will be fought.

ALLAN, MEMORIAL CUP FINALS TO BE PLAYED IN EAST

Frank Sargent, President of C. A. H. A., Announces Dates for Playoffs

JUNIORS AT TORONTO

Port Arthur, Feb. 8—(CP)—Both Allan and Memorial Cup finals will be played in the East this year, Frank Sargent, President of the C. A. H. A said here Monday night in announcing dates and venues for the 1943-44 Senior and Junior hockey play-offs. The National Junior final is booked for Toronto and the Senior final at Toronto, Montreal or Ottawa. Both series will start April 15.

Manitoba, its Senior hockey comprised entirely of services teams and therefore barred from competing, is the only branch not represented in the Senior field. The eastern dates and venues are as follows:-

Senior (all best-of-five)—

Eastern Canada:-

Series A—Quebec A. H. A. vs. Maritimes A. H. A. March 23 and 25 at M. A. H. A. ice, balance at Q. A. H. A. ice, March 28 and 30 and April 1 if necessary.

Series B—O. H. A. vs Ottawa and District A. H. A. March 23 and 25 at Ottawa, balance at O. H. A. ice March 27 and 29 and April 1 if necessary.

Eastern final. April 3, 5 and 8 and 10 and 12 if necessary.

If Q. A. H. A. wins, Series A and O. H. A. wins Services B.

First two games in the Eastern final at O. H. A. ice April 3 and 5, balance at Q. A. H. A. ice April 8 and 10 and 12 if necessary; if Q. A. H. A. wins Series A and Ottawa and District A. H. A. wins Series B, first two games at Q. A. H A ice, balance at discretion of C. A. H. A. officers; if Ottawa and District wins Series B and M. A. H. A. wins Series A. First two games at Ottawa, balance at discretion of C. A. H. A. officers; if O. H. A. wins Series B. and M. A. H. A. win Series A. First two games at O H. A. ice, balance at discretion of C. A. H. A. officers.

Junior:-

Eastern Canada:-

Series A (best of three) Q. A. H. A. vs. M. A. H. A. all games at M. A. H. A. ice March 28 and 30 and April 1 if necessary.

Series B (best of three) O. H. A. vs Ottawa and District A. H. A. all games at O. H. A. March 28 and 30 and April 1 if necessary.

Eastern final (best of five)—April 1, 3 and 5 and 8 and 10 if necessary. If Q. A. H. A. and O. H. A. meet in the final, first two games to be on O H. A. ice, third and fourth if necessary on Quebec ice and balance of series on O. H. A. ice; if finals are from the other branches, C. A. H. A. officers will decide venue of game.

The C A. H. A. reserves the right, Mr. Sargent said, to change the length of series, venue or dates of games if in its opinion such a change is necessary.

The associations' annual meeting will be held at Montreal April 10.

500 PLAYERS ADDED TO LISTS

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Minor League baseball had added 500 players to its contract lists since the close of last season by a careful combing of the bushes and appears to have quieted fears of an immediate manpower shortage.

This was the consensus of baseball men who conclude a four-day midwinter session with a National League meeting today.

Although 3,100 men are now on the minors' national defence list, the 10 leagues expected to operate in 1944 will require only 1,260 when they have pared down to their player limits. Actual reserve list totals are unavailable due to draft depletions since the last compilation, but National Association reports indicate that the figures are about average for this time of the year.

The ten minor leagues expecting to operate this year are the International, American Association, Pacific Coast, Southern Association, Eastern, Interstate, Piedmont, Pony, Appalachian and Ohio State (not in process of organization).

CAIN AND CARR STILL LEADING SCORING RACE

Bill Mosienko of Chicago Slips Into the Third Place

BENTLEY FOURTH

Montreal, Feb. 8. (CP)— Herbie Cain of Boston and Lorne Carr of Toronto each added a single point to their totals during the last week to maintain their tie for leadership in the official National Hockey League scoring statistics.

In a week that was generally low-scoring as far as the top-notchers were concerned, Bill Mosienko of Chicago, added four points to slip into third spot with a total of 52, four behind the leaders and one ahead of teammate Doug Bentley and the injured Bill Cowley of Boston.

Slackening of the pace of the leaders meant that for the first time since early in the season, the point-total of the pace-setters fell below the leading mark at the same peroid last year. A year ago today, Cowley was leading the race with 58 points, compared with the 57 held at present by Cain and Carr. However, at this time last year Cowley had played in 38 games while this year Cain has been in only 33 and Carr in 37.

The assist race tightened during the last week, with Elmer Lach and Buddy O'Connor of Canadiens and Clint Smith of the Hawks all bunched for first spot with 34 each one more than Cowley. Cain continued as top goal-getter with an even 30, three more than Mud Bruneteau of Detroit and four more than Carr.

Mike McMahon of Canadiens remained the most penalized player in the league with 61 minutes in majors and minors.

ROSS KEEPING FINGERS CROSSED

Boston Bruins Can Make Fourth Place by Winning Twice This Week

By the Canadian Press

The man saying nothing and keeping his fingers crossed is Art Ross, whose Boston Bruins can be riding alone in fourth place in the National Hockey League by Friday morning—if everything goes right.

In tonight's only N. H. L. game the Bruins entertain the Canadiens, and there's a slim chance that Boston may pull out another win and get back into the fight for the runner-up positions.

If the unexpected happens and the Bruins, always formidable on their own ice, should humble the Canadiens tonight, they will be tied with Chicago for fourth place, and they travel to Chicago on Thursday night.

The Bruins now are a game behind the Hawks and two and a half games behind Toronto. On their series to date however the Canadiens have the edge on the Bruins, having won three out of seven with two tied, and with Toe Blake in the line-up the Canadiens will be no easy mark tonight.

King of Swat Celebrates 50th Birthday at His Home

(By The Canadian Press.)

Babe Ruth, the King of Swat, yesterday celebrated his 5th birthday with a party at his New York home which is practically a baseball museum with its numerous trophies and gifts from the years when he was slugging out as many as 60 home runs in a season and rolling up a total of 714 circuit clouts, not including 15 homers in world-series games as a member of the New York Yankees.

The swatsmith expressed a wish to go overseas to entertain the troops but said he had been warned he could not stand the trip by half a dozen doctors. He weighs 240 pounds now and, to keep down the advoirdupois, he bowls four games each day and plays golf in the summer to a moderate degree. "My keens give out on me," he explained.

The Jamestown, N.Y., Falcons of the Pony baseball league will be operated independently of the St. Louis Cardinals this season, it was announced yesterday at Buffalo by Harry Bisgeier, owner of the club which operates under a franchise formerly held by Hamilton, Ont.

Joe Tinker, infield star of the Chicago Cubs two generations ago, was reported to have taken a turn for the worse at the hospital in Orlando, Fla., where he is suffering from a combination of ailments aggravated by influenza.

Tippy Larkin, New Jersey scrapper, yesterday found he tipped the scales at 140 pounds for his New York bout Wednesday night with Lulu Constantin. Larkin has posted a $1,000 forfeit that he will make 137 pounds or less at the weigh-in time for the 10 rounder.

In contrast to his holdout activities one year ago, Lou Novikoff revealed at his Los Angeles home yesterday he had signed his 1944 contract to play outfield for the Chicago Cubs once more. Lou did not do so well when he finally returned to the diamond last season.

Tom Burlington of Cleveland BBarons continued to lead the scoring parade in the American Hockey League with a total of 55 points, two more than his team-mate Lou Trudel. Third place was taken over by another Clevelander, Les Cunningham, replacing Gaston Gauthier of Hershey, according to the table announced yesterday.

Lefty O'Doul, pilot of the San Francisco Seals since 1935, was mentioned yesterday as the prospective successor to Casey Stengel as manager of the Boston Braves, who resigned when the club changed hatnds. Failing O'Doul, President Bob Quinn may promote Bob Coleman, coach of the Braves.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Feb. 8. (AP)—Opinion sampling: This corner recently mentioned the possibility of staging a post-war United States Collegiate Baseball tournament, which would be in line with organized baseball's plans to build up the game in high and prep schools. . . we have had comment on the subject.

Apart from uncertain Spring weather, uncertain gate receipts and short seasons that end before interest reaches a peak, the principal objection to big-time college baseball is that the football coaches don't want it. . . . Pointing out that Notre Dame, which used to produce plenty of big leaguers, dropped from the baseball picture when Knute Rockne's grid teams hit the headlines, one minor league leader added: "College hurts a ball player. He doesn't get the competition he would in the minors."

ALEMITES REMAIN UNDEFEATED IN CITY CAGE LOOP

Reliance Keeps Pace With Leaders by Downing the Sargents

GOOD CONTESTS

Alemite and Reliance picked up points in the dual bill of City Ladies' basketball played at the Y.M.C.A. Monday night when Alemite trounced the Deacon lassies 32 to 4, while in the nightcap affair Reliance triumphed 24 to 16 in a better contest. In winning Coach Frank Martin's Alemites retained their lofty perch as league leaders being four points up on Coach Roly Pryke's second placed Reliance. The Alemites haven't lost a game in four starts.

In the curtain-raiser the league-leading Alemite quintette garnered in an 18 to 2 advantage at the halfway mark, as Deacons scored but one basket in each half. Ruth Oliphant paced the winners with ten points, followed by Dot Ronsky and D. Mansfield.

Paced by Kay Coathup, who scored eight on the Reliance dozen baskets, Coach Pryke's squad led 10 to 4 at half time with Mrs. Coathup notching 16 points while Arlie Gilbert scored six and N. Stoliker two points for the winners. M. Allison led the Sargents on the attack with eight points, getting her four baskets in the last half. H. Gariepy added four more points to the losers' cause.

ST. CATHARINES WELL IN FRONT

By the Canadian Press

With only five more scheduled games to play, St. Catharines Saints went into a three-point leadership in the Senior O. H. A. race last night by disposing of lowly Navy 5-3 on Toronto ice, after the Sailors had played a two-game exhibition series at North Bay and Sudbury. Incidentally, the Tars have a busy program immediately facing them with a fixture in Hamilton tonight and a return tilt at St. Catharines tomorrow evening, making five starts in six days all told.

Barlow put the Bluejackets into an early lead against Saints with the first tally of the game but the visitors quickly drew abreast and the count was 2-all at the close of the first period. St. Catharines did the only scoring in the second to forge ahead 4-2, then finished out the engagement 5-3.

The Sailors were without the services of Scotty Milne, injured at Sudbury, while Jud McAtee was back in circulation with the Saints and rang up one of the tallies. Leading scorer for the winners was Paul Nu Drick, with two, and Blink Bellinger and Red Reynolds secured one apiece. The goal-getters for Navy were Barlow, Thompson and Livingstone.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Before the bar of justice on wife-brought charges of desertion and non-support, Mose Brown meekly admitted his guilt and offered nothing in extenuation except that the lady talked too much:

Judge—That's no excuse for desertion, Mose. Don't you know that the constitution guarantees every woman the right to talk all she wants to?

Mose—Yessuh, Jedge. I knows it do. Only Lack she never stops talkin'. She keep it up stiddy, mo'nin', noon, and night, day in, and day out, till it git so I just cain't stan' it no mo', Jedge.

Judge (impressed by the Negro's mournful earnestness)—She does? What does she talk about?

Mose (wagging his head sorrowfully)—Jedge, suh, she don't say.

(Trenton in.)

Coach Stan Jackson's smooth-working Trenton juniors showed they are a good road team by walking into Stirling last night and taking the measure of the "Combines" to the tune of 7 to 6 to cinch first place in the district junior O.H.A. group.

Last night's result places a much different aspect on Wednesday night's Combine game here with Coach Holway's locals at the Hume Arena. Today, the locals are just one game ahead of the Combines, but if coach Ralph Neal's "northerners" can beat Belleville here Wednesday night they'll create a tie for second place in the final standing. In their last meeting these two sextettes played a thrilling 3-3 tie, and with so much at stake Wednesday night the season's daintiest morsel of junior hockey is assured. The closeness of last night's score indicates how strong the Combines really are, but Belleville hopes to have Billie Holway and Al Gordon, their scoring threats, out for tomorrow night's game, which will doubtless attract the season's largest crowd.

Showing absolutely no respect for former N.H.L. players and others who have played senior hockey, Coach Bud Corbett's No. 6 Repair Depot pucksters soundly trounced the "Dutch" Cain's Mountain View Bombers 7 to 3 to move into a tie with the Trenton "Flyers" for the leadership of the district service hockey loop. For two periods the Bombers kept even with the flying Repair lads, but Skipper Corbett's Repair lads carried too much speed all along the line and literally skated the heralded Bombers into the ice, after checking them repeatedly in their own territory. Incidentally Worrall, in the winners' nets, was a tower of strength, but he was given some fine support by his teammates, who repeatedly came back to thwart the Bombers when the latter were in scoring position. And they kept Pat McReavey, former Boston Bruin, off the scoring sheet. Hunt, Landriault, Feldman and Dixon played a lotta hockey for the winners. Incidentally the boys tossed in a good old fashioned fistic outbreak for good measure, all of which was enjoyed by the fans. These Air Force games are attracting larger crowds each night out.

(Seeing others.)

Fred Craig, Peterborough sports scribe, doesn't feel quite so bad these days, although Fred will feel much better when he sees a new, modern and up-to-date artificial ice rink in Peterborough. Commenting on the lack of ice in the Liftlock City Scribe Craig says: "Peterborough is not the only hockey centre without ice accommodation this winter. In Kitchener, long the home of good teams, there is no hockey cushion available as the situation there is the same as here with the former hockey arena used for other purposes. The sports commentator of the Kitchener News-Record was in attendance at the St. Mike's-Galt game the other night and was impressed by the fine showing made by three young Kitchner boys with the Collegians, forwards Dave Bauer and Bobbie Schnurr and goalie Pat Boehmer. All three of them are headed for the hockey major loop, he opines and then he adds mournfully: "Watching three local boys star for an out-of-town team is another good argument for an auditorium in the city. With players of this calibre as a nucleus, Kitchener could have a strong junior "A" entry if they had some place to play their games here. The sooner plans are completed to put up a rink the sooner it will be possible to keep our town boys at home to pick up the tradition of the old green and white where it was broken when the old arena folded."

(Remember when—)

Len Harvey spotted Canada's Larry Gains 37 pounds at London, England, ten years ago tonight and pounded out a 15-round decision to hold his British Empire heavyweight boxing championship. The colored battler had Harvey in distress in the opening rounds but the Englishman came back strong to win the unanimous decision.

(Inter-bowl games.)

Henry M. Warraven of St. Louis has suggested a plan to revolutionize these post-season phases of football bowl games. He proposes that the Sugar and Cotton Bowl games be moved up to Christmas, with the winner in each meeting on New Year's Day in a climatic classic for the inter-bowl championship in New Orleans and Dallas on alternating years.

"Like a double feature of a movie or a double-header in baseball," Walraven explains, "The fans are sure to go for it." Walraven hit upon the idea while watching football in Dallas, his former home.

Toronto, Feb. 8. (CP)—Baseball leagues will be organizing soon for the 1944 season. They'll have to consider the Army-R.C.A.F. order barring members of those services from sport competition with civilians. Some of the best ball teams in the country last season were service clubs. London army cleaned up in the east, taking the Ontario Intercounty title as well as the Dominion title of the National Baseball Congress. Its defence of those titles is prohibited by the new restrictions . . . Congress attempts to expand its Dominion-wide play-offs this year will be hindered by the service restrictions, perhaps thwarted altogether. In any event the Congress has announced it will inaugurate a movement to promote minor baseball for boys age 15 and up. The idea is to organize league and provide umpires and coaches.

There'll Come a Day:

With the S.R.O. sign on the Montreal Forum for a Toronto-Canadiens game, Hooley Smith buzzed Hap Day for a couple of ducats. Hap happened to have a pair of employee tickets from a game at Chicago and handed them over. Smith thanked him profusely and hurried off. "I haven't heard from Hooley since", chuckles Hap, "but I will, brother, I will"!

Incidentally:

Jack Tomson, former Reginan who saw the N.H.L. with New York Americans before the war, is a native of Uxbridge, England, and hopes to play hockey in England after the war. "That hundred a week and a good job in summer would just hit me right", says Tomson, now 26 and in the Navy. . . When Dit Clapper of Boston, joins the services, Mush March of Chicago will be the active player with the longest continuous N.H.L. service. Mush, 35, joined Hawks in 1928 after helping Regina Monarchs win the Memorial Cup. Clapper joined Bruins in 1927.

Hall of Fame:

George (Buck) Boucher, brother of Frank and a former N.H.L. star, says Joe Malone, Frank Nighbor and brother Frank Boucher are all "musts" for Hockey's Hall of Fame. Malone set the all-time scoring mark of 44 goals in 22 games with Montreal Canadiens in 1917-18. Buck Boucher comments: "He could stickhandle better than any of them and he was like an eel".

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 297

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

How is your rememberer? Can you always recall the cards that have been played? Neither can I. My memory is too poor. Maybe you would like to use my memory method.

If you are an efficient housekeeper, your knives and forks and spoons are always in their own places in your kitchen drawer. The better to remember and find them, my dear.

If you are a systematic merchant you always keep nickles, dimes and quarters in their own compartments. The better to keep from making mistakes, my boy.

Apply the same idea to bridge when you are playing the cards as the declarer. Always keep your trumps at your left and the other suits alternating red and black.

When dummy hand is spread, trumps should be on dummy's right (your left). And before playing the first card from dummy, arrange all dummy suits opposite the same suits in your own hand.

When so arranged, it is easier to match the combined holdings in each suit in both your hands. That tells you what important cards in each suit are missing; what cards of what suits you must remember.

In that way, you don't need to remember all the cards in all the suits: Nor all the cards opponents might have. Nor all the cards that will be played. Only the important ones.

West starts with an opening lead of the spade jack. You are the declarer in the south at a contract of seven hearts. The cards held by your partnership are these:

SOUTH
♠Q 4
♥A Q 10 5
♦7 3
♣A 8 6 4 3
NORTH
♠A K 5
♥K J 9 4
♣7

As soon as dummy hand spreads, reach over and re-arrange dummy cards to positions opposite your own suits. If necessary, ask dummy to move that spare tire away from the table edge.

Now, compare your combined cards in each suit. What cards do you fear? They are the only cards you need to keep track of.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Man Who Came to Dinner"

A gala feast of fun will be served up by the McCarthy Theatre which will show "The Man Who Came to Dinner," coming next. Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan and Monty Woolley top the cast of the Warner Bros. version of the famous stage comedy which recently completed a two-year engagement on Broadway. Jimmy Durante, Billie Burke, Reginald Gardner, George Barbier, Richard Travis and Elizabeth Fraser head the featured cast.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" which flowed from the pens of those versatile playwrights, George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, has been adapted for the screen by Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, two of Hollywood's top comedy writers. Advance reports have it that the screen version of the comedy is even more riotously funny than the stage play which rocked Broadway for two years.

Monty Woolley, who created the role of Sheridan Whiteside, famous lecturer and vitrolic wit, on the stage was brought to Hollywood to do the role for the screen. Bette Davis plays his sophisticated secretary and Ann Sheridan plays the stage actress he imports to break up Bette's romance when he believes she is about to give up her job for marriage. Whiteside arrives in a small Ohio town to lecture and the town's leading social light invited him to her home for dinner. Entering her home, he slips on the porch and breaks his hip.

The dinner guest stays a month and it is doubtful whether any guest in the world over has ever created so much havoc as he manages to stir up during his enforced visit. He takes complete possession of the house.

Of all the long-suffering folk with which the completely selfish Whiteside surrounds himself, his secretary is the only one who dares to rebel. She is on to all his tricks for holding the centre of the stage, and can answer his rapier-like verbal thrusts with even sharper ones of her own. Then love comes along in the form of the young editor of the local newspaper and she begins to toy with the idea of giving up her job and becoming a small town matron. But Whiteside will have none of this, and as soon as he begins to notice that extra gleam in her eyes, he phones the most glamorous actress he knows and tells her to come immediately. For bait he uses the script of a play the newspaperman has written. Ann Sheridan, as the actress, arrives poste-haste and for awhile things look black for Bette. But by matching her boss trick for trick, she winds things up triumphantly for herself.

"Nobody's Darling"

"Nobody's Darling" is the title of the second feature attraction at the McCarthy Theatre coming next starring Mary Lee.

Most of the action centres round the very exclusive school in Hollywood, where the children of a great many of the stars are being educated, and the students all bask in the reflected glory of their respective parents, trying their best to emulate the stars they call mother and father. Included in the supporting cast are Jackie Moran, Gladys George and Lee Patrick.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Lives of a Bengal Lancer"

The soldiers of the king, not as Kipling sang of them but as Francis Yeats-Brown described in his remarkable book "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer"—are the heroes of the stirring, remarkable and colorful picture of warfare and heroism in India which came to the Capitol Theatre yesterday. Produced by Paramount, "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer" features Gary Cooper, Franchot Tone, Richard Cromwell and Sir Guy Standing in the leading roles.

"Walkiki Wedding"

With the South Sea Isles as its locale the musical "Waikiki Wedding" brings to the screen the one and only Bing Crosby who sings "Blue Hawaii", "Sweet Leilani", "In a Little Hula Heand", and "Sweet is the Word For You". Other feature players are Bob Burns, Martha Raye and Shirley Ross.

The Canadian Universal News completes the big double program.

AT THE BELLE

"A Lady Takes a Chance".

The unexpected results of a 17-day transcontinental bus trip for a New York working girl lead to the hilarious happenings of RKO Radio's new comedy romance, "A Lady Takes a Chance," now in its final day at the Belle Theatre.

Jean Arthur is the "Lady," and the "Chance" she takes is John Wayne, co-starred with her in the sparkling fun film. The two meet in a little Oregon town when Wayne, a rodeo rider, is tossed right into her lap, and from then on the laughs come fast and furiously.

The Belle newsreel, A Walt Disney color cartoon and an entertaining screen novelette completes the program.

"True to Life," Funny

The Porters are coming, hurray, hurray! They're on their way to the Belle Theatre in Paramount's riotous comedy-with-music, "True to Life," starring Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Dick Powell and Victor Moore. The Picture, which tells the story of how the Porter family rises from obscurity to fame, is coming soon and, according to reports, it is one of the merriest, happiest pictures made in a long time.

Tone and Powell are seen as two high-salaried radio writer whose bosses are displeased with their material. Powell goes in search of inspiration, meets Mary Martin in a Long Island diner and lets her think he is down and out. Her family takes him in and he proceeds to put them on the air, unknown to them.

The story is extremely funny, each member of the Porter family a riot unto himself. The three-cornered romance is played for laughs, too, and the music, by Hoagy Carmichael and Johnny Mercer, is an additional entertainment filip. The songs are, "The Old Music Master," "Mister Pollyanna" and "There She Was," all hit tunes.

"Mardi Gras," in Color

An eye-filling production—famous vaudeville and screen stars—new song hits, all in radiant technicolor will be presented in "Mardi Gras" to be presented on the same program with the Canadian Movietone News revealing highlights from World battle fronts.

HOUSE EXTENDS TIME

Washington, Feb. 8 — (AP)—The House of Representatives voted yesterday to extend for the eighth time the dates for starting and completing a bridge across the St. Lawrence River between the United States and Canada at or near Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Congress approved in 1933 the creation of the St. Lawrence Bridge Commission and authorized it to construct the bridge. The starting and completion times were extended by Congress in 1934; 1935; 1936; 1937; 1939, 1940 and 1941.

Zion Hill Moves To Top of Loop Beating Centenary

West Huntingdon Wins the Second Half of Double Bill by Downing Corbyville

SMART CONTESTS

Perennial finalists in the Central Hastings Hockey League, Zion Hill pucksters went to the top of their league at Stirling Friday night as in winning their second straight game of the season they downed the Centenary sextette by a decisive 6-2 score. In the other half of the evenings double bill, West Huntingdon scored a shutout over Corbyville when they rang in five goals without a return.

Scoring three goals in the initial frame West Huntingdon made sure of their game against the league's new entrant Corbyville with Fargey finding the net twice on passes from R. Sills and L. Sills. Don Tucker scored the other Huntingdon goal in the first period while C. Wright and Hagerman counted at the halfway mark in the second and R. Sills beat Martin in the last period for the last score of the game.

Lineups:

Corbyville: Goal, D. Martin; defence, Martin and Forsyth; centre, Denyes; wings, E. Gray and Ritz; subs, C. Haines, Sills Sheffield, Leroy Sills, Walker, Martin and Huffman.

West Huntingdon: Goal, Hagerman; centre, R. Sills; wings, Hagerman and L. Sills; subs, Fargey, Wright, Tucker, McCurdy.

Zion Takes Long Lead.

Although Zion took a long lead on their opposition in the final period, the first half of the game between Centenary and Zion Hill was fast with the score being all even at the end of the second.

Ed Simms put the Zion Hill pucksters in the lead when he scored the only goal of the first period on passes from Walt and Ray. Centenary evened matters in the second, however, with Donnelly counting on passes from F. Waite and Cole, and F. Waite putting his team one up on a solo effort. Centenary's lead was shortlived as Jarrell counted for Zion at the eight minute mark on a pass from Carl Thompson. Third period scores were all made by Zion with Jarrell getting his second goal of the night and Thompson counting on three occasions, on a pass from M. Guay.

Lineups:

Centenary: Goal, Frost; defence, M. Waite and R. Hall; centre, Cole; wings, F. Waite and Donnelly; subs, D. Harder, D. Waite, D. Hubbic, Bellis, Marshall, W. Harder and Cousineau.

Zion Hill: Goal, Hicks; defence, Guay and Walt; centre, Jarrell; wings, Brough and Thompson; subs, G. Tummon, A. Tummon, Ray, Simms and D. Sills.

What's Doing in Sport

Phoenix, Ariz., (AP)— Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Philadelphia's touring golfer, carded a one-under-par 70 in the 18-hole playoff to win the Phoenix open tournament and $1,000 in war bonds, finishing two strikes better than Byron Nelson, Toledo, with whom he was tied at the end of 72 holes Sunday with 273's.

Winnipeg, (CP)—With 230 out of 339 rinks from outside points, the 56th Annual Manitoba Bonspiel gets underway today on 71 sheets of ice.

Baltimore, (AP)—Sgt. Joe Louis, world's heavyweight champion, last night made his second appearance in the ring as a referee and war bond salesman when the gloves which he said were worn in his fight with Bob Pastor were sold for $15,000.

Washington, (AP) — Hammerin' Henry Armstrong, one-time owner of three world boxing titles, knocked out Lew Hanbury, Washington hopeful, in the third round of a scheduled 10-round bout here last night. Armstrong weighed 139 and Hanbury, who was counted out while on one knee in a corner of the ring, scale 137.

17-POUND BABE

La Jolla, Calif., Feb. 8—(AP) — Caesarian birth of a 17-pound, fouroucne daughter to Mrs. Lloyd Frady of suburban Pacific Beach was reported yesterday. Mother and child were in fair condition.

AT THE BELLE — Three cornered fun and romance in Paramount's uproarious movie, "True to Life," featuring Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, coming next to the Belle Theatre, with "Mardi Gras" in Technicolor.

COMMONS HOPES FOR EARLY END OF THE DEBATE

Several of Members Fail to Occupy Their Allowances of 04 Minutes

ALL DISCUSS WAR

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 8—(CP)— House of Commons members said today they hope the throne speech debate—which often lasts nearly a month—would be finished this evening or tomorrow, less than two weeks since the session opened.

Several of the 10 members who spoke yesterday failed to occupy their allowable 40 minutes in discussing a variety of subjects in the debate on the address in reply to the throne speech.

A vote this evening on accepting the address and dealing with the progressive conservative and C. C. F. amendments to it would clear the parliamentary decks for the war appropriation bill.

Introduction of this measure will bring a statement from Defence Minister Ralston, the senior defence minister, in which he is expected to deal immediately with demands for a statement on the position of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former Canadian Army commander overseas who now is in Canada.

Progressive Conservative and C. C. F. leaders already have asked in the House that the government explain why an official statement said Gen. McNaughton left the command because of ill health when press reports of an interview quoted the general as saying he was "all right."

Gen. McNaughton conferred with Prime Minister Mackenzie King for four hours yesterday at the Prime Minister's residence. The meeting apparently was cordial but both refused to discuss the meeting.

Speak on Returned Men

The care of the returned serviceman and woman—what they wanted and what they would expect—was touched on by speakers yesterday.

Flt. Lt. James Sinclair. (L—Vancouver North), 35-year-old British Columbia member just back from service in the Mediterranean area, said all the returned men should receive a gratuity on the basis of one month's pay for an officer, the scale being one month's pay for each year of service overseas or 18 months voluntary service in Canada.

The allowance to the man taking an educational course should be $75 a month, plus service allowances and medical care, he said. The soldier settler on the land should be given his farm outright when he had remained on it five years.

G. S. White (PC — Hastings-Peterborough) said the whole pensions scale should be reviewed by the pensions commission. There should be no immigration until veterans and other Canadian workers had been placed in jobs.

F. D. Shaw (ND—Red Deer) said too many men already discharged from the forces had to appeal to their members of parliament to obtain "simple justice."

Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver East) said the new government wage-control order was totalitarian in conception, should be rescinded. The whole question of wage stabilization should be examined by a House committee.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair said the order was not in accord with Liberal thought.

Must Support Fighting Man

G. T. Purdy (Lib.-Colchester-Hants) said he could not understand why his province, which led in voluntary enlistments, should be called upon to provide the same percentage of men under the compulsory call-up as provinces which had not given the same number of volunteers.

"I respectfully suggest that the time must have arrived when there should be put into force a system that uses the same yardstick across Canada to bring men into the services," he said.

P. E. Wright (CCF-Melfort) said Co-operatives represented the sole barrier to the development of monopolies in Canada and should have the support of the government. An agricultural bank to give credit to the farming community also should be established.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair said certain clauses of the new wage-control order could not be justified "by a Liberal minister of labor." Labor wanted its own nominees on the National Labor Board. The order should be rescinded.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair said a suggested one-day national strike in protest against the wage order would hurt only the man in the front line. This year demanded that every conceivable support be given the fighting man, no matter what the cost.

Finland Warned By Moscow Radio To Get Out of War

London, Feb. 8 (CP) — Finland was warned by the Moscow radio today that Sunday night's bombing of Helsinki by Russian warplanes was only the prelude to greater blows to knock the Finns out of the war.

The broadcast quoted Izvestia, official Soviet government organ, as threatening Finland with "retribution and revenge' and predicting that the "crazy Finnish imperialists will likely awaken to see the Red army before the walls of Helsinki."

"Soon, very soon," Izvestia said, "the Finns shall have occasion to repent that the war lasted so long. The sufferings of our brothers of the Karelo-Finnish Soviet Republic call for revenge and retribution. We have not forgotten them . . .

"The Finnish invaders will soon be thrown out of all Soviet land . . the hour of reckoning is approaching. The night before last our powerful air force dealt one blow to the Finnish capital. Fires and explosions scorched the city. Let the ruins fall upon the heads of the Fascist leaders of Finland."

The broadcast was recorded by the Soviet monitor here.

Leavens Bros. File Application For 12 Air Routes

London, Ont., Feb. 8 — (CP) — Permission to operate 12 air lines covering a route distance of 2,506 miles and linking most large communities in Ontario and Western Quebec has been asked from the Controller of Civil Aviation at Ottawa by W. T. Leavens and C. R. Leavens, veterans of flying training and air service work in Ontario.

Announcing that the application had been filed, the Leavens Brothers said negotiations and research had been going on for some months and that they were ready to begin operations over the 12 routes on a regular basis 'as soon as aircraft are available,' and pending approval by the government.

Details of the proposed air routes were not given, but it was said they would blanket western Ontario, extend as far north as Cochrane, Ont., and as far east as Montreal. The network would hinge on the Toronto Island airport as an operating base.

VICTORY FOR DAVIS

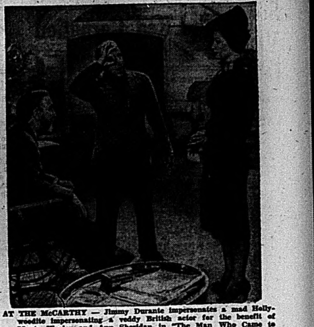
Washington, Feb. 8 — (AP)—A month-long undercover wrangle in the United States Office of War Information culminated last night in announcement of the resignation of three top-ranking New York officials of the overseas division which is headed by Robert E. Sherwood. The settlement was plainly a victory for O.W.I. Director Elmer Davis.



AT THE McCARTHY — Jimmy Durante impersonates a mad Hollywoodite impersonating a veddy British actor for the benefit of Monte Wooley and Ann Sheridan in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," next at the McCarthy. The second feature is "Nobody's Darling," with Mary Lee and Gladys George.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was telling pop about the last meeting of the Gils, meaning Give Lifts to Servicemen and being 6 ladies including ma, and I said, well hay, ma, you're not the only one's got a club. I belong to one now, and if you think your club is exclusive with only 6 ladies in it, how about mine? It's only got 3 fellows in it including me, I said.

Oh, that old Mystick Three of yours, what's new about that? ma said, and I said, Everything except the names of the members. I mean Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooster are still in it, but it's not The Mystick Three any more. It's The Yops, I said.

Such a sound for land sakes, ma said, and I said, Well good night it sounds as good as The Gils. Good night The Gils makes you think of fishes ears, I said.

Now I'll have no impertinence, please, ma said, and pop said, Let's have no invidious bickering between rival patriotic organizations. Or perhaps your club isn't patriotic, Benny he said.

Sure it is, G winnickers what's you think The Yops stands for? It stands for The Young Patriots, I said, and pop said, Splendid, it couldn't stand for anything better.

Well now that's a very nice name and I could think of lots of little activities to help you to live up to it, ma said. For instants you could remind the ladies of the nayborhood to be sure to save all their waist fats, in a nice way of course, she said, and pop said, By gollies that's right, and you could collect old newspapers from all over the place and bundle them up into some sort of collectable form for the war effort.

Well aw jimminy, we're thinking of something much more important than that, I said. We're going to keep looking out for traiters and 5th collumnists so we can report them before they have a chance to do any harm, I said.

The result being I was given my choice of either getting started on my homework or going to bed.

CHAPTER 5

"Had he reported the attempt to the police?" Tony asked Duffy.

"Yes, but beyond some scratches around the lock of the outside door, we didn't find anything."

"He was shot right through the shirt front?"

"Yes, close up. The shirt was scorched."

"Is that McKibben's boy out there with the copper?"

"Yes. I told him to stick around."

"Fine. I'd like to talk with him," Tony said and turned to a closer inspection of the room.

There was a wide bed with its head against the wall beyond the bathroom door. It had been turned down, but not slept in, and a suit of gray silk pajamas lay across the foot, where McKibben's boy had evidently placed it. By the farther side of the bed was a table on which was a small radio and a reading lamp. There was a little drawer in it half open.

"Is that where McKibben kept his gun?" Tony asked.

"Yes. And the cabinet lower down is where he kept his liquor."

Tony nodded and turned again to the room. There were two straight chairs and two large easy ones. On one of them lay a hat and overcoat which McKibben had evidently tossed there when he entered the room the night before. Against one wall was a chifferobe, on top of which was a vase in which were half a dozen white carnations. In the corner by the window was a small writing desk. A few sheets of paper, some envelopes, and a fountain pen lay on it. The paper had McKibben's name and address engraved at the top.

The room had three doors, the one from the hall by which Tony had entered, another leading into the bath and a third opening into a clothes closet. He glanced into the bath and saw that it had no exit. He looked out one of the windows and saw that the wall dropped sheer to the street six stories below.

There was only one way to get into the room, then, and that was by the door from the hall. He went back to it and examined it carefully. It opened inward and the key was still in the lock on the outside—a Yale lock. On the inside was a heavy nickled bolt which had been sunk into the wood. The socket had been wrenched off when the door was forced and lay on the floor where it had fallen.

Tony took a small magnifying glass from his pocket and scrutinized the jamb just opposite the bolt.

"I suppose you noticed this?" he asked and pointed to a tiny hole in the painted wood.

"Sure," said Duffy wearily, "I haven't overlooked anything like that since the Saintsbury case."

In the Saintsbury case a girl had been found dead in a room with the door bolted on the inside. It had been Tony Bigelow who had demonstrated how the bolt had been drawn into place from the outside by means of a pin and a piece of string. It was as easy as standing an egg on end, once you knew how. The only evidence left behind was the tiny hole in the jamb of the door where the pin had been.

"So the fact that the door was bolted doesn't mean much," Tony pointed out.

"It's old stuff," Duffy agreed. "Anybody can do it."

The outer door opened and the policeman came in. "A messenger just brought this for you, chief," he said and handed Duffy a large manila envelope.

"It's the photographs," said Duffy, and drew them out. "Here's the best one of the body," and he handed one of them to Tony.

The latter took it to the window and examined it closely. The body, in full evening dress, was lying on its back with the right arm extended above its head. A black automatic was lying a few inches from the right hand. The smudge on the shirt front was distinctly visible. The eyes were open, and it seemed to Tony that the face had a look of astonishment. "I'd like to have it—just to study. Have you a duplicate?"

"Sure. Keep it."

"Thanks," said Tony and slipped it into his pocket. "Now I've got to be off, but I'd like to come around tonight when I have more time."

"Okay. And I'll keep a man on the door, till tomorrow anyway. It may be interesting to see who will try to get in. Some of his dames may drop around looking for their love letters," chuckled Duffy.

Fifteen minutes later a taxi deposited him at the mortuary on East Twentieth St. He told its driver to wait and sprang up the steps.

"I'd like to see the clothing Jack McKibben had on," he said to the attendant. "Duffy said it would be all right."

"Sure thing!" said the attendant and led the way into an adjoining room where the clothing was spread out on a table.

There was the undershirt, soaked with blood; the outside shirt with a smudge partly black with powder and partly scorched around a hole in the stiff white bosom. Tony then turned to the coat.

Yes, the carnation was still in the buttonhole. But it was not white—the photograph had told him that. It was red—a dark red, almost a Burgundy. It had a curious streaked appearance and the petals were quite stiff.

With fingers that trembled a little, he carefully detached two of the petals, dropped them into an envelope, put the envelope in his pocket and hurried from the room.

"Want to see the body?" the attendant asked.

"Not today, thanks," Tony answered and ran down the steps to his taxi.

He was able to beat the last edition deadline and phone in an extra paragraph for his column:

Carnations White and Red:—Jack McKibben had many eccentricities, and one of them was harmless. Always he wore a white carnation in his buttonhole. Last night, at Max's place, he said jestingly that it stood for innocence. The last act of his life was to mail a note to his florists directing them to deliver a bunch of his special white carnations to your columnist at noon today, with one deep red carnation in the midst. Then, apparently he locked himself in his bedroom and shot himself through the heart. But, strangely enough, the carnation still in the buttonhole of the coat he wore when he died had changed from white to red—a queer, streaky red. It was really a white carnation which had been dipped in human blood—proof positive that this is a case, not of suicide but of cold-blooded, premeditated murder.

It was after five o'clock when Antony Bigelow got back to his apartment where Duffy and Garrity were waiting for him. They were seated in front of his desk on which, in the vase where Clarence had placed them, was the bunch of white carnations with the single red one in the centre. Also on the desk was a copy of the final edition of the Record.

"Marriner," Tony answered and while Duffy went to the phone, he took up the paper and looked through Garrity's story of the case. There were two or three points which were new to him. The ballistics bureau was able to state that the bullets had been fired from McKibben's pistol almost straight at a distance of only a few inches, had perforated the left auricle of the heart and passed clear through the body. McKibben had gone over backwards; death had been instantaneous. His wallet, well-filled in spite of a gay evening, was in his pocket. His man had stated that, so far as he could see, nothing was missing from the apartment. An investigation was being made of his brokerage business. There were rumors that it was in bad shape.

"He's worse than bankrupt," said Duffy, who had put down the phone. "He made away with a lot of his customers' securities. He was at the end of his rope, headed straight for Sing Sing. He had every reason to shoot himself."

"McKibben didn't shoot himself," Tony insisted.

"I notice you say so. You even use the worlds 'cold-blooded and premeditated murder' in your column."

"I know they're banal," Tony apologized, "but I was in a hurry and I couldn't think of any others."

"Why shouldn't McKibben send you a red carnation if he wanted to? He was probably tight."

"He probably was," Tony agreed, "but the carnation he sent me doesn't explain the one in the lapel of his coat."

"I wouldn't call it red," Duffy grunted. "It's a kind of dirty brown."

"Of course. The blood is beginning to oxidize. But it was red when I saw it—a deep wine red."

"How did you find out it was human blood?"

"I saw it wasn't a white carnation the moment you showed me that photo of the body," Tony explained, "so I hustled over to the mortuary and examined it. When I saw what it looked like, I took two petals and had them analyzed."

"Was it McKibben's blood?" Garrity asked.

"I don't know. I didn't have a sample of McKibben's blood. It was type three."

"I can answer that," said Duffy. "McKibben's blood is type one."

For a moment the three sat looking at each other in silence.

"What a story!" breathed Garrity, at last.

"It's bughouse!" Duffy snorted. "Why should the murderer leave a badge like that behind him and then try to make it look like suicide?"

"The red carnation might have been intended as a warning to somebody," Tony suggested.

Duffy snorted. "And so McKibben sends you a red carnation to make sure you won't miss it, and then stands up and lets himself be shot. Is that it?" he asked. "Then it must have been you the warning was intended for and I ought to put the cuffs on you. I ought to anyway for double-crossing me the way you did about that red carnation."

"I didn't double-cross you, Jim," Tony protested. "I didn't have time to see you because I had to make that deadline. I've never double-crossed you and you know it."

"No, you never did," Duffy agreed with a smile. "Forget it. Now tell me another thing—who bolted the door of McKibben's bedroom? McKibben's ghost?"

"That bolted door stuff is childish."

"I know all that," Duffy broke in. "But just the same somebody did it."

"It makes me think this job was done by an amateur," said Tony.

"The red carnation certainly looks like an amateur—or a lunatic."

"Or a very clever person," Tony supplemented.

"Where's that card that came with the flowers?" asked Duffy.

Tony got it out of his billfold and gave it to him. "The florist says it's McKibben's writing," he remarked.

"I'll check that," and the homicide expert took the card by the edge and read it. "The writing looks pretty shaky to me."

"McKibben was half shot when he wrote it. He wouldn't have thought of such a thing if he'd been sober."

"He was sober when he got home—at least he could walk and put his key in the keyhole," pointed out Duffy.

"Just the same, he was pretty well jingled when I saw him," said Tony. "I can see how the idea of sending me some white carnations got into his head. I was kidding him about his white carnation last night—"

"That doesn't explain the red one," Duffy interrupted.

"Maybe he thought it more in keeping with my character," said Tony smiling.

"Look here," broke in Garrity, his eyes shining, "suppose McKibben didn't send the flowers at all. Suppose they were sent by the fellow who killed him to call your attention to the bloodstained one?"

"Sounds crazy any way you put it," said Duffy. "Don't forget that the murderer, after doing all this advertising, bolted the door from the outside, to make it look like suicide. Absolutely cockeyed. However, I'll put an expert on the handwriting, just to make sure. Whichever way it is, I don't see that it gets us anywhere in particular." He got out one of his slim cigars, lighted it and blew a disgusted puff toward the ceiling. "The important thing is to find that dame who went up to McKibben's apartment with him and make her tell us what happened after they got there. What was she doing while McKibben was writing the letter?"

"I have it!" cried Garrity. "While he was writing the letter, she realized where she was and what she was up against and when he went out to the mail chute to drop the letter in, she found his pistol and prepared to defend her honor."

Duffy was regarding Garrity with an indulgent smile.

"Well, what's the matter with that?" the reporter demanded.

"I used to be fond of Laura Jean Libbey novels, too," said Duffy, "but I outgrew it."

"I suppose you think you're being funny," said Garrity. "Just the same . . ."

Nazi Glider Bomb

(AP War Correspondent)

Naples, Feb. 8 —(AP)— When the great invasion of the European continent begins, one of the big responsibilities of the Allied air-forces will be to prevent any concentrated use by the Germans of rocket-propelled glider bombs.

There is no breach of security involved in saying that this new aerial weapon of the Nazis is a potent threat against shipping. The Germans know it and the Allies know it.

An invasion fleet at anchor is like a flock of sitting ducks unless air cover can intercept the control plane from which the gliders are directed by radio.

Anti-aircraft fire is only partly effective against the small winged projectiles, because they sweep down on their targets swiftly and are difficult to hit. It is usually only a lucky hit when one is stopped by ack-ack fire.

The Germans used glider bombs against the invasion fleet at Salerno and again at Anzio during the 5th Army's behind-the-lines thrust.

From descriptions pieced together by several eye-witnesses, it is learned the bomb is about 20 to 30 feet long, with tail fins acting as a stabilizer and rudder. It has a wing-spread of some 15 feet and in flight it looks like a small plane.

Apparently it is armor-piercing. At Salerno, one of them that hit a ship penetrated thick steel deck-plates and exploded in the craft's interior.

Whether the enemy can muster a large fleet of rocket-bomb gliders for use against an invasion is not known, but it is logical to assume—and the Allied air forces must go on the assumption—that the Germans can concentrate large numbers against an invasion armada.

Pre-Enlistment Allowance Given CWAC Volunteers

Ottawa, Feb. 8—(CP)—The Defence Department announced today a pre-enlistment allowance of $1.05 a day will be paid all volunteers for the Canadian Women's Army Corps from the time of arrival at a reception centre until attestation or rejection.

The allowance equals the basic rate of pay for C.W.A.C. privates, and puts women on an equal footing with servicemen, who have been receiving a pre-enlistment allowance.

Under the ruling, transportation from the applicant's home to the reception centre will be furnished and meals provided en route. Meals and lodging, or an allowance to cover these items, will also be provided while the recruit is at the reception centre. These benefits apply whether or not the application is accepted.

If accepted, the recruit may, following attestation, be given a brief leave without pay, in which case she will be furnished with a return trip travel warrant.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

The bereaved family have the sympathy of their many friends.

Liberals to Hold 2-Day Conference

Ottawa, Feb. 8 —(CP)— A two-day conference of representatives of provincial Liberal organizations and officers of the National Liberal Federation of Canada will open here Thursday, it was announced today by Senator W. McL. Robertson, president of the federation.

Each province will send three or more delegates, representing senior provincial organizations, women's and youth organizations. During the conference the delegates will hold meetings with members of parliament for their respective provinces.

Friday evening Liberal members and senators will hold a dinner for the delegates, with Prime Minister Mackenzie King attending.

Those attending the conference will include: Col. Harry S. Hamilton, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.; Hugh Willson, Perth Ont.; Premier J. B. McNair of New Brunswick.

Describes Another Nazi 'Secret Weapon'

Stockholm, Feb. 8 —(AP)— Another alleged German "secret weapon"—a rocket shell covering the target with a blanket of heavy gas ignited by an incendiary bomb —was described today in a Zurich dispatch to the Dagens Nyheter.

The dispatch, quoting a technical expert living in Germany, said the shell could be fired from a rocket gun at great distance and the gas, inflammable but not poisonous, would be touched off by a fire-bomb dropped by plane.

The story said the weapon had been used on a limited scale against the Russians at Sevastopol, but gave no indication of its effectiveness.

The same expert described a compressed air rocket gun supposedly capable of firing 1,000-pound shells containing booster charges exploding at certain altitude to give the projectile additional range. He said the Nazis intended to use them to bombard London and other English towns.

Warning to Finns Recently Renewed By United States

Washington, Feb. 8 —(AP)— State Secretary Cordell Hull disclosed today that the United States had recently renewed its warning to the government of Finland to get out of the war or accept the consequences of continuing to fight on the side of Germany.

The action was the first taken by this government with respect to Finland for some time and suggested that the Finns might be under and Allied diplomatic as well as military offensive to force them out of the war.

The Secretary of State was asked at a press conference for information on Stockholm reports that there had recently been an exchange of communications between the U. S. and Finland on the Finnish position.

The United States government, Hull replied, has recently taken occasion to say to the Finnish government, as it has on a number of occasions in the past, that the responsibility for the consequences of Finland's collaboration with Germany and continuance in a state of war with a number of this country's allies, including the Soviet Union and the British Commonwealth of Nations, must be borne solely by the Finnish government.

GRANTS APPLICATION FOR INTERVENTION

Toronto, Feb. 8 (CP)—Mr. Justice C. P. Plaxton today granted an application by an American Federation of Labor Union for intervention in an application by an employees' committee for certification as collective bargaining agent at the Deloro Smelting and Refinery near Belleville.

Hearing of the employees' committee application was scheduled originally for today, but in view of the application for intervention being granted it was postponed to next Tuesday.

Allied Progress Loosening Hold Of Nazis on Cassino

New York, Feb. 8 (AP)—Nothing in the present situation suggests the Allies have lost the initiative in Italy, Brig.-Gen. Horace, Sewell, military expert of the British Information Services, declared today.

Gen. Sewell's formal statement apparently was prompted by remarks of an unnamed British military official who said yesterday in Washington that the Allies appeared to be losing some of the initiative in the beachhead south of Rome.

"The German attack on the beachhead is a defensive action on their part . . . and is designed to eliminate the threat to their line of communication," Gen. Sewell said.

He cited that the German commander is committed to the defence of Rome and there is as yet no hint that he is preparing any great offensive stroke, while at the same time Allied progress in the Cassino area is gradually loosening the German hold on the Gustav line and "the 8th Army on the Adriatic coast certainly cannot be ignored."

Foresees Continuance Of Form of Timber Control 'After War'

Montreal, Feb. 8. (CP) —Some form of timber control may remain in effect "for a period" after the war, delegates were told today at the 36th annual meeting of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association.

E. W. Ross, president of the Association, in his annual address, added that "although timber control caused many inconveniences to the lumber industry without it we might have headed towards inflation very rapidly".

He went on to say:

"With such a tremendous demand for forest products in wartime, there was a great danger of a runaway market with stocks being, in many cases, turned away from essential war uses.

"It is believed in some quarters that some form of timber control should remain in effect for a period after the end of the war to stabilize prices and distribution".

He remarked that there was "little reason for concern" about the use of substitutes for wood after the war "although it seems to worry many engaged in the lumber industry".

Timber Controller Allan H. Williamson suggested that the Association "act as liaison among organizations concerned with post-war salvage and surplus".

Correspondent Taken for Ride Over City of Rome

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

The 5th Army Beachhead in Italy, Feb. 8 —(AP)— I looked from a winged armchair today at Rome, peacefully basking on the seven ancient hills in the pale sunlight of a winter afternoon.

I saw the sluggish Tiber, bending and twisting to leave the great city's stony monuments and pour its brown flood waters into the blue Tyrrhenian Sea.

Lido di Roma, a gayly colored patch of villas beside the mouth of the Tiber, was completely serene.

"You're just ten minutes from the Roman forum," the pilot of a tiny Cub plane who has flown 450 combat hours as an artillery air observer told me during a half-hour tour of the coast this afternoon, "if the Krauts start peppering us with 88's, we will duck and run."

After we had gained a few hundred feet altitude, it was literally like leaving the war for a realm of peace.

The western sector of the small Allied beachhead stretches from narrow sand dunes across green meadows and through clumps of dwarfed trees and brush. Slit trenches and weapon pits looked as insignificant as diggings made by ants.

White smoke curled over a piece of marshy land where the enemy was concentrating artillery fire, although not a living soul was visible to us. Farther inland, our shells nicked occassionally at hidden German outposts.

Stretching ahead of us with imperial dignity was the sight Joe the pilot had promised me—Rome. It seemed incredible that such a narrow stretch of open countryside should separate our beachhead from the goal.

BRITAIN SIGNS AGREEMENT

London, Feb. 8. (CP)—Agreements concerning financial policy and mutual aid were signed today by the British government and the French Committee of National Liberation, Sir John Anderson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Feb. 8. (CP)—Trading was dull today on the livestock markets. Receipts Cattle 10; calves 25; sheep 15; hogs 275.

There were no sales of cattle and sheep. A few veal calves sold steady at $11 to $15.50 according to quality. Hogs were firm at $17.15 for B-1 dressed and there was no demand for sows.

HOGS

Toronto, Feb. 8—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Barrie, London and Stratford $17 delivered, Chatham $16.40 plus transportation, Hull $16.95 delivered.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 8. (CP) — The early Toronto session was marked today by a sizable movement in the Western Oils at advancing prices and moderate weakness in the mining groups. The Industrial stocks displayed strength. Volume totalled 428,000 shares for the first three hours.

Increase of buying in the Western Oils advanced Calgary and Edmonton and Home Oil 13 to 20 cents.

Utilities and Steels were higher other industrial groups held steady. Dominion Stores weakened 1-2 and Western Steel products lost 1-2. In the Base Metals Noranda, Ventures, Smelters and Steep Rock were down moderately.

Beattie Gold sold down to $1.85 on the news that the capital was to be increased to 6,000,000 shares. It later recovered about half the loss. Other soft golds were Preston, Hard Rock, Kirkland Lake, Madsen, Wright-Hargreaves, Leitch and O'Brien.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 8 —(AP)— A boosted General Motors dividend, plus the belief the stock market had recently been oversold, today provided mild recovery stimulation for leaders in virtually all departments. Near the fourth hour, gains of fractions to a point or more were widely distributed. Dealings were slow.

General Motors and Chrysler jumped better than a point each, the former on blocks of 1,000 to 1,500 shares. Chicago Great Western Pfd. recorded a new 1943-44 top. In front were Sears Roebuck, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse and Du Pont. Laggards included Anaconda, Kennecott, Deere, Oliver Farm and Goodyear.

Canadian stocks were mixed, with McIntyre up a fraction, Dome and Distillers Seagrams off fractions and Canadian Pacific unchanged.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 8 (CP)—Cattle trade was slow with prices steady on all grades in trade on the livestock market here up to mid-session today. Calves were firm. Hogs and lambs were steady. No sheep were offered.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 800, calves 130, hogs 800, lambs 150. Unsold from yesterday were 1,100 head of cattle.

Prices in the trade were:

Cattle: Common to medium weighty steers $11-$12, butcher steers $10-$11.90, heifers mostly $10-$11.50, butcher cows $7-$9, canners and cutters $5-$6.50, a few fed yearlings $11.75-$13.

Calves: $16-17 for choice, other vealers downward to $11.

Lambs: Common to medium quality $8-$12, a few good $13.

Hogs: $17.15 dressedweight with sows $13 dressed.

500 Japs Missing As Ship Founders

New York, Feb. 8. (AP) — The Japanese passenger steamship Suisui Maru foundered with 700 persons aboard Sunday near Kagoshima and 500 of them are missing, the German agency D.N.B. said last night in a broadcast recorded by the United States Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service.

Kagoshima is a major port of Kyushu, southernmost of the main Japanese islands. Cause of the ship's sinking was not stated. She might have struck a mine or have been torpedoed.

Railway Station Wrested From Partisan Forces

London, Feb. 8—(CP)—German troops have wrested the railway station of Perusic on the Belgrade-Split railway from its partisan defenders after a fierce two-day battle, a communique from the Yugoslav army of liberation acknowledged today.

The Nazis were rushing reinforcements to what apparently was developing into a major battle between Perusic, 80 miles south of Zagreb in the Croatian province of Lika and the Adriatic Sea.

In the Bosnia-Sanjak area partisans smashed an Axis detachment near Brod, killing 40 Germans and wounding many others.

Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced a "well-known Mohammedan commander" had come over to the partisan cause with 3,000 of his armed men.

Brockville Member May Be Deputy Speaker

Toronto, Feb. 8—(CP) — The Evening Telegram said today that Walter B. Reynolds of Brockville, member of the Ontario Legislature for Leeds, was "mentioned at Queen's Park today as a possible appoint : as chairman of committee of the legislature or, unofficially, the deputy speaker."

An announcement by Premier Drew on the appointment is expected soon, the paper said.

The Telegram said appointment of a Progressive Conservative party whip is also expected, with William Murdoch of Harrow, member for South Essex said to be under consideration for this post.

Three Different Charges Preferred Against Trucker

Driving his truck in what police termed "an erratic manner" proved rather costly to William Truesdale, of Gananoque, when he appeared in city police court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Actually three different charges were preferred against Truesdale and fines and costs amounting to 535.50 were levied.

On Monday afternoon police here received information that a truck was being driven easterly from Trenton in an erratic manner. Provincial Constables Milton and Hatch intercepted the vehicle as it entered the westerly city limits and later the driver, William Truesdals, was turned over to the city police.

A portion of a bottle of liquor was found on Truesdale's person so today he was charged with the illegal possession of liquor, careless driving and also of having loose or detached gasoline coupons on his person. He pleaded guilty to all charges, while Morris Heath, a passenger in the truck, also was charged with consuming liquor in a place other than his residence.

Truesdale told Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan that "a gasoline station attendant had torn one sheet too many from his commercial gasoline rationing book." The minimum fines in all cases were paid.

Says Quisling's SS Troops Ready to Kill Leaders and Join Allies

Stockholm, Feb. 8—(AP) — The Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter said today that quisling SS troops in Norway are reported ready to aid any Allied invasion of Norway. It estimated total quisling troops at 4,500.

It is common gossip that members of Quisling's Hird (Norway's Nazi-sponsored SS legion) plan to kill their leaders and go over to the invaders when and if they land said the newspaper. An article reviewing latest advices from Norway asserted the morale of the Norwegian SS has been dented sharply by reports that the German-sponsored Scandinavian "Viking" panzer division has been encircled by the Russians in the Ukraine. They were believed to be about 800 Norwegians in the division, which also was made up of Danes, some Finns and Netherlanders.

Archbishop Condemns "Passive Loyalty" Of Some Anglicans

Durham, England, Feb. 8. (CP) —In an address at Durham Cathedral, Dr. William Garbett, Archbishop of York, criticized the Roman Catholic Church of the "humiliating terms" he said it imposed in mixed marriages.

Condemning "passive loyalty" of some members of the Church of England, he said:—

"They will for no adequate reason transfer their allegiance to some other religious body. For instance they will yield easily to the demands of the Roman Catholic Church that in the case of a mixed marriage the non-Roman should promise that any children should be brought up as Roman Catholic.

It is hard and cruel choice presented to a man or woman deeply in love. A loyal member of the Church of England would unhesitatingly refuse to assent to such humiliating terms."

Suggests Raising Of Meat Rations To Use 'Surplus'

Hamilton, Feb. 8. (CP)— W. W. Baillie of Hamilton, in an interview today said "a lot of meat in Canada is going to waste because there is no market for it" and retailers here "will ask the Prices Board to increase ration allowances to relieve the situation'.

"Farmers and storekeepers are taking a loss because of inability to market lamb, beef and pork which is coming on the market in ever-increasing quantities", he said.

"There is plenty of meat, but the output of it is controlled so the butcher cannot take more in the back door than he is allowed to sell out the front door and purchasing power is limited".

Mr. Baillie, who is manager of the H. H. Fearman, Co., here, said the people would be "glad" to take the surplus meat, which he added was caused by the response of farmers to government appeals to produce more and continued rationing. Retailers intend to urge that the ban on buying be lifted for a definite period or that the rations be substantially increased for a stated time to enable the finished products to come on the market and be disposed of, said Mr. Baillie.

TEACHERS ASK INCREASE

Montreal, Feb. 8—(CP) — The Catholic Federation of Quebec rural school teachers will ask provincial authorities that their members be pair a minimum $600 salary for the first year of teaching with an increase of $50 for each succeeding year to a $1,200 a year maximum in districts near citiles and town and a $1,000 a year maximum in the others, it was announced here today. The present minimum yearly salary is $300.

Several R.C.A.F. Squadrons Arrive In Great Britain

London, Feb. 8 —(CP)— Arrival in the United Kingdom of "several" complete squadrons of the R.C.A.F. was announced at Overseas Headquarters.

The type of squadrons was not disclosed in the announcement but the airmen included fighter pilots, some of whom have already completed one tour of operations overseas.

The squadrons arrived with a full complement of air and ground crews together with a large draft of other R.C.A.F. personnel for all branches of the service, including the Women's Division and nursing sisters.

Air Minister C. G. Power announced in Canada a short time ago that a number of squadrons would be moved to this side of the Atlantic. Although announcement of their arrival said the units were complete, they arrived by ocean transport, presumably without aircraft which probably will be provided in the United Kingdom.

The newcomers were welcomed on shipboard by Group Capt. G. C. Bond of the Air Ministry who told them, "We are most grateful for all the Dominions are doing in all parts of the world and especially for the very large part your airmen now are taking in the air offensive in Europe which is a magnificent contribution towards hastening victory."

Trend Is Seen Toward Younger Men For British Commons

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Feb. 8 (CP)—Britain is beginning to cast somewhat anxious glance over the bald pates and hoary heads that dot her parliament and wonders whether youth shouldn't have more representation in the ancient house.

The unexpected victory over the Conservative candidate of 31-year-old Lieut. Hugh Lawson, Common Wealth, in the Skipton by-election has brought up the question of age and youth in parliament.

At present there are less than 200 members in the 615-member House who are under 50 and there seems to be a general desire developing in the electorate to have younger men in the Commons. Skipton only served to confirm the growing opinion.

A number of political observers believe all parties will have to enlist younger men as candidates and the tendency will probably also be to choose —men who have been in the services or who are still serving in the navy, army or airforce.

Says All Parties In Greece Agreed

Ottawa, Feb. 8—(CP) — The Greek legation here said today in a statement that reports reaching the Greek government in Cairo and Allied quarters indicate various political organizations in Occupied Greece have agreed "on the basis of a unified political program and in collaboration with the Greek government."

"There is no doubt that all political parties in Greece as well as the guerilla organizations are looking forward to the destruction of the Axis powers and the establishment in Greece of a free democratic constitution," the statement added.

"The situation in Greece already shows a very satisfactory improvement and it is particularly encouraging to note that all conciliatory efforts are making good progress."

WONDER DRUG

Penicillin, wonder drug, is light, orange-colored powder, soluble in water. This powder may be dissolved and injected in the veins or muscles. A liquid medium is sterilized, sown with spore suspension and placed within glass bottles or flasks. After incubation for nine or 10 days, each flask contains fungus growth which looks like upper photo. Droplets of pearls on fungus are rich in penicillin which is extracted. After 24 hours, a fluffy white, lace-like growth appears (bottom) which spreads until it covers the entire liquid surface. On the sixth day the growth begins to be replaced by blue-green spores depicted within the gallon bottles.

Pictured here are Allied landing craft of the Fifth Army standing off the beach at Nettuno, Italy, during the invasion landing operations, which caught the Nazis off guard. Very little resistance was put up.

This picture shows Allied Fifth Army tanks and other equipment after having been landed near the Nettuno beachhead, Italy, only 28 miles from Rome. The beachhead is constantly being enlarged and Allied troops force ever nearer the Holy City.

Motion Picture Industry Plays Important Role in War Effort

Jack Arthur Tells Kinsmen How Pictures Give Lift to Morale

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Morale of the boys in the fighting forces and of the thousands on the home fronts has been measurably heightened, and more bonds and war savings stamps have been sold because of the motion picture's war effort, members of the local Kinsmen Club were told Monday evening when at their regular dinner meeting they were addressed by Mr. Jack Arthur, supervisor of Famous Players Corporation for the eastern area.

The Canadian motion picture industry had realized quickly its rightful position in the war effort, according to Mr. Arthur, and thruout the conflict had granted time for the running of shorts urging the purchase of Victory Bonds, war savings stamps and asking for the support of worthy charities.

"Naturally you expect me to say something of the movie industry," indicated the speaker in opening his address, "and I could tell you of its tremendous growth. How back in 1925 we thought it had reached its peak in entertainment value. Then sound came with new people, new artists with the result that the industry rose to new heights that vie with anything in Arabian Nights."

Cites Example

Illustrating the powerful influence on buying power which motion pictures have on the general public, the speaker illustrated by citing the reaction to the picture "It Happened One Night," which several years ago starred Clarke Gable and Claudette Colbert. Seen by approximately 120 millions of people, the picture was that of a bus journey from New York to Miami. Almost immediately a 42 per cent increase in bus travel was seen, while because of the fact Gable was seen in the picture several times without an undershirt, sales of men's undershirts immediately fell off.

Indicating the industry's position as a morale builder, Mr. Arthur told how it had been found necessary to reopen theatres in London during the blitz with an immediate soaring of spirits being seen. "It had definitely been assured that people needed entertainment," he stated.

Encourage Stamp Sales

Early in the war the picture industry had organized a war savings committee and a campaign to encourage the sale of stamps was begun. A free show was run, the admission being the purchase of two war savings stamps which the customer retained. Through this alone $865,000 had been realized for the government, while another $25,000 had been raised for the British Bomb Victims' Fund by a rodeo staged in the Toronto coliseum. The picture industry constantly refuses "big" money to advertise commercial products but since the war had shown every co-operation toward the government in assisting bond sales and for patriotic purposes.

During the last Victory Loan movie shorts had been made starring Mary Pickford, Frank Morgan and Bing Crosby. These shorts cost the government nothing and were the means of selling thousands of dollars worth of bonds. For the next loan a new series of pictures is now being made by Warner Brothers.

Heavy Individual Contributions

Nor has the contribution to the war effort been entirely by the big corporations. Mr. Arthur declared that individual contributions had been tremendous. Popular stars were touring the world giving entertainment to the boys on the fighting fronts.

"Yes," he concluded, "I think the movie industry has been doing a good and an important job in the war. And it will continue to do a good job as a post-war effort."

The guest speaker was introduced by Mr. Thomas Mascaro, manager of the Capitol Theatre, with club appreciation being expressed by Kinsman "Twig" Woodley. "Twig" expressed his personal thanks to the movie industry for the co-operation shown in assisting to publicize the Kinsmen Milk for Britain Fund.

President "Matt" Currie presided over the meeting giving a brief account of the Kinsmen council meeting for District No. 6 held in Montreal over the weekend, while delegate Frank Lang added a few words relative to council procedure. Mr. J. Marchin favored with the rendition of two well-received solos with Phil Huddleston as accompanist. Gardiner Duff acted as song leader and Ernie Smith as sergeant-at-arms.

SGT. MINGAY 'SAFE AND WELL'

Windsor, Feb. 8. (CP) — Sgt. Ross Mingay of the R.C.A.F., first reported missing and later officially "presumed dead", is now "safe and well", as a prisoner of war in Germany, his parents here, Mr. and Mrs. John Mingay, have been advised.

Two American Subs Have Been Lost

Washington, Feb. 8 —(AP)— Loss of two American submarines, the Cisco and the S-44, was announced today by the Navy.

Both presumably were operated in Pacific waters where American submarines have been taking a heavy toll of Japanese shipping.

Their losses bring to 19 the number of American undersea craft lost since the United States entered the war.

The Navy gave no details in announcing the loss of the 18 year old S-44 and the Cisco, commissioned last May.

Cmdr. James W. Coe, Richmond, Ind., skipper of the Cisco, was listed as missing in action. The Cicso was one of the newest type American submarines. She had a displacement of 1,525 tons. She carried a crew of about 65 men.

Lt.-Cmdr. Princis E. Brown, also missing in action, skipped the S-44, which had a displacement of 850 tons. She carried a crew of about 45 men.

Same Treatment Given Japanese As U.S. Troops

El Paso, Texas, Feb. 8 —(AP)— Two hundred Japanese internees quartered at Fort Bliss for six months in 1942 received the same treatment as American soldiers, the Fort Bliss Public Relations Officer said yesterday.

"The Japanese got the same food and shelter as United States troops," an official statement said. "So well were the Japs treated that army officials received numerous complaints that internees were 'pampered.'"

The Fort Bliss comment followed a Japanese broadcast charging the internees were forced in bad weather to live in dilapitated tents on the post.

(At Topaz, Utah, Director Charles F. Ernst yesterday countered Tokyo radio reports that two Japanese had been slain "on the pretext they were trying to escape" from the relocation centre there, by saying only one evacuee had been killed and he was shot in April, 1943, while fleeing from a sentry.

(Army Headquarters at Salt Lake City said a court martial which followed the shooting decreed that the sentry's action was justified.)

MAY SUPPLANT LONDON

London, Feb. 8—(CP-Reuters)— Col. J. J. Astor today told the annual meeting of the Empire Press Union that inadequate cable and wireless facilities between London and the empire may result in New York supplanting London as an overseas news-clearing centre for the Dominions.

Col. Astor, president of the E.P. U., said the union had obtained for the Empire Press a flat rate of a penny a word in order to promote the flow of British news and views throughout the empire, but said that owing to congestion this was not being achieved.

Tunnellers Drive Piles for Bridges, Clear Up Roads

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Forces in Italy, Feb. 8 (CP)—An army unit whose work goes on whether battles are being fought or not is the tunnelling company of the Royal Canadian engineers.

Made up chiefly of former hard-rock miners from northern Ontario, western Canada and the Maritimes, the tunnelling company has been on the go since it landed in Sicily last July, three days after the invasion It hasn't done much tunnelling, but it has driven countless piles for bridges and landing stages and cleared roads blocked by the Germans in their retreat.

The company earlier in the war dug tunnels at Gibraltar and did secret defence work on England's airfields and roads.

The tunnellers, whose commanding officer here is Capt. A. O. Ames, Winnipeg, drove piles for one of the bridges across the Sangro river and among their other recent jobs was the preparation of the base for a landing stage. Lieut. Bill Burgess, Port Credit, Ont., was in charge of the section on the latter job.

Some of the men with Burgess were Sgt. Marshall (Sailor) Gronert, former boxer from Kirkland Lake, Ont., Cpl. Tom Bowen, Kirkland Lake, and Sprs. Mack Morton, Kirkyand Lake, Eddie Caswell, Cliff Brown and George Steinberg, all of Timmins, Cam Thompson and Oscar Pelletier, Rouyn, Que.

This unit is the only tunnelling company with the 8th Army and it has seen service with almost every formation on the front. Under army rather than divisional command, it gets its assignments from army headquarters itself or from corps.

DNB Says 6 British Escaped War Prisoners Arrested by Fascists

New York, Feb. 8 — (AP)—The Nazi DNB agency said today that six escaped British prisoners of war had been arrested by Fascist police in the Piedmont Alps of Northern Italy and that five of them had been sentenced to death.

The dispatch, which said that the men had been hiding since the Italian armistice, gave no reason for the death sentences except that "they have been the terror of the population."

The wireless dispatch was reported by U.S. Government monitors.

PROPOSES TO GUARANTEE PERCENTAGE OF NATIONAL INCOME

Ottawa, Feb. 8. (CP)—C. E. Johnston (N.D.-Bow River) gave notice on today's Commons votes and proceedings of a resolution calling upon the government to set agriculture prices at a level which would guarantee farmers a "yearly percentage of the national income as will have the same relation to the national income as the agricultural population bears to the national population".

The resolution will be presented tomorrow.

SHE MARRIED THE BUGLER

Toronto, Feb. 8. (CP) — LAW. Frances Allen used to sing "Some day I'm going to murder the bugler", with just as much feeling as anyone else at a midtown R.C.A.F. training establishment here. Instead, shortly after she finally met the bugler, she married him.

Now she is LAW. Frances Burroughs, wife of LAC. George Burroughs, who has been bugler at the R.C.A.F. (W.D.), Toronto establishment since the Women's Division was organized two years ago.

Germans May Have Waited Too Long Before Retreating

Advances Are Made Also Toward Ports Of Nikolaev and Kherson

ROADS ARE QUAGMIRES

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Feb. 9 —(AP)— Russian troops closed in on the iron centre of Krivoi Rog today from three sides and also advanced in the direction of the ports of Kherson and Nikolaev after breaking the long and tenacious German defence in the Dnieper bend at Nikopol.

Hitler at Krivoi Rog may have repeated his characteristic mistake in Russia—waiting too long before retreating. He lost 15,000 dead and 2,000 captured as well as enormous stores of booty at Nikopol, a major source of manganese essential for hardening German steel.

The Germans have large numbers of infantry, tanks and artillery at Krivoi Rog. There was no sign of withdrawal despite the threat of encirclement. The only railroad still open to the iron centre leads to Dolonivka, a junction 40 miles west on the Nikolaev-Kiev line.

Extermination Goes On.

The army newspaper Red Star said the 10 encircled Nazi divisions near Cherkasy were being exterminated and that the officers and men in the death pocket were losing hope. The dispatch said officers no longer could encourage the men with hopes of rescue, because the best landing fields have been taken by the Russians and the others are washed by rains and deep in mud. The Germans were receiving food only by parachute and much of this was falling into Russian hands.

Red Star reported the arrival of spring in the Dnieper bend after one of the shortest and mildest winters in generations. The paper said "roads exist only on maps," since they are quagmires of sticky mud.

The dispatch said German captives looked ridiculous in their snow coats with sweat rolling down their faces as they trudged to the rear.

Bitter Fighting

Nikopol was taken only after the bitterest house-to-house fighting, front dispatches reported. Stores of booty were abandoned by the enemy and a Russian communique said "the victory has returned to the country one of the largest industrial centres of the Ukraine."

German prisoners were quoted by the communique as saying that Hitler had ordered the Nikopol bridgehead to be held at all costs. Formidable defences in depth, dominated by heights manned by powerful siege guns, were blasted by the Russian onslaught.

Reporting the bridgehead victory, the communique said the Russians "dismembered enemy troops into sections and . . .Routed seven divisions. A large group of Germans was driven to the Dnieper and completely wiped out."

Forty other towns were captured in the Russian drive, which liquidated the tip of the German Army's eastermost position in Russia.

As Gen. Malinovsky's army converged on Krivoi Rog from Apostolovo, 22 miles away, other Russian forces under Gen. Nikolai Vatutin and Gen. Ivan S. Konev were steadily crushing the remnants of 10 German divisions trapped near Cherkasy 65 miles further north.

Drive Toward Riga

On the Baltic front, Russian troops under Gen. Leonid A. Govorov were driving on the big German defence stronghold of Luga, on the Leningrad-Pskov-Warsaw railway. The Soviet communique said they had advanced 10 miles in the past 24 hours against strong enemy resistance. Further south several towns fell to Gen. M. M. Popov's forces in the Novosokolniki area.

Daughter Labels Police Officer's Theory Untrue

Chicago, Feb. 9. (AP)—Mrs. Patricia Goodbody, 28-year-old daughter of the slain Mrs. Frank Starr Williams, last night described as "completely absurd and untrue" a veteran police lieutenant's theory that her mother was accidentally killed in her hotel room here Jan. 19, after they had engaged in a struggle for a revolver.

The latest theory advanced in the puzzling case was given yesterday by Lieut. John Quinn, one of the first officers to arrive at the scene of the crime. It climaxed a five-hour coroner's inquest and contradicted previous theories that labelled the fatal shooting as the crime of a mysterious gunwoman.

Quinn's views on the slaying immediately were termed "too fantastic" and "ridiculous", by Williams, a United States State Department attache, and as "fantastic beyond belief" by Mrs. Williams' sister, Mrs. Robert A. Roos. Later, Mrs. Goodbody, who was not present when Quinn testified, asserted:—

"I'm withholding nothing. I've told everything I know that happened. I've told it over and over again".

The officer, a member of the department for 25 years, followed a dozen other witnesses who testified at the inquest.

Police have followed every angle in their investigation and the main theories were those of mistaken identity, robbery or revenge. Quinn's conclusions have not been publicly advanced by any other officer.

Earlier Mrs. Goodbody testified concerning the shooting of her mother, 55, wealthy and socially prominent in Chicago and Washington.

Her testimony varied little from her previous statements to police. She has been given the so-called lie-detector test and had been given a "clean bill" by police.

The inquest was continued to March third.

Auto Collides With Train And Four Are Killed

Montreal, Feb. 9.—(CP.)—Four persons were fatally injured and three other suffered injuries requiring hospital attention last night when the automobile in which they were driving to work collided with a Canadian National Railways train at a level crossing here.

James Robinson, G. Hayworth and Mrs. H. Lavoie were dead when removed from the shattered wreckage of the car, while Cimone Payette died in hospital several hours later.

Also injured were J. A. Belanger, who suffered a probable brain concussion and a broken thigh, and Leo Goyette and Beatrice Deragon, who were less seriously injured.

"Fearless Fosdick" Pilots Lead Charmed Life on Observation Duty

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, Feb. 9. (CP)—"Fearless Fosdick" is the name Canadian troops have given observation aircraft which daily sweep over the battlefront like butterflies, seeking German targets for big guns behind the lines.

In a popular comic strip "Fearless Fosdick" never gets hurt, no matter how tough a spot he may find himself. To the boys on the ground the "O-Pips", as they are generally known, seem to lead a charmed life.

They appear to be a sitting target as they glide slowly over the lines at 1,000, 500 and sometimes 200 feet. Occasionally, German anti-aircraft guns send a few bursts after them, but they mostly leave them alone nowadays. For instance, not an observation plane pilot has been lost on the 8th Army front from enemy action since Italy was invaded.

These slow, cumbersome, high-winged monoplanes, piloted by army officers, control the guns of the Royal Artillery and the Royal Canadian Artillery. During shoots the airmen send back corrections, observe explosions, investigate movements spotted by forward observation officers on the ground and hunt for choice targets themselves.

Join them in their mess at night and you'll hear the strangest of strange air force chatter. They'll talk about 'climbing" to 100 feet, "diving" from 500, "getting away a couple of bursts" at a truck and "beating up" a road, orchard or communication artery.

You get the idea that they have just returned from a 'rhubarb" behind the lines, but what they are really trying to get across is that the 8th Army batteries boomed into action on instruction sent back by them.

Pilots of these "Fearless Fosdicks" include such men as Capts. Peter Mackley, 25, of Retford, Nottinghamshire, and John East, Sidcombe, Kent, who patrol a beat on a Canadian-Indian front.

"About 45 minutes is all we can do at a time", explained Mackley after plopping his plane down a two by four carpet. "The constant strain on our eyes is too much and we've got to come down for brief rests".

EXPORT OF BEER TO U.S. JUMPS DURING PAST YEAR

1,962,395-Gallon Increase Shown After Quota for Canada Is Filled

OTHER REPORTS

Ottawa, Feb. 9—(CP)—Breweries in Canada exported 2,322,108 gallons of beer to the United States in 1943 compared with 360,613 gallons in 1942, an increase of 1,962,395 gallons, it was learned today.

The breweries, an Excise Department spokesman said, are permitted to export any amount of beer they brew after filling the 90 per cent. quota for domestic consumption, established in December, 1942, when Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced the breweries would be allowed to produce for Canadian consumption only 90 per cent. of the amount they manufactured during the year ended Nov. 1, 1941.

The Excise Department official said there are no restrictions on the export of beer manufactured after the domestic quota has been filled, although the exports were subject to limitation on bottles, cartons and other equipment. The bottles used in exports to the United States are usually supplied by American sources, he said.

The value of the exports to the United States in 1943 was $1,726,178, compared with $312,048, an increase of $1,736,178.

Breweries also have been exporting beer to Egypt, the West Indies, Ceylon and North Africa where Allied troops are stationed and where the water supply often is unfit to drink.

Last year, 1,000,000 gallons were sent to Egypt, 800,000 gallons to the West Indies, 229,000 to Ceylon and 278,000 to North Africa. In 1942, 6,000,000 gallons were sent to Egypt and 350,000 to North Africa.

Say Germans Direct Troops and Gunfire From Monastery

New York, Feb. 9. (AP)—Max Hill, NBC reporter, in a despatch from Naples dated yestedday, told of "a concentrated shelling of the famous Benedictine monastery" atop Mount Cassino. The summit has been held by the Germans through a week of heavy fighting along its approaches.

"At least two, perhaps more, shells hit the buildings", Hill said. "One of the shells sent out a spray of bricks and plaster just below the monastery's tower. The shells hit the north and east sides of the building, with at least six more around the base.

"Army observers told me later that the buildings shelter Germans who are directing troop movements in the town (Cassino) below, as well as artillery fire".

Demobilization Program For the Armed Forces Not Yet in Final Form

Montreal, Feb. 9 —(CP)— A program for the demobilization of Canada's armed forces will not be drafted in its final form until "we know under exactly what circumstances the war shall end," Pensions Minister Mackenzie said today.

In an address prepared for delivery to the annual convention of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, Mr. Mackenzie said a preliminary demobiliation program has been prepared; but "it would be unfortunate if we were prematurely to enact it into a rigid form."

"We shall better be able to draft our legislation in this connection when we know under exactly what circumstances the war shall end. When that happy event occurs I can assure you that we shall be ready with a sound program of orderly demobilization.

"The nature and the success of that program will, of course, depend upon the economic condition of the country at that time."

Re-establishment of service personnel and other post-war measures will depend a great deal on the success in the field of reconstruction, Mr. Mackenzie said.

Full Employment Social Security.

"It will be of little use to train our veterans for jobs if there are no jobs available. The best kind of social security is full employment. Our million workers in war industry have been accorded the protection of unemployment insurance for such temporary disturbances as may occur in the transition period from war to peace. But it is not unemployment insurance they ask—it is the assurance of employment.

"We know enough history to be aware that other wars have usually been followed by depressions, unemployment and even famine. But we also think we know enough economics to have confidence that this need not be, if we but profit by experience and lay our plans intelligently.

"We have had the problem under continuous survey since 1941. Committees of experts have studied the causes of other post-war depressions in order that we might have the information necessary to guide us in avoiding past mistakes. We have taken stock of the probable difficulties, and we have taken stock of the resources at our disposal to overcome them.

"The core of the problem of reconstruction is the maintenance of full employment. We have it today and we are determined to maintain it. The people of Canada, with memories of the hungry 30's still green, will not tolerate in that respect."

JAP RESISTANCE SNUFFED OUT ON KWAJALEIN

American Warships and Planes Diverting Power to Other Atolls

NO TARGETS DISCLOSED

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 9—(AP)—All organized Japanese resistance has been snuffed out on Kwajalein, world's largest atoll and today American warships and planes are diverting fire power from that nerve centre of the Marshalls to other fortified atolls.

In the midst of these developments, the overall strategists spoke hopefully of getting "our ground and air forces into China as early as possible" for a showdown against Japan.

The United States navy imposed a policy of semi-secrecy last night in announcing its fleet and air arm are swinging punches elsewhere in the Marshalls. The navy did not disclose the targets, since communication between those supply-severed bases and Japan are precarious and lack of the information would seriously impede the enemy.

Attacks took place Sunday and Monday.

Meanwhile, airfields on Roi and Kwajalein Islands in Kwajalein atoll are being repaired and modernized to send planes daily against Marshall bases, already largely neutralized and virtually stripped of air cover.

Based at Kwajalein's spacious lagoon, a large and as yet unchallenged fleet—not even attacked by enemy submarines — was alert against attempts to succer the enemy's Marshall garrisons.

Three to Request For Ambassadors

New York, Feb. 9. (CP)— The New York Herald Tribune in a copyright dispatch from its London Bureau said today:—

"The reconstituted Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic and Byelo-Russian (White Russian) Soviet Socialist Republic will ask Great Britain, the United States and Canada to exchange diplomatic representatives with them soon, an authoritative source said.

"A similar move is expected by the Latvian, Estonian and Lithuanian Soviet Socialist Republics, as soon as the military situation permits their new governments to be established.

"It was pointed out by the authoritative source that this expansion of Soviet contacts with the rest of the world is based primarily on economic problems because of the special postwar needs of those republics. They will need considerable help from America, Britain and Canada in the reconstruction of their ruined cities and villages and in developing as quickly as possible their agricultural and other natural resources".

CALLS ON GERMAN FRONT IN RUSSIA TO YIELD TO REDS

German General, Captive in Russia, Broadcasts Appeal for 'Free Germany'

SEES NAZI COLLAPSE

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—General Walter Von Seydlitz, German artillery officer captured by the Russians at Stalingrad last year, appealed to German officers and soldiers along the entire eastern front to surrender to the Red Army, a Moscow broadcast recorded by Monitors of the United States Federal communications commission last night said.

Echoing the radio appeal he made Saturday night from Moscow to members of 10 German divisions trapped southwest of Cherkasy, Von Seydlitz broadcast a plea to his former comrades-in-arms to "come over to the side of the "Free Germany National Committee," save their own lives and help create "a truly free and really independent Germany."

Vice-President.

Von Seydlitz, President of the Soviet-sponsored union of German officers, is also Vice-President of the "Free Germany National Committee" in Moscow.

Declaring he was speaking in "the hour of greatest danger for the entire German eastern front," Von Seydlitz was quoted last night as saying:-

"What we have warningly foretold for months and months past—a great winter catastrophe for the German armies in the east—is facing you now, irrevocably and unavoidably.

"That is the bitter and undiluted truth. Since Stalingrad, Hitler has led you from defeat to defeat. In his irresponsible and megalomanic conceit, he does not shy now from recklessly exposing you after 4 1-2 years of heroic fighting to the untold misery of ignominious, humiliating and complete disintegration, unworthy of German soldiers. . . Hitler has gambled away everything and is now faced, not by victory, but by certain destruction."

Asking the German troops if they could still believe in Hitler's promises under such conditions, Von Seydlitz said:-

"We want to save what there is left to save from this chaos of utter collapse . . . To bring back our Fatherland from his ocean of errors to the firm ground of a truly free and really independent Germany."

Japanese Propaganda Seen in Claim

New York, Feb. 9 —(AP)— The Tokyo radio said today American airmen killed 58 and seriously wounded 80 missionaries or members of their families in a machine-gun attack against Japanese barges near Wewak, New Guinea, Sunday.

The "authorities concerned" will soon submit a detailed report to the Vatican about the "inhuman machine-gunning," the broadcast, which apparently was part of a propaganda campaign touched off by recent Allied disclosures of Japanese war atrocities, said.

'ATLANTIC WALL' RAIDED FOR THIRD TIME IN 24 HOURS

Day-Long Attacks On Continent Are Highlighted by Blow at Frankfurt

AIRCRAFT FACTORY HIT

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associtaed Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 9 —(AP)— United States marauders roared back to northern France to pound German "Atlantic Wall" installations today for the third time in little more than 24 hours together with R.A.F. medium, light and fighter-bombers.

The daylight formations crossed the Channel after R.A.F. night bombers struck objectives in Germany and France, including the Rhone aircraft engine factory at Limoges, without loss.

British Bostons, Mitchells, Mosquitos, Typhoons and Hurricanes joined in the assault on Nazi installations in northern France which were attacked twice by marauders yesterday, and have been bombed almost daily for two months. Fighters escorted the bombers.

The renewed pounding followed day-long attacks upon the continent yesterday, highlighted by a heavy blow upon Frankfurt.

Observers on the English coast said the day began exactly like yesterday, with various types of bombers and fighters streaming toward northern France in the early morning haze.

Some big bombers were observed returning later from the direction of Bouloune and Calais as other formations were setting out.

Yesterday's Flying Fortress attack on Frankfurt was the third such assault on that city in 11 days.

19 Nazi Planes Downed.

A communique said 19 German planes were downed during the Frankfurt operation, American fighters accounting for 16 while the others fell to the bombers. Two other Nazi planes were destroyed by R.A.F. Typhoons over Brittany.

Allied loss for the day was 25 planes — 12 heavy bombers, one medium bomber, one light bomber, two fighter-bombers and nine fighters—the communique said.

Targets in northern France were subjected to a dawn-to-dusk pounding by hundreds of Allied planes.

The Air Ministry said today R.A.F. Mosquitos, patrolling the Bay of Biscay area more than 400 miles from the English coast, shot down a big six-engined German transport over its base near Bordeaux last night.

The plane was of the same type as those employed by the Germans in trying to ferry troops to Tunisia during the North African campaign. A number of the giant aircraft were shot down over the Mediterranean.

HEADS CHINA BANK BOARD

Chungking, Feb. 9 (AP)—Minister of Finance H. H. Kung has been elected chairman of the Board of the Bank of China succeeding his brother-in-law, Foreign Minister T. V. Soong, it was announced today. Soong, who had been chairman of the bank's directors since 1935, remains foreign minister.

Nimitz Wants Ground and Air Forces in China As Soon As Possible

By WILLIAM HIPPLE
(AP War Correspondent)

Pearl Harbor, Feb. 9. (AP)—Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, radiating confidence and satisfaction after returning from an inspection of Kwajalein, said yesterday his aim is to get the forces under his command moving across the Pacific and setting up bases in China.

In an unusual statement at his press conference, the commander-in-chief of the United States Pacific fleet said his object is "to get our ground and air forces into China as early as possible".

"In the last analysis", he continued, "I do not believe we can defeat Japan from the sea alone".

Startled correspondents asked him if that remark was "on the record".

"Certainly", he answered. "That's the simple strategy of the Pacific war. I believe the Japs can only be defeated from bases in China because they draw food, iron and other supplies from Manchuria and China, and as long as they have access to these they will be difficult to beat.

"Furthermore, we want air bases in China from which we can deliver air raids—not sporadic ones— but like those the Germans are receiving".

When reminded that most of the discussion of gaining Allied bases in China centred on the campaign from Burma, Nimitz said:—

"It stands to reason we would land on all parts of China we could".

Thus he further indicated that his fleet, the army and marine corps forces under his command intend on taking a leading part in the China offensive.

Nimitz would give no indication of the China offensive timetable but he said, "I think that if you'll watch the communiques, you'll see us moving on".

Pour Tons Bombs Into Cisterna To Cripple Positions

Aggressive Patrol Activity by Allied Troops and Nazi Forces Seen

1,500 SORTIES FLOWN

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press War Correspondent

Algiers, Feb. 9 —(AP)— Allied planes poured tons of bombs yesterday on Cisterna to cripple that main strongpoint of the Nazi line around the invasion bridgehead south of Rome, while Allied troops struck out in "aggresive patrol activity," Allied headquarters announced today.

German patrols also were active in this vital sector, and Nazi artillery continued a heavy shelling of the beachhead.

The Allies further consolidated their positions, headquarters said.

Two-engined bombers in morning and afternoon raids pounded buildings in Cisterna where the enemy had concealed tanks and guns, and crewmen said the bombs levelled a large part of the town, 15 miles northeast of Anzio.

Cisterna has been a model town of the Pontine agricultural development. The Germans have converted it into a fortress. From it they have launched some of their fiercest attacks on the beachhead.

British Take New Heights

British troops have taken new heights in the Garigliano region, near Castelforte, four miles northeast of captured Minturno, front dispatches said.

The German communique asserted the Nazis had advanced several miles in the bridgehead area, capturing 700 prisoners. "Strong enemy counter-attacks with support of tanks and naval artillery were repulsed," the bulletin broadcast by Berlin added.

A dispatch to Stockholm by the German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau declared the waters off Nettuno "looked like a ship graveyard" as a result of German air attacks on Allied shipping.

American troops battling into Cassino on the main front have occupied about one-fourth of that town, front dispatches said, and at one time they fought to within 75 yards of the Benedictine Abbey on Mount Cassino.

An attack was launched in the pre-dawn darkness yesterday to take the cliff surrounding the Monastery on the mountain. The Germans have held the mountain top for six days of stern battle.

1,500 Sorties Flown

Allied planes flew 1,500 sorties throughout the day, striking at German troop concentrations, airfields and railyards over a wide area, and losing not a single plane. Five German planes were destroyed.

More guns were brought up to join the artillery barrage supporting the assault against Cassino to the southeast, and fighting continued in the streets of that key town. United States forces made slight gains in the mountains to the northwest.

The Germans still hold the greater portion of Cassino, the crest of Mount Cassino overlooking it, and still cling to a corridor leading to the town.

Allied airmen blasted Nazi troop concentrations, airfields and railyards on a wide front yesterday.

On the 8th Army front a German patrol of 60 men, with weapons including flamethrowers, thrust into Allied territory, near Orsogna but Allied forces killed 14 of them and captured six. The rest of the Nazis fled, abandoning their flamethrowers. First dispatches did not indicate whether the troops beating back this thrust, were Canadian or other units of the British 8th Army. A Canadian corps holds the right flank of the 8th Army's front, running inland from the Adriatic to the Mountains of Central Italy.

In addition to the air blows at Cisterna, the Allies bombed railyards at Siena, north of Rome.

Monsignor Sheen Criticizes Agitation Against Vatican

Washington, Feb. 9—(AP)—Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, in sharply worded criticism of Soviet agitation against the Vatican, declared yesterday that it is only natural for the Roman Catholic Church to be opposed by a government "that has between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 political prisoners doing slave labor in Russia."

"No democratic nation has charged the Vatican with 'lack of sympathy,' " the Catholic prelate said in a statement.

"Only the Fascists, Nazis and the Soviets have done so and that is because the Vatican condemned all three."

The government-controlled press in Soviet Russia published charges that the Vatican supported fascism —Franco in Spain and Mussolini in Italy—and Nazism in Germany. Today, Tass (Soviet News Agency) quoted a German refugee along the same lines, and Msgr. Sheen commented:-

"The second blast of the Soviets became necessary because the first fell flat."

The Tass story was written around a pamphlet by Leopold Mannaberg emphasizing what was termed "the leading role the Vatican played in the Fascists' and Nazis' rise to power." It was published in New York and distributed in the United States.

Sheen said "when the Soviets declare that the Vatican is the enemy of democracy, they mean it is the enemy of their kind of democracy.

"The Vatican which teaches that democracy 'does not consist in the power to lay unreasonable and capricious demands upon subjects' must necessarily be opposed by a government that already has between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 political prisoners doing slave labor in Russia.

"The Soviets are right in citing no facts, offering no proofs and giving no references. Not a single document is quoted to sustain their contention. Perhaps in the interval between this and the last blast they learn that the church did not bless either Mussolini od Franco.

"Why does the Soviet want the Vatican shorn of power? Because the Vatican is the only obstacle in Europe to its barbarization by the Soviets.

"Now that Stalin attacks one of the four freedoms, we make use of the fifth freedom—the right to say thanks for showing us the serpent beneath the flower."

A. J. KELLY APPOINTED

Ottawa, Feb. 9 —(CP)—Appointment of A. J. Kelly of Ottawa to the National Selective Service Advisory Board was announced today in Canadian war orders and regulations.

Mr. Kelly, Dominion Legislative Representative of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, succeeds John A. Bell of Toronto, who now is a member of the National War Labor Board.

LIEUT. F. P. CLARKE STILL SERIOUSLY ILL

Previously reported as seriously ill as the result of wounds received in action during the fighting on the Italian front, the condition of Lieut. Francis P. Clarke, 28 Sinclair Street, Belleville, is still no better according to word received by his wife Thursday evening. The progress report of her husband was for the week January 29th., it was stated in the communication. Lieut. Clarke was wounded last December 17th. Mrs. Clarke is a daughter of Mr. A. R. Symons, 28 Sinclair Street.

MUNICIPAL BAND GIVES CONCERT IN NAPANEE

Again exemplifying its willingness to assist in a really worthwhile cause, the Belleville Municipal Band, 40 members strong, motored to Napanee Monday evening to stage a band concert sponsored by the congregation of Trinity Street Church. Returning band members and their manager, Mr. Harry Moorman, reported having a splendid time in the eastern town, the concert drawing a "fair" crowd, and the proceeds going to war charities.

Members of the Belleville Rotary Club, together with some of the band officials, kindly loaned their cars to transport the band members to Napanee. Following the concert they were treated to a bun feed and other refreshments before coming back to Belleville.

WHO WANTS MUMMY AT AUCTION

New York, Feb. 9—(AP)—In the market for a nice, pleasant-looking mummy? Pedigree: Name unknown but believed to have been the wife of the keeper of the Egyptian treasury about 650 B.C., well-preserved with only the tip of her nose and her toes and feet exposed to view. It used to belong to a Nazi baron—that's why the New York office of the alien property custodian will auction it Feb. 21.

Devastating Defeat Handed German Troops

London, Feb. 9 —(CP)— Yugoslav Partisans have inflicted a "devastating defeat" on Axis troops near the town of Gacko, 45 miles south of Sarajevo, a broadcast communique of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation said today.

No further details of this engagement were given by the communique, which said that units of Gen. Draja Mihailovic's Chetniks were brigaded with the Axis forces.

Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) also announced a battle has been raging for the past 20 days between Partisan forces and a German-Bulgarian army in the Zlatibor area of western Serbia. More than 200 Axis troops have been slain, the Yugoslav bulletin added.

Other clashes were reported from widely separated parts of the irregular front, the communique said, adding that a German ammunition ship recently had been sunk by a British warship in an unspecified locality off the coast.

Foreign Secretary Declines Answer

London, Feb. 9. (CP)—Foreign Secretary Eden declined to answer when asked in the House of Commons today whether Russia might be requested to serve as a protecting power in an attempt to halt Japanese atrocities against Allied prisoners of war.

Eden told Commons however that "the good offices of the Soviet government have been sought and have been forthcoming in connection with the dispatch of war prisoners' correspondence and also with the forwarding of relief supplies through their territories".

He indicated all protested against Japanese barbarities in the treatment of prisoners of war are still going through neutral protecting powers.

Greek Relief Fund Officials Grateful

Chairman G. Ganetakos and National Secretary B. C. Salamis of the Greek War Relief Fund have written Rev. Dr. J. Semple of Bridge Street United Church a letter of gratitude for the service and contribution made towards the fund at Bridge Street Church a week ago last Sunday evening. They say:

"We were very glad to hear from our good friend, Mr. George Vlassis and from your local press of the great success you had Sunday evening at Bridge Street Church in the service as well as the organ recital.

"The gratifying results obtained and the assistance you gave us last year as well as this year are due to the efforts of your church committee and the people of Belleville.

"We are fully aware of your personal interest in assisting this humanitarian effort to alleviate the suffering of the ill-fated people of Greece and we are happy to extend to you and to all those who assisted in this work, on behalf of our national committee, our warmest thanks and appreciation.

"Canada has been very generous and in such a practical way that the Greek people will never forget this manifestation of friendliness."

Council Engages Consulting Firm To Make Survey

Picton, Feb. 9—The services of James, Proctor and Redfern, consulting engineers were engaged by town council Monday night. The firm will make a survey report, at a cost of $500, of a sewage and disposal plant in Picton. The cost will be incorporated as part of their six percent fee shound they be engaged as engineers in this project at such time as it is advisable to proceed with same.

The Post-War Planning Committee had recommended such action following an address by Dr. A. E. Berry, director of Sanitary Engineering for Ontario. Mr. Proctor outlined to council the plan to be followed in the survey.

Report of Relief Administrator L. R. Brown showed 52 on the rolls during January at a cost of $529.

A grant of $100 was made to the local Salvation Army and $75 to S. A. Rescue Homes. Percy Myatt was appointed caretaker of Memorial Park. Council was informed that liquid asphalt, oil dust layers and tar for road purposes would likely be available this year.

Wounded Second Time.

Pte. Harold Heffernan has again been wounded in action, his mother, Mrs. Andrew Heffernan was officially advised yesterday. Nature or extent of injuries was not given. It was stated he was wounded on January 30th. He was previously wounded in Italy on December 8th, suffering a shrapnel wound in the arm, and after a month in hospital returned to his unit. He was with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and went overseas in 1939. His brother Milton was also wounded in December and is not yet back in action.

Pilot Officer Cameron Thompson of Sarnia, a member of the R.C.A.F. overseas, is reported missing in action since Jan. 29th. He is a nephew of Mrs. A. E. Calnan, Picton, M. G. Thompson, Bethel and A. M. Thompson, Wellington. A brother, Fraser, was reported missing in the Middle East in June 1942. Cameron has been overseas since 1941 and was attached to the Royal Air Force.

Belleville Collegiate girls basketball team defeated Picton Collegiate girls, 7 to 9 in a keenly fought game here Monday night. The R.A.F. men's team played the Collegiate boys and scored a win. A capacity crowd attended.

George Tustin, member for Prince Edward-Lennox, was named to the House of Commons agriculture, marine and fisheries, printing and restaurant committees last week. He is now in Ottawa attending the sessions.

Crewmen on Corvette State Their Ships Poorly Equipped in Comforts

Sgm. McCreary and Smn. Whiting of Belleville Applaud Action Taken by City

WOULD TRANSFER

Recounting their experiences aboard corvettes of the Canadian Navy, Signalman Harry "Hot Dog" McCreary, 122 Bridge Street East, son of Mr. and Mrs. William R. McCreary and Seaman Jack Whiting, 60A Bridge Street West, the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Whiting, gave a few insights into their life aboard these small but gallant craft of the Canadian Navy.

Signalman McCready enlisted in the Navy shortly after Christmas in 1941 and took his basic training at Toronto and then attended Signal School at St. Hyacinthe, Que., before being posted to the east coast where he went aboard the corvette H.M.C.S. "Eyebright" at a Newfoundland port. The "Eyebright" was already engaged in convoy escort duty on the North Atlantic run and in a few days, Sgm. McCreary found himself at sea. The crossings, three to North Ireland and one to Scotland, were uneventful insofar as action with the enemy was concerned until the last one when the convoy was attacked by a U-boat, which torpedoed a tanker. This action took place on the third night out, and the "Sackville", the corvette on which McCreary was then serving, set out to get the submarine. The U-boat made a successful crash-dive and, as far as is known, got away undamaged.

Tanker Torpedoed.

"The first we knew about it", said McCreary, was when we heard the torpedo strike and explode, and the tanker sent up star-shells in a distress signal. We heeled over and took out for where we judged the sub to be and tossed over a bunch of "ash-cans", but he made his crash-dive before we were close enough to really do him any damage". When asked if he had been attacked by air on any of his crossings he replied that this was the only contact he had experienced with the enemy.

In the interests of the recently formed "H.M.C.S. Belleville" corvette fund, Sgm. McCreary was asked to describe the equipment aboard the two ships on which he had served. He replied that the "Eyebright" was a Royal Navy ship and had not been adopted by any town or city in Canada and, consequently, was poorly equipped with anything in the way of comforts. The "Sackville", named for a town in Nova Scotia, was more fortunate in this respect, and frequent boxes were received from the towns-people. "There was little in the way of games aboard either ship", he said, when asked about the recreational facilities. "We played poker and darts mainly".

Another question which was answered by Sgm. McCreary in a very straight-forward manner, concerned the facilities aboard for preparing a light snack when coming off duty. "We could make coffee in the galley," he said, but it wasn't always easy to do. If we had had a percolator, or something, we could have made it ourselves without going to the galley where the cook, like all cooks, resented our prowling through his pots and pans and mixing them up."

Lauds Proposal.

"I like the idea of this equipping a corvette that the city is doing," said McCreary. "I think it's a good idea and, I, for one, would jump at the chance to be transferred to the new ship whenever it is commissioned. It would make me feel more at home to be on a ship named after my own home town, feeling that the folks at home were taking care of me, and other fellows from Belleville. I am certain the people of Belleville would be more interested if they knew that there were a number of home town boys on the "Belleville" than if there were just fellows from other parts of the Dominion." McCreary has unwittingly made a suggestion which might well bear investigation as to the probability of having a fairly large representation of the ship's company Belleville boys.

AB. Jack Whiting, after listening to what Sgm. McCreary had to say, remarked that there was little he could add about life aboard a corvette. He, too, is serving on a corvette, the H.M.C.S. "Agassiz." He enlisted at about the same time as McCreary and, after basic training, was posted to H.M.C.S. "Gaspe," a minesweeper. The "Gaspe," he said, was a coal-burner, known in naval parlance as a "hand-bomber," where he served from June 1942 until October 1942 in coastal waters on minesweeping duty.

He was posted to the "Agassiz" in October 1943.

Would Transfer Also.

The "Agassiz" made two crossings of the Atlantic while A.B. Whiting was aboard, but there was no enemy action on either trip. When asked what conditions were like aboard his ship he replied in the same vein as did Sgm. McCreary, that his ship was not an adopted ship and had little in the way of comforts aboard. Jack also said that he would jump at the chance to be put aboard the "Belleville" when she is commissioned.

"We had nothing at all aboard the "Agassiz," he said. He was replying to a question about comforts and equipment. They had a hot-plate in the mess which they used to heat water and prepare coffee, when they could get coffee. "It would be pretty much all right," he said, "to be on a ship that had all the things the "Belleville" will have."

Both men have sailed with other Belleville boys. Sgm. McCreary was aboard the "Eyebright" with A.B. Norm Cunningham and A.B. Lawrence Cook, and A.B. Whiting was a shipmate of A.B. Dale Hudgins and Harry Taylor aboard H.M.C.S. "Agassiz." They both said that they knew every man in the navy would appreciate what is being done for them by the folks at home, such as is being done here in the city, and it was with a great deal of interest that they listened to the proposed plans of the committee for the sponsoring of the corvette "Belleville."

Obituary

MRS. HESTER JANE (JENNIE) BAILEY.

After an illness of four days' duration, Mrs. Hester Jane (Jennie) Bailey died at her home, 90 West Moira Street, West, on Tuesday evening.

The late Mrs. Bailey, who was in her 75th year, was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Moore. For a considerable time she lived in Plainfield and for the past twelve years she made her home in Belleville. In religion she was a member of Holloway Street United Church and when able she took part in church work, being a valued member of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Mrs. Bailey was twice married; her first husband was Martin B. Reid and he died twenty-nine years ago and her second husband was James Walter Bailey, who died seven years ago.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. Miller Parks, Thurlow Township; one sister, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Reid, Corbyville, and five grandchildren.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MRS. SAMUEL COLDEN

Mrs. Samuel Colden, 108½ Station Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this Wednesday morning after a lengthy illness.

The late Mrs. Colden, who was in her 56th. year, was born in Manchester, England, and prior to her marriage she was Miss Ethel May Rigby, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Rigby. Thirty seven years ago she left Manchester and came to reside in Belleville. In religion she was a member of the Salvation Army and was well esteemed. She was also a member of the Daughters of the Maids of England.

Surviving her are her husband, Mr. Samuel Colden; three sons, Thomas H. Colden, Belleville; Arthur A. Colden at home, and John E. Colden at home; two daughters, Miss Hannah May Colden, Belleville, and Mrs. Garfield Benn, Belleville; one sister, Mrs. Nellie Hinton, Belleville; two granddaughters, Eyvette Colden and Shirley Benn, both of Belleville.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until Thursday morning then at the home of the family, 108½ Station Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE ARTHUR WALTER WILSON (Thurlow Township)

The funeral of Arthur Walter Wilson took place from his late residence in the 8th. concession of Thurlow Township on Tuesday afternoon to the United Church at Holloway where service was conducted by the Rev. E. M. Cooke. During the service Miss Marjorie Parks sang a solo.

Entombment was at Stirling cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. James Sprackett, Ernest Wilson, Herbert Townsend, Milton Robson, R. Hinchcliffe and Roscoe Robson, M.P.P.

LATE MRS. LOUISE SANFORD

The funeral of Mrs. Louise (Bowley) Sanford, widow of Frederick Sanford, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Tuesday afternoon. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, and the service at the graveside in Elmwood cemetery, Corbyville, was conducted by the Rev. Dr. A. J. William Myers, minister of the Tabernacle United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Charles Smith, George Smith, Charles Bird, John Bird, George Bird and M. Malley.

OPPOSES FLAT HYDRO RATES

Toronto, Fez. 9—(CP)—J. B. Hay of London, Ont., chairman of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association's committee on post-war problems, said today that his committee opposed the provincial proposal for flat Hydro rates for Ontario municipalities.

Delegates to the Association's anual meeting here today said a lively debate on the subject probably will develop tomorrow, with the introduction of a resolution from Sarnia favoring the flat rates and a resolution from St. Catharines opposing them.

Trenton and District

Corporal Whitney Wounded in Italy.

Trenton, (Special)—First wounded during the battle of Sicily, Corporal Clarence Whitney is now reported wounded during the battle of Italy, according to official information received here by his wife.

Corporal Whitney went overseas with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment in December, 1939 and has been through most of the recent fighting. Four children reside in Trenton with Mrs. Whitney.

Fire Renders Families Homeless

Trenton firemen have been kept busy for the past several days with one or more fires registered each day. On Tuesday morning they were called to Quinte St. where a blaze had started in a house occupied by Allan Berry, his wife and two children and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doran. It is thought to have started from an overheated stove and chimney and though firemen were quick to respond and plenty of water was within easy reach, a portion of the roof was completely destroyed. In addition much damage was done by smoke and water and both families rendered homeless.

Red Cross Work

The attendance at Red Cross work rooms on Tuesday was most encouraging and much work was accomplished, sewing, quilting, knitting and the making of hospital supplies, with several shipments being made to headquarters.

Home-made rolls donated by Mrs. W. Shoniker and Mrs. Ackerman were raffled, $2.10 being the amount realized. The winners were Miss M. Bonter, Mrs. S. O. Graham, Mrs. Watson, Mrs. J. F. Cox and Mrs. Wrean.

The monthly meeting was held following the work period, with the president, Mr. B. F. Joyce, in the chair. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. V. P. Carswell and the treasurer's report presented by Mr. George Sprentall. Reports of the various committees were read and the shipping report showed during the month of January, 2244 articles were shipped to Red Cross Headquarters at Toronto, valued at $216.05, in addition to which a considerable amount of used clothing was sent to the "Aid to Russia Fund" and a number of quilts and metal ash trays shipped to the corvette "Trentonian."

A letter of appreciation was read from Lieut. W. E. Harrison, commanding officer of the "Trentonian," thanking the branch for their gifts and good wishes. It is understood the "Trentonian" has been commissioned and is now on active duty.

The president announced the drive for funds which would be commenced early in March.

SWEDISH MINISTER EN ROUTE FROM RUSSIA

Stockholm, Feb. 9 (AP)—Vilaelm Assorssom, Swedish Minister to Russia, is en route home from Moscow for consulation with his government, the newspaper Tidningen said today. Assorssom now is in London, the paper said. The Swedish attache in Moscow already has arrived in Stockholm for consulations, the newspaper added.

DEATHS

BAILEY—In Belleville at 90 Moira Street West, on Tuesday evening, February 8th., Mrs. Hester Jane (Jennie) Bailey, widow of James Walter Bailey, in her 75th. year.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, from where the funeral will take place on Friday afternoon, February 11th. Service in the chapel at 1.30 o'clock. Interment Elmwood Cemetery, Corbyville.

COLDEN—In the Belleville General Hospital, on Wednesday morning, February 9th., Mrs. Ethel May (Rigby) Colden, wife of Mr. Samuel Colden, in her 56th. year.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until Thursday morning; then at the family home, 108½ Station Street, from where the funeral will take place on Friday afternoon, February 11. Service in the home at 3.00 o'clock. Interment Belleville Cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. William Kelly and family wish to express their sincere thanks to their friends and neighbours for the many acts of kindness and expressions of sympathy extended to them in their bereavement.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the many neighbours and friends who so kindly assisted me during the illness and funeral of Mrs. Mather.

BERT MARTIN MATHER.

The family of the late Mrs. Louise Sanford wish to acknowledge with grateful appreciation the many kind and thoughtful expressions of sympathy of friends and neighbors during their recent bereavement; also for the beautiful floral tributes and the kind offers of the use of cars.

Mrs. Winnifred Matthews and relatives of the late William Penny wish to thank their friends and neighbors for their many acts of kindness and sympathy during their recent bereavement; with special thanks to Dr. F. R. Ross and the Victorian Order of Nurses.

Typical Japanese Reply

As might have been expected the Japanese have claimed in answer to the charges by the United Nations of Japanese cruelties and atrocities towards the Allied prisoners of war, that Japanese have been victims of atrocities. No one outside of Japan would believe such manifest lies as these of a Japanese spokesman. The American reply is that Japanese prisoners have received the same fair treatment as Americans have received from Americans.

The Japanese have shown by the sudden stab on December 7th 1941, that they are expert in falsehood and do not regard it as anything wrong but rather a proof of their keen modern mind. Treachery has been shown to be a part of their nature and so the charges of a Japanese that his fellow countrymen have been ill-treated can be passed over as a mere Nipponese bit of duplicity.

The atrocities which have been visited upon Allied prisoners of war stand as facts that cannot be overlooked even by Japan for they will not be overlooked by United States and Britain who are going to call the guilty perpetrators to judgment for their crimes against British and American subjects.

Oddly enough the Japanese denial of charges of British and Americans that atrocities were indulged in to the suffering and death of Allied prisoners is accompanied by a charge of ill-treating Japanese, just as if a Jap denial would wipe out crime. There is a multitude of facts supporting the statement that there has been no ill-treatment of Japanese by the Allies.

February Sunlight

So far the month of February has shown what it is not always able to show winter sunlight at its best. Sometimes February is a very blustery month with deep cold. In fact it is often the real depth of winter with all the severity which that implies. But 1944 has brought a February that especially merits distinction as the herald of March, the spring month. The growing strength of the sun rising higher in the sky has never been more clearly manifested in this month of the year.

February has not enjoyed a very generous attention from the poets, who mostly reserved their lauds for the months of March and April with the lovely May and the supreme beauty of June. But there is a poet who has found that February does merit distinction and he finds this in the sunlight that February sheds. Sometimes the sky is clouded in storms which rage but he sees the sunlight as a distinct mark of the month and gives it due praise. While it is true that some mornings are dark and dull, others are bright. William Cullen Bryant says this of a winter of snow and a rain that encrusts the snow:

> Come when the rains
> Have glazed the snow and clothed the trees with > ice,
> While the slant sun of February pours
> Into the bowers a flood of light. Approach!
> The incrusted surface shall upbear the steps
> And the broad arching portals of the grove
> Welcome thy entering.

This same writer also refers to sunshine in his piece "Among the Trees:"

> The February sunshine steeps your boughs
> And tints the buds and swells the leaves within.

Bryant has caught a touch of the sunshine such as we have it these lovely winter days without storm and snow but with the inspiring warmth and light.

The month this year may go down in history as that which bestowed the most sunlight upon this part of the earth in many decades. February this year is getting due praise for the floods of sunlight undimmed by clouds in days which give as near an approach as attainable to the sunlight of spring with light shed on February snow, making the whole world bright.

Hitler's U-Boat Fails

For the fifth week in succession there have been no sinkings of ships by the U-boat announced. This is the kind of news that is unwelcome to Hitler who planned much upon interruption of the ocean travel lanes. The naval strength of the United Nations, particularly Britain and the United States, have at the same time made life under the ocean wave rather risky for Hitler's crews in U-boats.

Smiting Japan Proper

Japan has received a blow at the homeland with the bombardment of Paramushiro, the most northern island of Japan proper by United States warships. The Japanese, unexpecting this, though they ought to have known that before the end of this war no part of Japan can consider itself immune from attack by Allied fleets or aircraft, were so excited that they fired tracer bullets into the air wildly as if they feared that an invasion was at hand.

Everyone recalls the wild excitement which dominated the crowds in Tokyo when American planes flew over that city early in the war and dropped bombs.

This latest attack, that by U. S. naval vessels, can be calculated to have left an effect upon the Nipponese following so closely upon the Japanese defeat and disaster in the Marshall Islands.

Further evidence of this concern is indicated in the warnings that have emanated from Tokyo authorities who have warned the people of the growing Allied offensive and who thereby have indicated that the steady pressure of the Nations has roused the Japanese leaders to the nature of the growing Allied threat that awaits them.

Twenty Years After Wilson

(An Editorial in the New York Times)

Twenty years ago Woodrow Wilson died. He died broken by the bitter knowledge that the cause for which he led the nation into war, the cause for which American boys fought and died on the fields of France, had been lost in victory. A Great War President, he died defeated, not by the enemy but by his own people when they failed to support the one aim that in his mind justified the waste and agony of a conflict that up to that time had no parallel in history. He was repudiated as an idealist, and we returned to "normalcy;" but if he could come back to the earth today, who could refuse him the title of the supreme realist of his generation?

With terrible clarity the dying author of the Covenant of Nations saw that the war we thought we had won was not over. He died in the "absolute conviction," as he said in his last speech as President, that "within another generation there will be be another world war if the nations of the world do not concert the method by which to prevent it." America had a greater interest in preventing it than other nations because, he warned, "the next war would have to be paid for in American blood and money."

He died, too, in the absolute conviction that this country would have to accept the vision of reality that blind men called a dream. "I would rather fail in a cause that some day will triumph," he said, "than to triumph in a cause that I know some day will fail." Twenty years after, the vindication of Woodrow Wilson is cruelly complete. It is to be hoped that the education of the American people is also complete, for if we fail again there will be no peace, neither in our time nor for generations to come.

The Word "Jeep"

(New York Sun)

The current issue of American Notes and Queries gives a plausible explanation of the origin of the term "jeep." The first pilot model of the quarter-ton combat car turned out by the American Bantam Car Company reached Camp Holabird, Maryland, in 1938, marked "GP" and the army drivers and mechanics did the rest.

SORE THUMB

How come,
Sore thumb,
That wherever I go
And whatever I touch,
You bother me so,
And hurt so much?

Explain
Why pain,
Whatever I do
To button or bolt
Reminds me of you
With a stinging jolt.

Why must
Each thrust
Of the pain I bear,
Like a throbbing drum,
Make me aware
That I have a thumb?

How come,
Sore thumb,
Is it ever so?
Is our teaching vain?
What we all should know
Must we learn from pain?

LONDON LETTER

By DOUG HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 9 —(CP)— There will have to be a new definition of the term secret one of these days because the war has brought things to a point where it is only with a journalistic tongue in a journalistic cheek that the press can say that such and such a secret was kept with a zeal deserving of praise in the highest degree.

What the press means generally is that the press didn't say such and such about such and such because censorship woudn't let it. But that doesn't qualify the event as a secret.

The trouble is the people. Their censorship is their conscience and the conscience grows flabby at times when the merits of a strong silence are subject to heavy doubts.

No greater test can befall an allegedly muted Britain than one which involves its major glamor boys of the war, Winston Churchill and Sir Bernard Montgomery. There is in their color, in the sheer magic of their names, the impulse to gossip.

Time after time, the Prime Minister has come "secretly" home from his missions in fields afar and time after time he has arrived at a station packed with the curious. Time after time he has gone to the House of Commons to deliver a "secretly-timed" speech and time after time crowds gather in hopes of getting in to hear it.

The electric Montgomery was in town for some time between the African an Italian campaigns and as far as the press was concerned it was a "secret" in the sense that they couldn't publish the fact.

The public doted on Montgomery tales for days.

The fact is that the British public has developed a sharp sense of deduction through the restrictive influences of the war. After four years of practice it can put two and two together and unravel a secret with a considerable amount of success.

For instance, it takes a mind of no great scope to scent that the Prime Minister is off again if Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee answers in the commons questions — Mr. Churchill normally would answer. The problem them becomes one of deciding where he has gone and what he is up to.

It takes a mind of no stronger fabric to scent there is something afoot when cabinet ministers and service chiefs herd about a certain station which has become mildly celebrated because of Prime Minister has arrived there before.

The Prevention of Unnecessary Noise

Many may consider noise as just a nuisance and feel that if they must live in a city they must have to put up with the noises of a city or a town. Now, noise is more than a nuisance, it is a real menace to health but it has perhaps taken a world war to make us fully understand that noise interferes with health.

In a special article in the Journal of the American Medical Association on the abatement of noise, Drs. Carey P. McCord and John D. Goodell state, "If the period of national stress may so accentuate the ill effects of noise that a disturbed people will demand and secure relief both for the duration of the war and thereafter, at least one constructive end will have been attained".

Industrial plants with three shifts daily, and more street cars at night to make up for gasoline shortage, means shifts disturbing one another at the different sleeping or resting periods. More night trucking is another factor in keeping up a continuous noise.

Drs. McCord and Goodell state that we should all understand two things, first that noise does seriously affect health, and, second, that most of the noise is unnecessary and can be prevented. They present a report in which they show that methods of noise control are practical and that behind some of the evils receiving more publicity such as absenteeism may be found the disturbances from noise.

Among the suggestions are changing sheet metal containers to wood, lining chutes with leather, different construction of walls of homes and factories, use of ear defenders (ear stopples), new types of automobile horn.

As regards our personal responsibility in preventing noise, these physicians state that 225,000 persons in New York City in one year were warned about making unnecessary automobile horn blowing; steam whistle; radio, phonograph or musical instrument played too loudly; to erect, demolish, or repair any building except during hours of 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Why is noise so harmful to health? Noise causes tenseness; tenseness causes tiredness from accumulation of wastes; tiredeness makes us unable to make a good fight against ailments and gives new ailments a better chance to attack us.

Mairzy Doats And Dozy Doats

(Peterboro Examiner)

As a humble member of the great and gullible public we can swallow a great deal of the hooey foisted on us by press agents, public relations brigands and other promotion banditti. We utterly refuse, however, to have anything to do with the story which has been circulated to account for the genesis of a jukebox ditty called Mairzy Doats. The tale is this: Milton Drake, a composer of songs of this type, was sitting one day at the organ; he was weary and ill at ease, and his fingers wandered idly over the noisy keys. Then he heard his little daughter, Niella Bonni Drake, rushing about the house singing—

> Mairzy doats and dozy doats,
> And liddle lamzy divey;
> A kiddley divey, too—

It is explained in the press agent's falsehood that the tot was singing, "Mares eat oats, and does eat oats, and little lambs eat ivy; a kid will eat ivy too—" but that faulty enunciation made the words sound like the mess which we have transcribed above. We greet this tale with a scream of derision and contumelious gestures.

Why? Because that wheeze is at least a century old. We had it tried on us by aunts, who, in turn, had had it tried on them, by aunts who, in the dark backward and abysm of time, had suffered it from even more remote aunts. Their version was—

> Hareseatay, Mareseatay

which the acute reader will at once recognize as "Hares eat hay, mares eat hay, sheep eat ivy", but the basic idea is the same.

Milton Drake is selling 25,000 copies a day of his piece; 45,000 juke boxes play it; Lily Pons, Irene Dunn and Herbert Marshall have sung it on the radio. He stole it from our family, in which it has been handed down from aunt to aunt since the days of Merrie England. Not that we liked it, even in its original form.

They start the wheel to revolving in the same direction as the plane is travelling so that on landing the wheels are spinning and help to take up some of the shock of landing. ## 'Gloomy Dean' Pessimistic About Britain After War

London, Feb. 8 — (AP) — Very Rev. Dr. William R. Inge, former "Gloomy Dean" of St. Paul's, told the Ruskin Society today that Great Britain as a great industrial country would not and could not recover from the war.

OLDEST RELIGION

Hinduism is regarded as the oldest living organized religion.

It had its beginnings somewhere between 2000 and 1500 B.C.

Its present adherents are believed to number about 250,000,000, or nearly one-eighth of the inhabitants of the world.

Most Hindus, of course, live in India.

Because of the natural increase in the population the yearly increase in the number of Hindus is about 1,000,000 a year.

The scriptural basis of all Hinduism is found in the four "Vedas," or books of knowledge.

Hindus differ widely in their theological beliefs and the various groups have developed writings that they regard as sacred in addition to the four Vedas.

But virtually all Hindus believe in and adhere to the caste system.

There as about 2,000 different castes in India and members of one caste are not permitted to intermarry, eat or mingle with members of another caste.

This rigid caste system is one of the chief obstacles to social, economic and political progress in India. Agitation for the abandonment of the hard and fast distinctions between castes has gotten virtually nowhere and the movement is confined to only a few intellectuals.

There are four main castes among the Hindus.

The highest caste includes the Brahmans, the priests and the intellectuals. The second consists of the rulers and the warriors. The third includes common artisans and farmers. The fourth consists of the common or low-caste people. These four grand castes are subdivided into some 2,000 groups that in effect constitute separate castes. Beneath all the castes are the "out-castes," persons who themselves or whose ancestors have been cast out of their castes and who comprise the 60,000,000 persons known as "untouchables."

One of the chief features of the Hindu caste system is that it requires the members of a caste to follow specified heredity occupations. This is why the caste system involves such serious economic and political as well as social and religious aspects. Democracy in our sense of the term is unthinkable to a faithful Hindu.

Completion of Belleville-Whitney Highway of Vital Importance to City Says Secretary of Industrial Commission

J. O. Herity Gives Report on Work Of Commission in The Past Year

R. PRINGLE, CHAIRMAN

The annual meeting of the Belleville Industrial Commission which was held at the Chamber of Commerce, was of more than ordinary interest.

The annual election of officers took place, the annual report was presented and several important matters in regard to highways, and other features of interest to the city and district were discussed with Mr. Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., representing East Hastings. It was anticipated that Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P.P., would also be in attendance but illness prevented. Mr. William Morrison, principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf, was also present as a guest.

Three New Members.

Three new members, duly appointed by the city council, appeared to take their places—Ald. H. J. Allin and Messrs. J. B. Boyce and Bruce Lattimer. Messrs. C. B. Morgan representative from the Chamber of Commerce, and Orliff Lloyd, appointed by the city council, were out of the city and unable to attend.

Chairman Pringle cordially welcomed the new members to the commission and expressed the hope that they would find their new duties congenial and that they might enjoy the satisfaction of rendering useful service to the community.

Officers.

The election of officers resulted in the appointment of the following to serve for the ensuing year:

Chairman—Ald. R. A. Pringle
Deputy Chairman — Ald. Lorne McDougall
Secretary—J. O. Herity.

Highway Projects Discussed.

The principal topic for consideration was the proposed Belleville-Whitney highway. Mr. Robson joined freely in the discussion. Much of what was said was of a confidential nature, or referred to questions of policy not yet finally determined, and cannot therefore be published. But the members were gratified to ascertain that Mr. Robson has already obtained most complete information in regard to this highly important project which would give to Belleville a direct arterial route to Algonquin Park, North Bay and the Trans-Canada Highway.

It was pointed out that the three essential features in bringing about this most desirable consummation were the taking over as a main highway of the county road between Foxboro and Madoc villages, the completion of the grading of No. 62 Highway between Madoc and Millbridge and the assumption as part of the provincial system of the present unsatisfactory road between Maynooth and Whitney.

Splendid Scenic Route.

Such a development would bring into being one of the most popular scenic and vacation routes in eastern Canada and by way of the new Thousand Island bridge, place this great holiday area in direct communication with fifty million people in the eastern United States who are seeking just such a wonderland in which to spend their summers.

There is every reason to believe that as soon as the war is ended, the Ontario Department of Highways will give earnest and sympathetic consideration to any representations or requests which may be made in regard to the proposals outlined above.

Appoint Representatives.

Messrs. John A. McIntosh, O. H. Scott, Lorne McDougall and J. O. Herity were appointed to represent the Industrial Commission as members of the Post-War Planning Commission.

Secretary's Report.

The secretary presented a comprehensive report of the past year's activities of the Industrial Commission from which the following paragraphs have been selected:

"The year 1943 was, industrially, for Belleville, very much a continuation of the unprecedented activity of 1942. The latter year saw production sweep up to the highest level ever recorded here and that high level was generally maintained. In a few instances it has been exceeded.

The war effort undoubtedly occasioned some of the early expansion but, at the same time, local industries have maintained a high standard of production to meet the needs of civilian customers.

War conditions had a detrimental and disturbing influence upon the movement of industrial branch establishments from the United States and Great Britain into Canada. The usual industrial tours into the United States were therefore not undertaken. But all those who are in a position to speak with knowledge and authority are agreed that Canada may look forward with the utmost confidence to an unprecedented era of expansion in manufacturing and in commerce in the years immediately following the war. Notable progress was made after World War I but all signs now indicate developments for surpassing all the achievements of the past. The merits of Belleville should therefore be more energetically presented than ever before.

Remarkable Development.

All citizens will view with patriotic pride the remarkable industrial development that has taken place in Belleville within the last twenty years. From a begining where there were only a few struggling manufacturing plants endeavoring to survive, today the capital invested in Belleville industries is well up in the millions. We also estimate in millions when we speak of the factory payrolls and the mighty volume of their aggregate output.

I assert, without fear of successful contradiction, that there is not a town or city in Canada, that is in our class in population, which can measure up to Belleville's industrial advancement within the past 20 years. That is more emphatically true if we keep in mind both the number and the quality of Belleville's industrial acquisitions.

Brief industrial trips were made to Montreal and to Toronto during 1943.

In the latter part of March, Aldermen Pringle, Follwell and Potter went to Montreal primarily to interview Mr. H. J. Symington, K.C., President of Trans-Canada Airlines, and seek his advice about the proposal to establish an airport or landing field at Belleville. More will be said about this phase of the deputation's work in a later paragraph.

While in Montreal the representatives interviewed Mr. Frank Collins, head of the important industrial department of the Canadian Pacific Railway and met with a most cordial reception. Other heads of industrial departments, such as the Canadian National Railways, the Royal Bank of Canada and others had been interviewed on previous tours when Mr. Collins had been away from home. Such contacts and acquaintanceship has a most important bearing on subsequent industrial negotiations. The goodwill and friendship of these heads of departments may have inestimable value when industrial prospects appear on the horizon.

Bright Prospects.

The Chairman of Industries in the City Council and the Industrial Commissioner visited Toronto early in September to interview the representative of one of the most important industrial prospects that had appeared in recent years. It was reputed to be an organization of international character and of immense resources. The representatives promised to recommend that the corporation should have its agents visit Belleville and look over possible locations. It was stated that the corporation desired to secure a suitable factory building with about 5,000 feet of floor space and would employ 100 to 150 hands.

In a subsequent interview, the Industrial Commissioner was informed that this corporation would not select a definite location for some time yet, or probably till after the war, but Belleville would be carefully inspected before any decision was reached. In the meantime the commissioner was requested to submit rates for electricity and other public services and all other data that would be of interest.

On the same day a call was made upon a firm of manufacturers which has large plants in both Toronto and Montreal. The company is now proposing to amalgamate the two factories and establish somewhere about midway between Toronto and Montreal. Action is also likely to be taken here immediately following the war. The company is engaged in the production of insecticides and other well known chemical and toilet preparations.

A third call was made upon a corporation which is the largest in its class in the British Empire. The general manager stated that the company had already decided to locate in Belleville. It only remained to secure a suitable site for their buildings and plant.

The president and general manager of another manufacturing organization with factories already established in Toronto and in Guelph, visited Belleville with a view to the establishment of another factory in this area. Several properties were looked over but no decision reached at the time. The company is engaged in the production of soap, fertilizers, poultry-feed and certain chemicals.

Wants Factory Space

The president of another company located at Farnham, Que., was in Belleville in the recent past and announced his intention of transferring the company manufacturing operations to Ontario. He looked Belleville over carefully and if he can secure suitable factory space here, is likely to move the entire business to this city.

William Nielson, Limited, Toronto, well known manufacturers of chocolates, ice cream and similar lines, have purchased a tract of land just outside Belleville, in the Township of Thurlow, upon which they propose to establish a distribution depot at a cost of $40,000. Later it is probable a factory will be erected.

A number of Belleville's factories have already carried out building programs to extend their premises and accommodate their increased business. Among these are Universal Moulded Products, Reliance Aircraft & Tool Company, the Consolidated Optical Company and the Stephens-Adamson Co.

An engineer from the head office of Mead Johnson & Co. of Evansville, Indiana, has spent several days here making a survey for a proposed new factory building to be located on the vacant lot, across Bleecker Ave. from the present factory. This substantial and progressive corporation is finding its present factory altogether inadequate to its needs.

Universal Moulded Products, Ltd. is at present engaged in negotiations which may lead to a great expansion of their local plant. This corporation has acquired a building at Rochester, N.Y., which was formerly the largest piano factory in the world, where they propose to enter upon the manufacture of products composed of plywood and plastic materials for which there is almost certain to be an enormous demand after the war. The corporation owns and controls the exclusive rights to use the Vidal process of combining plywood and plastic materials which is the most effective yet known to science. Some of the most powerful financial interests in America are behind Universal Moulded Products. The head office is in New York.

Expert Addresses Open Forum

One of the most important activities carried out by the Industrial Commission the past year was an investigation of the possibilities of securing the establishment of a landing-field at Belleville. At the inaugural meeting of the Commission, held on February 12, 1943, it was recommended that the Chamber of Commerce should arrange to hold an open forum meeting and invite Mr. C. R. Patterson, President of the Aeronautical Institute of Canada, Toronto, to come to Belleville and address the meeting and give information as to the practical possibilities of carrying out such a design.

This recommendation was carried out and a forum meeting was arranged by the Chamber of Commerce and was held at the City Hall on the evening of April 29. Mr. Patterson gave a most informative address which was reported at length the following day in The Ontario Intelligencer. There was a general discussion following the address in which many of those present took part. During the afternoon preceding the meeting, the Chairman of Industries and the Industrial Commissioner took Mr. Patterson on a tour to look over possible sites for a landing-field convenient to the city. Mr. Patterson was most favorably impressed with the section north and west of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

On May 27, a delegation consisting of Ald. Clapp, Ald. Chamberlain and several other citizens visited Toronto to attend a convention called by the Aeronautical Institute. Much valuable information was secured at that convention and duly reported to a meeting of the Industrial Commission at its July meeting.

Survey Made.

Bue prehaps most important of all, in its after effects, was the deputation consisting of Aldermen Pringle, Follwell and Potter which had the privilege of an interview with Mr. H. J. Symington, president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, on March 20, last. During the interview Mr. Symington hinted that the services of members of their engineering staff at Ottawa might be secured to make a survey and give expert and reliable advice about the possibility of a landing-field for Belleville and what would be the best location. Parties of engineers came to Belleville later and looked carefully over the suburban terrain to see what place would afford the most feasible landing-field from the standpoint of convenience to the city, freedom from physical obstructions and well drained land and not too difficult to level of and shape into runways. It was eventually decided that the area that had been favored by Mr. Patterson, to the northwest of the School for the Deaf, was in every way the best as well as the most convenient of access from the city. A party of engineers came in the late fall and spent several weeks in making a comprehensive survey. Their work has been completed and the plans are now in the hands of the Department at Ottawa.

More Housing Needed.

The Commission also continued its efforts to secure more adequate housing accommodation to relieve the congested and unsatisfactory conditions that had prevailed here over many months. Mr. C. B. Morgan made several visits to interview the authorities in charge of the regional office of Wartime Housing at Toronto. The Industrial Commissioner also made several calls at the same place. An investigating officer was sent to Belleville to look the situation over. After he had sought information from all the principal industries here, his finding was that the congestion at Belleville was occasioned by the great number of families of airmen who had sought accommodation here even though the sphere of duties of the airman might be at Mountain View or Trenton or elsewhere outside of the city. Wartime Housing made it very plain that their duty did not apply to providing accommodation for the military forces but only for those who were engaged in industrial work or other war effort. The Industrial Commissioner sent out questionnaires to all the principal industries in Belleville to secure the truth about any lack of housing as far as their employees were concerned. The answers received were not sufficiently impressive to warrant a government housing program here, in the opinion of the Regional Office at Toronto.

The Commission has co-operated in the work of the Post-War Planning Commission by the appointment of four representatives to that Commission, Messrs. O. H. Scott, J. A. McIntosh, Lorne McDougall and J. O. Herity.

Manufacturers' Div. Organized.

During the year a Manufacturers' Division of the Chamber of Commerce was also organized and has now been holding monthly meetings over a period of nearly a year. The extremely difficult labor situation brought about by new labor movements and aggressive action by international unions has occasioned strong defensive action upon the part of employing industrialists.

During the year I have had the fullest co-operation in my work from both the City Council and the Chamber of Commerce. It has been a continuous satisfaction to be associated in our promotional effort with men who are far-seeing in their outlook and who have only one end in view—the ultimate good of the City of Belleville.

The Chairman of Industries in the City Council, Ald. Pringle, has given a leadership in the work of his department such as has never been experienced in the past. His abounding good-nature and courageous enterprise have been most valuable contributing factors to the unquestionably successful effort of the past two years.

During the year just closed six regular meetings of the Commission were held. The average attendance of the members was as follows: Pringle, 100%; Thompson, 82; Morgan, 50; Jewell, 100; Scott, 33; McIntosh, 68; Ackerman, 100; Walker, 33; Galloway, 82; McDougall, 100; Rollins, 82; Herity, 100; Duff, 68; Young, 33; Hefkey, 33. General average 71%.

All of which is respectfuly submitted."

Troops Excited and Jubilant At First Sight of Britain, Sidelights of Ocean Voyage

By VERNON M. KIPP
(Special to The Ottawa Journal and The Ontario Intelligencer)

London, Jan. 30—(By Air Mail)—Nobody spoke in so many words of "this precious isle set in a silver sea" as the shores of Britain came dimly out of the grey horizon, but the thought was there all right. The troops crowded for a sight of land, excited and jubilant, and a little later they were singing gaily as they tramped down to their mess hall. There was another night on board, the ship safe in harbor, her engines stopped, but natural anxiety had ended and the ship had far more of a social atmosphere than at any other time in the voyage.

There was a hurried breakfast, and it seemed odd to see men about without their lifebelts. Those belts, each really a pair of plump little cushions joined by tape, one for the back and one for the breast, had come to fill a considerable part in our daily routine. To step out of the cabin without one's belt meant reproof from the nearest M.P. and a return. At night the belts often did duty as supplementary pillow, and in a game of bridge in a chairless cabin a belt on an upended suitcase made a passable seat.

* * *

It was just one of thousands of successful voyages for the powers in the background which guided us from one coast to another, and in perfect safety and without incident, but to those aboard this voyage was something notable. For instance, the storm which, ship's officers assured us solemnly, was one of the worst they ever had encountered. For a landsman the going at times was tricky and a bit hazardous, and a few injuries had to be treated in the ship's hospital. The dining room was littered with broken dishes, and it was odd to see a jug of coffee chained to a table leg, disconcerting to see the table swept clear of equipment as one reached for a teacup.

Sleeping for a couple of nights, became something of a problem, and one ingenious young naval officer made himself a hammock out of a couple of blankets, suspended them across his cabin, reported perfect contentment. Another officer, fortunately short, tossed out of his bunk, took his mattress to the bath and took up quarters in the tub for the remainder of the night.

* * *

There was an infinite variety in uniforms and insignia among the United States troops aboard, and American Army nurses sometimes gave the scene a touch of color as they strolled about in slacks and vivid sweaters or blouses. The smartest troops aboard, with the possible exception of United States Navy personnel, were the Royal Canadian Air Force officers in their sober, well-fitting blue. Some of the R.C.A.F. men were youngsters, eager and excited, going over for the first time after long months of training. Some had spent longer months as instructors, had seen their students going on to the war fronts while they remained behind putting more recruits through their paces, now themselves going to more exciting fields. Others were airmen who had seen active service, had been home on leave, now were returning to their stations. Some of these had decorations, and they were men matured by their experiences, soberly realistic over what faced them in the future.

* * *

Of constant interest to the Canadians aboard were the Negro soldiers, most of them from the Deep South. Many were fine, stalwart men; some were small and seemingly fragile fellows. One day a white officer saw a Negro crying in a corner, asked him what was the matter. "Sir," replied the Negro, "I'm scared."

We spoke of the incident to a white officer of a Negro unit, a chap from Florida. He said it was true, many of the Negroes were scared, but it was rather of the voyage than of what they would find on this side of the water. He said most of them knew nothing found this strange environment more foundthis strange environment more than a little alarming. That seemed reasonable.

This Florida man declared positively that Negroes did not make good officers, even of Negro units. He said they never could gain the confidence of their men, and among white officers they encountered resentment and octracism. (There were a few Negro officers on the ship, and sometimes we saw them stroll through the lounge but they never joined the groups of whites; they seemed lonely and perhaps unhappy.) The United States army the Florida man said, has one Negro general. "A fine man," he said, "a good soldier, and he knows his place. If he has to attend an official reception he accepts the invitation but doesn't go at all—he sends his adjutant. If he has to hold an official party the invitations go in the General's name but the General is never there—the white adjutant does the honors." "A fine man," repeated the Floridan, "and he knows his place." The Southern officer did not go on to discuss the case of the British in India. We rather hoped he would.

German Attache Deserts Nazis Protests Brutality

Istanbul Story Says He is Erich Vermehren, Son of German Authoress

Istanbul, Feb. 9—(AP)—A German who deserted the Nazis and gave himself up to British authorities several days ago was officially identified by Allied spokesman today as Erich Vermehren, clerk to the military attache in the German Embassy here and a son of the German authoress, Petra Vermehren.

Vermehren's wife, the former Countess Elizabeth Plettunberg, accompanied him. His mother now is in Lisbon.

The 24-year-old attache and his wife declared they deserted the Germans because they were disgusted with Nazi brutality. He is said to possess detailed information of greates value. At the German Embassy he served directly under Dr. Paul Leverkuehn, assistant military attache in Turkey.

Vermehren said he and his wife reached Allied controlled territory despite every effort by Germans in Turkey to apprehend him. Under investigation by the gestapo, he disappeared several dags ago. German Ambassador Franz Von Papen interrupted a vacation in the Bursa mountains to rush back to Istanbul in order to direct an investigation of his disappearance.

$86,000 IN STOLEN BONDS RECOVERED BY POLICE

Montreal, Feb. 9 (CP)—Police today announced they had recovered about $86,000 in war and corporation bonds and insurance policies reported stolen here ten days ago from the automobile of a United States official. They found the loot when they arrested Paul Berthiaume, 26, who will be arraigned here tomorrow on charges of theft and receiving.

4 Charges Sequel To 2 Accidents With Same Car

Four court charges were preferred against a father and son following two motor accidents which occurred on city streets last evening. The men charged were 62-year-old Enos Hancock and his 22-year-old son Francis of Wallbridge.

The older Hancock is being charged with careless driving and permitting a person not holding a driver's licence to drive his motor car, while the son, Francis, is charged with driving without a licence and also charged with careless driving.

Shortly after six o'clock last evening the younger Hancock was driving the family automobile west on College Street and is said by police to have failed to stop at the North Front St., intersection where their car collided with a northbound vehicle driven by Clem Bowler, 164 Victoria Ave. The only damage was to Mr. Bowler's car of which the axle, front fender and radiator were badly damaged. Police investigated this accident and preferred a careless driving charge against Francis Hancock and also that of driving without a licence. The lad's father was charged in this instance with permitting a person to drive his vehicle knowing the driver not to be in possession of a licence.

Naturally the older Hancock took over the driving of the family car at this point and about ten o'clock last night made a righthand turn off College Street into Cannifton Road and as he was endeavoring to turn into a private driveway his vehicle forced a southbound car, driven by Robert Juby, R.R. No. 6, Belleville, into the curb. Naturally police were called again with the result a charge of careless driving was preferred against the older Hancock on this occasion.

In Event of Allied Invasion

Stockholm, Feb. 9 —(CP)— German occupation authorities in Holland have decided to flood the coastal provinces of the Netherlands in case of an Allied invasion, the Berne correspondent of Aftontidningen said today. He quoted the German-controlled Netherlands weekly, Haagsche (The Hague) Post.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS REPORTS

Motion Picture Industry's Part in War Effort Told by Jack Arthur

The part played by the motion picture industry in helping the war effort was presented by Jack Arthur, superintendent for Famous Players in Eastern Canada, at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club on Tuesday at the Quinte Hotel. Mr. Arthur gave the same address to the Kiwanis Club as that delivered to the Kinsmen Club on Monday evening and fully recounted in Tuesday's issue. He was introduced by George Forhan of the Belle Theatre and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Ormonde Butler. Kin Tommy Mascara of the Capitol Theatre was a guest of Mr. Forhan at the luncheon.

Jack McVeigh presided over the luncheon and a number of interesting reports were given by the various chairmen. Archie Harris asked for a large turnout of the members at the "Y" on Sunday, when the club entertains the service men at open house. He stated that the Kiwanis Queens had their part of the program prepared and that Harold Carruthers was arranging for an interesting program of music and song. He suggested that the magazine donations to the club should be larger and that help was needed at Kiwanis Centre to bundle the books to be sent away. This work will be done next Tuesday night. Ted Doyle of R.C.N.V.R., now home on leave and son of William Doyle, a member of the club, told the members that magazines were eagerly sought after especially when the boys were on sea duty.

It was also suggested by the president, that Mrs. Norman Edwards in charge of the Red Cross branch of the club solicited clothing for the Greek War Relief Fund and that it should be taken to Kiwanis Centre by Thursday. The 'prayer of a blood donor' in suitable frame and copied by Arnold Thomson was presented by Mark Vanner to Charlie Richardson of the Blood Donor committee to be hung in the clinic. The work of the editor of the weekly bulletin, Dick Kuntze was praised for his work and time. President Jack thanked the members for their attendance a the luncheon a 93 percentage being attained in January.

At a director's meeting at the conclusion of the luncheon, $100 was donated to the Corvette Fund by the club.

You CAN make your teeth far brighter!

Impartial laboratories made hundreds of tests. Scientists checked their findings with photoelectric measuring devices and authorize this statement: Pepsodent Powder produces a lustre on teeth twice as bright as the average of all other leading brands... brighter than any of them—bar none! These results have been double-checked by identical twins who made practical in-the-home tests...by dental clinics...by dentists in their own offices. The result is always the same: Pepsodent Powder makes teeth far brighter. Get Pepsodent Powder today to make teeth bright as they can be!

Smiles DO show on report cards!
Protruding teeth made this boy self-conscious ...and backward in school. But, when modern dentistry corrected his teeth, his looks and his whole mental attitude were changed. Today, dentistry can do wonders in correcting crooked, misplaced, and unsightly teeth. Chipped or broken teeth, too, can be recapped like the movie stars'. So watch children's teeth carefully. Visit the dentist regularly. It's the truth... a child's personality and future may depend on how well teeth are formed, how bright and clean they look!

Home Test can bring you New Beauty in just 14 days!

Compare your shoulders with your face. Isn't it true they look years younger? You see, shoulders stay smooth, soft, elastic—while faces have pores clogged with make-up, unable to breathe for hours at a time. And when pores can't breathe, skin becomes lifeless and prematurely aged. But this needn't happen to your complexion. Palmolive can keep your complexion young.

Look younger in 14 days! Each time you wash, with a face cloth massage Palmolive's lather into your skin for—one full minute. Then, a quick rinse and pat dry! It's this 60-second Palmolive Massage that—in just 14 days—can give your complexion the elastic soft smoothness of shoulder skin.

Pose of Shoulders Important

Songbird Nan Wynn has perfect posture.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TODAY WE would like to call the attention of the members of the good looks class to the pose of the shoulders. What do you do with yours, young ladies? Do they fall forward, conveying an expression of lassitude or defeat? If so, the bodies of that new formal is going to bunch out in front, and not look any too well at the back.

Are they held rigidly, after the old Delsarte manner? That won't do; shoulders should have ease and softness. One must keep the body erect without stiffness; it gives one a bossy look. As for hunching up the shoulders — a trick of the arty girl—you can see that the head and neck go into a huddle, and what's pretty about that?

Correcting Shoulder Pose

One gets the correct shoulder pose by pulling in the abdominal muscles, lifting the chest, stretching the spinal column full length, letting the arms fall naturally, then relaxing slightly.

If the abdominal area is held in and the chest lifted it is impossible for the shoulders to get out of anatomical harmony.

Avoid Blackheads

Shoulders and back have a way of collecting blackheads during the winter season because of the friction of frocks and blouses. So watch out.

When taking the daily bath use plenty of soap suds and a brush with firm bristles. Don't save on elbow grease. Finish with an alternating hot and cold shower, thirty seconds of one, thirty seconds of the other and repeat.

After a brisk rubdown with a coarse towel, use your bath tonic, the alcoholic content of which will clear the flesh of blackheads that may be present.

WEDDINGS

BONDY—REID

The home of the bride's parents, Johnson Street, was the scene of a lovely evening wedding on Monday, February 7, at seven o'clock, when Captain David E. Strachan, Salvation Army, Picton, assisted by Major Marsh, of the Salvation Army here, united in marriage Hilda May Reid, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Reid to Percy Harold Bondy, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Bondy, of London, England. The marriage was solemnized 'neath an arch banked with flowers and ferns. Wedding music was played by Mrs. J. Green and a solo was rendered by Mrs. E. Reid, sister-in-law of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a particularly striking ensemble of navy blue and accessories of matching hue. She carried an arm bouquet of Rapture roses.

Mrs. Ethel Whitehead, as matron of honor, was wearing an attractive afternoon dress of moss green, accented by dark accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

Bridesmaids for the occasion were Misses Lillian and Dorothy Stapley, both dressed in charming frocks of turquoise blue with matching accessories and corsages of Talisman roses.

Mr. Jack Barker acted as groomsman.

For the reception following the ceremony, the bride's mother was gowned in black, complimented by turquoise trimming, black accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses. She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Harry Carter, of Foxboro, aunt of the bride, wearing a blue ensemble with matching accessories and corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Bondy will take up residence in Belleville.

SINDEN—MERRETT

Picton, Feb. 9—The Church of St. Mary Magdalene was the scene of an interesting wedding at 2.30 Monday, Jan. 31st, when Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne united in marriage Mabel Ellen Merrett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Merrett, 2757 Richmond Road, Victoria, B.C., and LAC. George William Owen Sinden, Royal Air Force, Picton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Sinden, 24 Edears Court, Welwyn Garden City, Herts, England.

Given in marriage by Cpl. Ralph Surtees, R.A.F., Picton, the bride was smart in a street-length dress of aqua triple sheer with navy blue accessories and she wore a cameo which had belonged to her grandmother.

The attendants were Mrs. M. Phillips, Picton and LAC. B. J. Giles, R.A.F.

Following the ceremony, the bride and groom were at home to Rev. and Mrs. Swayne and several members of R.A.F. personnel at their home, King Street. A buffet luncheon was served. The bride arrived from Victoria, B.C., on Saturday, Jan. 30, and spent the weekend with Mrs. M. Phillips, King St.

FASHION FLASHES

NOT SO MANY leather gloves in the popular price brackets for Spring, but plenty of smart fabric models. Black or brown jersey allied with a boldly striped cuff of taffeta in black and white or in brown and pink is cited as a wearable glove with suit or coat.

A GOOD NOTION is that of the designer who did a stole of silver fox in tapered rever form and made it so that it could be attached to the waist of a coat or frock to give a silver-fox rever trim effect in front. Deep square sailor collar in back.

Smith, Arnold Thompson and Mrs. Greenwood; Quilts:— 2 from Wallbridge W.I.; Further Donations:—Miss Bertha Colling gave two boxes new clothing:— Mrs. J. B. Ives, three afghans; Comrade Club of Tabernacle Church the following: 1 quilt, 6 sleeveless sweaters, 4 tuckins, 1 pair gloves, 11 pairs sox and two girls' scarves.

Mrs. George Thompson donated a Victrola and records.

Magazines and books from Mesdames N. Cooper, H. Milligan, H. Fenn, A. Carmichael, A. E. MacColl, H. Ketcheson, C. Mott, Geo. Wright, B. Rutherford, C. C. Moore, P. Denike, G. Reid, J. McKenzie, B. Brown, R. Copeland, R. A. Backus, A. D. Archibald and from the Misses Thompson, Tickell, J. Priest, H. Fargey, A. Corby. Several bundles left without names attached.

Shipments.

To Provincial I.O.D.E. Headquarters for Bombed Areas — 236 pieces of new clothing for women and children, 6 quilts and 6 afghans.

To Polish Relief — 2 quilts and 90 articles of new clothing.

To Aid to Russia Clothing Division — 6 large cartons of clothing and furs. Furs (1 carton) were also sent to be made into jerkins.

To I.O.D.E. Headquarters for Navy League — 161 ditty bags, the Chapter furnishing 146 pairs sox for these bags. For the services 69 knitted articles such as sox, sweaters, etc., were also sent to I.O.D.E. Provincial Headquarters.

To Boys and Girls of the Services Here in Canada and Overseas — 26 Christmas boxes containing Christmas treats and knitted articles.

To Belleville Home for the Aged —$1 to each inmate accompanied by a Christmas card.

5 boxes containing fruit, candies and cigarettes, also reading material sent to R.A.F. boys in local hospital and R.C.A.F. hospital, Trenton.

To Mountain View Airport — A victrola and records also magazines for Knights of Columbus Hut. 2 cartons of magazines sent to hospital at Mountain View and several bundles of magazines given to Hostess House.

34 knitted articles were handed to individual boys of the services while home on leave or as they were leaving to join their unit.

The Chapter is very grateful for the work of our faithful knitters who have turned in from Chapter's wool supplied them—161 pairs sox, 20 sweaters, 5 tuckins, 4 pairs seaman's stockings, 5 scarfs and 36 pieces of infants' wear. Mrs. Lovering's classes of girls of the O.S.D. deserve a good deal of credit for sewing done for the Chapter, as do also many of our own members, from material supplied by the Chapter.

Hospitality Convener Report.

Report of Hospitality Convener: Many boys and girls of the services were served refreshments in the afternoon and evening at the "Y" Open House on Sunday, Jan. 16th. Home Hospitality was also extended to boys on sick leave by many members from 3 to 10 days and several welcomed boys and girls of the services for forty-eights and thirty-sixes. R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. boys were visited while in hospital.

H.M.C.S. Dunvegan.

Convener of adopted ship H.M.C.S. "Dunvegan" report: Since the last quarterly report, 11 cartons have been shipped, containing Christmas cakes, cookies, honey, chocolate for hot drinks, candy, magazines, books, games, 2 knitted afghans. barrel of choice Spy apples was also sent. Each member of the crew was remembered by a Christmas card. Several letters of grateful thanks have been received by the chapter from the personnel of our ship.

Letters of Appreciation.

The many letters received expressing appreciation of recipients of ditty bags, Christmas parcels, aid to Russia, visits and parcels to boys in hospitals, etc., are very gratifying for any small effort made by our members.

$25.00 was voted to the R.A.F. Memorial Chapel Fund being raised in London, England, this to be recorded in memory of Belleville boys who made the supreme sacrifice for their country.

Revenue was raised for war services work by draws, card parties, bridge marathon and many monetary donations from several good patriotic friends of the chapter."

Women's Activities

CATHOLIC WOMEN'S LEAGUE

The members of the Catholic Women's League met for their February meeting in the John St. High School on Monday night with Mrs. George Wilson, the president, in the chair. After the conveners had given their various reports, the chief item of business discussed was the Red Cross tea to be held in the Knights of Columbus Hall. Mrs. E. Finkle and Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick were appointed to be conveners of this tea and bridge.

KINGSTON ROAD W.A.

The February meeting of the Kingston Road Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. E. Farnsworth with an attendance of thirteen members and six visitors. Mrs. Gazley read the minutes and the roll call was responded to by Valentine verses. The sick committee reported making several calls. Mrs. Don Williams favored with two delightful piano selections. Mrs. J. Garbutt gave a reading, "Success." Mrs. (Dr.) Baker spoke on the "Bible" and urged that everyone would use it for a foundation for the post-war period and at all times. Mrs. Farnsworth and her conveners served a lunch. Collection for the afternoon was $4.05. Several members paid their 1944 dues.

PLAINFIELD W. I.

The Plainfield W. I. was held at the church on Thursday evening with twenty-three ladies present. Mrs. Fred Hall, 1st Vice-President, took charge of the meeting. Mrs. Violet Elliott took charge of the community singing. Letters of thanks were read from Norman Hall and Weldon Prindle for Christmas presents received. A motion was passed to donate $10 to the Red Cross and $10 to the Salvation Army. Reports of war work were given by the leaders and knitting and sewing handed in. War work collection for the month amounted to $7.50. Mrs. Palmer gave a reading, entitled "Silence is Golden." Mrs. H. Harrison had charge of the topic and chose as her theme, "War Time Restrictions." Mrs. Denyes gave a reading, "Queen Elizabeth Talks to Institute Women." A solo by Mrs. Ralph Wilder was much enjoyed. Mrs. J. Colden gave a reading from the Readers' Digest. A lunch brought the meeting to a close.

PLAINFIELD HOMEMAKERS' CLUB

The final meeting of the Homemakers' Club of Plainfield was held in the form of a pot luck supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harrison with eight girls and one visitor present. After the supper, the girls held their meeting and exhibited their "clothes closet accessories" which they had been working on in their project this winter, under the leadership of Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr., and Mrs. Horace Palmer. During the evening a Mission Circle was organized by Mrs. Fred Hall and Mrs. Harry Harrison. The officers chosen were as follows Supt., Mrs. Horace Palmer; Pres., Miss Marion Prindle; Sec., Miss Irene Hall; Treas., Miss Olive Hall; Pianist, Miss Beryl Platt; Press Reporter, Mrs. Norman Hall, Jr.

BRIDGE ST. CHURCH W.M.S.

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society of Bridge St. United Church was held in the ladies' parlors on Feb. 4th, with Mrs. R. D. P. Davidson, the new president, in the chair. Miss Lazelle Browne gave a short talk on Christian Stewardship and Mrs. E. N. Baker reported for the committee on Christian Citizenship and Temperance. Mrs. Finkle's group was in charge of the program. Mrs. Moore led in the devotional service and gave as the theme for the year, "The Bible." Mrs. Moore was assisted in the devotional service by Mrs. Daley and Mrs. Finkle. Mrs. Finkle led in the discussion of the second chapter of the study book, "For All of Health." Mrs. Cole, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Ostrom and Mrs. Robertson told of the work of different medical missionaries and nurses. Special mention was made of the work of Dr. Aaron McMillan, a Negro physician working in Africa. Mrs. Finkle also spoke of Dr. "Bob" McClure and his valuable work in China.

Beautiful Beaver

By ALICE ALDEN

WHEREVER one goes it is the beaver coat that seems to be the favorite fur. This isn't astonishing, for beautiful beaver is geared to every day use and yet can go forth for a gay time and look absolutely right at night. Lovely Irene Manning models her coat of beaver made on wrappy lines, with a notched collar and turned-back cuffs, the fur beautifully striped for contrast.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Those Lonesome War Brides

What the war bride can't understand is the nostalgia, i.e., good old-fashioned homesickness, that has set in after her marriage to her serviceman.

That crowning event to a hectic courtship was whipped up out of the most thrilling succession of happenings. Everyone was getting married and everyone was marrying a serviceman, all the girls you'd been to school with. It was the patriotic thing to do. It gave your soldier or sailor man an added belief in what he was fighting for—wife and fireside.

Besides you were in love, had never really known what love was before, neither had he. Then the honeymoon, then the agonized parting when he went off to camp.

For the first few weeks you were content to stay home every evening and would have given anything if you only had his socks to darn. But after a while those lonesome evenings at home began to pall, even if you had a job that took up the daylight hours.

Mournful evenings at home and mournful days on the job—whether it was in office or shop—when you heard about the grand times all the other girls were having—those unmarried girls, and some who were married but didn't take things too seriously. They were all off night after night at shows, canteens, dances. But you didn't feel it was just the square thing to do with your husband away.

Sometimes the loneliness became so unendurable that you decided you'd go to the post or the training station to which your beloved is assigned. Once there you find accommodations very difficult to get. The place is crowded with brides who have gone there on the same errand. You feel rather like a button on a card, or a pin in a paper and you hear jokes about mass production of army wives.

No, he hasn't changed. He's frantically glad to see you, but so much of his time is taken up with the intensive training he must go through with for the combat duty awaiting him.

In the years to come these tribulations, which seem such genuine tragedies today, may just be something to reminisce or laugh about when your serviceman comes home. But the best advice to hand out to a war bride is to keep busy!

You have a job—so much the better. If you're conscientious and don't want to go out for amusement like some of the brides who decline to take marriage too seriously, it's better to take up something and work at it of evenings.

Any girl can increase her salary by acquiring greater skill at the job she's engaged in at present if she will apply herself. She can join a Red Cross class. It's better to do anything than sit and worry over what might happen to him meanwhile being sorry for yourself.

Signing Name

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a widow and going to marry. Should I sign the register Mrs. Eileen Martin or Mrs. Elmer Martin? I have seen in a good many cases where the Christian name is given with Mrs. prefixed.

'In Doubt.

I think that it would be the better idea if you signed your name as Mrs. Elmer Martin, this being much better form.

C.G.I.T. Groups Entertain Mothers And S.S. Teachers

The Canadian Girls in Training groups of Bridge St. United Church observed C.G.I.T. week by entertaining their mothers and Sunday School teachers at a supper meeting in the Sunday school on Monday, February 7th. Joan Lashbrook, president of the department, presided during the program. Skits were performed by each of the three groups. Miss Norma Arkles led in a lively sing-song. A group of camp songs were sung by the girls of the Eagles group. Lois Woods expressed the pleasure of the girls at having their mothers present and Mrs. R. B. Morden responded to her greeting. Dr. J. Semple spoke a few words commending the groups and the C. G. I. T. program. A short play in three scenes entitled, "The Waking Church" was presented by the girls of the Wanaketa and Helping Hands groups. The mother and daughter offering to the Ontario Girl's Work Board was presented in a special ceremony. The meeting closed with "Taps."

Two Divisions in Prospect In House and Details of War Appropriations Bill Expected

Rev. E. G. Hansell Lashes Out at Leader of C.C.F., M. J. Coldwell

TWO MOTIONS LOST

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Feb. 9. (CP)—Two divisions are in prospect for the House of Commons today and, with adoption of the address in reply to the Throne Speech, Finance Minister Ilsley is expected to submit a statement giving details of the $3,650,000,000 War Appropriation Bill for 1944-45.

Last night the House defeated by a vote of 173 to 20 a C.C.F. sub-amendment to the address which said the government had failed to take the necessary fundamental steps to ensure a full program of Social Security.

Immediately after the vote J. S. Roy (Ind.-Gaspe) moved a new sub-amendment stating the government had failed to limit Canada's war participation to the promises made by government leaders in 1939, assert Canada's partnership in Allied conferences, provide public to meet existing unemployment or grant exemption from military service to fishermen and farmers.

Just before adjournment at 11 p.m. Maurice Lalonde (Labelle), said he believed Mr. Roy's motion was out of order. Discussion will continue today.

Will Consider Amendment.

After Mr. Roy's sub-amendment has been dealt with, the House will turn to the Progressive Conservative amendment which claims the government has failed to make adequate provision for service men and women on demobilization, provide adequate measures to aid agriculture, establish a suitable national code for labor, or lessen "bureaucratic controls".

In the division of the C.C.F. sub-amendment, Progressive Conservative and Bloc Populaire members voted with the government, the New Democracy and C.C.F. groups against it.

Moving his sub-amendment, Mr. Roy said he would support the Progressive Conservative amendment although he did not support the war policy of that group. The government's war policy was the main cause of discontent now in evidence, he said. When the war ended Canada would "be nothing but a ruin and will be thrown into the arms of the Socialists".

Canada had not been invited to major Allied Conferenbes. Although Prime Minister Mackenzie King had attended the Quebec Conference last year, the resulting decisions had been signed only by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

Nine Members Speak.

Nine private members spoke in the main Throne speech debate yesterday—Hon. H. A. Bruce (PC-Toronto Parkdale), C. E. Johnston (ND-Bow River), R. W. Gladstone (L-Wellington South), J. W. Burton (CCF-Humboldt), Maurice Bourget (L-Levis), Harry Jackman (PC-Toronto Rosedale), Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre), Anthony Hlynka (ND-Vegreville) and Rev. E. G. Hansell (ND-MacLeod).

Mr. Hansell had a brisk exchange with M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader. He said he protested Mr. Coldwell going into Alberta and saying the New Democracy group was the weakest in the House. Mr. Coldwell had been wrong several times in the past—for instance, when he had said no men should be sent overseas in the war.

Mr. Hansell said Mr. Coldwell had supported the Progressive Conservatives in demanding a statement on the retirement of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canadian army commander overseas.

"Let me say that if this country had listened to my friend there would have been no Gen. McNaughton over in the first place," Mr. Hansell said.

Given Plenty of Publicity.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had given more publicity to the C.C.F. group than to other house parties rolled into one.

The New Democracy members had tried to work with the C.C.F., said Mr. Hansell.

"Someone has said that maybe Tim Buck will be their adviser," he added.

"Maybe he will, eventually; I do not know. But I will say this: "I am not a Socialist. I am not a Communist—but if ever I were one I would rather follow Tim Buck than the member for Rosetown-Biggar (Mr. Coldwell)".

"Tim Buck makes no bones about it. He tells you what he means."

Mr. Gladstone said there was need for restoring confidence in parliament as an institution for safeguarding equality of rights and equality of opportunity for all.

Members had freedom in theory but not in practice because of the party system, said Mr. Gladstone. There should be a new system under which defeat of a government measure would not mean defeat of the government. The question of confidence or non-confidence in the government should be decided by another vote.

Mr. Gladstone said speeches in the House often were ill-prepared, irrelevant and wasteful of time.

Procedure in House committees should be widened to allow the study of departmental administration, giving parliament greater authority over expenditures.

The civil service system should be revised to give better recognition of merit and deal more effectively with incompetence.

Senate reform was being called for, said Mr. Gladstone. Senators of all parties should take the lead in organizing themselves into a non-partisan group to give greater service to Canada.

Agriculture had become a scientific, mechanized industry, and agricultural colleges must be financed more generously, farm prices must be scaled upwards, he said.

Prisons Hiding Places

"Our prisons are becoming comfortable hiding places for those who would escape military service," said Mr. Gladstone. These men should be put to work on the farms, in the forests or in the mines.

He said the public is becoming critical of over-staffing of the armed services with officers and that many men in the reserve army now considered their training futile. Whatever steps were taken to maintain a permanent defence organization after the war, it should not be permitted to develop into a costly military aristocracy.

In the post-war period, finance and business should not be permitted to develop monopolies by interlocking directorates or in other ways, said Mr. Gladstone.

Dr. Bruce said there should be a National Housing Commission to help the provinces and municipalities in housing programs.

He stressed the need for slum clearance and low-rental house construction.

The clothing allowance of $65 for discharged veterans is "inadequate" and will only purchase a suit and overcoat, Dr. Bruce said.

Other arrangements for rehabilitation of ex-servicemen are "unfair" or "inadequate," Dr. Bruce said, and they should be improved.

Mr. Johnston said National Selective Service was a "gestapo" organization in the way it ordered men to certain jobs when they could serve better elsewhere.

Mr. Knowles said his party was skeptical about anything being done by the Liberal government on the social security program forecast in the throne speech. Nearly 2,000,000 jobs would be required by Canadians after the war and concrete steps should be taken now to met the basic requirement.

Mr. Bourget said he hopes the government will not place any restrictions on the number of children in a family who may benefit from payment of family allowances.

Need of Slum Clearance

LIFE ASSURANCE FIGHTS INFLATION

Policyholders' savings important contribution to War Effort and Post-War Reconstruction

One of the many distinctive services performed by Life Assurance in these urgent times is the mobilization of the people's savings against the insidious but none the less devastating enemy — inflation. Thus millions of men and women, advised by a worthy and highly-trained group of their fellow-countrymen who "sell" Life Assurance, withhold their savings from the luxury market and set them aside to secure protection and well-being for themselves and their loved ones in the unknown days to come.

In the past year alone, the million policyholders of the Sun Life of Canada have set aside $112 millions of their savings in the form of Life Assurance premiums.

During the war years there has been a marked increase in the basic service rendered by Life Assurance—personal and family protection in the time of greatest need. The Sun Life of Canada, since September 1939, has paid out 365 million dollars to policyholders and beneficiaries, a really significant contribution to the stability of national family life in time of emergency.

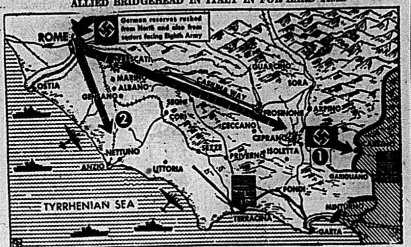
ALLIED BRIDGEHEAD IN ITALY IN FOR HARD TIME



Allied forces below Rome, in Italy, are preparing their defences for an all-out Nazi effort to wipe out the Fifth Army's Anzio-Nettuno bridgehead. Despite the surprise attack of the Allied forces which gained them the bridgehead, the enemy has been able to rush reserves from central Italy to the Cassino sector (1) for a fierce counter-attack and to bring in reserves from the north or from the east to launch a heavy attack (2) against the new bridgehead. Bombed towns shown in the map are communications centres. Allied warships stand off shore to help the troops defending the bridgeheads.

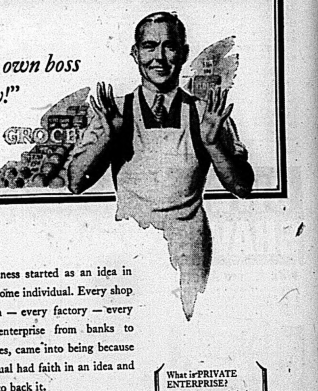
"I'm my own boss now!"



EVERY business started as an idea in the mind of some individual. Every shop —every farm — every factory — every worthwhile enterprise from banks to movie theatres, came into being because some individual had faith in an idea and the courage to back it.

Every Canadian has this right . . . the right to build his future in his own way— to go into business for himself if he chooses —and to reap the reward of his enterprise. So it has always been. That is the very essence of our free way of life, the solid foundation of our greatness as a nation.

What is PRIVATE ENTERPRISE?
It is the natural desire to make your own way, as far as your ability will take you; an instinct that has brought to this continent the highest standard of life enjoyed by any people on earth. It is the spirit of democracy on the march.

'IRISH' IN NEW UNIFORMS DEFEAT ALBERT COLLEGE

St. Michael's Squad Now Tied With B.C.I. for Lead in Group

SCORE IS 2-1

Flashing brand new green uniforms with white trimmings, that bore the lettering "Irish", Coach Jack Doran's St. Michael's Academy pucksters carried the luck of the "Irish" when they won 2-1 over Albert College in their initial senior Interscholastic hockey debut at the Hume Arena yesterday afternoon. It was Don Barrett's belated third-period goal that won for the "green shirts" and placed them in a tie for the Bay of Quinte C. O. S. S. A. senior Interscholastic race with the Belleville Collegiate at one win each.

Pretty much throughout the Albert kids checked the strong "Irish" squad, who boasted of no less than four junior O. H. A. players, at will, while Albert's Goalie Pratt was doing yeoman service keeping the strong St. Mikes outfit off the scoring sheet.

Albert Takes Lead

Albert took the lead early in the initial period when Jack Boyd took Cook's wide pass and stepped around the Irish defence to whistle home the first counter and there was no further scoring until late in the middle session when Bernie Meagher let fly a wide shot that bounced off the boards and Jerry Moher batted the boot heel home for the equalizer that gave Pratt, in the Albert nets no protection.

Albert continued to check the Irish strongly and display a better style of combination in the last frame, but when Doug Green wasn't bouncing them off Dick Fitzpatrick was kicking 'em out for the Irish until Don Barrett stole the rubber in mid-ice during an Albert all-out effort and raced through, a 'la the Lone Ranger style, and scored the winning counter.

The line-ups:-

Albert College—goal, Pratt, defence,, Rankin and Cook, centre, Boyd, wings, McNiven and McDonald, subs, Christie, LeMay, Benner, Ferguson and Haggis.

St. Michael's Academy — goal, Fitzpatrick, defence, Green and Duffy, centre, Moher, wings, B. Meagher and Barrett, subs, A. Meagher, Whalen, Thomas, Semark and Kelleher.

GENERALS WIN

(By the Canadian Press)

The trailing Toronto Tars of the Senior O.H.A. series uncorked one of the season's surprises last night at Hamilton in handing the majors a 7-5 setback in overtime, thus enabling St. Catharines Saints to conrace. Doug Runions tied up the game in closing stages of regular time, making the count 4-4, but Navy came through with two goals to Hamilton's one in the extra session.

Livingstone was pace-maker for the Sailors with two goals and the other scores were distributed among Laycoe, Barlow, Benson and Cameron, the latter securing the winning tally in 7.21 of extra play. Shillington led Hamilton scorers with two counters while Robertson, Conick and Runions had singles.

In the Junior "A" series, Oshawa Generals registered an easy 10-2 victory over Young Rangers at Toronto for their 19th victory of the season but did not increase their lead of four points over St. Michaels in Group 1 because the Toronto Collegians took the measure of Falcons, 6-2, in the students' first appearance on St. Catharines ice Brantford Lions, at home to Galt, Kists. The net result was St. administered a 5-2 defeat to the Catharines, despite last night's loss, continued to hold top position over Galt in Group 2 by a two-point margin.

The outstanding Junior display of the night was the four-goal performance by Smith of Oshawa Generals, with Ezinicki and love running in two goals apiece against Toronto Young Rangers. Jimmy Sadler of St. Mikes was the scoring star in the encounter at St. Catharines, being the only player on the ice to register two tallies. In the Brantford-Galt affair, Evanshen of the Lions was the only two-goal performer. Incidentally, Lions, in bottom spot in Group 2, came from behind to take the verdict from the Kists after Podolsky scored the only counter of the initial period.

5 Army Sergeants Have Date With Judge Landis

Chicago, Feb. 9—(AP)—All it will cost five Army sergeants to witness the 1944 World Series eight months hence is their sixth sense.

They will be the guests of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's 77-year-old commissioner. They wrote Landis that their "sixth sense" told them they would be back to attend the fall classic. The sergeants, presumably fighting overseas, advised Landis they would like to have the honor of being the first holders of tickets for the 1944 series games "no matter where played," and in so doing would be made "very happy."

Landis said he did not know where the soldiers were stationed, where their homes were or anything concerning their background. They merely signed their letter: "S/Sgt. Rodney N. Lewis, S/Sgt. Philip H. Candiloro, S/Sgt. James C. Putnam, S/Sgt. Elsl G. McFillen, S/Sgt. Steve J. Nester."

Landis sent them a letter, saying: "More power to your sixth sense. You have a date with me at the 1944 World Series. Contact with me in time. We will see the ball games together."

Hockey's Big Seven

Herbie Cain, Boston, captured sole possession of first place on the National Hockey League's high-scoring list last night when Bruins whipped Montreal Canadiens 3-0. The veteran left-winger assisted in two of the goals to put himself two points ahead of Toronto's Lorne Carr.

Second Place At Stake In Game Tonight

Second place in group No. 2 of the Junior O.H.A. race will be at stake at the Hume Arena tonight when the Stirling-Marmora "Combines" move into the Hume arena for the final game of the group schedule versus Coach Toots Holway's Belleville kids.

As the teams take to the ice the Belleville sextette is a full game out in front of Coach Ralph Neal's Combines, as the result of a 7 to 6 loss sustained by the Stirling-Marmora amalgamation at the hands of Trenton Monday night. In two previous meetings this season Belleville gained a 4-0 win over the Combines here while the squads played a 3-3 draw at Stirling in their second meeting.

A win or draw for Belleville will give the locals second place, while a victory for the Combines will create a tie for second place. Both teams will be at full strength tonight as Billie Holway and Al Gordon, who missed the game in Trenton last Friday, will return to the locals lineup to give local supporters something to cheer about. A large delegation of suporters will follow the Combines from the Stirling-Marmora district.

The standing as of today:

| | W. | T. | L. | Pts. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Trenton .......... | 5 | 0 | 2 | 10 |
| Belleville ........ | 3 | 1 | 2 | 7 |
| Stirling .......... | 2 | 1 | 3 | 5 |

The Tweed juniors were given a bye and will be included in the group play-offs.

What's Doing in Sport

Niagara Falls, Ont., (CP)—Manager Johnny iMtchell of the Providence Reds in the American Hockey League was here on a scouting expedition and tried to sign Harry Barber of the Niagara Industrial League but learned the centre-player was the property of St. Catharines Falcons. Mitchell scouted the Junior O.H.A. game in St. Catharines and said he would attend fixtures in Hamilton and Toronto.

New Orleans, (AP)— Twenty-one horses have been nominated for $15,000 Louisiana Derby at Fair Grounds Saturday and the race is considered a preview to the Kentucky Derby May 6. Weyanoke, Gay Bit and Valdina Zenith are favored for the local feature. Closing event of the winter meeting is the $25,000 New Orlenas handicap Feb. nineteenth.

Montreal, (CP)—Heather and Thistle Rinks won the right to represent Montreal in Governor-General Curling competition when they eliminated St. Anne's and Caledonia in twin-rink play here last night. Play-offs against out-of-town rinks start Thursday.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Feb. 9—(CP)—The war's favorable progress has inspired British sports promoters to do some long-range forecasting on hockey's international possibilities.

The enthusiasts are Air Commodore A. C. Critchley, Calgarian whose success in England is measured in coment manufacture and promotion of Greyhound racing and ice hockey, and Arthur Elvin, managing Director of Wembley Stadium in London. Both anticipate hockey will become a major sport in the United Kingdom's post-war area.

Importation of Canadian players will be necessary to rebuild the English League but Critchley has plans to make the league self-sustaining. He hopes to establish leagues comprising the United Kingdom's smaller centres. At first it is likely these leagues will need financial help from profits of the major circuit but Critchley expects them to pay for themselves in time.

Obviously, with rinks available in these smaller centres, English players would be developed to feed the Major League.

Elvin has even more ambitious plans. "I am looking forward to an early post-war day when an International Ice Hockey League is formed, including Canadian, American and English teams," he says. "Modern Air Transport will make such a league simple. There will also be a British League with Scotland and the English provinces joining up with the London clubs."

Elvin was probably sober, too, when he made that statement. Other hockey authorities, notably managing Director Red Dutton of the National Hockey League, have envisioned Trans-Atlantic Hockey Leagues made possible by air travel.

Bill Entwistle, the Toronto Star's authority on British sport, has this comment on Elvin's ideas: "We'd say if N. H. L. hockey was put in London, Glasgow, Birmingham and Manchester that's about all you could expect at N. H. L. prices. London could take care of the South of England, Birmingham the Midlands; Manchester would take care of Lancashire and Yorkshire; Glasgow would have all of Scotland's loose Bawbees."

Whatever happens overseas, it is certain there will be considerable hockey in Europe after the war and Canadian players will be in great demand for some years. Rapid hockey expansion in Canada and United States is also a certainty. To complicate the situation, the supply of players will not be great for a year or two after the war because enlistments have to some extent hindered development of juniors.

Freak Suggestions Given For Game's Improvement

By the Canadian Press

Following the recent proposal by President Ray Dumont of the National Baseball Congress that players be permitted to run the bases backwards (to third base) if they wished after making a hit, a number of freak suggestions have developed for the alleged improvement of playing codes. Yesterday, Lieut. George Wells of Port Lewis, Wash., a former college basketball coach, advanced the theory basketball would be speeded up if teams were permitted to shoot at either basket. He also suggested the addition of a sixth man to the team.

Coach Joe Dienhart of Purdue University also suggested yesterday that five personal fouls be allowed in a basketball game instead of four. He would give a player three fouls in the first half and two more in the second period before being chased from the floor.

Businessmen said to be identified with the Seattle Baseball Club of the Pacific Coast League have purchased the Vancouver Athletic Park, a baseball and soccer stadium, it was announced yesterday at Vancouver, B. C.

Although he may have difficulty making the weight, Tippy Larkin of Garfield, N. J., rules an 8 to 5 favorite for his 10-round lightweight bout with Lulu Constantino of New York at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Bill Dickey, veteran catcher of the New York Yankees, has signed his 17th annual contract, it was announced last night by Persident Ed. Barrow, the reported salary being $20,000. Dickey's hits were credited with clinching the American League pennant and subsequent victory over St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series last season.

Oliver French, with the St. Louis Cardinals' chain for 15 years, an- announced last night by President dent of the Rochester Red Wings March 1 to enter private business in his home town of Charleston, Mo. He had been with the Rochester Club since 1936.

Harold (Red) Grange, galloping ghost of the University of Illinois grid team a generation ago, at Chicago yesterday named Bronko Nagurski of Minnesota and Chicago Bears as the greatest of all football stars and gave his No. 1 choice of grid coach as Bob Zuppke of Illinois

Roy Weatherly, 29-year-old outfielder of the New York Yankees, yesterday was deprived of all gasoline rations for the next six months by the Office of Price Administration at Cleveland, O., on the ground he had falsified his application for extra coupons.

Working now in a shipyard, Presco Thompson of New York stated yesterday he will manage the New Orleans Pelicans in the Southern Association this year, after serving as pilot of the Montreal Royals of the International League last season.

BOSTON BRUINS BLANK CANADIENS BY 3 TO 0 COUNT

Bert Gardiner, Castoff of the Habitants, Easily Star of the Game

BOLL SCORES TWO

(By the Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens moved on from Boston to Toronto today for the second stop on a two-week circuit away from home ice, which Coach Dick Irvin confronted with tahe problem of what to do about Canadien cast-offs who occasionally rise to haunt the league-leaders.

The Canucks will be facing one of those problems in Toronto Saturday night when they test former Canadien Paul Bibeault in the Maple Leaf nets. They faced another here last night in the person of Bert Gardiner of the Bruins who rose to the heights to administer a 3-0 shutout.

It was the second shut-out of the season for the Canadiens, both at the hands of former Canadien goalies. Bibeault turned the trick the first time in Toronto Jan. --. Gardiner's feat last night gave them their fourth reverse of the season, and lifted the Bruins into a tie for fourth place in the standings.

The Bruins were full value for their win last night, presenting a defensive wall the Canadiens could not pierce and unleashing an attacking drive that brought results once they recovered from a bit of unsteadiness early in the game.

Buzz Boll led the Bruin attack with a couple of third-period goals that sewed up the game after Boston had held grimly to a 1-0 lead given them by Rookie Russ Kopak late in the first period.

BARONS EXTEND LEAGUE LEAD

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons extended their lead on first place in the American Hockey League to seven points last night by defeating second-place Hershey Bears 5-4.

It was their 11th straight victory for the league leaders who have not lost a game since they became head of the league about two months ago.

Bears, the high-lined team until Barons took over, have lost their 10th game in 39 starts. They tied six others. Cleveland has chalked up 27 victories and five draws in the same number of starts.

However, Hershey remains the pace-setter in the eastern division of the league.

Pete Horeck scored two of the Barons' goals last night and Phil Hergesheimer, Tommy Burlington and Lou Trudel shot the others.

Billie Hudson, Hec Pozzo, Drummond and Billy Moe tallied for the Bears.

PREMIER DENIES REPORT

Ottawa, Feb. 9. (CP)—Prime Minister King yesterday termed "pure invention" a report published in Ottawa that Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former commander of the Canadian Army overseas, was likely to be taken into the Federal Cabinet as Minister of Reconstruction.

Asked if it was likely Gen. McNaughton might be taken into the Cabinet later, the Prime Minister shook his head and said that "nothing like that is being considered".

"If you kiss me again, I shall tell father."

"That's an old tale. Anyway, it's worth it," and he kissed her.

She sprang to her feet. "I shall tell father," she said, and left the room.

"Father," she said softly to her parent when she got outside, "John wants to see your new gun."

"All right, I'll take it to him," and two minutes later father appeared in the doorway with his gun in his hand. There was a crash of breaking glass as John dived through the window.

(One for the book.)

According to a recent press dispatch from Pittsburgh something of a novel accident occurred in the Smokey City. According to the teletype story 15-year-old Norb Weidner is probably the first baseball casualty of the 1944 season. Norb dreamed he was attending a National League game at Forbes Field in Pittsburgh when Manager Frankie Frisch of the Pirates appealed to the spectators for a pitcher to finish the game. Norb obliged and fanned the first batter to face him. He woke with a start and a severe pain in his pitching arm. The next day the doctor said Norb had thrown his pitching arm out of joint.

When Coach Ralph Neal's "Combines" invade the Hume Arena tonight they'll bring along the largest delegation of supporters to accompany a visiting hockey team into the Market Street igloo in many a season. Of course there is considerable at stake, as a win for the Combines will create a tie for second place, but a win or tie for Coach Holway's locals will cinch that covetted spot.

According to A. G. Meagher, O.H.A. convener for this group, the group-leading Trenton squad meets the third place club, which would be the Combines in the event of a loss or tie for Coach Neal's crowd. Meagher says the second place club will meet Tweed in the group semi-finals and naturally Coach Holway's locals would prefer the previously-untested Tweed sextette coached by Jerry Quinn. Thus tonight's game naturally will be an all-out affair with both squads at full strength while battling for positions.

It may have been the fact they were proud of their new green and white uniforms, that bore the lettering—"Irish", but St. Mikes senior puck squad shouldn't be too proud of their initial interscholastic hockey display yesterday although they did eke out a 2-1 win over Albert College. After all St. Mikes boasted of no less than four junior O.H.A. players and just as many local juvenile aspirants. At that Jack Boyd of Albert College was the pick of the crop, that is leaving aside the two goal-tenders, who turned in creditable efforts to help keep the score at a decent figure.

On paper the "Irish" should have been at least five goals better than Skipper Pepper's Alberts, but paper statistics don't always prove true and the work of goalie Pratt for the losers was commendable. If Albert had a player to keep pace with Boyd, both St. Mikes and the Collegiate would have more worries than enough.

(Remember when—)

Joe Louis continued his uninterrupted reign as the world's heavyweight boxing champion four years ago tonight by defeating Arturo Godoy of Chile in a 15-round bout at New York. A crowd of 15,567 saw the South American boxer give a good account of himself before Louis turned on the heat to gain the judges decision. Today Louis is seeking a divorce from his wife, after talking Marvia out of filing a divorce some months ago.

(Juves. to Trenton.)

Bill Dennis' local juveniles open the O.M.H.A. play-offs at Trenton tonight. Morris Rollins will be in the nets while "Cue" Bishop, Roddy Lyall, Coleman, Al Meagher, Doug Green, Al Kelleher, Soules, George Reeves and "Hiker" Ostrom will be a few of the starters.

(Wants man's salary.)

"I see in the papers where Connie Mack says I'm not a bad actor, just a big overgrown boy," asserts Pitcher Buck Newsom, as quoted by Shirley Povich of the Washington Post.

"We won't have any trouble," continues Buck, "but I'm going to insict on a man's salary. That big boy business can be carried too far."

LESSON NO. 298

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Devise a plan and lay it well.
but don't be sad if it fails to jell.
It may be rude. It may be crude.
But always be with a plan imbued.

Give your time to this deal:

NORTH
♠A K 5
♥K J 9 4
♦A K 8 4 2
♣7

WEST
♠J 10 9 7 3
♥None
♦Q J 9 6 5
♣9 5 2

EAST
♠8 6 2
♦10
♣K Q J 10

SOUTH
♠Q 4
♥A Q 10 5
♦7 3
♣A 8 6 4 3

You are declarer in the south at a contract of seven hearts. The opening lead from west is the spade jack. Stop, look, and plan how to take the 13 tricks you need for the grand slam.

Spades and trumps are solid. The two top diamonds and the top club can win. But after all, you will need all your trumps for the separate trumping of small clubs and small diamonds.

With that plan in mind, you take the first trick in south with your spade queen. A diamond is led from south and taken with dummy king. But when east plays the ten on that trick, it looks dangerous.

It is possible that east has no more diamonds. It may not be so. But no need to take chances. So, dummy switches and leads the ace and king of spades, south sluffing a diamond.

Now, if a diamond from dummy is trumped by east, south can cover. But, still hoping that east has another diamond, the diamond ace is led. When east trumps, south overtrumps.

South then takes the ace of clubs and the next club is trumped by dummy. Thereafter, it is just a case of trumping back and forth. Meantime, east sits there helpless while his trumps drop like flies.

That is what comes of planning in advance. You were able to see that you needed your trumps separately for trumping purposes. So, at the first sign of danger you were not panicked into drawing trumps.

Trumping is ruffing. Trumping back and forth is a cross-ruff. It is rough on opponents and makes them cross.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sleepy Lagoon"
(Judy Canova)

Republic's latest Judy Canova starring picture, "Sleepy Lagoon" which opens next at the Capitol Theatre is a riotous comedy run on strictly up-to-the-minute lines.

In the midst of all the fun, there are many incidents which give rise to the thought that it might possibly happen here, but the story is so deftly woven that the commonsensical at times is hardly distinguishable from the non-sensical, and the whole effect is grand entertainment in the very best Judy Canova tradition.

Judy herself is magnificent, clowning, singing and dancing through the picture with that gawky abandon which makes her so popular, and she has an aider and abetter in Dennis Day who would be hard to beat. His 'dumb cluck' type of humor fits in perfectly with the whole scheme of things, and his voice has never sounded so beautiful.

Ruth Donnelly, as usual, turns in a great performance, and Joe Sawyer throws himself wholeheartedly into his part. Ernest Truex is a riot.

"Robin Hood of the Range"

Columbia's latest action drama of the old West comes to town next as the added hit at the Capitol Theatre when "Robin Hood of the Range". Starring two-fisted Charles Starrett in the role of a hard-riding cowboy, the picture also includes Kay Harris and Arthur (Arkansas) Hunnicutt in its cast.

To complete this ideal family program the 9th Chapter of "Secret Service In Darkest Africa" is shown as well as a Canadian Special community sing is shown.

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Man Who Came to Dinner"

"The Man Who Came to Dinner", which opened today at the McCarthy Theatre, is probably the most hilarious feast since the knife and fork were invented, for the play which rocked broadway for two solid years is even more delightfully funny in the Warner Bros. screen version. The notable flock of guests is headed by Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, Monty Woolley and Jimmy Durante, Reginald Gardiner, Richard Travis and others, with Billie Burke and Grant Mitchell as hosts.

It all begins with the dinner invitation hospitably extended by a socially ambitious Midwestern matron (Billie Burke) to the internationally famous lecturer and wit, played by Monty Woolley. Woolley, who despises all conventional folk such as his hostess represents, accepts under duress. Arriving at the house with his secretary (Bette Davis) he slips on a piece of ice on the porch. Borne raging into the house, he immediately announces he is going to sue his host for one hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Supposedly suffering a bad injury, he has to remain for a month or more. For his hosts, it is a period of mental torture. For Woolley, it turns out to be fun. So much fun, in fact, that when the doctor informs him that he made a mistake in his diagnosis and that there is really nothing wrong, Woolley bribes him into secrecy. A dictator in a wheelchair can really have a better time than a travelling lecturer. Cowed by his threats of taking legal action against them, his hosts can do nothing but endure his insults-and he is a walking manual of the studied insult. His outrages against their hospitality include ordering them to have their meals in their room while he uses the dining room to entertain his own guests, using the phone to call his many friends in all parts of the world.

While all this is going on, his pretty secretary, who has been so busy chasing about the world with her boss and his super-sophisticated friends that she's never had time for a really normal life, proceeds to fall in love with an attractive young newspaperman (Richard Travis), who comes to get an interview for his paper. As soon as Woolley gets wind of this state of affairs, he maps out a plan for breaking up the romance. Good secretaries are scarce and besides he is sure that Bette would find small town life unutterably dull after a while. A hasty phone call to Palm Beach brings one of his innumerable friends. She is a famous actress in search of a play, and Travis has written a play. The actress, played by Ann Sheridan, arrives on the scene exuding glamor from every pore, finds both the play and the young playwright enchanting and for a while, things look bleak for Bette's romance. However, with the help of two of Woolley's other friends, who delight in outwitting the master, she nearly scotches the double-cross, and winds up in first place.

Jimmy Durante, as a mad Hollywoodite; Reginald Gardiner as a too, too, British writer; Billie Burke as the bewildered hostess,; Grant Mitchell as the irate host; Mary Wickes, as Woolley's abused nurse, and Elizabeth Fraser, as the daughter of the house, all contribute expert performances. Richard Travis, in the romantic lead opposite Miss Davis, is as charming a young leading man as the cinematic world has yielded.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner", is a welcome guest at the McCarthy or any other theatre, and you'll be missing the time of your life if you don't drop in for a visit with him.

"Nobody's Darling"

"Nobody's Darling" second big hit which opened today at the McCarthy Theatre, has all the qualities of a thoroughbred boxoffice winner. Mary Lee the winsome star, displays the same brand of popular appeal in this her new picture as she did in her earlier Gene Autry roles.

Among the supporting players are Lee Patrick, Jackie Moran, and Gladys George.

AT THE McCARTHY — Bette Davis and Ann Sheridan share starring honors in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," now at the McCarthy Theatre. Title role in the comedy is played by Monty Woolley. Second feature hit is "Nobody's Darling," with Mary Lee, Gladys George and Jackie Moran.

AT THE BELLE

"True to Life", Funny

More fun than we have had in many a moon is promised us when we see Paramount's comedy with music, "True to Life," next attraction at the Belle Theatre, with Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Dick Powell, Victor Moore, Mabel Paige and William Demarest. From all reports, it is teeming with laughs and uproarious gags, which ought to make it welcome everywhere.

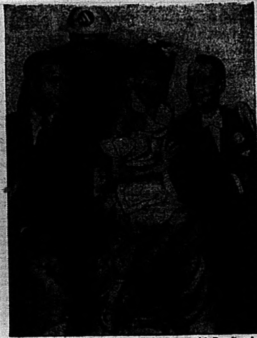
It has Tone and Powell in roles of radio writers, high salaries but low in ideas. They have got to produce a true life program, or else. So Powell seeks adventure in Long Island and finds it in the lovely person of Mary Martin, counter girl in a diner.

Mary thinks that Dick is down on his luck. She takes him home with her where he meets her delightful but dippy family. Before he knows what is happening she has arranged to put him up until he finds a job. He realizes that night there in the Porter family is his new true to life radio show, so every day he sends Tone an account of what has gone on and Tone translates it, practically verbatim into script form. The Porter family blissfully ignorant becomes the sensation of the nation.

What happens when they find out ought to be responsible for a good many split stays and sides aching with laughter. Tone's role is said to be one of the best that he has ever had, as the wolfish man about town who tries to win Mary away from Dick. Victor Moore, too, as the inventive head of the Porter family, should be perfectly cast.

Mary Martin and Dick Powell sing three tunefull numbers which fit into the story. They were written by Hoagy Carmichael and Johnny Mercer and are, "The Old Music Master", "Mister Pollyanna", and "There She Was".

A special extra attraction on the same program is "Mardi Gras", a musical review with stage and screen stars in full beautiful technicolor. There is also the Canadian News of the day.



AT THE BELLE — Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, contribute to the general hilarity of Paramount's uproarious comedy with music, "True to Life," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen, with Mabel Paige and Wm. Demarest.

BANCROFT

Outdoor Program Raises Funds For Open Air Rink

Bancroft, Feb. 9.—One of the main events of the season took place on Friday evening when a local sports committee comprising Provincial Officer Stanley W. Palmateer, Rev. Robert McLaughlin and Mr. E. C. Ellerbeck staged an outdoor entertainment to raise funds to make the present open air rink and buildings more comfortable.

The Maynooth hockey team were invited down for the first part of the evening taking on the locals in a very fast three periods of splendid hockey which had the attending fans on their toes throughout the game. A bit of rough play mingled into the game added just enough spice to make the feature interesting. The locals took the game by a score of three to one.

Following the hockey tilt, a moccasin dance on the ice was staged with a very enthusiastic gathering of young people taking part. Music was provided by remote control from one of the dressing rooms, by means of microphone and amplifier beaming out the round dance music from gramophone and square dance music provided by Messrs. Ellerbeck, Arkles and Mathers assisted by an out-of-town caller who volunteered his services.

In all it was a very successful evening with even the weatherman providing a mild night. Over $62 was realized.

Among those spending the weekend in the village from Peterborough were: Misses Hilda McGhee, Emily Price, Doris Price, Beatrice Hunt, Lillian Metcalfe, and also Elmer Card.

White Russian Gov't Formed

Moscow, Feb. 9 (AP)—Reorganization of the 16 Soviet republics continued today with announcement of the appointment of P. K. Ponomarenko as chairman of the council of People's Commissars of White Russia and I. S. Bylinsky as vice chairman. No commissar for foreign affairs was named immediately.

Minsk, still in German hands, was the former capital of White Russia, but the announcement came from liberated Gomel, indicating it would be the new provincial White Russia capital.

The organization of the White Russian government followed that set up in the Ukraine.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was talking and arguing with Puds Simkins and Sam Cross around the letter box, and Puds said, Hay, I sure had nerve last night. I woke up and I thought I heard a bergler downstairs, and it was black as pitch but I got out of bed just a same and yelled Hay there over the bannisters, and it was only my father coming in late, but how could I tell that, so it took just as much nerve as if it really had of been a bergler, he said.

Aw, what's that compared to the time I jumped on a runaway fire engine and put on the brakes just in time to keep it from running into a whole crowd of people? Sam Cross said. They tried to give me a meddle for it, only I wouldn't take it, he said.

Being the most famous liar around, and I said, Like fun you did, good night if we believed that you'd tell us another one, that's one of the biggest ones you ever told, and Puds said, Okay, if you've got so much nerve, there's Mr. Flannery down at the corner, let's see you walk passed him and say All policemen have big feet.

Do you both dare me to? Sam said, and me and Puds said, Sure, and Sam said, Then okay, I will, and you can both come with me for witnesses.

And he started to walk down, with me and Puds a little in back of him on account of not wanting to actually seem with him in case he really did it, and Mr. Flannery was standing there holding his club with one hand and rubbing it with the other, and Sam Cross said, Hay Mr. Flannery, these 2 fellows claim something about all policemen.

Heh? What's that? What do they claim? Mr. Flannery said, and I quick said, Dont you believe him, he dont know what he's talking about, and Puds said, He's crazy, and he quick put his hand over Sam's mouth and we both pulled him away feeling nerviss as anything and keeping on claiming he was crazy.

Proving a liar is one of the most dangerous people to trust.

The Red Carnation

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 6

"If that dame had any honor, what did she go up to McKibben's place for?" Duffy demanded.

"Maybe she was deceived by the white carnation," put in Tony, mildly. "Maybe he had told her it stood for innocence and she believed him."

"And if she wanted to get away," Duffy went on, disregarding the interruption, "all she had to do was walk out while he was mailing the letter. She didn't have to stay and shoot him. I can see how she might have shot him for some reason or other," he added, "but I can't see how she could pull off all this other monkey business."

"Of course she couldn't," said Tony impatiently. "And she didn't kill him, either. That girl is a frail little thing . . ."

"You said she looked scared," Duffy reminded him.

"So she did."

"When people are scared they'll do most anything. Anyway, I'm mighty anxious to have a talk with her. We can't find Lily Edgerton, either."

"Didn't she start for Reno?" Tony inquired.

"I'm not sure. The porter at her hotel got her a ticket to Reno yesterday over the New York Central, and she was supposed to leave at eight this morning. She drove to the station in a taxi and a porter says he remembers putting her on a train, but she wasn't on it when the police went through it at Cleveland."

"What time did she get in last night?"

"About one o'clock, the doorman says. Drove up in a taxi with a man and another girl. The man got out and kissed her goodbye. She tried to hang on to him, but he hopped back in and drove away."

"That was McKibben, of course," said Tony. "They must have driven straight from Max's. Where is Lily's husband?"

"Doing business as usual down on Nassau St. I called him. He said he and Lily hadn't been living together, that he hadn't seen her for weeks, and hadn't any idea she was going to Reno. I thought he was lying when he said that." Duffy stopped suddenly and looked at Tony. "Do you mean . . ."

"That he killed McKibben for stealing his wife? Not for a minute. He probably gave him a bonus for taking her off his hands."

"All right," said Duffy. "You've told me a lot of people who didn't do it. Now tell me who did."

"I suppose you're checking up on the people McKibben robbed?"

"Of course."

"Well, if there was anybody he completely ruined, he might have gone off his nut."

Duffy shook his head.

"If he'd gone off his nut, he wouldn't have cleaned out everything in advance the way this fellow did," he objected. "He'd just have pulled a gun and shot the buzzard. But I'm checking McKibben's books and going through his files, and I'll have a list of his customers tomorrow."

"Has he got a safe in his office?"

"Yes. Regular battleship."

"Have you opened it?"

"Not yet. We haven't found the combination."

"Go through it carefully, Jim," said Tony. "I've a hunch you'll find something interesting. And another thing—I wish you would get a list of the tenants at McKibben's apartment house, with special attention to the sixth and seventh floors."

"I've already ordered that done," declared the detective. "Oh, yes, I forgot to tell you. We paraffined McKibben's hands and didn't find any powder stains."

"So he didn't fire the pistol?"

"It isn't absolute proof," retorted Duffy impatiently. "You know that as well as I do."

"Let's call it contributory evidence," Tony suggested.

"Another thing," Duffy went on, "there weren't any fingerprints on that letter you got."

"I didn't suppose there would be. How about the typing?"

"I'm having an analysis made of it. I know one thing about it already. It was done on an Underwood machine—a model six with elite type. I don't suppose there are over a hundred thousand in New York!"

"Don't get discouraged," laughed Tony. "All you've got to do is to find a man with a group three blood who owns a number six Underwood with elite type. That ought to be easy. Group three blood is uncommon."

"I'm not discouraged," Duffy retorted, "but what gets me about this case is that nothing makes sense." And with a gesture of bafflement, he let himself out of the apartment.

"He's right," said Garrity, who had been listening attentively to all this. "It is crazy. Do you really think one of McKibben's customers popped him off?"

"No. That bloodstained carnation is too outre. If it had been McKibben's blood, one could understand it, but it wasn't, and that doesn't make sense either."

"Maybe it was the blood of one of his victims," the incurably romantic Garrity suggested.

"I don't doubt that McKibben had victims of both sexes," Tony conceded, "and that he sucked them pretty dry, but I don't believe he shed their blood."

"Maybe this particular victim shed his own blood."

Tony looked at him.

"That's a real contribution, Tom," he said, after a moment. "That will bear thinking over. But if he did, it wasn't in the apartment. There wasn't a trace of blood nowhere except under the body. I'm going over the whole place carefully tonight—maybe I'll turn up something. Stop in again about midnight. I may have something for your story tomorrow."

"All right. I'll be here," Garrity agreed and hurried away.

Half an hour later, Clarence tapped at the door.

"Lady to see you, suh," he said. "Mrs. Edgerton."

"Tell her to be seated," said Tony "and bring some cocktails." Soon he slipped into his coat and strolled in to her. She was standing at a window looking out over the Square and smoking a cigarette. "Hello, Lily," he said. "Thought you were en route to Reno."

She turned toward him and he saw that her face was lined with worry.

"I started," she said, "but at Buffalo I saw a paper with the news about Mack and I got off the train and took the first one back."

"What for? There's nothing you can do."

"If Mack is dead I don't want a divorce," she explained.

"He was going to marry you?"

"Yes."

Tony remembered what McKibben had had to say on the subject the night before, but there seemed no point in repeating it.

"Sit down," he said, and just then Clarence came in with the shaker and glasses. Tony filled the glasses and handed her one. She drained it quickly. He filled her glass again.

"Do you know who killed Mack?" Tony asked.

"He was killed, then? The paper said suicide, but I knew he'd been killed."

"Why?"

"He was worried last night. He was expecting something to happen and he had a gun along."

"Are you sure of that?" Tony asked Mrs. Edgerton.

"Yes. I felt it in his pocket when he sat down in the taxi."

"Had you ever seen it?"

"No, but I knew he had one. He got it about a month ago when somebody tried to break into his apartment. He had an idea somebody was after him."

"It's my idea that several people were after him. But you haven't answered my question, Lily. Do you know who killed him?"

"No, I don't know," she said. "I have been trying to think, but he never mentioned any names or told me anything about his business. I didn't know he was broke. I just knew he was worried. When I tried to ask him about it he'd get mad."

"Who was the fellow that called him a swine?"

"I don't know. I'd never seen him before. A big, good-looking man of about forty-five."

"You'd know him again?"

"Of course."

"Keep your eye out for him."

"I will," Lily promised grimly.

"Nobody else made any passes at McKibben?"

"Nobody else even spoke to him except Herschel Schneider. He stopped at the table a minute and told Mack he wanted to see him."

"What did Mack say?"

"'Not tonight, Josephine,' or something like that."

"And Schneider went away?"

"Yes. I guess he thought Mack was tight."

"Anything else happen?"

"Not a thing."

"What happened after you left Max's?"

"He dropped me at my hotel."

"And drove off with the other woman?"

"Yes," she answered bitterly. "He acted like he wanted to get rid of me. Where did he take her?"

"He took her to his apartment."

Lily's eyes were blazing.

"The little tramp!" she said hoarsely. "I might have known it. I thought of following them, but I didn't want to make Mack sore."

"There's nothing for you to get heated up about," said Tony. "She didn't stay with him. He was killed about as soon as he got there."

Lily looked at him.

"What do you think?"

Lily considered this for a moment and then shook her head. "I don't think she'd have the nerve."

"Who is she, Lily?"

"I told you last night I didn't know her. I think she's one of his customers. Maybe he's stolen her money, too. I hope so."

"You'd never seen her before?"

"No. He had her along when he called for me last night. Was I mad! I hated her the minute I saw her."

"But he introduced you, didn't he?"

"He just said, 'Lily, this is Leda.' Leda! Doesn't that sound phoney to you!"

Tony was forced to confess to himself that it did.

"What time was it when Mack dropped you at your hotel?"

"Not quite one."

Tony nodded. "The police have already checked that," he said. "They have been looking for you. You've got a good alibi, so you haven't anything to fear. That is, unless somebody saw you sneaking out of the hotel later on."

"Nobody did. I went to bed. I wouldn't have murdered Mack anyway."

"Not even if you had walked in upon him and another woman?"

"It wouldn't be the first time," said Lily gloomily. "But I never tried to kill him, though I may have felt like it for a moment, now and then."

"Well, anyway, Detective Lieut. Duffy is looking for you. If I were you I'd drive straight to your hotel call Chelsea 3-7992, ask for Lieut. Duffy of the homicide squad and tell him you understand that he's in charge of this case and that you would like to see him."

"But I wouldn't like to see him," Lily protested.

"You'd better. He knows you were with McKibben last night and that you started for Reno this morning. He had the police go through the train at Cleveland looking for you. The minute you reach your hotel he'll know it, so you might as well ask him up."

"What for?"

"Lily!" exclaimed Tony impatiently, "haven't you got sense enough to see that, as one of McKibben's oldest friends, you should be dreadfully anxious to help to find his murderer?"

"I'm not at all anxious. Mack's dead and I want to keep out of it." And then her eyes blazed again. "Unless it was that Leda! Are you trying to protect her?"

"Don't be silly. If I'm trying to protect anybody, it's you. Do as you please, but I warn you that as soon as you leave here, I'm going to call Duffy and tell him you were here. What did you come down here for, anyway?"

"Don't be cross, Tony," Lily pleaded. "You're right about Duffy. I'll call him. Give me that number again. I'm in a jam and I came down here to ask you to help me."

The columnist made a note of the number and gave it to her.

"You see, Tony, I don't want a divorce now, and I'm afraid that when Rhino finds that out, he'll try to get a divorce himself."

"Did he know you were going to Reno?"

"Of course he did. He agreed to a settlement."

"Has he got anything on you?"

"Nothing—at least I don't think so. But Mack had some letters of mine and if the police find them and the papers publish them . ."

"Oh, I see. What do you expect me to do?"

"Everybody knows you have an 'in' with the police."

"Well, I can't do anything," said Tony gruffly, "and what's more, I wouldn't if I could. But I tell you this: Don't go around to McKibben's place and try to steal those letters. There's a cop on duty there. Duffy had an idea that something like that might happen."

"He found the letters then?" she asked breathlessly.

"Of course he did, if they were in the apartment. You'd better tell him about them. He's not a bad sort. He won't use them if you've got as good an alibi as you seem to have, and if you come clean. But don't try to hold out on him. Why didn't you get the letters back from McKibben?"

"He wouldn't give them back. He said he always kept his love letters. I see now what a skunk he was."

"He was all of that," Tony agreed. "But I wonder why he kept his love letters? Just to read over in the long winter evenings? Or to use in case of need?"

"Use how?" asked Lily, and then her eyes showed that she understood. "Tony, I believe you're right," she said. "I remember once when he was drunk he told me he had some stuff that was worth a lot of money. But he couldn't have been that low, could he?"

"I shouldn't be surprised."

"And I fell for him!" exclaimed Lily disgustedly. "Well, I'm cured now. I've learned my lesson. I've got to be going—I've got to see Rhino."

"What are you going to tell Rhino?"

Lily smiled. She was looking like her old self again.

"I'm going to tell him it was all a mistake," she said. "I'm going to tell him that I got to thinking things over on the train and realized what a fool I had been, for I'd never really cared for anybody but him, and I want him to let me start over again and prove it. Don't laugh—I've learned something I'll never forget. I'll be good after this."

Tony looked at her curiously. "Well, perhaps you will," he said. "Good luck."

"Thank you, Tony. You've helped me a lot."

"All right. Run along. I'm going to call Duffy."

Which he did, then slipped into his topcoat and started up the Avenue.

The night doorman at the Central Park West apartment house was enjoying the publicity and excitement which McKibben's murder had given him and was quite ready to talk when Tony reached there a little before eight o'clock that evening. But the good McGinty could tell him little that he did not already know.

McKibben had driven up in a taxi about one-thirty, and McGinty had helped him out and then the young lady he had seen earlier in the evening.

Ontario Is Eager To Develop More Hydro Says Drew

Toronto, Feb. 9—(CP)—Ontario has plans ready for development of power sites on the St. Lawrence and elsewhere to be proceeded with when post-war manpower is available, Premier Drew Tuesday night told the convention of the Ontario Municipal Election Association.

Coupled with the premier's declaration that Ontario is anxious to proceed as soon as possible with further power developments was a statement by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission chairman, Dr. T. H. Hogg, that Hydro power loads are still rising "and if the war continues into next year we are going to suffer next winter and restrictions will increase."

Premier Drew told the convention that Ontario is anxious to proceed as soon as possible with power development of the St. Lawrence River and of other sites, but it would not be wise to attempt this work until the first stage of the war is over and demobilization provides the needed manpower. "But plans are ready," he added, "and will be put into effect at the time when work is needed during the period of industrial readjustment from war to peace."

Spread Industrial Units

Premier Drew also spoke of the value of avoiding too great a concentration of industrial production and said much planning has already been prepared on means of helping to spread industrial units over as wide an area as possible.

Predicting a great future for the province when the war is won, Premier Drew said that as many immigrants will come from Britain as Ontario is prepared to put to work, "and that is particularly true of the young men and women now in the armed forces of Britain."

Dr. Hogg announced that the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission hopes to amalgamate the Niagara, Georgian Bay and Eastern Ontario systems into one system to be known as the Southern Ontario system. He anticipated this would result in some small reduction in power costs to practically all municipalities.

Ontario now is using a total of 3,440,000 horsepower, of which 2,540,000 is from provincially-owned plants, Dr. Hogg revealed. Total energy output last year exceeded 11,730,000 kilowatt hours, a record for the province and 55 per cent. greater than in 1938.

Roosevelt Leaves Political Door Ajar

Washington, Feb. 9. (AP)—President Roosevelt left the political door sufficiently aar today for a fourth-term draft to blow through.

The opening was left in his answer to a straight-to-the-point question at his regular Tuesday afternoon news conference as to whether he would "accept a fourth-term nomination".

He said he had no news on that at the time.

It was a stock reply which the President has used repeatedly to kill stories.

But observers who generally agree he will run again, noted the reply did not rule out such a possibility.

Mr. Roosevelt, who awarded dunce caps to reporters who asked third-term questions in 1940, displayed a willingness to receive political questions yesterday. He even said he loved to have them asked. But he summed up the whole discussion at one point by suggesting everyone present was confused.

Germans at Home Rebuked by Dietmar For Being Hide-Bound

Says Situation Demands Drawing on Reserves to Meet Allied Offensives

London, Feb. 9 (CP)—Germans on the home front who fail to make their proper contribution to the war effort will be subject to "energetic counter-measures," Lt.-Gen. Kurt Dietmar, spokesman for the German high command, said today in a Berlin broadcast recorded by the British Ministry of Information.

Speaking in what he described as the "shadow of a second front," Dietmar scathingly rebuked German civilians for their "hide-bound mentality" at a time when "on all fronts the enemy has gone over to the offensive."

"More fronts are likely to spring up," he was quoted as saying. "The hour demands that we make our position as strong as possible by drawing upon all our reserves.

"Our most important weapon in the face of developments to come is our reserves. Care must be taken to use them sparingly. The German soldier's physical and moral strength is not inexhaustible. The high command is well aware of this and knows that—necessary as husbanding these reserves is—it is linked with the urgent problems of how to mobilize all available manpower for the fighting forces.

"The home front and the army depots in the rear have to make their contributions alike. But if the rear becomes a burden it fails in its real duty, which is to help the men on the battlefield. Such a hide-bound attitude calls for energetic counter-measures."

Earth Splits Open, Swallows Child

Pittston, Pa., Feb. 9 (AP)—The earth split open and swallowed a three-year-old child yesterday, and miners still dug today in search of her body.

The child, Jule Ann Fulmer, was buried alive in a cave-in over an abandoned anthracite mine.

Her aunt, Mrs. Marie Mitchell, taold her story of the tragedy:-

She and Jule Ann and the child's five-year-old brother, David, were walking along the sidewalk. Mrs. Mitchell peeled a tangerine and handed it to Jule Ann, and the child fell behind a few steps.

Then the earth cracked.

"I leaped back, pulling Jule with one hand and knocking David back with the other," Mrs. Mitchell said.

"But the rush of earth tore Jule from me. There was nothing I could do to save her. She just disappeared."

The tangerine, thrown from Jule's hand, rolled down the sidewalk—the only evidence that the girl had stood there a second before.

Most of this mining city of 18,000 is undermined by coal workings. For several years there have been cave-ins, wrecking many homes and buildings. The subsidences take place when rotting mine timbers suddenly give way.

After Jule Ann disappeared miners entered the yawning hole—40 feet deep and 10 feet across—and began digging. The work went forward under flood lights during the night while thousands watched.

A second "squeeze," or subsidence, occurred last night and rescue crews installed protective cribbing. They worked in relays, suspended in the deep hole by ropes, and passing up the dirt in buckets.

Correspondents Told By Roosevelt to Read Sermon on the Mount

Washington, Feb. 9 —(AP)— President Roosevelt advised reporters questioning him about a fourth term yesterday to read the Sermon on the Mount.

Here are some of the passages they found:

"Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find."

"Blessed are the peacemakers for they shall be called the children of God."

"Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth."

"Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself."

"Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Visits North America On War Prisoners' Work

Toronto, Feb. 9 —(CP)— Hugo Cedergren, Swedish Y.M.C.A. War Prisoners Aid official, is expected to visit Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto shortly, it was announced today by the Y.M.C.A. here. Cedergren is visiting the United States and Canada on war prisoners work.

When he landed in Canada from overseas, Cedergren said through the Y.M.C.A. "I can tell you your fellow countrymen are holding their heads high and keeping in good cheer."

Permission has been obtained to visit war prisoners in Japan, the Y.M.C.A. announced, adding it is hoped to establish contact in the Dutch East Indies.

P. T. INSTRUCTOR AROUSES INTEREST IN GYMNASTICS

17 Selected B.C.I. Students Stage Special Exhibition Before Entire School

Digressing from the customary assembly period program, students of the Belleville Collegiate were treated to an exhibition of gymnastics at the regular Wednesday morning period when selected students, principally from X-F Form under the direction of physical training instructor Homer "Red" Townsend, staged an interesting 15-minute program of pyramid building, horizontal bar and horse work.

Seventeen boys took part in the exhibition and turned in a really credible performance, considering the fact they had only five practices and rehearsals for their act. And that their efforts were appreciated by their fellow-student audience was indicated by the vociferous applause heard following each number.

First exhibition was done by two boys on the gymnastic horse, doing the conventional leg-overs and other manoeuvres with a finesse which would belie their short training. As a diversion, three smaller boys did a rolling human-chain act which met with the entire approval of the student audience. Turns and balancing acts on the horizontal bar followed, the gymnastic program being concluded with all 17 boys forming in varied and difficult pyramids. These exercises were performed in perfect time to the blowing of a whistle by their unseen director.

Of course the entire exhibition had a motive other than merely filling in during assembly period. It is the wish of the physical training instructor to gain a further student interest in this form of gymnastics and from the spirited performance of his present charges it appears unlikely that difficulty will be experienced in enlarging the class. The new gymnastics endeavor on the part of Mr. Townsend has the fullest co-operation from the School Principal, W. S. Turner, who today commended the P. T. instructor in his effort.

Japan's Plants Turning Out 1,200 Planes a Month

Washington, Feb. 9 —(AP)— An estimate that Japanese factories are turning out aircraft at a rate of 1,200 or more a month came from with a report that the Japanese—high quarters here today, coupled like the Germans—are concentrating on defensive types.

This report on Japanese production, about 100 per cent higher than most of the guesses made since Pearl Harbor, would go far to explain the enemy's apparent ability to keep replacing his heavy losses, and indicate his reserve of planes has not been reduced appreciably.

In a little more than a month, from Jan. 1 to Feb. 6, the Japanese lost more than 700 planes in the Pacific—more than 200 of them destroyed on the ground. The total was nearly 60 per cent of the estimated Japanese monthly output.

This rate of loss becomes significant, despite the recast estimate of production, in the light of the enemy's dependence on aicraft to hold his outer defence lines. The ability of the United States Navy to move almost at will in the Pacific, underlined by the seizure of the Marshalls and the shelling of Paramushiro, coupled with growing pressure in the New Guinea-New Britain area, means the Japanese fleet is virtually confined to "home waters."

Severest Cold Snap of Winter Nearing Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 9. (AP)—The United States' most severe cold snap of the winter, which will bring below-zero temperatures to the northern plains and Great Lakes region, will strike within the next 24 to 48 hours, forecaster H. A. Downs said today.

The mercury already had fallen today to 15 below zero in Minot, N.D., 18 below at Medidji, Minn., and 6 below at Duluth.

AGED MAN TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

An anonymous telephone call early last evening to Dr. F. Buckley of this city may have saved the life of James Huddlestone, residing above in a back room over an upper Front Street shop, police reported today.

When Dr. Buckley arrived he found the aged man huddled in a corner with no fire in the room at a time when the temperature outside was hovering around the zero mark. An ambulance was called and the man was removed to the hospital where he was given attention and warm surroundings. Police added today that doubtless the anonymous call saved the aged man's life as there was no fire in the stove.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Feb. 9. (CP)—Golds displayed further weakness this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Industrials were stronger. Other groups held steady. Trading was quiet with turnover at 324,000 shares.

Weak spots in golds included Lake Shore, Kirkland Lake, O'Brien, Queenston, Preston, Powell, Chesterville and Bear. Wright-Hargreaves, Kerr-Addison and MacLeod-Cockshutt were stronger.

Base Metals were steady. The Utilities, Senior Oils and Foods ruled stronger. Brazilian gained 1-2 and the Massey-Harris issues, C.P.R. and Ford A added minor fractions.

NEW YORK EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 9 (AP)—Rails, rubbers and specialties attracted higher bids but other sections of today's stock market were unable to extend Tuesday's advance. Volume was low despite fair activity in the first hour.

U.S. Rubber led the upturn in that group with Goodyear and Goodrich as runners up. Such stocks as General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Johns-Manville, J. C. Penney, Texas Co., and Southern Pacific were moderately improved. Allied Chemical and Allied Smelting were soft.

Canadian issues were almost neglected.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 9 —(CP)— Cattle trade was slow with prices steady on all grades but weighty steers up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Weighty steers were on a few sales 25 to 35 cents lower for the week at $11.25-$12.50. ## War Savings Stamp Sales Since September $4,753.25 at B.C.I.

That the campaign for the encouragement of the purchase of war savings stamps is not being allowed to lag at the Belleville Collegiate was indicated today by the weekly stamps sales report made by the campaign chairman, Mr. K. S. Hill of the collegiate staff. Making his weekly report at assembly Mr. Hill indicated stamp sales at the school since the beginning of school last September had been $4,753.25, with sales for the past week being $314.

Pupils of 10-B grade had taken a long lead over other school forms in the purchase of stamps, according to Mr. Hill. This form had purchased $974 worth of stamps, with 11-B being second in line with $525. Two other forms had now exceeded the $200 mark.

Collegiate Bandsmen's Fine Performance

That the Belleville Municipal Band need not lack for recruits when seeking replacements for band personnel enlisting in the armed forces or otherwise retiring from the organization was indicated at Belleville Collegiate today when the school band filled its customary role in providing the musical background for the regular assembly period. Already several of the Collegiate band are members of the senior organization and undoubtedly the experience gained here assists them in giving leadership qualities to the younger school band members. Heard at assembly Wednesday morning the brass instruments and clarinet sections blended harmoniously in the various numbers played. The band has Mr. George Maybee, of the Collegiate staff, as director.

ALLIES REPULSE HEAVY ATTACKS ON BEACHHEAD

Position As Whole Defensive One At Present Time

On 5th Army Front At Cassino Violent Street Fighting Is in Progress

HEAVY AIR COVER

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 10. (AP)—The Germans have launched a strong attempt to break through Allied lines on the Anzio beachhead, striking at six points along the Anglo-American defence perimeter, Allied headquarters here announced today.

Meanwhile, on the main 5th Army front, violent street-fighting continued at Cassino.

The fiercest of the beachhead attacks came in the area north and west of Carroceto (Aprilia) where heavy fighting continued as British forces sought to stem the enemy plunges.

Three of the enemy thrusts were directed against American positions west of Cisternia but they were beaten back and some ground was recaptured.

An Allied headquarters spokesman said the position of the beachhead as a whole was a defensive one at present, with the Germans probing the perimeter from the northern coastal area to its southern extremity.

Allied air forces struck heavily at German gun positions, communications and other targets just in front of the beachhead line, but these apparently did not prevent the Germans from building up their strength. The violence of the German artillery fire was increasing and the pressure of the German attacks was mounting.

The fighting at Cassino went into its seventh fiery day with no rest for either side.

Resist to Bitter End.

Under a grim canopy of smoke and dust from mortar and artillery fire, the Germans clung to the greater part of the town, following to the letter their orders to resist to the bitter end.

Tanks rumbled through the streets and engaged in short sharp clashes at point-blank range. Allied troops crept among the stones to stab, shoot and kill with grenades the foe concealed in dugouts and ruined buildings. The Germans thus lost a few strongholds.

Northwest of the town Americans slowly approached the crest of Mount Cassino after having reached a point at one time within 75 yards of the ancient monastery at the peak.

This hill was being used by the Germans as the keystone of their defence of Cassino at its foot, and the Americans were showering one side of it with artillery and the other with bombs as they worked their painful way through pillboxes and emplacements, held by the Germans as tenaciously as the cellars of the town itself.

Protected by Concrete Walls.

Some of these pillboxes were protected by concrete walls at their mouths, and the Germans in them were receiving supplies at night. They were using the monastery itself as an artillery observation point but the ancient landmark of Christian culture still had been spared by Allied artillerymen.

Shells whizzed around the old towers where many civilians were reported sheltering, but there was no confirmation of reports that the monastery had been hit.

The Germans put in counter-attacks both north and south of Cassino to relieve their position, striking up Mount Albaneta, 1 1-2 miles northwest of the town where they were repulsed.

South of Cassino they struck in the mountainous sector of Mount Ornito, 2 1-2 miles northeast of Castelforte, but on this Garigliano river front British troops threw the Germans back and made slight gains.

Three Vessels Hit.

Allied bombers, in sweeps off the west coast of Italy yesterday, hit three merchant vessels near Corsica and one in Nice harbor, today's announcement said.

Action on the British 8th Army front was limited to patrolling by adverse weather.

Medium bombers supported ground troops on the Anzio beachhead by attacking enemy road communications behind the lines while light aircraft bombed German gun positions and motor transport in the Cisterna area.

The shipping attacks in the Corsica area and on the French coast at Nice were carried out by medium bombers which also hit enemy installations at Porto San Stefano, on the Italian coast near the French border.

Reeve of Deloro Village, who died suddenly from heart attack Wednesday at his home.

R. A. ELLIOTT DIES SUDDENLY AT DELORO HOME

Heart Attack Follows Business Trip to Toronto on Wednesday

REEVE OF VILLAGE

Marmora, Feb. 10.—(Special.) —Suffering a sudden heart attack following his return from a brief business visit to Toronto, Mr. R. A. Elliott, general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company at Deloro, died at his home in Deloro early Wednesday evening.

Mr. Elliott had returned from Toronto at noon and becoming ill had received medical attention from Dr. H. Crawford who attended him at his residence throughout the afternoon. He died at 6.30.

Widely known throughout Hastings County and throughout the province, the death of Mr. Elliott will come as a distinct shock to his many business and social associates. He filled an important place in his home community and despite the call of duty thrust upon him through his position as general manager of his firm he found time to take an active interest in municipal life and other community welfare.

DUTCH POLITICAL PRISONERS IN HANDS OF GERMANS

London, Feb. 10. (CP-Aneta)—The number of Netherlands political prisoners in German hands was estimated yesterday by a commentator broadcasting over Radio Orange, Free Netherlands station here, at between 12,000 and 13,000. In addition to these, he said, there were "many thousands", who had been secretly killed by the enemy and "about whose death their families were informed only through receiving their ashes".

Russian Chutists, Rebellious Balts And German Deserters Harass Foe

By ROBERT STURDEVANT
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 1—(AP)—For of the world's strangest guerilla armies, composed of Russian parachutists, rebellious balts and German deserters, is harrassing the Nazis behind their Baltic defence lines as the Red Army presses them ever harder from in front.

It is a strange situation in these Baltic states which, taken into the Soviet in 1939, again face the prospect of Russian occupation.

Soviet troops are storming through Estonia, northernmost of the little countries, and the Germans have withdrawn the civilian population from Narva, eastern frontier town on the east bank of the Narova river, along which the Germans had built a defence line from the gulf of Finland to Lake Peipus.

Construction of the Narova line was hampered to some degree by the strange guerilla army which has been hiding in the forest depths since the Russans retreated in 1941.

Some sources declare the Germans are the most hated people in the Baltic states, but that the Russians are the most feared. The Nazis are despised, they are nevertheless getting some assistance from the natives as a result of the fear of Russia.

How much popular support the Russians will have when they have re-established themselves in the Baltic states is difficult to estimate. Property owners and business interests suffered most under Soviet rule in 1939 nad 1940. Some tenant farmers felt benefits from the Soviet form of government and may welcome their return.

Curiously enough, about 2,000 Estonians are fighting in the Finnish army against Russia, although they are little disposed to fight for the Germans in their own country, informed sources say.

Canadian Reserve Army 'Streamlined' By New Policy

CAN CONSIDER ABOLITION OF MEAT RATIONING

Factors Are Higher Slaughterings, Ship Space Shortage and Storage Congestion

NEEDS OF BRITAIN

Ottawa, Feb. 10 (CP)—Consideration now "can be given" to abolition of meat rationing and discontinuance of meatless Tuesdays, Finance Minister Ilsley told the House of Commons yesterday in answer to a question.

The minister's brief statement followed a review by Agriculture Minister Gardiner of the Canadian meat supply situation, in reply to a question by John Blackmore, New Democracy leader, as to whether the government would consider permitting Canadian producers to dispose of some beef in the United States.

Mr. Gardiner gave the House figures on sharp increases in slaughterings which shortage of shipping space and congested storage made it difficult to handle.

But the Prices Board in a statement later said the meat-control situation would have to be reviewed "in relation to the needs of the United Kingdom."

Present Regulations.

"All present regulations will remain in force so long as the needs of the United Kingdom continue and provision for the necessary transportation arrangements can be worked out," the Board said.

Following Mr. Gardiner's statement Mark Senn (PC-Haldimand) asked whether the government, in view of the situation, would consider discontinuing meat rationing and meatless Tuesdays.

Mr. Ilsley replied that "consideration was actually being given to it and Mr. Ilsley replied: "Perhaps I should have said 'will be given'."

Little Possibility of Supplies Decrease.

Mr. Gardiner said increases in recent meat delivery figures suggested there was little possibility of a decrease in supplies "at least in the immediate future."

All available storage space was in use and the record volume placed a severe strain on shipping to Britain. The shipping problem was increased when three ships designated to handle meat "met with mishaps."

"While at the moment, owing to heavy slaughterings of all classes of livestock during recent weeks, there is what might be considered a surplus of meat, the fact is that the United Kingdom desires all surplus meat that Canada can provide," Mr. Gardiner said.

Shipping Facilities.

"What hapens to be a surplus at the moment is due to lack of shipping facilities to move the surplus product immediately."

Steps were being taken to provide additional shipping space. The meat board had been able to accept immediate delivery of some 7,000,000 pounds of beef for export and this had an immediate effect on cow prices which firmed on all markets.

"There is every reason to believe that in the future all surplus beef available will be handled and lifted as offered for export," Mr. Gardiner said.

Steps had also been taken to export surplus supplies of mutton and lamb in an effort to create a better market condition.

German Eastern Front Cracking Under Attacks By Seven Red Armies

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 10—(AP)—Russian armies within eight miles of Krivoi Rog appeared today to have badly outflanked the iron centre from the south as some of their divisions streamed southwestward toward Kherson and Nikolaev on the Black sea.

With strong Soviet formations poised for a blow from north of Krivoi Rog, others threatened the city of 197,000 from the south and east. To the rear, other divisions were chopping to bits the German 8th Army trapped in a narrow pocket near Cherkasy.

60 Miles From Kherson

Advanced mobile Russian columns struggled through mud about 60 miles away from Kherson, situated at the mouth of the Dnieper river. The large German garrison there has faced another Russian force across the Dnieper for months and the Nazi position was scarcely less perilous than that at Krivoi Rog. Nikolaev is 30 miles northwest of Kherson and is in peril of the third and fourth Russian armies of the Ukraine driving west from the Postolovo.

A detailed map of the 10 German divisions trapped near Cherkasy showed the Russians were eight miles from Koesun, centre of the death ring. Seven Russian spearheads were driving in for the kill.

The encircled area is 27 miles long from northwest to southwest and its widest point is 22 miles.

Divisions Identified

The surrounded infantry divisions were identified as the 112th, 88th, 82nd, 72th, 167th, 168th, 57th, the 337th. The 213th grenadier division and the SS Viking tank division and the SS Walonia motor brigade also are in the pocket. The Russians said Lt.-Gen. Schermman was inside the trap.

Numerous groups were reported surrendering. Ammunition was said to be so low that orders were given to fire only when objectives were sighted easily. The food supply was said to be low.

In the lower Ukraine the Nazi retreat approached a rout as Red Army pincers closed on disorganized remnants of between 10 and 15 battered German division trapped in the rain-soaked steppe country betwen Cherkasy and Niopol, 20 miles to the south.

German dead littered the battlefields as the combined 3rd and 4th Ukrainian armies turned the German retreat west of Apostolovo into a debacle, outflanked the great iron-ore centre of Krivoi Rog from the south and surged westward to imperil the Kiev-Nikol-Aev railway, sole remaining escape route left to the fleeing enemy.

Forty towns were captured in this tremendous drive to clear the Ukraine of the invading Germans, including the important stronghold of Radushnoye, 14 miles northeast of Apstolovo and less than eight miles from heavily-fortified Krivol Rog, a Soviet communique said last night.

In the Dnieper death circle, north and east of the towns of Shpola and Svenigorodka, the 1st and 2nd Ukrainian armies stormed and captured the important town of Godorodische, 18 miles north of Shpola, killing hundreds of Germans, taking many prisoners and sweeping up great stores of war material, including 26 big guns. Enemy airfields through which supplies were reaching the doomed Germans also were captured.

More than 1,000 Germans were killed as the Red Army stranglehold tightened on the 10 divisons trapped in this narrowing circle, and repeated German attempts to break into the ring were defeated with the loss of 42 tanks, 90 armored trucks and six troops carriers, the Russian communique said.

3,800 Germans Killed

The war bulletin said at least 3,800 Nazi troops were killed in the past 24 hours along the entire 1,200-mile-long front as more than 57 towns and villages were liberated by the victorious Red Army troops.

In the far north, where other Soviet troops were blasting their way westward toward the Leningrad-Warsaw railway stronghold of Luka from the east, the strongly-fortified towns of Ordezh and Bolshoye-Zamochye, respectively 18 and 13 miles northeast of the prime objective, fell to the onrushing Russian spearheads.

FINLAND SEEKING WAY OUT AFTER U. S. WARNING

Possibility Some Action Was Taken at Cabinet Session

PAPERS COMMENT

Stockholm, Feb. 10 (AP)—Peace-hungry Finland, caught as a German ally in the middle of a war she never wanted, was reported seeking a way out today on the basis of an American warning to act or take the consequence.

A Helsinki dispatch said there was a "possibility that preliminary decision were taken" at a cabinet session Wednesday night and added that the Finnish public "knows how important" any decision will be.

At the same time the independent Helsingin Sanomat, making the first Finish editorial comment on Secretary of State Cordell Hull's recent statement, said when the United States appeals to Finland to "step out of the war, this finds a deep echo among our peace-loving people."

The Helsinki dispatch, written by the correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter, said the cabinet meeting, a regular Wednesday night session, was preceded during the day by a closed council of the parliamentary foreign policy committee at which Sir Henrik Ramsay, Foreign Minister, reviewed the situation for an hour.

The correspondent said Finnish political circles had voiced criticism of the government for failing to inform the committee earlier of Hull's statement, which was reported transmitted to Ramsay a week ago today.

While apparently seeking a path to peace, Finland is sending many children to Sweden to escape the horrors of any further air attacks such as those carried out Sunday night on Helsinki by Russian bombers.

The children began arriving in Sweden yesterday by plane and more are due today by air and boat. It is estimated in Stockholm that Sweden at present is sheltering 9,000 Finnish children.

ALLIES PREPARING DIPLOMATIC FRONT BEFORE INVASION

Two-Fold Objective Planned to Facilitate Defeat of Germany

STEPS OUTLINED

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, Feb. 10 (AP)—Diplomatic preparations for the invasion of Europe appear to be in full swing here and in London now with Spain, France, Italy and Finland as focal points of developing Allied foreign policy.

The objective is two-fold—to split off from Germany as much outside support and co-operation as possible, and to pave the way for invading forces striking from both the north and south.

Expected developments include:

France—Broadened recognition of the authority of the French National committee of Liberation at Algiers which will assure its right to govern liberated areas of France until reasonably normal civil machinery can be set up to give them a voice in government.

Italy — Reconsideration of the whole question of keeping King Victor Emmanuel in power, a step which may result in his getting out before the Allied armies reach Rome; also expansion of the territory in southern Italy under the jurisdiction of the Italian government.

Spain—Close observation of the means which the Franco government employs to make good its announced intention of maintaining "strict neutrality." This is what the Allies want, instead of a "neutrality" favorable to Germany.

Finland—Use of whatever diplomatic measures may be possible in conjunction with Russian military actions, such as the recent bombings of Helsinki, to get Finland out of the war. Some authorities believe it still is not too late for the Finns to make peace with Russia and Britain and preserve their territorial integrity but they have little time in which to act.

BRITISH UNITS JOIN PARTISANS OFF DALMATIA

Island of Hvar Lies Midway Between Dalmatian Ports of Split, Dubrovnik

4 NAZI SHIPS SUNK

London, Feb. 10 (CP)—Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced in a broadcast communique from his Yugoslav headquarters today that his guerillas have been joined by British units on Hvar—a strategic island which forms a bridgehead into the Balkans.

Naval and military quarters in London said they had no reports of any landing operation, however, and assumed it had not yet developed on a large scale. Any such operation would be directed from Algiers.

May be Commandos.

The British fighting alongside Tito's Partisans might be commandos, marines or small army units put ashore in conection with naval activity, or might be groups of Britons who escaped Italian prison camps in northern Italy, it was pointed out.

It has been disclosed that British liaison groups are with the Partisans and that extensive supplies are being moved across the Adriatic to the Yugoslavs.

There have been no recent reports of fighting on Hvar, about midway between the Dalmatian ports of Split and Dubrovnik.

The partisan communique also said British naval units had sunk four German sailing vessels off the Dalmatian coast.

The bulletin gave no details concerning operations on Hvar, saying merely:

"Our units and British units are operating successfully at Veliko Grablye on the inland of Hvar."

German troops were on the offensive in the coastal sector of Slovenia and Tito reported particularly heavy fighting around the mountain town of Kocevje, where the invaders were trying to get control of rail lines and highways leading to the port of Susak, a few miles east of the Italian naval base of Fiume.

Thirty miles below Susak in Lika province in Croatia Axis troops and partisans were locked in battle between Senj and Ogulin with indecisive results.

Six Italian Ships Sail From Spain

Madrid, Feb. 10—(AP)—Six Italian merchant ships set sail from Spanish ports under the flag of Premier Marshal Pietro Badoglio early in January and the Spanish government now is holding only eight other Italian vessels, a Madrid source said last night.

Departure of the lone Italian ship now being held in the waters of Metropolitan Spain and the seven others interned in the canaries and Spanish West Africa was said to rest upon the outcome of negotiations now in progress between Gen. Francisco Franco and the Badoglio government.

Correspondent's Letter to His Mother Tells of Life on Beachhead

Instead of a news dispatch, Sholto Watt, Montreal Star war correspondent on the 5th Army's beachhead south of Rome yesterday wrote a letter to his mother, Mrs. Alfred Watt of Victoria, B.C. and London, England. Here is the letter in part:—

By SHOLTO WATT
(Montreal Star War Correspondent)
Distributed by The Canadian Press

With the 5th Army near Rome, Feb. 9 —(Delayed)—Dear Mother: Yesterday we moved.

We skipped out without paying any rent, took up our beds and walked into somebody's four-room flat overlooking the sea, and then walked into some other apartments and borrowed some bits of furniture.

We have an "Eyetie" called Guido who will answer to the name of Henry who comes and gives us breakfast in bed while shells drop out in the bay.

The shells made us move because some of them had been falling along the main road here and had killed some people two days ago. We thought the best place for us was one of the apartments built out on the sea below the road . . .

The first thing you look for when you are househunting here is shelter from shelling and the air raids which are irregular but frequent.

You jump on floors and bang walls to see if they are solid, then inspect the windows to see which are good against a blast.

You look to see how much rubble there is to clear up, how much furniture there is, and if the beds—if there are beds—have springs . . .

In these two neighboring towns of Anzio and Nettuno every house is vacant or has soldiers in it. Civilians were sent from the towns by the Germans who went through all houses. All front doors are open. There is furniture in varying amounts . . .

Our aircraft recognition is coming along fast. We have been in better places but we are in good spirits—and that goes for the troops too. We think of home very often—so does everyone here—and we send our love.

Sholto.

Training Schedule Cut From 40 to 30 Days This Year

In '43 Reserve Army Furnished 7,000 As Reinforcements for Active Army

HAS SERVED PURPOSE

Ottawa, Feb. 10 —(CP)— During 1943 the Canadian Reserve Army furnished 7,000 reinforcements for the Active Army, it was disclosed today in a Defence Headquarters statement on Reserve Army policy.

"While happily the Reserve Army has not been called upon to fight in defence of Canadian soil it has contributed in no small measure to the expansion and efficiency of the Active Army," the statement said, adding:

"During the year 1943 alone more than 7,000 reinforcements for the Active Army were obtained from the ranks of Reserve units.

"It has presented to the people of Canada an example of preparedness to meet any situation at a time when future conditions are unforeseeable and has helped to maintain and increase public interest in the army and its activities in the war in many communities across the country where Reserve units have carried out their training.

"The enthusiasm and self-sacrifice of its members, many of whom are fully engaged in other forms of war effort, have been an inspiration in the prosecution of the war."

To Reduce Number Full-Time Personnel And May Drop Some Units

HOLD SUMMER CAMP

Ottawa, Feb. 10—(CP)—A policy of streamlining has been adopted by the Canadian Reserve Army, cutting training from 40 to 30 days, reducing the number of full-time personnel and dropping units unable to maintain "satisfactory strength," it was announced today.

Defence Headquarters said that while the necessity for the Reserve Army remains unchanged it is possible "in view of the improvement in the military situation and the increased efficiency that has been achieved," to decrease the intensity of training during 1944.

The new 30-day training period—similar to that in peacetime—will be made up of 15 days in summer camp and 15 days training in local headquarters.

Reduction in the number of full-time personnel is made possible, the announcement said, by the fact that training of part-time officers and non-commissioned officers has reached a stage where they are "sufficiently qualified" to instruct units without assistance. While no statement was made as to future of the full-time personnel, it was indicated in army circles that they would be absorbed into the Active Army.

Train Officers, N.C.O.'s.

Meanwhile, provision has been made in the new policy for further intensive training of officers and non-commissioned officers and specialists.

While no general change in the structure of the reserves is said to be contemplated, it is proposed that some measure of "streamlining" be made to ensure that all units maintain a "satisfactory standard" of efficiency. Units unable to make this grade will be maintained inactive until the end of the war.

It is not known immediately what reductions will be made in the numbers of administrative and training staffs, nor what units will be subject to "streamlining" developments or become dormant. This will be decided only after the situation in each district has been assessed by the district officer commanding and his recommendations submitted to Defence Headquarters.

Role of Reserves.

Meanwhile, the role of the reserves is summarized as follows:

1. To maintain throughout the country continued interest in the Canadian Army and its activities and to set an example to all citizens of preparedness at all times.

2. To provide a continuous flow of reinforcements for the forces overseas by training young men of pre-enlistment age.

3. To back up the civil authority responsible for the enforcement of law and order if required.

4. As a trained reserve to support the active forces available for the defence of Canada if the military situation should deteriorate.

5. As a basis for expansion of the Active Army should the necessity arise.

Royal Couple Visits Miners

York, England, Feb. 10. (CP Cable)—Miners in a Yorkshire Colliery canteen had royal luncheon guests yesterday. To acquire first-hand information of the coal-mining industry, following a suggestion by the King that he would like to make a personal study of conditions, the King and Queen made a day-long tour of the coal fields.

With 70 miners in the canteen they dined on hot roast beef, brussels sprouts, the traditional English winter vegetable, roast and boiled potatoes, pudding and coffee.

It was a meal similar to what is served to miners for a shilling (about 25 cents) and the Queen remarked afterwards "it is a long time since we have had a better meal". The King agreed.

At one open-cast coalsite Their Majesties donned overalls and walked through dust-filled sorting and grading rooms, showing the keenest interest in everything they saw.

FORBID PETER TO RETURN

London, Feb. 10 (CP)—The Free Yugoslav radio reported yesterday that Partisans meeting recently at Gernomelj had approved unanimously a resolution "forbidding" King Peter to return to Yugoslavia.

FOUR CARS DAMAGED IN TWO CRASHES

Property damage resulted to four automobiles during two motor crashes on city streets Wednesday night late, cars driven by Rena L. Knot, 84 1-2 Catherine Street and Jessie Robinson, 47 Cannifton Road, were in collision at the intersection of Victoria and Foster Avenue. Considerable property damage resulted in this crash as the fenders, bodies and radiators of both vehicles suffered as the result of the impact. Police said today that the car driven north on Foster Avenue, by Jessie Robinson had not observed the 'stop street' by-law.

Earlier in the evening on Front Street opposite the Bell Theatre cars driven by H. E. Green of Harold, and Norman Dobbin, 296 Park Street, Peterborough, met head-on with the result damage resulted to the left fenders and headlight. Mr. Green alleges that Dobbin swung over into his traffic lane. At the police station Mr. Dobbin agreed to pay all damages.

Truck is Abandoned.

Joseph Henn, janitor at the Belleville Collegiate, informed city police today there has been a truck parked on the school campus for the past two days and apparently has been abandoned.

I.T.S. ROUTE MARCH CUT SHORT BY SNOW

Old Man Winter with a sudden flurry of snow resulting in slippery streets was responsible for the Wednesday afternoon route march of No. 5 Initial Training School personnel being cut short yesterday as the boys swung for a brief parade through city streets. Just as the airmen marched down Murney Hill snow began to fall in earnest and officers in charge swung the parade around one block of the downtown section and back to the station by way of South Coleman and Dundas Streets.

Although the station bugle band accompanied the personnel on the route march, a special sound truck preceded the parade and was heard as the boys marched back to the station. The sound equipment works on the principle of the sound track on a movie film, the tape being red through a projector and the sound amplified over a loud speaker system. The equipment is used at the station for various purposes but this is the first occasion it has been heard in the city during a route march.

KNIGHTS TO PRESENT TEAM WITH SWEATERS

The local Knights of Columbus Club will fete the champion St. Michael's Academy rugby team at a banquet at which the team members will be presented with sweaters bearing suitable crests, it was decided at the last regular meeting of the club held on Tuesday evening. The banquet for the team will be held on Feb. 21st.

The club meeting was well-attended with a new Spokesman's Club being inaugurated by Lecturer Thomas Mascaro. The Spokesman's Club will take over during club meetings in the absence of a lecturer. Maurice Callaghan and John Boyle were the spokesmen Tuesday night and gave very interesting talks, Mr. Callaghan discoursing on sailing boats and ice boats, with the latter giving a talk on transportation. Grand Knight George O'Brien acted as chairman for the meeting, it being decided to grant $50 to the current campaign to provide comforts for the corvette "Belleville," soon to be launched.

PO. R. D. HALL RESCUED BY POLICE PATROL BOAT

Ottawa, Feb. 10—(CP)—R.C.A.F. Headquarters made public yesterday the home address of six airmen rescued by a Provincial Police patrol boat after two planes crashed into the sea Monday off Cape Mudge, B.C. None of them were injured. Only man from Ontario was PO. R. D. Hall of Belleville.

MAYOR SCARES UP NECESSARY HELP

Oshkosh, Wis., Feb. 10 —(AP)— When the head of an Oshkosh Engineering Plant asked Mayor George Oaks to see if he could "scare up some help" for the plant's night shift, the Mayor promised his co-operation. The line-up of work applicants at the personnel office that night included the superintendent of the Municipal Cemetery, a city Engineering Department Employee, the assessor's aide, and Mayor George Oaks.

Illustrated Talk Is Given On Alaska Highway

Illuminating his talk on construction problems and experiences on the Alaskan Highway, Mr. T. F. Francis, district engineer of the Department of Highways, showed two films made by the Department during the construction of the military "road" and one-time peace highway to the great north. The films were excellent in description and were in beautiful technicolor.

Mr. Francis was introduced at the Men's Association dinner held in the Sunday School rooms of Bridge Street United Church by Rev. Dr. J. Semple. Mr. Francis commenced his talk by pointing out a few details of matters relating to the terrain through which the Alaskan Highway runs and of the conditions, weather and natural hazards encountered by the construction companies. He said that the press had been the victims, in many cases, of truck drivers coming out of the north who wanted to paint a good story, but that not all was glory and romance, as these men sometimes claimed.

History of "Road."

The history of the "Road" goes back a great many years, said Mr. Francis, probably a century ago. There was talk of a road to Russia about one hundred years ago, the road to cross the northland of Canada to Alaska and the Bering Sea to be either bridged or tunnelled under. In 1864 the construction of the Alaskan-Siberian Telegraph was started and the work progressed for about four years until the laying of the trans-Atlantic cable brought it to an end. In 1928 Mr. Donald McDonald sought to interest the two governments in an automobile road to Alaska. A joint commission was appointed which did considerable work in reconnaissance and mapped out three alternate routes. Nothing was done, however, until Pearl Harbor awoke in the minds of everybody on the North American continent to the danger from the Japanese. The governments of Canada and the United States arranged to build a military road, and a careful study of the three roads surveyed by the earlier commission was made. However, the present road does not follow either of the three but is built over an entirely new route.

Americans Arrive in March '42.

In March 1942 the first American troops arrived at Dawson Creek and often work was carried on in 30 below zero weather. At the same time, other units were going up the coast to Skagway and to Whitehorse and worked out of seven different bases. After the army had got started, both Canadian and American contractors were recruited for the work. It was the intention to have the army construct a "tote-road" as quickly as possible and, working from this "tote-road," build a fairly high-class highway. The army faced a terrible job. They took in heavy equipment and worked under trying conditions of both weather and wilderness, but by early freeze-up they had 1,600 miles of "tote-road" completed.

The efforts of the Canadian civilian contractors group seem to have been lost sight of in publications in the United States, most of the credit going to the American army labor troops and the American civilian contractors who came into the country in May, 1942. It was in June, 1942, when actual construction on the road started. The Jap scare decided the government to let the road go through without taking pains with the type of work, and the "tote-road" was simply widened and pushed through at top speed.

400 Women in One Camp.

One of the main problems of both civilian contractors and the army commanders was the presence of women in the camps. In one camp there were over four hundred women, wives of the civilian workers mostly. These women usually worked as clerks, waitresses and, until the type of work on the road was decided, were considered as truck drivers. These women did an excellent job at whatever they were given to do. Not a great deal is known generally about these women, Mr. Francis said as he concluded his talk and the motion picture of the highway was started.

The appreciation and thanks of the Association was expressed by Mr. R. D. P. Davidson. Mr. V. White, president of the Men's Association, presided over the meeting. A solo was rendered by Mr. J. Bankier and Mr. Enos David, secretary of the organization, read the minutes of the previous meeting. Ninety-one Christmas boxes were sent from the Men's Association in the church to men and women of the congregation serving with the armed forces. The financial report revealed a balance of $7.57 for the year. It was suggested that a number of subscriptions to magazines be purchased and given to the servicemen and women. These subscriptions would supplant the present system of mailing collected magazines and would assure steady reading material each month.

4 NORSE EX-PARLIAMENTARIANS ARRESTED BY QUISLINGS

Stockholm, Feb. 10—(AP)— Four former members of the Norwegian parliament have been arrested by quisling police, the Swedish-Norwegian Press Service said today in a dispatch from Oslo to the Stockholm paper Dagens Nyheter. The four are among "many hundreds" of persons recently arrested in Oslo for various reasons, the dispatch said.

Youth Service Work Discussed by Rotary

Trenton—(Special)—The women of King Street United Church played host to the Trenton Rotary Club Monday evening and the club members were most elated over the preparation made on their behalf.

Upon conclusion of the supper the meeting was turned over to Rotarian G. S. Martin, chairman of the Youth Service Committee, who then outlined to the club the arrangements which have been made and which are being completed for the holding of another Youth Service program during the month of May.

The kiddies and youth of Trenton and surrounding district will no doubt be pleased to hear that the Trenton Rotary Club has not forgotten them and that every effort will be spent to see that this year's event will at least be as fine as the one held last year, if not better. Rotarian Fred Collins was the chairman of the Youth Service Week last year and everyone will admit that he did a grand job and that the chairman of the coming youth's program certainly has a high level to maintain. The program is in the hands of an energetic Rotarian, however, and the arrangements that have already been outlined prove that something big is in the wind.

Rotarian Norm Banfield was nominated chairman of the Youth's Hobby Fair and he was then called upon to outline to the club what he had in mind.

Mr. Banfield stated that at present there is some talk of a Soap-Box Derby, also a Pet Parade. He mentioned that the Hobby Fair was a sure thing and maybe there will be some clowns around—who knows.

Rotarian O. M. Newton was nominated chairman of the oratorical contest. He outlined his part of the program in detail to the Club and assured everyone that those who may be so interested would be given every opportunity to expose their talent to the public. The finals of this contest, as was the case of last year, would be held at one of the weekly Rotary suppers.

Rotarian Ben Joyce accepted the chairmanship of the Musical Festival and he also outlined to the club members just what he had in mind relative to his part of the program. Mr. Wickett, Club pianist and Mr. Wildman, organist and choirmaster of Grace Church, will assist Mr. Joyce to present to the public the finest youth musical talent of this district that can be organized for this event.

All in all it would appear that Rotarian Martin, with the assistance of his associates, will again give the girls and boys of Trenton and district an event which will long be remembered.

Legal Technicality May Upset Murray Township Election

Trenton, Feb. 10 — (Special)— Trouble which arose at last Saturday's meeting of the Murray Township Council has completely upset their recent elections and as matters stand today, Murray is said to be without its proper managing officials.

Though for the past twenty years things have gone serenely for the country folk out that way, it was not until February's meeting of the council that it came to light that the proper documents have never been signed whereby the officials could legally sit in the council.

At their nomination meeting on November 26th, all members were elected by acclamation, Reeve Ab. Smith, of Wooler, Deputy Reeve Norman Flindall and councillors, Lambert Whaley, Arthur Hayes and Herman Morrow, the latter a former warden and reeve.

Everything was carried on as per usual, until when at last Saturday's meeting Councillor Morrow is said to have refused to be a party to a council which was not legally sworn into office. He claimed that while the reeve, deputy and councillors had all been elected by acclamation, they too had all neglected to sign their qualifying papers and oath of allegiance before accepting office for the ensuing year.

Reeve Smith says that to his knowledge the same procedure has been followed this year as has been done for the past twenty years and there has been no previous trouble.

Police Court

Three charged in Trenton Police Court on Tuesday with breaking and entering all had their cases enlarged for one week. One of the parties is at present serving in the Royal Canadian Navy and the two others desired to join the armed forces.

Five were charged with breaches of the Liquor Control Act and were fined the usual $10 and costs.

H. Hadwen charged with breach of the Highway Traffic Act paid $4.50, while four were each fined $1 for breach of the Traffic By-Law.

L. McEwen and J. Taylor were charged with taking part in an affray. McEwen was given three months' suspended sentence and ordered to pay costs. Taylor's case was enlarged as he was in Kingston endeavouring to enlist in the armed services.

Ray Sullivan charged with joy-riding was fined $25 and costs.

In juvenile court, five juveniles were charged with wilful damage to property by breaking glass. Their cases were enlarged to give the parents an opportunity to make restitution.

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided with County Crown Attorney Lt. Col. B. C. Donnan, K.C., prosecuting.

Russian Forces Not Collaborators To Determine Border

Moscow, Feb. 10 —(AP)— Red Star, organ of the Red Army, gave an editorial warning to the Finns today that Russian forces, not Finnish collaborators with Hitler, would determine Finland's border.

At the same time it indicated omre air raids against the Finns are coming.

The last official publication outlining the front showed the Finnish battleline touching the gulf of Finland at a point 11 1-2 miles north of eLningrad, and eraching across the Karelian Isthmus to Lake Ladoga at a point 55 miles from the former capital of the Czars.

The front line held by the Finns now is the nearest threat to Leningrad since the Germans have been driven back into Estonia west of Leningrad and almost to Luga, southwest of the city.

The pre-war Finnish border was about 20 miles north of Leningrad on the gulf of Finland shore and about 40 miles from the city on the shore of Lake Ladoga.

The front north of Ladoga has not been officially defined, but the Finns never have been able to penetrate deeply into the Soviet union.

HOT WORDS SPOKEN

(By JAMES McCOOK)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Feb. 10. (CP)—The sonorous Throne Speech debate blown sky-high by a bitter Liberal-C.C.F. exchange, the House of Commons awaited further developments today with more party excitement than has been in evidence since the session started two weeks ago.

Yesterday the House had expected to vote on a sub-amendment to the address in reply to the Throne Speech, moved by J. S. Roy (Ind. Gaspe) Tuesday night, and then proceed to the main Progressive Conservative amendment. This would have cleared the way for introduction of the War Appropriation Bill and a statement by Defence Minister Ralston on the position of Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former Canadian Army Commander overseas.

Instead, the second speaker of the Day—T. C. Douglas (C.C.F.—Weyburn)—criticized what he called the government's "failure" to disallow an act of the Saskatchewan Provincial Legislature which extended its life.

Douglas Makes Charges.

From there Mr. Douglas, Saskatchewan C.C.F. leader, went on to say only Prime Minister Mackenzie King, of all the Cabinet members, had spoken in the Throne Speech debate; that the Liberals had failed to live up to promises made after the 1935 election; that the government had given no guarantee that Social Security proposals in the Throne Speech would be carried through; and that agricultural policies had not worked to the benefit of the farmer.

Protest from the Liberal benches as Mr. Douglas spoke turned into applause as Agriculture Minister Gardiner, himself a Saskatchewan member of parliament and long experienced in the public life of the Prairie province, rose to reply.

The excitement of the House grew as Mr. Gardiner talked and more and more members hurried to their seats from the corridors. The sub-amendment remained before the House at adjournment.

Mr. Gardiner said the Ministers were to be commended, not condemned, for not speaking in the debate since it was considered essential that the debate be shortened as much as possible.

Leaders of parties should be in their seats as representatives of the pepole, he said. Mr. Douglas was Saskatchewan C.C.F. Leader. One of his party in the Provincial House could resign and allow him to seek election there.

Don't Dictate to Provinces.

Mr. Douglas had been elected provincial leader, said Mr. Gardiner, while the "real leader" (Maj. George Williams) was serving overseas.

Mr. Gardiner said the principles of liberalism as adopted by the party had been placed on provincial statute books in provinces where the liberals were in power. The central government did not attempt to dictate to the provinces.

Government action in closing the Winnipeg wheat market and purchasing wheat had made possible participation certificate payments on 1940, 1941 and 1942 wheat. The government had guaranteed a price of $1.25 a bushel, basis No. 1 northern, and now wheat was being sold at more than this floor price. Farmers would share in this gain through their certificates.

Mr. Douglas had claimed the time had come when the production of hogs was down; but if marketings continued at the level of the last three months Canada would have close to 1,000,000 pounds of bacon to send to the United Kingdom this year.

The contract requirements call for shipping 900,000,000 pounds in the next two years but Britain has been ready to take all available.

Speaking of agricultural production Mr. Gardiner said:

"Our intention is to get as much as possible to the United Kingdom and to the fronts where our soldiers are fighting in various parts of the world."

The C. C. F., he said, was not big enough to admit that agricultural production was reaching greater heights of production in spite of charges that the government had "muddled" manpower policies.

"Greater farm production does not indicate a muddle," said Mr. Gardiner.

Production Increases 48 P. C. . . . .

Despite reduction of manpower and womanpower on the farms by 500,000, farm production had inceased 48 per cent. The only way for Canada to give full employment was to produce everything Canada could produce in the greatest possible quantity, then look for things which could be traded for in other countries.

This Liberal policy of trading with the world had worked despite the threat of war in the period 1935 to 1939. The C. C. F. leaders, instead of that, offered socialism.

Under a liberal government, trade before the war had been increased 50 per cent in spite of the threat of hostilities. The C. C. F. had called for socialism and their representative had gone to the only countries where there was National socialism overseas.

"They went to those countries which they said had learned the value of control in the last war—there were three of them—and they contended we should apply it to this country," Mr. Gardiner said.

Trying to Get Away From Label

"They are trying now to get away from the label of national socialism that has been placed on them."

Mr. Coldwell rose on a point of order and said Canada was at war with the National Socialist States and to call any group in the house national socialists was unwarranted.

"There is no name that describes them so well," replied Mr. Gardiner.

Canadians had to ride the rods in the depression because Canadian products could not be marketed in countries like Germany and Italy, he continued.

"My friends have sent their emissaries over to these countries to examine into their institutions, and they came back here and said, 'apply them here.'"

C. C. F. members jumped up and demanded that Mr. Gardiner say where the statement had been made.

Names One to Visit Russia.

"Name one of emissaries", said Mr. Coldwell.

Mr. Gardiner said Maj. Williams had visited Russia and other European countries and written a book.

Others who wrote books and whose principles were followed by the C.C.F. had said that countries which adopted controls opposed to the Canadian free way of living were the countries where men were not riding rods, and had argued that Canada should adopt some similar system.

Mr. Douglas said Mr. Gardiner must be quoting from "his imagination".

A. M. Nicholson (C.C.F.-Mackenzie) said Mr. Gardiner did a great disservice to democracy when he failed to distinguish between the National Socialism of Germany and the Socialism in Sweden, Australia, or New Zealand or which was advocated in Great Britain.

Mr. Gardiner also had done a disservice to Maj. Williams who had visited Russia. The Prime Minister had visited Hitler in Germany in 1936.

"Is there anyone in this House or in this country who would suggest that the Prime Minister of Canada is a National Socialist because he visited Hitler?" asked Mr. Nicholson.

7 EDUCATIONISTS FOR DEPARTMENT NAMED BY DREW

Major Step to Put Fresh Vigor Into Provincial School System

ONE CHIEF DIRECTOR

Toronto, Feb. 10—(CP)— Seven important appointments in the Ontario Department of Education were announced by Premier Drew last night in what he termed a major step in the government's program "to put fresh vigor into the provincial school system."

Dr. J. G. Althouse of Ailsa Craig, Ont., dean of the Ontario College of Education at the University of Toronto, was named to the new post of Chief Director of Education. Premier Drew's statement termed Dr. Althouse "a recognized authority on Canadian education," who enjoys the confidence of Ontario educationists.

Dr. V. K. Greer, Chief Inspector of Elementary Schools, assumes the position of superintendent of elementary education, and A. G. Hooper, High School inspector, takes the post of superintendent of secondary education.

Dr. J. D. Campbell, C. F. Cannon and F. S. Rivers, principal of Ottawa Normal School, become assistant superintendents of elementary education They will work under Dr. Greer, who is also named adviser of educational finance.

The seventh appointment is that of S. D. Holmes, science master at a Toronto Collegiate, as Editor-in-Chief of textbooks. Premier Drew's statement noted that the purpose of education should be to develop personal character and a sound attitude towards the communty, the Nation, the Empire commonwealth and to humanity, and textbooks were vital in this regard.

This sweeping reorganization of the department follows thorough study of the requirements of the department, and appointment of Dr. Althouse as chief director is made in order that this program may be framed with due reference to educational thought in other parts of Canada, the Premier stated.

In connection with the appointment of Dr. Greer and his advisers, Premier Drew noted that among problems facing the department not the least is the financial support of schools, "aiming not only at the improvement of teachers' salaries but also at the equalization of educational opportunities."

Dr. Althouse graduated from the University of Toronto in 1912, served in collegiates at Strathroy and Galt and as principal of the Oshawa High School. In 1922 he became headmaster of the University of Toronto Schools and since 1934 has been dean of the Ontario College of Education.

Allied Offensive In Pacific Forecast By Japanese Experts

London, Feb. 10 —(CP)— Japanese military experts believe a large-scale offensive by Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's forces in the Pacific is imminent and concede the possibility that sea-borne troops may be landed successfully in Malaya, Burma and elsewhere, the Berlin radio quoted a Tokyo dispatch as saying today.

"The offensive probably will e amphibious and synchronized with a land attack," said the dispatch. "The Japanese High Command is preparing against landings at a number of points in Burma, Malaya, the Andamans and even in the former Dutch East Indies.

"In view of the great length of coastline it is thought the enemy might well succeed in establishing one or more bridgeheads."

HOTHOUSE FIRE

Toronto, Feb. 10.— (CP)— Too much heat wrecked a hothouse on the highway a few miles from here yesterday and toasted its mushroom crop beyond edibility when flames of undetermined origin swept through the structure, owned by Art Rowett, former Etobicoke councillor.

Nazi Gangsters

Baron Maurice Rothschild of France, now a refugee in Vancouver, has exposed the rapacity and greed of German Nazis. Von Ribbentrop stole his race horses and Goering carried off his fine precious art collections which the Baron's family had been collecting for two hundred years. Everyone knows the story of German theft and confiscation of food and treasures across occupied Europe.

The Baron after the war will attempt to get back the treasures, he says "even if Goering has sent them to his home in Sweden as I have been told."

Goering in his enthusiasm for Nazism did not forget his greed and love for comfort and rich furniture and is reported to have fared well on these as well as on the great industrial plants in the overrun areas.

History has no doubt never seen a group or gang of leaders of any country so much the gangster in policy as Nazi Germany has produced under Hitler. Out of the aggression of Germany they have fattened themselves.

But these great gangsters must dread the wrath of the aroused world for they must see the end of their way of brigandage. Could they find a haven or refuge of escape they would do so but their chances are non-existent. The whole world knows these leaders for what they are and will take no part by compounding in their crimes.

Proof in German Documents

Proof of German crimes is not all from those who have been subjected to atrocities practised by the leaders and troops occupying overrun territory for often the Nazi Germans offer the proof themselves in their official documents. "Poland Fights" gives a proof of this.

The public proclamation posted by the Germans throughout the district of Bialystok in occupied Poland is a cynical document of German shame and deserves publication in its entirety. It speaks clearly for itself, announcing that 100 Polish underground fighters for freedom and their families have been shot in retaliation for activities of the underground. And yet in spite of this the Polish patriots are not frightened by such bloody reprisals into abandoning the struggle.

Here is a translation of the sinister document of the German command:

"In retaliation for

"1. The sniping by hidden bandits at a small police detachment and the woundingg of a police officer, as well as

"2. For assault upon a police patrol in Wolkowysk county in which a German gendarme and a local policeman were murdered by bandits, and to restore public order in the Bialystok district, the following action was taken on July 23, 1943:

"1. The bandit infested village of Kniaziowodce (Grodno County) has been burned and its inhabitants shot.

"2. 100 persons who had been imprisoned as members or sympathizers of the Polish movements of resistance in the Bialystok district, have been shot, together with their families. Their property has been confiscated.

"The inhabitants of Kniaziowodce have maintained consistent contact with groups of bandits and have always given them assistance.

"Those of the inhabitants of Kniaziowodce who have been well-behaved, and who have asked German authorities to protect them against the bandits, have not been shot.

"The most severe punishment will be meted out to all who assist the bandits! By such action they invite disaster upon themselves and their families!

"Whoever brings information about the activities and hiding places, as well as the identity of the bandits, will be guaranteed full protection by the German authorities.

"Bialystok, July 23, 1943.
"Signed: Commander of the German Security Police
"Bialystok District."

Here is the proof of the Nazi brutality and treachery. It is a bold admission of the murder of more than one hundred Poles for the alleged taking of the life of one German invader.

The same February issue also tells a story of the heroism of the women of Poland who are active in the underground against the invaders. In addition to their work of resistance they are also faithful to their tasks as housewives and mothers of families especially where the fathers and children are engaged actively in the struggle for liberation.

Evidence of the deportation and use of Polish workers to the German Reich for forced labor is proven in the notice sent by the German Labor Office of Bialystok district to the workers slated for deportation whereby they are ordered to report at the office on a date at such a time "prepared to be transported to Germany for labor duty. If he fails to report at the time specified, his family will be arrested by the Gestapo or shot on the spot. His land, if he owns any, will be confiscated by the German authorities."

Here is the concrete evidence condemning the Germans out of their own documents. But the Poles have other evidence that will be adduced when the trial of the German war criminals is heard.

Charge of Light Brigade

This war is a strange blend of systems of warfare. It was thought that the horse was supplanted by armor and then the Cossack horsemen came on the scene and battled against modern armor with telling effect. Now the other day the newspapers carried a story of a modern "Charge of the Light Brigade" and it was a charge of the Royal Wiltshire Yeomanry (Tanks) across open space towards the Germans at El Alamein that rode straight through with all the dash and spirit of the Light Brigade at Balaclava and overran the German guns. This was the beginning of the great offensive across North Africa by the British Army which ended in the elimination of the Germans and Italians on that continent.

The Ration Book

The ration book is a very human document. It contains a whole lot more practical social security than is suggested by some political speeches. It provides actual food and drink. It is the constant companion of the person who holds the office of purchasing agent for the household. To be in a butcher shop, however, buying meat for a dinner which is supposed to be ready in a very short time and to discover that the ration book is elsewhere is to feel like a man coming home at three o'clock in the morning who suddenly discovers that his key is missing. Minor tragedy looms up when a housewife, on a shopping expedition, finds that her ration book has been lost.—Sarnia Canadian Observer.

Friend in Need

(London, AP)

Two British soldiers were returning to their camp after an evening at a pub during a recent air raid.

"Friend," called a voice from the darkness.

"Run along," replied one of the soldiers, "we're singing!"

"Friend," the voice from the darkness repeated.

There was something Teutonic about the voice. The soldiers approached and captured a bailed out German flyer.

Bigger Fruit and Vegetables

(British Ministry of Information)

In a laboratory outside London British scientists have discovered a way to double the size of fruit and vegetables, and of flowers, and to increase their quality and their ability to resist disease. The means they have used is the colchicine drug and the method is described as giving an "anaesthetic shock" to the seed. This doubles the number of life germs (or chromosomes) in each seed, which has the effect of making a bigger plant of finer quality.

LONG AFTER CONFUCIUS

("Confucius fished with a fishing rod, but would not use a net. While shooting he would not shoot a bird at rest."—Lin Yutang.)

Two thousand years ago, before the Christian age began,
Confucius said the moral code marked the superior man.
"He has a love," Confucius said, "beyond the love for gain.
There are some things he will not do his purpose to attain.

"He will not shoot at sitting birds nor fishing use a net.
To no advantage mean or cheap he'll stoop his aims to get:
However much he may desire, how great the prize may seem,
He'd rather never win at all than lose his self-esteem."

The wisest ancient shook his head to think that men would kill
A bird at rest upon a bough, since that required no skill.
What would he think of Japanese who want their victories cheap,
And to Pearl Harbor went at dawn to slaughter boys asleep?

When Night Comes Down

When night comes down upon a weary land
With peace and blessing in its kindly hand,
Hushed is the earth in her restful embrace
While stars illumine all the darkened space;
And from the windows of the peaceful homes
Bright beacons gleam for wanderers that roam.

When night comes down and all the lamps are lit
And round the hearth the light and shadows flit,
The cares that day infest are laid away,
And love and joy over the hearts hold sway:
Regardless of the world, its fret and frown,
The home our castle when the night comes down.

When night comes down and life's brief day is done,
And in the west sinks the effulgent sun,
Tho' darkness shroud the day of our brief life
Then comes a surcease from life's stress and strife:
Bright beams the beacon, tho' the darkness frown
When on our little life, the darkening night comes down.

They met within a country lane,
A young and foolish pair,
The girl in rural garb and plain,
The boy with bashful air—
But Cupid hovered o'er the twain
But who can blame these lovers true
When birds were mating near,
And Valentine, the good old saint
Had brought his message dear?
As down the years echoed the sound
"'Tis love that makes the world go round."

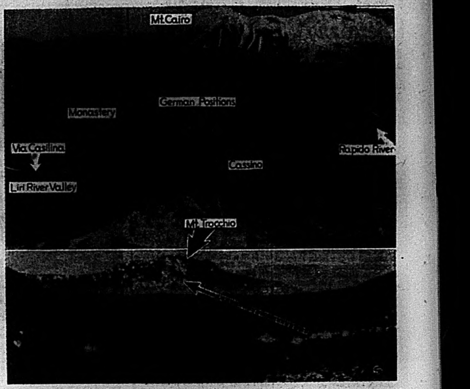
CASSINO, WHERE GAINS ARE COUNTED BY YARDS



Scene of the most dogged fighting in the Italian campaign, this aerial view of the Cassino battleground, with strategic points identified, looks peaceful—but just for the moment. The only action is a Nazi shell bursting among Allied gun positions. This shell probably was fired from Mt. Trocchio, which later was captured by the Allies. The explosions on the hills are exploding shells from 200 Allied cannon massed in the foreground, some of which are seen flashing. U. S. troops have occupied about one-fourth of Cassino and approach the crest of Mount Cassino, driving within 75 yards of the Benedictine monastry on its summit.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

To appreciate fully the comfort and advantages we enjoy today, we should compare our lot with that of the Canadian pioneers—folk of grit and vision whose hard work and wise planning laid the foundations of the civilization with which we are now blessed.

Prairie fires have an uncanny knack of jumping, like kangaroos, from one spot to another. This faculty made the blazes difficult to control and worried the early settler's of Canada's West half to death. Clumps of long grass called "bunch grass" set alight by the match of a careless trapper would be caught up in the wind and carried 50 and 60 feet at a leap. There they would cause more grass to burn fiercely, which in turn would be flung onwards. To extinguish the blazes the settlers used gunny sacks and worn-out brooms saturated with water. Royal Canadian Mounted Police were often called in to help subdue the raging flames. They brought along barrels of water in waggons as the settlers' supplies were usually low.

• •

This matter of hauling water in barrels rates more than a mere mention. It so happened that few settlements on the Western prairies had sources of water supply except wells, and these had to be coaxed. Water was delivered from house to house by water-cart, at a cost of 10 cents per barrel. If one had a garden and the grim determination to make it grow in spite of dry summers and hard winters, one splurged in buying water. But poverty-stricken pioneers had to ration themselves on the commodity, since they had to make every cent they earned do double-duty in purchasing the necessities of life.

• •

Just in case someone starts quizzing you about the game of "lacrosse" . . . "how is it played?" . . . "where did it originate?" and so on, keep this information up your sleeve. "Le jeu de le crosse," as the first anadian settlers called it, was thought up by the Indians whose name for it is "bag'gat'iway." The Redman went at it hot and heavy, using a bat about 4 feet long, curved and terminated in a sort of racquet with deerskin-string net. Two posts were planted on the ground a distance from each other, sometimes a mile apart. Each team had its post. The object of the game was to drive the ball through the opposing players' goal. The ball must not be touched by hand or foot but scooped up from the ground with the bent end of the lacrosse stick.

• •

The National Lacrosse Association of Canada was founded in 1867 and that year a Indian team visited Great Britain. Today the popularity of the game is not widespread, but where there are fans they are ardent ones.

• •

At the time that the early settlers were learning to play "lacrosse" with the Indians as teachers, the sending of letters was a slow and expensive operation. We of today have grown accustomed to low rates for postal service. So that it is with something like a shock that we pick up a bulletin of 1765 issued by the British Dominions in America and read that the rate for communications between any port within British America and London was one shilling and more. Letters by land to any chief post office in America required postage of 4d up. A post went once a fortnight in summer, every month in winter from Quebec to New York, through Montreal, Crown Point and Albany.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Food Allergy May Be Causing Tiredness, Weakness, Depression.

When an individual has always been bright and active and then becomes sleepy and tired most of the time, with no desire to spend his spare time in play or other activity, naturally something is wrong. And this something, in the majority of cases, is infection.

As the commonest source of infection is the mouth and nose, teeth, gums, tonsils, sinuses—the family physician and dentist should be consulted. In not less than seven of every ten of these "lay" individuals infection will be found in mouth, throat or nose.

Other points of infection are the gall bladder and the lower bowel or large intestine. Research workers have been able to show that poisons from other sources— teeth, gums, tonsils—remain in the large intestine for months.

There are, of course, many individuals who through worry or other emotional disturbance have been unable to sleep and have found it necessary to take quieting drugs. These individuals are often tired and depressed during the day.

That there is another cause for that continuous tiredness is pointed out by Dr. J. A. Turnbull in the American Journal of Digestive Diseases. He states that the patient who is exhausted, "tired in the morning", feels "poisoned through his whole system", depressed and weak is often a victim of food allergy. He should have skin tests to determine what foods he is sensitive to. When these foods are removed from his diet, he becomes brighter and stronger within a few days.

What are the symptoms of food allergy besides this tired depressed feeling?

In most cases there will be skin eruptions or digestive disturbances or head colds. In fact any one or all three may be present.

Among the common or everyday foods that cause allergy many of which would never be suspected, are cereals, eggs, milk, oranges, chocolate, tomatoes, shellfish and other fish, strawberries and pork. However, many other common foods can cause symptoms of allergy.

If, then, your physician and dentist can find no infection yet you are tired, sleepy, lazy and depressed, ask your physician about making some skin tests or keep a food diary and try to locate the offending foods yourself.

On Liquor Propaganda

Editor The Ontario Intelligencer:

The cartoon that recently appeared in The Ontario Intelligencer ridiculing prohibition and depicting certain evils due to it was surely propaganda of the liquor traffic. What is propaganda? It is the picturing or presenting of some questionable or untrue statement, so much and so often that at last some think it is true although it may be very far from the truth.

Some statements would lead us to believe the days of prohibition are responsible for 90 per cent. of the excessive liquor drinking so prevalent today and that bootlegging was caused by prohibition.

Twenty years have passed since we had prohibition and what is the state of things now? Never worse. During the last fifty years the country was never so "dry" as the period of prohibition and had it remained in force twenty years there would today be a generation of comparatively temperate people. Prohibition has been misrepresented and the slogan "Prohibition is a Failure" is propaganda more than fact. Let us beware of propaganda and study the facts to know the truth about prohibition.

Mrs. E. Farnsworth

AN EYE FOR AN EYE

The Mosiac law imposing the penalty of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth is known as "lex talionis," or "the law of retaliation."

In the Bible this law is first stated in Exodus 21:23-25, which says:

"And if any mischief follow, then thou shalt give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burning for burning, wound for wound, stripe for stripe."

The context shows that there were some exceptions to these drastic penalties.

Apparently this law was presumed only to Israelites and not to strangers until a test case on the subject was brought before and decided by Moses himself.

The case involved a fight between a man of Israel and the son of an Egyptian by an Israelitish woman named Shelomith. During the fight the half Egyptian blasphemed the name of the Lord and was cursed. The offender was brought before the great lawgiver in person and then put in ward "that the mind of the Lord might be shewed them."

What followed and the decision is told in Leviticus 24:13-22:

"And the Lord spake unto Moses saying, Bring forth him that hath cursed without the camp; and let all that heard him lay their hands upon his head, and let all the congregation stone him. And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel, saying, Whosoever curseth his God shall bear his sin. And he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, he shall surely be put to death, and all the congregation shall certainly stone him: as well the stranger, as he that is born in the land, when he blasphemeth the name of the Lord, shall be put to death. And he that killeth a beast shall make it good; beast for beast. And if a man cause a blemish in his neighbour; as he hath done, so shall it be done to him; breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth: as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again. And he that killeth a beast, he shall restore it: and he that killeth a man, he shall be put to death. Ye shall have one manner of law, as well for the stranger, as for one of your own country, for I am the Lord your God."

Kitchener Surveys Prospects For Post-War Work

Kitchener, Feb. 10 (CP)—Post War employment prospects show an increase of five per cent over 1939 and 21 per cent over 1943, on the basis of the first 10 reports submitted by business men in the Kitchener-Waterloo survey for Post War planning, it was announced Wednesday by S. H. Sutherland, manager of the business research department of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Early reports also indicated that 40 per cent of local firms, both large and small, have definite plans for expenditure on expansion of their plants in the "target" year.

As returns from business house began coming in, it was noted that employment in 1943 was down five per cent from that of 1939, reflecting the movement of men and women into the armed forces. Firms questioned showed an average of 11 men and one woman in uniform.

Seventy-one persons are making a canvass of the 773 firms and business house in Kitchener-Waterloo, George W. Sawin, chairman of the Employment Committee, said today. Of the survey generally he said: "This is private enterprise at work to avoid mass unemployment in Post War years."

Idea of the 100 per cent canvass of all business is to learn what both large and small businesses were doing before the war, what they are doing during war years and what is hoped to do in the Post-War period, Mr. Sawin explained.

"The head of every firm has the individual responsibility of trying to provide an opportunity for all his employees. The employee's responsibility, on the other hand, is to co-operate with the management so that both have a chance to earn a fair return for their contribution to produce goods and services," he said.

Questionnaire forms have been sent to 370 farmers in that portion of the Kitchener-Waterloo district which has been included in the survey area, it was said by Fred M. Snyder, chairman of the farm resources sub-committee.

As in the urban areas among householders, only a representative number of approximately 10 per cent is being canvassed in rural areas.

U. S. PRISON POPULATION BUYS BONDS DOES WAR WORK

Philadelphia, Feb. 10—(AP)—The United States' prison population has produced $100,000,000 worth of war material, bought $15,000,000 worth of war bonds and contributed hundreds of thousands of quarts of blood to the Red Cross, J. Stanley Sheppard, director of the Men's Prison Bureau of the Salvation Army and a chaplain at Sing Sing Prison, said last night.

Whitehall Notebook

By DOUG HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 10 —(CP)— Whitehall has plodded through another of its lesser problems, one that was ensnarled in 19th century British trade pursuits, the passage of the years and 20-odd chiefs in the Opobo area of Nigeria.

Colonial Secretary Col. Oliver Stanley brought the case before the Commons a second time when he announced that the government has accepted the claims of the Nigerian chiefs, then led by a native called Ja Ja, for about $50,000, compensation promised their fathers 50 years back under an agreement which deprived the natives of their guns and canoes.

It came up the first time when a Labor M.P. wanted to know what the government was going to do about it.

Ja Ja is dead and most of his chiefs are dead too. The land in which Ja Ja lived now is part of Nigeria which, as a colony, has its own government under the supervision of the Colonial Office. In 1892 the claims were a Foreign Office consideration.

Now that the government has accepted responsibility the first step will be to get parliament to vote the $50,000; the next will be to decide who gets the money when it is voted.

That, Col. Stanley said, is a subject which "the Nigerian government is to discuss with the chiefs." The difficulties inherent in that problem can be sensed in the facetious comment of one Whitehall underling, Of Ja Ja he dryly remarked:

"I strongly suspect he was a plygamist."

R. A. ELLIOTT

Native of Woodstock.

Born in Woodstock, Ontario, Mr. Elliott attended Queen's University from where he graduated with a Bachelor of Science degree. For the past 29 years he had been associated with the firm at Deloro, rising to the highest position at the plant. He had been chairman of the Deloro Safety Committee since its inception and had been reeve of his village for several years following a long term as councillor. In county council he was chairman of the Patriotic committee, and was also a member of the Post-War Planning committee.

Honored by his engineer associates across the province, Mr. Elliott last year was elected president of the Professional Engineers for the Province of Ontario. Last Autumn he accepted the position as chairman for Hastings County Victory Loan committee and headed the county campaign through to a successful conclusion.

Interested in Sports.

Vitally interested in sports and in providing recreational facilities for employees at his plant, Mr. Elliott in 1926 headed the Deloro "Smelters" Intermediate baseball team which won the provincial championship. He has acted as president of the C.O.B.L. and in 1931-32 served as president of the O.B.A. and in 1933 was made a life member. He was also a member of the Athletic Board of Control at Queen's University.

Politically he was a staunch Conservative and had acted both as secretary and president of the Hastings West Riding Association. He was a member of St. Andrew's United Church at Marmora, while fraternally he was a member of Woodstock A.F. & A.M., and of the Madoc Chapter R.A.M. He was also Past Presiding Preceptor of King Baldwin Preceptory at Belleville, and of Rameses Shrine, Toronto.

He is survived by his wife, the former Gladys Aikenhead of London, Ontario, one son, Robert, who has been in Africa with a mining company for the past three years, two daughters, Mary of the R.C.A.F., (W.D.), stationed at Vancouver, and Jean, at home. Mary had recently spent furlough at home, returning to her station only one week ago.

Service will be held at the family residence, Deloro, at 2.00 p.m. Friday, Feb. 11th., the cortege leaving immediately afterwards for Woodstock, Ont. There the body will rest at Meadow's Funeral Home, where funeral service will be held at 3.30 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 12. Interment will be in the Mausoleum, Woodstock.

Seek Legislation To Shore Up Honeycomb Of Old Mine Tunnels

Pittston, Pa., Feb. 10. (AP)—The earth that opened up and swallowed two-year-old Jule Ann Fulmer, gave up her body to weary rescue workers last night, and today the Coroner began an investigation to fix responsibility for her death.

Investigations also were started by Pennsylvania Mine Inspectors and the Pittston Mine Cave Commission. Mayor John R. Reilly said he hoped they would lead to legislation to shore up the honeycomb of abandoned mine tunnels that undermine the town.

A mine cave-in opened a fissure in the earth under Jule Ann's feet Tuesday and she fell in. Then an earth slide along the side of the hole buried her alive. Rescuers removed tons of dirt to recover the body. It was the first fatal cave-in in a series that began several years ago and caused damage to many homes and public buildings.

Huon Peninsula Campaign Nears End for Allies

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 1—(AP)— Australian troops pushing up the New Guinea northeast coast are expected to make contact soon with American troops only seven miles away, practically ending the Huon peninsula campaign which began five months ago.

An Australian officer at Allied headquarters today expressed expectation of contact of the two forces and commented "the Jap is thoroughly beaten."

Late reports placed United States troops which made an invasion landing at Saidor Jan. 2, at Old Yagomia, 15 miles below Saidor and only seven miles from the Aussies who have beaten their way along the coast 130 miles through jungle and bush in the past three months.

Union of the two forces may produce an Allied drive on the Japanese coastal base at Madang, about 60 miles along the coast northwest of Saidor.

But today, Olen Clements, associated Press war correspondent, reported there was evidence that the Japanese have abandoned Madang. American bombing crews sweeping low over the base saw indications the enemy has blown up buildings there not already destroyed by repeated Allied bombings.

Clements said Australians of another force which has been fighting toward Madang in the Ramu valley have found Japanese soldiers dead of starvation and disease along trails in the rugged Finnisterre mountains, indicating they had been unable to get supplies from the Madang base.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Mullings, Bethune, Sask., wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred, Belleville, Ont., to Russell James, son of Mrs. John F. Buck, Norwood, Ont., the marriage to take place quietly 17th February.

Bruce A. Sanford, R.C.N.V.R., London Division, has returned to his division after attending the funeral of his aunt, the late Mrs. L. Sanford.

The many friends of Mrs. A. Beauchamp Payne, 85 Victoria Ave. will regret to learn that she is seriously ill in the Belleville General Hospital.

On Wednesday afternoon a number of friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mrs. Bruce Jones, Cannifton Road, for a surprise party, welcoming her to her new home in the neighborhood. Mrs. Ed. Shortt read the address and Mrs. E. Lucas presented Mrs. Jones with a decorated basket of gifts, for which she expressed her appreciation and thanks. A delicious lunch brought the afternoon to a close. Before leaving they all chorused, "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Mrs. A. W. Edgar, 23 Boswell St., has returned home after attending her brother-in-law's funeral, the late Charles Patrick Edgar, in Bainsville, Ont., on Monday last.

Hospital Auxiliary Bridge and Euchre Is Big Success

The Nurses' Residence, decorated in the traditional red and white in honor of the approach of St. Valentine's Day, was the setting for the mixed evening bridge and euchre party sponsored by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary on Wednesday night. The affair proved a great success with highly gratifying results realized. A large number of people was there—even more than at the same party last year.

Receiving the guests, were Mrs. R. J. Abrams, representing the Women's Christian Association, of which she is president; Mrs. G. H. Stobie, president of the Hospital Auxiliary and Miss Ruth Thompson, director of nurses of the Belleville General Hospital. Mrs. W. C. Mikel, owing to illness, was unable to be present.

The spirit of St. Valentine was further carried out in the color scheme for the tables on which the supper was served by a number of the nurses.

In charge of the arrangements for the bridge was Mrs. J. Galloway, who is to be warmly commended for her unstinted time and effort towards making the evening the success that it was.

Prizes for bridge and euchre were very generously donated and were won by Mrs. Allan Hitchon, Mrs. John J. Hibbard, Mrs. E. Bateman and Mrs. Ralph Ketcheson for bridge and by Mrs. William Neil for euchre.

Senior Sodality Valentine Party Jolly Affair

The Senior Sodality girls of the Children of Mary of St. Michael's Church sponsored a jolly Valentine party on Wednesday night for the enjoyment of Grades VIII and IX of St. Michael's Academy in the auditorium of the school. Delicious refreshments of hot chocolate and doughnuts were served on the tea table, of which the outstanding keynotes in the color scheme were red and white.

Hostesses for the occasion were four members of the Senior Sodality and four mothers of children at this affair.

Music, which was supplied by a juke box, proved very entertaining and provided dance tunes for the young celebrants. The three spot prizes were won by Norma Flurey and John Briand, Mary Rush and John Bradden and Bernice Poff and John Bradden.

Seasonal Care of the Hands

Shirley O'Hara uses hand lotion every time she washes hands.

By HELEN FOLLETT

This is the time of year when plenty of hand care is necessary, especially if—like most of us—you have a bit of laundry work to do now and then. No matter how hard we work these days we want our hands to look ladylike. We want to preserve their youthful appearance despite a lot of drudgery to which they have not, in the past, been accustomed.

Continued neglect will make hands look old before their time. Complexions get the best part of the cosmetic feast, of course, but why not give the leavings to your hands? After the face creaming at night, have a five minute massage of hands, wrists and elbows.

Hand Massage.

Thumb the cream into the knuckles. Make a bracelet of fingers and thumbs, massage the other wrist, working up the forearm, treating the flesh of the elbow. Elbows never look any too good. We don't see them. They are forgotten, overlooked.

There is a certain beauty in capable hands but even they should be white, soft and smooth. Keep hand lotion in the kitchen, in every bath room. Use freely several times a day. Don't go out of doors without gloves.

Care of Cuticle.

One duty must not be neglected, and that is care of the cuticle that surrounds the fingernails. If one is doing heavy work, this growth is likely to thicken, cling to the nail; then hangnails form. They're maddening. Get a flock of them and your sweet disposition is likely to curdle.

After the creaming of the hands at bedtime, lift the cuticle with an orangewood stick. Make circles with the stick along the sides. Don't press the flesh back at the base; lift it gently.

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

Breath Deeply, for the Complexion's Sake.

There are two means of getting cheek roses; you can brush them on with the rouge compact or you can pick them out of the air. It's just a question as to whether or not you prefer the real thing to the synthetic product. Even the dumbest woman with eyes in her head can spot the difference, and when she sees lovely, natural coloring she gets a thrill because it is a rare sight these days.

Strange, too. Old timers insist that, in their young days, colorful complexions were common. Rouge was something that was used only on the stage. Living conditions were not as favorable to health as they are now. Daily bathing was considered an eccentricity. The balanced diet had not arrived, nor had vitamins been discovered. Women wore veils to protect their skins from sunlight, life's big energy promoter. The athletic girl would have been regarded queer, "not too nice." Croquet was about the limit.

Girls danced until late hours only on special occasions. Perhaps that's the secret. They got their beauty sleep. Few of them used cosmetics. If one had a jar of cold cream, it was hidden away so nobody would know.

Colorful complexions should be a common commodity. We have learned to eat wisely, bathe daily, exercise regularly, endeavor to keep to a health standard, we live in well ventilated houses.

The trouble is that women are shallow breathers. Men and children aren't. In the old days it was said that shallow breathing was due to the wearing of tightly laced corsets. It must be that the frail sex got the habit, handed it down to daughters and granddaughters.

Breathing exercises will not only improve the complexion, but they will develop the svelte figure. They help correct stooped shoulders, make for graceful carriage and a well rounded bust.

When air flows into the lung chambers, the head is balanced, the chest rises, the spine straightens, shoulders repose naturally and easily.

Do your deep breathing anywhere, any time. Stand erect, inhale through the nostrils, exhale through the lips. A full supply of oxygen chases out stagnant, residual air, cleanses the cells of respiratory secretions.

The Marry-Go-Round

Black Out the Black Market!

Are you an "Inflationary Mary?" The following is the second in a series by Berton Braley, showing Mary's dangerous philosophy.

INFLATIONARY MARY

Inflationary Mary spills
This silly kind of chatter
"My little teeny-weenie bills
And spendings do not matter.

"And if I cheat a little bit
On rationing and ceilings
The Nation's Welfare isn't hit
By my small lawless dealings!"

Inflationary Mary's wrong
For she'd be much to blame
If people in a mighty throng
Should say and do the same.

Small spendings, in the aggregate
Reach sums extraordinary,
So, let's not try to imitate
Inflationary Mary.

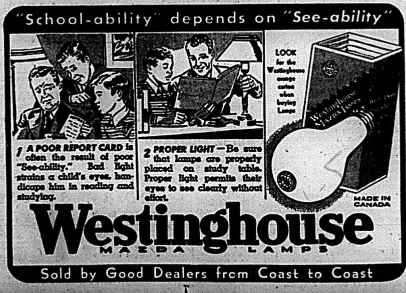
—Berton Braley.

It's always the little things we scarcely notice which add up to the greatest tragedies; the carelessly thrown cigarette which starts the forest fire; the idle word dropped to the enemy that leads to the sinking of a troop ship; and now the loosely spent dollar that threatens to engulf us in inflation. Be a tightwad—and black out the Black Market!

Imagination is not dead. Many a young thing thinks of herself as a glamour girl and many a man thinks of himself as a dangerous "wolf," who would otherwise be nice, likeable, attractive people.

Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast; but when a girl asks her boy friend to keep quiet so that she can listen to Sinatra on the radio it only makes the breast more savage.

Some men seem to think that they have not done their social duty by a girl unless they make a little love to her now and then. They can't understand that a fluctuating love is far harder for any girl to endure than a permanent indifference.



"School-ability" depends on "See-ability"
1 A POOR REPORT CARD is often the result of poor "See-ability." Bad light strains a child's eyes, handicaps him in reading and studying.
2 PROPER LIGHT—Be sure that lamps are properly placed on study table. Proper light permits their eyes to see clearly without effort.

Women's Activities

MELVILLE LADIES' AID

A very pleasant time was spent on Thursday afternoon last when Mrs. Ernest Carley and Miss Dorothy opened their home for the February meeting of the Ladies' Aid. Two beautiful quilts that had been quilted at the home of Mrs. Ross Cruickshank were displayed and after some time spent in preparing sewing, the meeting was opened. Mrs. Tiller, in charge of the devotional period read an inspiring sermon from The Challenger, closing with prayer. Mrs. A. Cruickshank gave the treasurer's report. An interesting program followed, consisting of readings by Mrs. A. Carley, Mrs. J. Root and Mrs. A. Cruickshank and a soap contest presented by Mrs. Tiller. It being Mrs. Root's birthday, an address of congratulations was read by Mrs. Arnold Cruickshank. Mrs. Merritt Huyck and Mrs. Ed. Holmes were welcome visitors.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The February meeting of the Tabernacle W.M.S. was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with an attendance of eighteen. The president, Mrs. Froats, presided. After a short worship service, reports were given by the different secretaries. A short memorial service for the late Mrs. Caverley, who was an active member of the society, was then conducted. The study part of the program was directed by Mrs. Froats. The theme for the day was "Our Mission Work in Canada." A very interesting paper on "Boarding Schools and Homes" was given by Miss Myrtle Johns. Mrs. Archibald gave an interesting talk on "Community Missions East." Mrs. Fisher gave a report of the medical missionary work and Mrs. Jarrell reported for the Indian work.

ROSLIN A. G. TO I.O.D.E.

Roslin—The 8th line Auxiliary Group to the I.O.D.E. held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. W. Alford on Thursday afternoon last with five members present. One quilt was tied in the afternoon. The president called the meeting to order. Mrs. Robt. Copeland was appointed secretary. The treasurer gave her report. Collection of 53 cents was taken. A nice lot of articles was handed in for the basket of groceries. The president spoke of ways to help with the new corvette "Belleville" and it was decided to have a euchre and dance, the proceeds of which to go to this fund. Four heavy quilts and a number of books were taken in. Mrs. Fred Coulter offered her home for the next quilting and meeting. A lunch was served and a vote of thanks given to Mr. Alford as Mrs. Alford was called away to nurse a friend.

Polka Dotted Cotton in Fiesta Mood

By VERA WINSTON

Mexican colors and designs are very much a part of the cotton parade now being lined up for late spring and summer wear. It is very evident in this delightful dance frock with a white cottin blouse accented by a black and red polka dotted ruffle. An insert of the same forms the waistband which ties in back with sash ends. The skirt is of red and white polka dotted cotton, with fullness accented by a hem flounce.

Ration Coupon Calendar

FEBRUARY 10-16

SUGAR: Coupons 14-26 (inclusive) are now valid and will remain so until declared invalid. "D" coupons may also be converted into sugar coupons at one-half pound per coupon on application to local Ration Boards.

CANNING SUGAR: Spare "F" coupons 1-10 (inclusive) in the current ration book will be valid for the purchase of canning sugar at one pound per coupon on dates to be announced.

PRESERVES: Coupons D1-D13 (inclusive) are now valid at increased coupon values. They remain valid until declared invalid.

BUTTER: Coupons 46-49 (inclusive) are now valid and will expire February 29. Coupons 50 and 51 will fall due February 17.

MEAT: Coupons 35-38 (inclusive) are now valid and will expire February 29. Coupons (pair) 39 will fall due February 17.

TEA OR COFFEE: Coupons 14-29 (inclusive) are now valid and will remain so until declared invalid. Coupons E1 and E2 fall due February 17.

CANNED SALMON: Valid meat coupons may now be used for the purchase of canned salmon at one coupon per one-quarter pound of canned salmon.

EVAPORATED MILK: Applications for special "G" coupons to buy evaporated milk for infant feeding or medical cases may be made to local Ration Boards. Medical certificates are required in support of all applications for those aged two years or more. They are not needed to renew sheets of "G" coupons at the end of three months from the date of issue.

Spare E Coupons Seen to be Valid

Beginning Thursday, February 17 spare E coupons will start to become valid for the purchase of tea or coffee in continuance of the regular tea or coffee coupons which have become exhausted but which still possess validity. E coupons 1 to 6 will be used for this purpose until the No. 4 ration books are distributed and coupons E1 and E2 will thus fall due February 17. It is emphasized that E coupons in the ration books of children under the age of 12 when those books were issued cannot be legally cashed for tea or coffee.

Something new in the coat field is the tunic-length fitted topper, so nice with slim skirts. A new model is of wood brown doeskin covert with a deep brown velvet collar. Two button closing at the fitted waist, and raglan sleeves.

Fashion Flashes

The accent is on the pretty hat for spring. Black lacy straw braid is used for a side-tilted, tiny postilion trimmed at the crown and under one brim with huge pink and chartreuse roses.

More than likely your new spring suit will likely have a cardigan type jacket. The collarless neckline is a feature of a smart suit in bright red gabardine with notched treatment at the shoulders and single-link closing in red plastic at the waist. Straight skirt has box-pleats released at a low point.

Just a bit of glitter finds itself on many new spring prints. White crepe with an all-over shoelace design in ribbony black uses stud buttons and cuff links of button-backed clusters of red sequins.

It's more than likely that you'll be meeting the basic dress quite often this spring. The nicest version we have seen so far is in black silk crepe, the bodice made with a deep V collarless neckline and brief sleeves, the scant skirt drawn into bow-tied drapery at one side.

Diet and Skin Diseases

It is reasonable to expect that a properly balanced diet is essential to a healthy skin. In certain skin diseases, changes in the diet are often recommended, such as lowering the amount of fat or sugar taken. Vitamins, too, have been recommended under certain conditions. Yet, diet is just one of many factors involved in skin troubles.

Many persons who get a skin rash think first of all that it comes from something they have eaten. Often, people who have itching eruption blame it on acid foods. Actually, most of the foods which they think cause the trouble are not acid-forming at all but, rather, produce an alkaline-ash in the body. This refers particularly to fruits and vegetables.

Various diets have been employed in a number of skin diseases but, in general, the results are disappointing. This happens because the skin eruptions are not due to faulty diet, but rather, in many cases, to contact with irritating substances. Nevertheless, proper diet may be helpful in some skin diseases—not only by directly affecting the rash but also by building up the patient's general nutrition so that the body has more of an opportunity to overcome the disease.

There is a skin disorder which is produced by tuberculosis. A diet rich in vitamins, but extremely limited in salt—known as the Gerson diet—helps to bring good results in this condition.

In so far as acne is concerned, some physicians feel that diet may help overcome the trouble in certain cases. Others do not believe diet will affect the disease in any way.

Doctor Robert N. Buchanan and his co-workers, of Tennessee, think that limiting fat in the diet may help bring improvement in some acne patients. Other physicians have recommended a diet containing no excess vitamin A. They base this idea on the fact that they have not observed acne in persons whose diet is deficient in this vitamin. However, it would not seem that this is a very good form of treatment, since limitation of vitamin A in the diet may lead to other disturbances as a result of lowering the resistance to infections.

A low fat diet has also been employed for a condition called seborrhea dermatitis, which affects the scalp, armpits and groin. In this condition there is a greasy, scaly eruption.

Another skin disease which has been treated with diet is psoriasis, in which scaly patches form on various parts of the body. However, the use of low fat diets, as well as diets limiting protein, has not seemed to affect this condition to any great extent. It is thought that a diet rich in vitamin B-complex may help in some cases.

Urticaria, or hives, will sometimes develop because a person is sensitive to a particular food. If this food is avoided, the rash will tend to clear up. Limited diets have also been recommended for babies suffering from eczema, a condition which is thought to be due to sensitivity to certain foods. However, Doctor Buchanan feels that it is important, in the case of infants, to keep the diet rich in vitamins and minerals, and to treat the rash locally with various ointments and lotions.

Lack of niacin, a part of the vitamin B-complex, will produce pellagra, with skin eruptions. Giving niacin to a patient with this condition will help overcome the rash.

Thus, it is seen that in certain skin diseases diet may be important. In other cases specific diets do not seem to have much effect.

Keep Neck Young and Lovely

By HELEN FOLLETT

If you have a slender neck, lady, don't put too much faith in it. In its bland youth, it is lovely. It has grace and beauty, but it ages before the short, plump neck which has more substance.

We would suggest to those of our good looks students whose necks are thin that they build up a strong musculature there. If you don't, you may regret it when you are getting toward your fortieth birthday. We don't expect the twenty year olds to pay any attention to this warning but the thirties had better open their eyes to stern facts, take out insurance against the ravages of time. The old gent with the scythe and the long white whiskers uses thin necks as canvases for unlovely patterns—necklace lines and fiddle strings. And don't forget that prevention of beauty ills is easier than cure.

Here is a simple exercise that will strengthen the neck muscles. Stretch the neck, lift the chin, turn the head from side to side with a strong muscle pull. Take same position; lift and lower the chin.

Local treatment with a heavy emollient is helpful to keep the neck in form. Do upward strokes with flattened fingers, from collar bones to chin, from chin to ear lobes.

Mild Bleach.

Oily applications will keep the skin white and smooth. With the friction of coat collars and scarves, necks don't get along so well in the winter season. If you find that your face and neck have got a color divorce, the neck being several shades darker, sponge the skin surface with a lotion made by combining equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide. This is a mild bleach, won't cause roughness. Use it every other night. Between nights, do your exercises and apply a cream.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Thanks to a Friendly Doctor.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you help us, please? For some time we have had a great deal of sickness in our home, and our family doctor has been wonderful to us, in his care, in his advice, and in his friendliness. For his help we can't get him to take any more money than his usual fees. We would like to do something in return for his great kindness to us. Would you please give us some suggestions?

D. N.

I am sure that this skilful and kind doctor would welcome probably more than you may realize, a letter of appreciation from you, worded as warm-heartedly as your letter to me shows you can very well do. But if you think this won't be enough, you might give him a present for his office or waiting room or car. For example a subscription to a magazine you know he hasn't but would probably enjoy having. Or a pair of book-ends; or a clock; or initialled, generous-sized, glass ash tray; or a stamp-portfolio (divisions for 1-2-3-cent stamps, special delivery, air-mail); or a supply of memorandum or calendar pads with leather container stamped with his name and address; or a box of match-books stamped with his name. Or a pocket combination pencil-and-magnifier. Or, for his car, a flash-light, or a St. Christopher medal for his car-key chain. Or the always-welcome pen-and-pencil set stamped with his name, or name and address. Or perhaps a pair of warm driving gloves."

Announcing a Service Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My fiance is in the Navy, and we are to be married about the fifteenth of next month. I will not of course be able to set our wedding date until he lets me know when he knows about his leave. (He thinks now he will know about two weeks before he arrives here.) We are going to be married in church, but are not going to have a reception. My mother is dead, but I have several aunts and uncles whom I want to have come to the church ceremony. I wish you would please suggest how I should write them asking them to come to the ceremony and at the same time telling them that there is to be no reception.

W.J.D.

I suggest that now, while you are waiting for the news of your fiance's leave, you write to your aunts and uncles, telling them of your plans "to date"; telling them how very eager you are to have them with you at your marriage in church; explaining that you are not to have a reception but that you and your fiance are looking forward to greeting them, after the ceremony, in the vestibule of the church. Tell them what you think will be the approximate date of your marriage, and then say that when you know the exact date, you will either send them a special delivery letter, or telephone or telegraph them. These letters will get them informed, so they can make tentative plans about coming, and then all you need do is inform them about the date.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mother's Life is Wrecked

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Twenty-five years ago I was married and went in with my parents to live. My brother had been killed a short time before in World War No. 1 and my other brothers and sisters were all married, so I thought it my duty to stay with my lonely parents. That was my first mistake. Every young married couple should be in a home of their own, without outside influence, to give them time to adjust themselves to one another.

When I look back to those first five years of my marriage, I am truly ashamed. My poor husband hadn't even a soul to call his own. He never did or said anything without being criticized from all sides. We had one daughter, but she didn't mean much to him as he never was allowed to play with her. Mother knew best about children and that was that.

My husband was a good provider and turned in every cent of his money to me and I in turn helped my parents pay off their mortgage. In five years we had it all paid off and soon after that my husband and I separated. To outsiders it must have seemed we got rid of him as soon as our place was clear, however in all fairness to my parents, this fact never entered the picture.

I went back to work and my parents took care of my daughter. Everything went along fine until my mother died, my father remarried and then I was without a home. However, I was too proud to go back with my husband or take any more money from him than I formerly had to support my child.

I worked hard for ten years when finally I met a man much older than myself, but who loved me and who took quite an interest in my daughter, and we were married.

Our home was a happy one at first, but my daughter was as head-strong as I had been and resented any restrictions from her step-father, and finally when she was eighteen she ran away and married a man of a different faith. However, he was a nice young man and they both were energetic and they soon had a nicely furnished home.

To help along financially, my daughter kept a few boarders and then their trouble began. To make a long story short, she ran off with another man and left her only child behind. Her husband came to see if I could talk with her, and I tried. Here is the sad part. She told me to clean my own house before starting on hers. Just because I had made my second marriage respectable through a divorce was no reason why her living with another man was any worse, seeing that her husband's faith did not grant divorces.

She has two children by this man and now he is drafted in the army. She gets no allowance and as you might expect, very little help from the father of her children. Still she is my child and I love her. However, I cannot expect my present husband to feel very kindly toward her. All this is hell upon earth for me, but I feel it is my just reward for being so selfish all my life.

To sum it all up, young women, when you marry, live in a home of your own and without any outside influence whatsoever. Yes, you may have your little differences, but they are much easier settled without the third party.

I hope I haven't taken too much space in your paper, but I do hope through this story I can save another home and another mother the sorrow that shall be mine for the rest of my life.

USED FOR CONTAINERS

One hundred pounds of old newspapers can be processed into 200 containers for blood plasma.

KEEP YOUR FEET WARM

Keeping your feet warm helps avoid more colds and kidney troubles than almost any other safeguard. If you are anaemic or have poor circulation, cold feet will trouble you regularly in cold weather; and many people suffer from cold feet because of tight shoes, shoes with thin soles or drafts about their feet while working during the winter.

It is unwise to go to bed with cold feet. Authorities often recommend mustard foot baths made with pure mustard and moderately hot water to provide foot warmth. In preparing mustard foot baths, mix a tablespoonful of pure mustard to a paste with cold water and add it to the bath water.

BABY'S HOT LITTLE HEAD IS A DANGER SIGNAL

WHEN your Baby's head feels hot to your hand you must do something. And do it quickly. Read what Mrs. B—— of Enterprise does and what results she gets: "My baby's cheeks and hands were so hot I was frightened. I gave him a Baby's Own Tablet at noon and by after supper he was all better."

And Mrs. Francis Carroll, of Midland, has this to say: "My little girl was so feverish I was really alarmed. Then I thought of Baby's Own Tablets, so I gave her three every two hours and by night she was up and around."

Baby's Own Tablets are sweet-tasting, easy to take—and may be quickly crushed to a powder if desired. Analyst's certificate on every box. Equally good for teething fevers, diarrhoea, upset stomach, colds and other minor ailments of baby. Get a box today. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. "You have a vital stake in everything that Life Insurance stands for"

—a message to policyholders

I CAN SAY very truthfully that there never has been a time when the leaders of finance and business were more conscious of their responsibility to the general public as well as to their employees, than they are at the present time. The attitude of management today is one of enquiry and research into ways and means of reducing costs, giving better service and improving employer-employee relations. I am satisfied that leaders in industry command the respect and confidence of the public as never before.

The life insurance business can point with pride to a record of achievement that is commensurate only with its opportunity for service. The fact that our Canadian life insurance companies have weathered the financial gales incident to war and depression and that policyholders' claims have been met in full, and that the companies have gained in strength and size as well as in responsibility, reflects both sound management and continuing confidence on the part of the public.

Objection has been raised to our competitive system, particularly as it has to do with the use of agents. It is claimed that if we were not to employ agents we could provide cheaper insurance to the public. That has definitely not been proven. The life insurance representative furnishes a useful public service. It is probably well within the mark to say that perhaps not more than 10% of the business that is now in force would exist if active solicitation for business had not been resorted to. Furthermore, the agents have furnished many ancillary services that have been of the greatest benefit to the public. The modern life insurance agent or representative is much more than a salesman. He is a trained and skilful counsellor and sound professional adviser.

I wish briefly to allude to two other points of criticism that have been lodged against the life companies. One has to do with interlocking directorates, and the other has to do with the general policy underlying companies' investments. I confess that I am surprised sometimes that we are able to get men of such high standing and sound business judgment to give their time and advice and accept their share of the responsibility of management for the fees that are paid. I do not deny that many of our Directors are associated in some capacity or other with other institutions, but that is merely another way of saying that the men who are most desirable are the men who are most sought. In my own experience I know of no Director who has sought any favour for himself or any other institution with which he is connected, or who is inspired by any motive except that of promoting the best interest of the North American Life.

The investment policy of our life companies is necessarily controlled by the terms of the Dominion Insurance Act. Parliament, very rightly we believe, in prescribing the type of investments we can make strongly stresses the trustee nature of our business. The underlying thought in all investment policy is that within the limitations of the Insurance Act itself it should be the aim to secure the largest return for our policyholders compatible with security and safety. We believe that the investments of the life companies can stand the closest scrutiny.

* * *

In respect to government regulation and supervision, no business has been or could be subject to more careful or impartial scrutiny than the life business in Canada. The Department of Insurance at Ottawa is manned by a staff of highly trained, experienced officials. No department has been freer of political bias. These men have leaned backwards in their independence, and have been utterly fearless in the conscientious performance of their duties. The Insurance Act, though passed by Parliament and sponsored by the Minister of Finance, in effect is largely the creation of these highly trained, professional advisers of the Minister, whose concern is the welfare of the policyholders and the preservation of the good name of the business. Nor should we fail to mention the additional supervision provided by the various provincial and foreign Departments of Insurance, under whose jurisdiction our companies happen to come. Our insurance laws, both federal and provincial, are as modern as skill, experience and impartial judgment can create in the interests of the public.

* * *

Along with thousands of other policyholders in this and other companies, you have a vital stake in everything that life insurance stands for. Those who are at present advocating the nationalization of the life companies are not, we believe, primarily concerned with whether the companies are well or poorly conducted. If they are to succeed in socializing industry, and in expropriating all means of production, they must first have access to the savings of the people—your bank deposits, your equity in your life insurance and other savings. The fact that you are an owner of a life insurance policy is proof that you have saved and have planned, and that you have exercised your God-given privilege to safeguard your savings according to your best judgment. Are you willing to jeopardize what you now have for a promissory note in the fantastic belief that the maker of the note is better able to manage your affairs than you are yourself, or that his professed altruism can take the place of your enlightened self interest?

D. E. Kilgour
President and General Manager.

Excerpts from the address given at the 63rd Annual Meeting.

FEATURES FROM THE SIXTY-THIRD ANNUAL REPORT

"So far as the Company is concerned there have been guiding principles that have contributed greatly to our progress and success. Our affairs have been managed at a moderate rate of expense with a definite trend towards reduction in recent years. Constant effort has been made to keep our plans of insurance and annuity contracts up to date with the result that our field force is in a position to offer the best that ingenuity and experience can devise for the ever increasing and complex needs of the insuring public. The results of the year are a clear indication of the increasing confidence placed by the public in the insurance business, and in a special sense reflect the high opinion that our own Company has so justly earned."

Lord Cranborne Justifies Bombing Of German Cities and Answers Criticism by Archbishop and Bishop

London, Feb. 9—(CP)—The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishop of Chichester criticized Allied bombings of German cities today in the House of Lords.

"Recent attacks upon cities like Hamburg, Frankfurt and Berlin seem to me to go a long way beyond what hitherto has been declared the policy of the government and the bomber command," the Archbishop of Canterbury said.

"The policy of obliteration is openly acknowledged," the Bishop of Chichester asserted. "That is not a justifiable act of war."

The Archbishop, head of the Church of England, also criticized a tendency "to exult and gloat" over the destruction of German cities and towns "among some of our people."

Replying as leader in the Upper House, Lord Cranborne said the R. A. F. never had indulged in pure terror raids.

Lord Cranborne said 80 per cent of the German fighter planes now were tied down to combat Allied attacks.

"That has greatly facilitiated the efforts of our heroic Russian Allies to liberate their own country from the Nazi yoke," he said.

He said almost the entire Krupp armament works covering two square miles had been destroyed at Essen. Attacks last summer on Hamburg cost the Germans 400,000,000 man hours, he added.

"It is to me full justification for the present bomber campaign," he said. "I cannot give the Bishop of Chichester any hope that we shall abate our bombing policy. On the contrary, we shall continue it in increasing power and with more crushing effect until final victory is secured."

U. S. Carrier Proves Nazi Claim False, Sinks 6 Nazi Ships

Washington, Feb. 10 (AP)—The U.S.S. Ranger, in answer to fictitious Axis claims she had been sunk by a Nazi submarine, made a daring raid into enemy dominated waters off Norway to account for destruction of more than 40,000 tons of German shipping, the navy disclosed.

The navy told about the raid in the first report of war activities of the aircraft carrier.

The strike into Norway's waters, the navy said, was carried out last October, six months after Hitler had announced that the Ranger had been sunk and had decorated Lieut. Otta Von Bulow, the submarine commander credited with the feat.

Planes from the carrier destroyed at least six enemy vessels, including four merchantmen, a tanker and an oil barge; damaged other shipping and shot down two Axis planes in the raid.

She was with a British task force at the time operating well within range of German land-based bombers. The raid cost three Ranger planes.

"Spend, Sucker, Spend"

A reprint from the Waterville Times, Waterville, New York

This article was written by Ralph de Castro for the Savings Banks of New York, and first appeared in the Waterville Times, Waterville, New York. Because the problem it deals with is common to both Canada and the United States, and because it is so effectively dealt with in the article, we feel it is a privilege to give this message the widest possible circulation.

The last war . . . remember?

Silk shirts!

Pink ones, green ones, blue ones with white stripes—millions of them.

And silk stockings for the women—on legs that had never felt anything but cotton before.

Wrist watches . . . rings . . . bracelets . . . hand-tailored suits . . . ten-dollar felt hats . . . better, larger, sweller apartments.

Then it happened.

1918 and the Armistice. The war boom petered out. In factory after factory the wheels turned slower—slower—then stopped.

The cuffs on the silk shirts were frayed, and the colors faded . . . and the silk stockings were gone, and the rings and the watches were in pawn shops . . . and people moved back where they'd come from. But . . .

"Don't let it get you down, Bud! You can't hold this country back. Why, with our natural resources . . ."

So we started on the second lap, on the same circular track.

1923-29. Prosperity. Nothing ever like it before in the world.

Stocks—up 50 points in a week—thousands, millions—billions of dollars of profits—on paper.

Bootleggers . . . parties . . . automobiles . . . more silk shirts . . . new suits . . . radios, refrigerators, real estate, furniture, diamond rings, boats, shoes, hats . . .

Then—1929 and Crash again!

"Sorry, Mr. Jones . . . more margin, or we'll have to sell you out . . . Dear Mr. Jones . . . unless you send us a check to cover two unpaid installments on your furniture . . . Dear Sir . . . in the hands of our attorneys unless . . . mortgages unpaid . . . worry . . . worry . . . sorry, Jones, better look around for a new job . . . no help wanted . . ."

Remember?

Bread lines . . . "brother, can you spare a dime?" . . . stocks going down—down—business failures . . . suicides . . . Relief . . .

How come? How did we get that way—again? Why did it happen here, when it couldn't happen here?

Well, let's look back—let's see how it did happen.

Bonds weren't good enough for us. Savings banks weren't exciting as brokers' offices.

We were trying to compress our lives—to squeeze the juice of three score years and ten into a decade. We wanted for next to nothing the things our fathers had worked and sweated and saved for.

My wife's clothes had to be better, smarter—more expensive than your wife's—and her jewelry, too.

You spent a thousand dollars for your car? So what? I'm spending thirteen hundred for mine. (On time).

And say—looka my new radio! Twenty-two tubes, three loud speakers, record changer, home recorder and three short-wave bands!

The old one? Oh, I traded it in when I bought the new one—and the new refrigerator, and the dining-room furniture—slick, eh?—"modern," they call it.

How much? What's the difference?—Twenty-four payments of eighty dollars instead of sixty-five! I'll never miss it . . .

Hold on a minute, brother . . .

Did we "miss it" in the early "thirties?" Did we "miss it" when men walked the streets—camped out—lived in huts and shacks and lean-tos? Did we "miss it" while brave women scrubbed and scoured and patched and mended until their finger tips were raw, their hands rough—and their hearts dull with the pain of abandoned hopes?

Hold on once more . . .

This time chances are we won't bounce back again! Many people now realize what a close shave it was the last time . . . how desperately near we were to chaos and national ruin.

MUST we come down with another crash? MUST we ignore, not one, nor two, nor three—but the dozens of lessons taught us by history? MUST we head straight along the road-to-ruin we took last time?

It's what's beginning to happen, right here—now—in our country.

People are making more money than they ever did before and spending it. Spending it faster than they ever did before.

The old "short-life-but-a-merry-one" story is back with us. But how merry IS it?

Win, lose, or draw, the war will end some day. No war has lasted forever.

Then what?

The same as the last time? And the time before that?

Well it shouldn't be, but it will be even worse—unless we use our common sense now!

Don't fool yourself! The time's going to come when you'll need those dollars you're throwing around now.

If hard times catch up with you, it isn't that night-club proprietor who's going to return the money you spent in his place—no, not any part of it!

And all the unnecessary gimmicks and gadgets you think you need now won't be worth a dime on the dollar then.

And when your pockets are empty it won't be because you'll be taking money out of them—but because no money will be going into them.

How about those bright kids of yours? Will they have to work instead of going to high school or college?

And those beautiful rings you bought your wife? Supposing you lose your job . . . how long can you last before pawning those baubles, for a fraction of what they cost you?

So look . . .

When you want to spend money or buy something new, just imagine you were spending your next-to-the-last dollar.

Don't ask how happy you'd be with what you get for your money—but whether you'd be miserable without it.

That's the only test. Otherwise you're just kidding yourself. Lighting matches to ten dollar bills you're going to need—sure some day.

What? Oh, you're making more money? Then save more—don't spend more!

Because the money we all save now will play a tremendous part in the after-war economy of our country. The money we save now will be a cushion of buying power—those sorely-needed dollars to "start things up again" in our civilian economy. The dollars you waste now may be the dollars you'll need then—yes, perhaps even for such matter-of-fact things as bread and milk and meat.

Why do you suppose your government urges you to save? It's perfectly simple—to ward off disaster. To make sure that the crash that "couldn't happen here" doesn't happen again.

Remember, we're at war! Dollars are needed just as much as men—to back up those men—to give your boy, your brother, or your pal the stuff he needs to beat the Axis, and come back alive.

Money wasted on foolish luxuries won't do this. Once spent, it's gone, and neither you nor the boys fighting for you are better off for the spending.

But the dollars you save in War Bonds, Certificates or your savings account, will help buy the guns, the tanks, the ships and the planes we must have to survive and win.

And those savings will guarantee your future—the financial future of you, your family, and the boys who are fighting for us all.

Make a plan and stick to it. Guarantee your own future. So many dollars every payday into War Savings Certificates and into your savings account.

Then follow your plan. Protect your family. Build up reserves. Create a stock of money and make it grow. Your money. Your Bonds. Your protection.

And the bigger the stock of savings you create, the better off you'll be—to buy the good things you will want when the war is over—that new car, that refrigerator and radio you can't get now—things that make our life the best in the world.

So, when you save wisely, you're helping your country and yourself at the same time.

Honest, now . . .

Could you ask for anything better?

Stirling-Marmora Combines Snatch Second Place in Group By Defeating Belleville Kids

Northerners Skated Too Fast and Outchecked Locals at All Stages

SCORE IS 6-4

Showing too much speed and class all along the line the Stirling-Marmora "Combines" snatched second place in the district junior O. H. A. standing by beating the Belleville juniors 6 to 4 before 700 fans at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. The final standing of the group reads:-

| | W. | T. | L. | Pts. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Trenton .... | 3 | 0 | 1 | 6 |
| Stirling .... | 1 | 1 | 2 | 3 |
| Belleville .... | 1 | 1 | 2 | 3 |

By virtue of a better season's scoring average the Combines were awarded second place, although they finished a tie in the group standing. The Combines scored 18 goals and had 20 scored against them in four games, while the local juniors rang the bell 14 times, but had 18 scored against them. The Combines meet Tweed in the group semi-finals, while Belleville meets up with Trenton in a similar series, that opens in Trenton Friday night.

Last night the Combines raced through to two early goals and were never headed, leading 2-1 and 5-2 by periods as they out-scored Toots Holway's homesters in every stage of the game.

Doug Bastedo with three goals and an assist paced Coach Ralph Neal's winners, while line-mate Doug Patterson rang the bell twice and helped on two others. Belleville's scoring was headed by Harry Wardaugh with two, Bernie Meagher and Don Barrett.

Moment of Silence Observed

Prior to the game a moment of silence was observed in respect to the late R. A. Elliott, of Deloro, who died suddenly early last evening. Mr. Elliott was associated with the Combines and a respected citizen of Hastings County.

Doug Bastedo was uncovered, when he opened the scoring for the Combines early in the first period and Patterson made it two when he back-handed one that Fitzpatrick fanned on. Belleville had but one shot on McInroy, in the Combines' net, in the first seven minutes of play. Later Bernie Meagher stepped around Utman and McIntosh with Day's pass out to score Belleville's first tally. Throughout the entire game the locals were guilty of some inexcusable blind passing. In the middle session the Combines registered three successive goals before Belleville could get untracked and in the last period the visitors made sure of things by out-scoring the locals two to one.

The smart passing plays of Coach Neal's Combines stood out, as the visitors skated much too fast for Belleville last night, going both ways and their checking was most effective. McInroy turned in a stellar game between the visitors' goal-posts to help the winners' cause. Billie Holway strained his knee and was forced out of the game in the second period.

The line ups:-

Belleville, goal, Fitzpatrick, defence, Bush and Rosetti, centre, Moher, wings, D. Meagher and Barrett, subs, Holway, Day, Greatrix, Semark and H. Wardaugh.

"Combines", goal, McInroy, defence, Utman and McIntosh, centre, B. Bastedo, wings, D. Bastedo and Patterson, subs, Cousins, Trumble, Pyear, Goodchild and Whitehead.

ST. KITTS WINS IN OVERTIME

By the Canadian Press

For the second time this week, Toronto Navy forced a Senior O. H. A. fixture into overtime last night but could not win out against the Saints at St. Catharines as on the previous occasion at Hamilton. The 6-4 verdict pushed the St. Catharines' crew farther out in front in the three-team race, five points to the good against Majors.

The Saints held a 2-1 advantage in the initial frame; no score flavored the second stanza but the Gobs rallied to tie it up 3-all before full time. Four of the game's 10 goals were notched in the extra session, St. Catharines getting three of them. The Majors now take on the Saints at Hamilton Friday night and the over-worked sailors can enjoy a respite until Monday.

The scoring pathfinder for the winners was Red Reynolds who stood out with three counters, the balance being distributed among Blink Bellinger, Paul Mundrick and Fritz. Navy's tallies were split among Joe Klukey, Laycoe, Buz Benson and Livingstone.

Belleville Juveniles Defeat Trenton in First Game of District Playdowns by 6-5

Game Played in Trenton With Winners Always on Top

SMART CONTEST

Trenton, Feb. 10—(Special)—In a thrill-packed game the Belleville juveniles downed the Trenton kids 6 to 5 in an Ontario juvenile hockey association playdown game here Wednesday night. The Belleville kids now enjoy a one-goal lead in the second game of a home-and-home series to be played in Belleville next Tuesday. The period scores were 2-2 and 5-2 for the visitors.

Trenton used five junior O.H.A. players, but it made little difference to Coach Bill Dennis' Belleville kids as they had no respect for names or personages. In the third period fisticuffs broke out after Doug Green, bouncing Belleville defenceman, had handed out his share of body checks. Green and Hamilton tangled and Al Meagher got into the fray as a principal and all were banished. Green hauled down a major penalty.

Bruce Bishop and Al Meagher were the leading scorers for Belleville with two goals each, Adams and Coleman getting one each. Hamilton with two headed the homesters, while Taylor, Scott and Robertson bagged one each. Doug Adams scored the winning goal for Belleville.

The line-up:

Trenton—Goal, Thompson; defence, Campbell and McDonald; centre, Ellis; wings, Demille and LaMorre; subs, Taylor, Scott, Johnson, Bankey, Hamilton and Taylor.

Belleville—Goal, Rollins; defence, Green and Adams; centre, Coleman; wings, Bishop and Lyall; subs, Boyd, Reeves, Meagher, Strong and Soule.

Referee: Bennie Bowen.

Junior Series Play-Off Dates

Delegates from the four district junior O.H.A. centres, Tweed, Stirling - Marmora "Combines," Belleville and Trenton met at Hume Arena following Wednesday night's junior game to draft the schedule for the district Junior O.H.A. playdowns, Tweed having been given a bye into the semi-final play-offs at the organization meeting of the group last December.

With the first-place team meeting the third-placed club, Belleville and Trenton meet in a best-in-three series while at the same time the Combines and Tweed meet in a similar round with the ultimate winners then playing off in a final group championship series.

Convener Allan Meagher announced the play-off schedules as follows:

Feb. 11—Belleville at Trenton; Tweed at Stirling.

Feb. 16—Trenton at Belleville; Stirling at Tweed.

Feb. 18—Possible third game at Trenton or Stirling in the event each team wins one game.

VOTE OF JUDGES NOW ANNOUNCED FROM THE RING

This is New Innovation Inaugurated by N. Y. Boxing Commission

LARKIN WINS BOUT

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Feb. 10 (AP)—The New York State Athletic Commission has started a boxing innovation that soon may become a universal practice—that of anouncing from the ring how each judge voted.

The idea was tried out last night in Madison Square Garden at the Tippy Larkin-Lulu Constatino 10-rounder which Larkin, a 13 to 5 favorite, won easily.

It was the general opinion among ringsiders that the announcement was a good thing. Several pointed out that each official, knowing his vote would be publicly announced from the ring, would tend to be extra careful. Some doubtful persons asserted that the public announcement of the votes after a very close fight, for instance, might bring verbal abuse against the officials.

Gen. John Phelan, chairman of the commission, and promoter Mike Jacobs asserted the practice would be followed at future Garden bouts.

As for the fight itself, it was one-sided with Larkin entertaining the crowd of 11,535 (gross gate $31,914) bp using Costatino as an animated punching bag. Judge Joe ngello gave Costantino only one round and Judge Sam Robinson gave him two. eferee rthur Susskind (Young Otto) gave Larkin nine and called one even.

Larkin forfeited a $1,000 bond by failing to make 137 pounds for the bout.

SUPPLY ON HAND

It is estimated there still is enough coal unmined in the United States to last several thousand years.

BRUINS, WINGS HOT

(By The Canadian Press)

It's a long way from the Montreal Canadiens at the top to the New York Rangers at the bottom—20 full games at this standing—but the four teams in between are ready for probably the greatest scramble since the start of the National Hockey League season.

Boston's surprising shut-out victory over the Canadiens on Tuesday set the stage. Detroit in second position is only a game ahead of Toronto; Chicago and Boston are tied only three points back.

It is on the third and fourth positions—the last play-off spots—that the interest centres, and this week's schedule provides opportunity for a throough shift in the present alignment.

The Bruins' victroy over Canadiens pulled them level with the Hawks in fourth place, and this deadlock should be settled tonight when Boston plays at Chicago. Either team, by taking two full points, can come within a point of the third-place Leafs.

Tonight's other game sees the Red Wings at New York and unless the Rangers are away over their heads the Wings should strengthen their hold on second place.

(Juveniles win.)

Bill Dennis stole a march on Toots Holway and the junior management here when he signed Harry Boyd of Albert College, to play with his Belleville juveniles. Last night the local minor-league sextette moved into Trenton and downed Rome Taylor's juveniles 6 to 5 in the first game of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey playdowns. The Trenton team carried five junior players, but it made little difference to the fast skating Belleville kids, who were inspired by Boyd's presence. Coach Dennis took what was left from the junior squad and for the past two weeks' has been practicing the kids faithfully with the result they clicked as a team and came through in grand style last night. The return game will be played here next Tuesday night. Al Meagher and "Cue" Bishop got two goals each, while Doug Adams registered the winning tally on a lone effort.

(Outclassed.)

Ralph Neal's "Combines" completely outclassed the local juniors to cinch second place in the group standing last night. The score of 6 to 4 for the Combines just about indicates the play, as the "northerners" out-skated, out-checked and out-played Holway's kids. The locals couldn't get untracked and actually stick-handled themselves right out of second place. In the meantime Doug Bastedo and Doug Patterson making merry in the scoring line as Bastedo rang the bell three times and Patterson twice. Although Belleville and the Combines finished the revised schedule with one win a tie and three losses each the Combines were given second position owing to the fact they boasted of a better scoring average throughout the season. The Combines scored 18 goals and had 20 scored against them in four games, while Belleville scored but 14 and had 18 scored against them. Belleville meets Trenton while the Combines tangle with Tweed.

(Bargain Bill.)

In order to catch up with some of their postponed games the Quinte R.C.A.F. service is staging a dual puck bill at the Hume Arena tonight FO McLaughlin announced. The Trenton "Flyers" meet the Deseronto Mohawks in the curtain-raiser while No. 6 Repair Depot tangles with the Mountain View "Bombers" in the nightcap.

On Monday night the "Six-ardee" speeders flew all over "Dutch" Cain's "Bombers", but Dan Cowley and company are swearing vengeance tonight. Although Trenton should take the measure of the Mohawks, that second game should be the thriller of the night. Coach Bud Corbett's lads are a speedy sextette even if they don't boast of any former N.H.L. stars. However, the Bombers have been running into tough luck all along, but with players like Aube, McReavy, Boudreau and Fuger on their roster they are liable to break out in a scoring rash any time.

(Remember when—)

It was just eleven years ago tonight when more than 20,000 fight fans screamed "fake" as Ernie Schaaf sprawled to the canvas for the count of ten in the 13th round of his 15-round bout with Prima Carnera. Four days later, the quiet boy who wanted to be a priest, died in hospital from the effects of the beating. Actually he never regained consciousness after sprawling to the floor.

(Interesting at least.)

Bill Cook was out in Tweed the other day and met Jerry Quinn, coach of the Tweed juniors. "I've seen the three junior clubs in your group and we'd rather meet Belleville than either the Combines or Trenton," stated Coach Quinn, as he stated beating the locals wouldn't be any too much trouble for his squad. Incidentally Bill Cook saw three of Quinn's charges and reports them to be husky lads tipping the beam around 175 pounds and towering near the six foot mark. Well, Mister Quinn's problem now is to beat the Combines first.

(Sad news.)

It was with profound regret the sport-loving public of the entire Central Ontario area learned of the sudden death of R. A. Elliott, of Deloro last evening. The late "Bob" Elliott was known and respected in all walks of life having been president of the old C.O.B.L. and president of the O.B.A. who appreciated his efforts so much that he was honored with a life membership. The late Mr. Elliott was also on the Athletic Board of Queen's University and last year he was named president of the Professional Mining Engineers of America. In his death Hastings County at large lost a respected citizen, who had done much for sport throughout the district. Reeve of Deloro village the late R. A. Elliott was general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company and to the bereaved family the sincere sympathy of all his friends in this district, and they were too numerous to count, is extended. His death will be not only a shock to the community, but leave a vacancy in the life of the district never to be filled.

(By The Canadian Press.)

Hershey Bears—Former American Hockey League leaders—lacked all their skill and speed they showed earlier in the season when they bowed to the lowly Pittsburgn Hornets 3-1 last night.

It was only the ninth victory for Hornets in 40 starts this season. They have tied six other encounters. While it was only the 11th loss for Hershey, it was the second defeat in as many nights. Tuesday they were defeated 5-4 by Cleveland Barons.

Last night Pittsburgh's Bob Gracie made his 100th goal in five years of playing.

Peggy O'Neill opened the scoring by giving Bears a 1-0 lead in the second period. Late in the period, however Lloyd Roubell tied the score and in the third frame Wendell Jamieson put Hornets ahead. Gracie's tally clinched the game late in the period.

Toronto, Feb. 10 —(CP)— Herb Cain's 30 goals for Boston this season haven't raised much excitement but the fact is 32-year-old Herb is the first Boston player to turn the trick since Cooney Weiland potted 43 in 1929-30. Surveying the complete National Hockey League field, only three players have shot 30 or more goals in a season since Charlie Conacher scored 36 for Toronto in 1934-35. The three recent 30-goal men were Doug Bentley of Chicago and Joe Benoit of Canadiens last season and Lynn Patrick of Ragers the previous year . . . The scoring statistics show better distribution of scoring power is one reason Canadiens lead the league by such a wide margin. Nine Canadiens have scored 10 or more goals compared to Detroit's seven, Toronto and Boston's six and Chicago and New York's five.

Records:

Information obtained by Jim Coleman of the Toronto Globe and Mail shows at least two professional hockey players scored nine goals in a single game—Newsy Lalonde in 1910, for Renfrew Millionaires against Cobalt, and Tommy Smith in 1914, for Quebec Bulldogs against Montreal Wanderers.

Across Canada:

North America's peculiar style of wrestling caused a small riot in Vancouver when British sailors at a wrestling show thought there was dirty work afoot and invaded the ring. Vancouver Boxing and Wrestling Commission then suspended promotions by Lew White until White can satisfy the commission his shows will produce no similar disturbances in future . . . Crowd records of the Toronto Hockey league were smashed again last Saturday when 4,671 fans jammed Varsity Arena . . . Sudbury Frood Tigers expect to cut a figure in Allan Cup play-offs. They held Toronto's strong Navy team to a 4-4 tie in an exhibition at North Bay . . . Tigers have familiar names—Dewey, Hastie, Singbush, Webster, Vaillancourt.

Bill Tilden at 51 Plays Excellent Game of Tennis

(By The Canadian Press)

Survivor of the day when Jack Dempsey, the late Charlie Paddock, Babe Ruth and Bobby Jones were Monarchs in their respective sports, Bill Tilden, now 51, continues to show agility in tennis at Los Angeles, demonstrating an amazing endurance in a strenuous sport in which he has engaged since he was seven years of age. In an interview yesterday, big Bill declared, "there's going to be a tremendous sports revival after the war", adding the prediction there would be great collaboration between the Americas in great athletic competitions.

Tilden, who dominated both amateur and pro tennis for many years, captured the U.S. singles title seven times in succession and won the U.S. doubles five times with three different partners.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 299

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Here is a bridge rule that sounds cockeyed: With the two agreed trump suits to select from, prefer to play the contract in the suit most evenly divided; even if there are more cards in the other suit.

See what happens with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠Q
♥9 6 3
♦A K J 5
♣A K J 6 2

♠9 3
♥A 5 4
♦Q 6 3 2
♣Q 7 4 3

The bidding should go like this:

| SOUTH | NORTH |
|---|---|
| 1 C (1) | 2 C (2) |
| 2 D (3) | 3 D (4) |
| 5 C (5) | 5 D (6) |

This is what the players are saying to each other:

1. (1C) Partner, I have all the needs for an opening bid of one, including a biddable club suit.

2. (2C) Partner, I have all the needs for a responding bid. By following T-A-N, you know I have no biddable suit of my own. But I have adequate support for clubs; and at least three tricks.

3. (2D) Pal, following T-A-N, I am showing another biddable suit. Having bid the lower ranking suit first, you know my club suit is longer than my diamond suit.

4. (3D) Palsy walsy, I also have adequate support for diamonds. My second raise tells you I have four tricks.

5. (5C) Buddy, my jump tells you I see enough tricks to make a game with the four tricks you have shown me. So, you know I have seven tricks.

6. (5D) Amigo, we should play this contract with diamonds instead of clubs as trumps. Our diamonds are most evenly divided.

With a spade and two hearts to lose, five clubs will go down to defeat in this deal. By sluffing a north heart on a south club, five diamonds can coast home with evelen tricks.

See for yourself.

AT THE McCARTHY

Imagine Bette Davis, Ann Sheridan, four penguins, the only bearded star in Hollywood, a mummy case, the biggest nose in movies, an octopus and a giant tree piled high with Christmas gifts and you'll have some idea of the goings on in the picture called "The Man Who Came to Dinner", which ran as a play for two years on Broadway and the road. The Warner Bros. film version now playing at the McCarthy.

Monty Woolley, of the New York production, is the bearded star, and it is he who creates the havoc in a perfectly blissful family, when, invited to dinner, he slips on an icy porch and breaks his hip.

Confined to his chair, Monty makes his stay to dinner something to be remembered. For one thing, it lasts four weeks, but it also involves sending the family upstairs, forbidding them to use their phone while he calls the world over and urges their children to elope and hop freighters Singapore bound. And he fills the house with the strangest people.

Bette Davis says that in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" she is a pitcher throwing a change of pace." She plays a deadpan, satirical secretary. But this is one picture in which she falls in love, stays in love and actually is alive at the end to get her man and presumably live happily ever after.

"Her man," is her own find, Richard Travis, six-two, big and blond. She saw him in a service-short and couldn't help crying, "That's for me".

So Dick Travis sits among the penguins, the octopus, Ann Seridan, Jimmy Durante, Reggie Gardiner and all other mad friends Monty Woolley brings to the little Ohio town.

As for the mummy case, the reason for its presence is Ann Sheridan, who wears it for one scene. Annie says she has worn practically everything and its opposite, in pictures. She says she wears demure dimity in "King's Row" and a hula skirt in "Navy Blues", but this is the first time she ever heard of a gal having to wear a mummy-case.

The mummified Miss Sheridan goes into her new garb so Bette Davis can win that new man of hers.

"Jolly fun," says Reggie Gardiner.

"It's prodigious" fumes Durante furiously "it's magniculous. Don't I look like a mummy-case? It ain't right. A mummy-case-that part was made for me."

2nd feature attraction on the same program is "Nobody's Darling" with Mary Lee, Jackie Moran, Gladys George and Lee Patrick.

By HYE BOSSIN

The wild things that used to happen on the screens of theatres are becoming a reality in the theatre itself.

In Detroit a theatre manager was robbed of the receipts and murdered. Before he died he gave a description of the murderer, saying that he was an average looking man with a scar. While hunting the murderer police picked up a young Chinese for having a gun, a violation of his parole.

The Chinese confessed the robbery and killing. He had studied theatre makeup and was able to change the slant of his eyes and his complexion. He had painted the scar to add to the confusion.

And in Shea's, Toronto, last week a thief cut two large oil paintings out of their frames in the foyer and walked out with them.

How many times have you seen that on the screen?

• • •

Who do you think is England's favorite movie star? No, not English-born Bob Hope but Alan Ladd. A group of British publications have just awarded him a gold medal which can't be struck off until the war is over.

• • •

The leading father-and-son pair in the theatre profession are the Nugents, J. C. and Elliott. Each is an actor, writer and director and both have done fine film work. At the moment J. C. Nugent is taking it easy and son Elliott is on Broadway sharing the lead with Margaret Sullavan in the smash hit, "Voice of the Turtle."

While in Hollywood J. C. was acting in a film being directed by Elliott. There was a scene in which the senior Nugent played a drunk who fell downstairs. A director who doesn't like the way a scene is played orders it done again and again. Then he orders the "take" he thinks best — often the very last one — to be developed and the film of the others discarded.

Every time J. C. fell down the stairs he acquired a new bruise. And son Elliott took the scene over six times.

"Okay," he yelled to the camera crew, "we'll use the first 'take'!"

I'll bet the elder Nugent wished that Elliott was small enough to whip. Some joke.

Here is the tale of a haunted seaman, Jack Scott of Orillia and the Merchant Marine.

In Toronto Jack dropped in to see a Hopalong Cassidy movie. His next stop was Prescott, Ontario, where he saw Hopalong again. In Ogdensburg, New York, Cassidy was still holding the fort. In Montreal he had a few hours to spare and it was Hoppy or nothing. A seaman must stay close to his ship.

Next we find him in Halifax for a few hours but the nearest theatre was playing Hopalong, whom Scott hated by this time. He dashed across the bay to Yarmouth — but Hoppy was there ahead of him. He rushed back to another Halifax theatre but Cassidy was there too.

Next we find Scott in Port au Spain, Trinidad — and there was Hopalong Cassidy. His ship went on to Georgetown, British Guiana, which there is only one English-speaking theatre. You guessed it. Hopalong.

Home again to Orillia the other week, he thought he would visit a pal, a theatre house manager, and see a movie at the same time. The movie was a Hopalong Cassidy.

Hollywood ought to give Jack Scott a medal.

AT THE BELLE — Mary Martin, Dick Powell and Victor Moore in a scene from Paramount's hilarious comedy with music, "True to Life," featuring Franchot Tone, now pleasing large audiences at the Belle. Paramount's musical parade, "Mardi Gras," in Technicolor, is a special extra attraction.

AT THE McCARTHY — That telephone charm which Monty Woolley is registering doesn't go over with his screen secretary, Bette Davis, who is on to all the wily tricks of "The Man Who Came to Dinner," current attraction at the McCarthy along with Mary Lee in Nobody's Darling."

AT THE CAPITOL — Judy Canova, Dennis Day and Ernest Truex, currently appearing in "Sleepy Lagoon," Republic's boisterous new comedy starring Judy Canova, now at the Capitol with Charles Starrett in "Robinhood of the Range."

AT THE BELLE

"True to Life", Funny

You're going to meet the most lovable, the most colorful, the craziest family ever portrayed on the screen when you see Paramount's uproarious comedy with music, "True to Life," which is now on the Belle Theatre screen. As a matter of fact, the laughs come so thick and fast, that many may see the picture again to catch whatever was drowned out.

The stars, every one absolutely perfect for his part, are Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Dick Powell and Victor Moore, supported by Mabel Paige and William Demarest. They play for laughs, and get them—more laughs than have been heard in any theatre in many a year.

The music-there are three hit tunes—is an integral part of the plot which revolves around the plight of two radio writers who are about to be fired from their thousand-dollar-a-week jobs unless they come up with a true-to-life air show. Tone and Powell are the more than slightly stale writers.

Each in his own way sets out to find inspiration—Tone, very much the man about town, via night life, and Powell wherever the subway takes him. He winds up in a diner in Long Island where he meets and falls for Mary Martin, the counter girl. Mary assumes he is broke and takes him home with her to live with her family until he finds a job.

Powell, the rat, repays the family's kindness by jotting down everything said and done and sending it to Tone who promptly puts it into script form and on the airwaves. All Dick has to do then is to keep the family from tuning into the suddenly popular program, and to keep Tone from stealing Mary.

What happens when the family gets the radio fixed and hears the program, is one of the hilarious high spots in a picture full of hilarious high spots. The situations that develop when the Porter family finds itself the darling of the radio-listening public are too funny to spoil for you by telling about them, here.

"True to Life" is truly a riot. If you don't see it, you'll have only yourself to blame.

"Mardi Gras," in Color

A new idea in entertainment—a stage show on our own screen is presented in "Mardi Gras," featuring famous stars of vaudeville and screen in a lavish spectacular musical novelty, produced in radiant Technicolor.

Your hits of yesterday and tomorrow are heard in the new "Community Sing" at the Belle Theatre every weekend the management requests that you please sing loud.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sleepy Lagoon"

Lovers of riotous comedy are in for a treat according to inside information regarding the new Judy Canova film "Sleepy Lagoon" which makes its bow tonight at the Capitol Theatre.

The cast is impressively big and superlatively good. Republic Studios have spared no expense to surround Judy with players of exceptional merit. La Canova herself is just grand in one of the best parts she has ever had. Then there is Dennis Day, who talks like a chump and sings like an angel. Ruth Donnelly, that fine character actress, who has been the salvation of many a production. Ernest Truex, the pint-sized comic who gets ten gallon laughs. Joe Sawyer, the Behemoth of Menace, Douglas Fowley, Will Wright, and others too numerous to mention.

Report has it that Joseph Santley has excelled himself in the direction of this comedy with music, and everything points to an evening of undiluted pleasure.

"Robin Hood of the Range"

It is a rare occasion when Charles Starrett gets through an outdoor drama without calling for a doctor. In at least a dozen of his past pictures he has suffered injuries ranging from minor bruises to a broken collar bone. So no one was surprised when the star suffered a wrenched ligament during the filming of a scene from Columbia's "Robin Hood of the Range" which can now be seen at the Capitol Theatre as the added hit.

To complete the double attraction the serial "Secret Service In Darkest Africa" and a community sing will also be shown.

Irish-Bred Princequillo Not Allowed to Run Against Clock

STARTS IN WIDENER

(By BERT COLLIER)
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

Miami, Fla., Feb. 10. (AP)— The mystery horse of the winter is the Irish-bred Princequillo, whose unorthdox training methods have thrown the clockers at Hialeah into a dither.

The 126-pound top-weighted candidate for the $25,000 Widener handicap, which wraps up the Hialeah season March 4, gallops daily around the tracks but he runs for the fun of it and rival trainers have had no opportunity to check his speed.

Horatio Luro of the Boone Hall plantation stables, is responsible for the general bewilderment. He has decreed a regime of lazy lopes for the sleek bay four-year-old who crossed the Atlantic to become the "Story Book" horse of 1943.

The colt has yet to run against the clock in his morning trails here.

But Luro indicated he was seriously after the richest winter purse when he announced this week that Conn McCreary, the star jockey who booted Princequillo home in several big stakes last year, would ride him in the mile and a quarter Widener.

Luro followed the same plane of easy condition for Princequillo at the New York tracks. He proved he was right when the son of Prince Rose and Cosquilla swept the Saratoga Cup, the Saratoga Handicap and the Jockey Club Gold Cup.

Wonder if it wasn't a record of some sort when Johnny Akoczy, 16-year-old Detroit High School Basketballer, tossed in 54 points in about 27 minutes last week?

A Jink Methinks.

In the course of playing hockey games at Detroit since Christmas, 1942, the New York Rangers have suffered the following serious injuries: Phil Watson, broken finger; Gord Davidson, bad facial cut; Alf Pike, shoulder separation; Jimmy Franks, fractured wrist; Grant Warwick, fractured skull; Ab Demarco, two broken toes, and Ken McAuley, bruises and lacerations. . . .But what really makes the Rangers mad is the way the Red Wings "poured it on" for scores of 15-0 and 12-0 on their last two visits.

Horns Like Sheep's Formed on Rabbit's Head

Little Falls, Minn., Feb. 10—(AP)—Andrew Yourczek went hunting and his dog caught what appeared to be a cottontail rabbit. Closer inspection disclosed the animal had three-inch horns, growing out of the top of its head and curving backward like those of a sheep. The rabbit will be mounted and installed in a museum.

7,500 PENNIES BUY BOND

West Hartford, Conn., Feb. 10—(AP)— Steve Buyak brought three boxes weighing approximately 40 pounds to the war bond counter of a factory here and ordered a 00 bond. The boxes contained 7,500 pennies.

Picton and District

FO. T. Fillingham Presumed Dead

Picton, Feb. 10 — Flying Officer Thomas Fillingham is now for official purposes presumed dead, according to the latest R.C.A.F. casualty list. He has been missing since last June. He had taken part in many raids over enemy occupied territory and had been overseas since 1942. He was born near Wellington and spent most of his life there. He was active in church and community work.

While at Hanover, where he resided prior to enlistment, he starred in hockey. Besides his father, he is survived by a sister, Mrs. Russell Eaton, Hamilton, a brother Bryan in Quebec and a brother George overseas.

At the annual meeting of the Holstein Friesian Association, Fred Hubbs of Bloomfield was chosen as one of the delegates to the Ontario Cattle Breeders' Association.

Wounded.

Mrs. Harold Norton received official word yesterday that her husband has been wounded in action in Italy. No details were given. He was a member of Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment.

Tells of Bomb Disposal.

Sgt. Lister of the R.A.F. in an address at Rotary Club told of his experiences as a member of the Bomb Disposal squad in London. The delayed action bombs, he said, were one of the means by which the Nazis hoped to dislocate industry. These are very elaborate devices, costing as much as $10,000 each. Different types are exploded by various devices including magnetic, acoustic and erostatic contacts, as well as the common demolition fuse, and they are likely to have "booby traps" in different locations on the outside shells. Such bombs may bury themselves in the earth from ten to sixty feet. The speaker referred to the great ingenuity and cool courage of Lord Suffold, heading such work, in dealing with the D. A. bombs, and he finaly met his death proving out a new method of treatment.

Just before Christmas a large contingent of members of the Royal Air Force left Picton for overseas. Among them were a number who married local girls. It is learned that they have safely arrived overseas.

Boys Overseas Received 'Fags' Before Christmas

"Assurances that Belleville boys overseas received Canadian cigarettes in time for Christmas cheer are now being received by the Kinsman "Fag Fund", Chairman Buster LaBarr stated today. From Italy to the Aleutians replies are coming into the fund extending thanks for Christmas cigarettes.

"I don't know what we Belleville boys would do if it wasn't for the cigarettes we received from you", writes W. G. Bradshaw. "Knowing what the Kinsmen Club did for the people before the war we knew they wouldn't forget us over here", adds W. J. Hall, while T. J. Sutton wrote to say his shipment arrived in time to give him a Merry Christmas.

With these and scores of other similar replies the Kinsmen Fag Fund only hopes to carry on and keep our Belleville boys supplied with these needed smokes.

The following were sent individual packets of 300 cigarettes this week:

D. C. Alexander, Clem Allen, P. P. Archer, R. F. Arnott, F. G. Barlow, Joe Bey, Alan G. Bone, D. H. Barnhart, G. W. Buker, N. P. Burshaw, Ken Butler, A. Campbell, Wm. R. A. Carter, T. F. Cavanagh, W. # Little Benny's Note Book

I was in the house waiting, and ma said, Benny, the weather is just lovely outside, and besides, I dont want you in the house this afternoon under any circumstances. The Gils are going to meet here today, she said.

Well aw G, ma, so are the Yops, I'm expecting Puds Simkins and Lucky Leroy Shooster any minute, I said.

The Gils being ma's club and standing for Give Lifts to Servicemen, and the Yops being my club and standing for the Young Patriots and ma said, Now that's perfectly rediculous, you'll have to hold your meeting somewhere else.

Well jimminy, ma, how can we? I mean it's too late now, I said. We've got a special password and even a special doorbell ring just for today. G roozalem, ma, how would you like it if Mrs. Hews or somebody called you up now and told you the meeting was some place else? I said.

Now there's no use arguing, this is to be a very important meeting and I dont intend to have 3 noisy shreeking boys in the house for land sakes, ma said, and I said, Well heck, ma, our meeting is very important too, and besides there's 6 ladies in the Gils and only 3 boys in the Yops, and 6 ladies can make more noise than 3 boys any time, if they really get started.

Oh you dont say so, ma said. So you're afraid that we might disturb you, is that it? she said, and I said, No mam, G wizzickers, I just meant you'll be making so much noise yourselfs you wont even hear us. I' take them up in my room and shut the door, I said.

You'll do nothing of the kind and furthermore you've heard my last final word on the subject, is that clear? ma said, and I said, Yes mam, I mean your last word on the subject of the house, but you haven't said anything yet about the back yard, so can I take them out in the back yard?

Oh dear, I suppose so, mut on one condition, I wont have them giving any long secret rings at the doorbell, ma said.

The result being I quick called them both up and changed the secret knock on the gate.

CHAPTER 7

"She looked like a little angel," said McGinty, "and it made me heart ache to see her witha loikes of McKibben, but now what could I do?"

McKibben had seemed sober enough. He had picked out the right fare for the taxi driver from a handful of silver, had nodded to McGinty and then had taken hold of the girl's arm and led her up the steps and into the house. That was the last McGinty had seen of either of them. He had gone off duty at two o'clock, and it would have been quite possible for the girl to walk down the five flights of stairs from McKibben's apartment and get away without being seen, especially if she waited until the single elevator which was running at that time of night had started up.

He remembered nothing unusual about any of the people who had come in after midnight. So far as he knew, nobody had asked for Mr. McKibben.

"They was a young fellah askin' for him just after I come on duty at nine," said the elevator operator who had been listening to McGinty. "He got in my car and told me to take him up to McKibben's apartment, so I run him up to the sixt'. He asked what apartment it was, and I tolh him six-ten. He rung for me in a few minutes, and when I brought him down, he said McKiblen wasn't there, and did I know where he could find him. I told him his best bet was to make a round of the night joints."

"What was he like?" Tony asked.

"A good-lookin' young sport, kind of soft spoken. Dark skin, dark hair. Looked like he might be a college boy."

"It was about eight-thirty when McKibben went out," put in the doorman. "That same dame met him that come back with him—met him right here in the lobby. I tell you, you can't tell nothin' about girls these days."

"That's right," Tony agreed. "How late were you on duty?" he added to the elevator boy.

"Till five."

"And nothing unusual happened?"

"Not a thing. Everything quiet."

"All right; thanks," Tony said. "Take me up to the sixth, please."

There was a different policeman on duty before McKibben's door, but he knew Tony.

"Anybody been asking to get in?" the columnist inquired.

"Not a soul. That colored boy that used to work here has been around a couple of times. There's some things of his in there he wants to get."

"If he comes back while I'm here let me know. I want to talk with him."

"I'll tell him," said the policeman and unlocked the door.

Tony stepped through into the entry, closed the door behind him, snapped on all the lights, and proceeded to make a general survey of the apartment.

The outside door opened into an entry, from which a corridor ran straight ahead, passing McKibben's bedroom, then a bathroom, then a second bedroom, then the pantry and kitchen, then the dining room, and finally merged into a large living room which opened on a terrace about fifteen feet wide.

Tony traversed the corridor, crossed the living room, stepped out upon the terrace, and looked around. It was one of the set-backs which extended at regular intervals to the top of the building, and was guarded at its outer edge by a stone balustrade about four efeet high, against which had been set four or five baby trees in tubs. Four windows looked down upon it from the seventh story. At this moment, all of them were dark, and as Tony looked at them he saw how easy it would be to swing cown to the terrace from any of them. Perhaps it was by this route that McKibben's murderer had gained access to the apartment. From the living room four long French windows opened upon the terrace and while all of them were equipped with safety latches, as he found upon examination, he doubted if they were kept locked.

The columnist walked slowly back through the flat, but could see nothing unusual or out of order in any of the rooms. At last he was in the bedroom and sat down for a careful look around.

McKibben's hat and coat were still on the chair where he had thrown them eighteen hours before, and Tony tried to reconstruct the tragedy which had so quickly followed:

The murderer, either by the terrace or by the door, had gained access to the flat, and was in waiting. He had taken McKibben's automatic from the drawer there beside the bed...

But no—he couldn't have done that. Lily Edgerton had told him that McKibben had his automatic with him. Then how did his murderer get possession of it? There was no evidence of any struggle. Had McKibben taken the pistol from his pocket and laid it down within reach of the murderer? But that would mean, of course, that he knew the murderer and had no reason to suspect him...

All right. He couldn't answer that one. Not yet.

In any event, the murderer must have been waiting there. He had heard McKibben let himself in and close the outer door. Then "Mack" had switched on the light, walked into his bedroom, and tossed coat and hat upon the chair...

But McKibben had the girl with him. Certainly the man lurking there must have heard her. There would have been some conversation, the sound of two sets of footsteps in the hall. The murderer could have slipped into the bathroom, leaving the door ajar, and been undiscovered for the moment. But what had happened to the girl?

There was something wrong with all this—terribly wrong.

In the first place, if the intruder had come there to kill McKibben, he would have come prepared. He would never trust to the chance of finding a pistol. He would have one of his own. But McKiboen had been shot with his own gun.

Tony passed his hand across his forehead. He couldn't answer that one either.

Oh, yes, perhaps he could. McKibben had come in, tossed his coat and hat upon the chair, taken the heavy pistol from his pocket and replaced it in the drawer of the little table; then he had gone over to the writing desk in the corner and written the note to the florist and the card to Tony, placed them in an envelope, directed it, sealed and stamped it, and taken it out to the mail chute by the elevator. And it was then that the killer had stolen out, grabbed the pistol from the drawer—remember, the police found it open—and dashed back to his hiding place. McKibben had returned and started toward the bathroom, and at that instant the intruder had appeared, pistol in hand. "Mack" had stared at him—it was astonishment, not fear, on his dead face. And before he had time to realize his danger, he had been shot through the heart.

Then what?

Why, then, the murderer in an amateur attempt to make it appear a suicide, had pressed McKibben's right hand about the stock of the pistol and left it lying on the floor, closed the door, bolted it from the outside by means of the old pin and string trick, and made his escape. He had worn gloves, of course, and so had left no fingerprints.

It was just as easy as that—except for two things.

Where had the girl been all this time?

And what about the bloodstained carnation?

With an impatient shake of the head, Tony got to his feet and proceeded to a meticulous examination of the room. The chifferobe was full of shirts, underwear, socks, collars, neatly arranged and evidently undisturbed. A deep bottom drawer was filled with towels In the clothes closet hung six or eight suits. A row of shoes was on the floor. The writing desk contained nothing except McKibben's notepaper and envelopes, and a package of his cards, similar to the one in the box of carnations.

Duffy had been through the desk, of course, but Tony doubted if McKibben had ever kept anything of value in it, or anything confidential. That was what the big safe in his office was for. McKibben's gray silk pajamas lay across the foot of the bed. It had been neatly turned down, and the pillow-cases and sheets were crisp and unwrinkled, fresh from the laundry.

Then he stepped into the bathroom. The place was immaculate. But then Tony perceived a faint ring around the vent of the lavatory, as though someone had washed his hands there. The two towels hanging beside it on the rack were unsoiled and the clothes hamper in the corner was empty.

As he walked back into the bedroom, the policeman on guard outside opened the door and stuck his head in. "That boy of McKibben's is here again," he said.

"All right. Send him in."

The boy's eyes were showing a good deal of white when he entered the bedroom, especially when he saw the blood stain on the floor.

"Come on in, George," said Tony. "Your name is George, isn't it?"

"Yes suh; George White."

"Well, there's nothing here to hurt you. I want you to look around carefully and tell me if you see anything that isn't exactly as you left it last night. Mr. McKibben left before you did, didn't he?"

"Yes, suh."

"What did you do after he had gone?"

"He had taken a bath and shaved, so I cleaned up the bathroom, and then put away his clothes and straightened up in here; I got out his pajamas and turned down the bed, just like I always do. Then I went home."

"You cleaned the bathroom, eh? Come in here. How did you come to miss that ring in the lavatory?"

George stared at it. "That wasn't there when I left," he said.

"Are you sure?"

"Yes, suh, I'd swear to it. I cleaned it careful. Somebody's been washin' his hands. Maybe it was Mistah McKibben when he got back."

"What did he wipe them on?"

George looked at the towel rack. "They's a towel gone," he said. "I always puts three towels on that rack," and he went over and looked in the clothes hamper. "It's gone, all right."

"You're sure you left three last night?"

"Yes, suh, absolutely."

"Anything else out of place?"

George looked slowly around. "Don't see nothin' else," he said.

"All right. Now come out here in the bedroom. When did you put these sheets on the bed?"

"Yesterday mornin', suh, after Mistak McKibebn left. I always puts clean sheets on every Monday and Thursday. At other times too, when Mistah McKibben told me."

"You mean when he was expecting a guest?"

"Yes, suh, that's it."

"Is the bed exactly as you left it?"

George surveyed it carefully.

"It don't look just right," he said at last. "Them sheets ain't as smooth as I left them, and that pillow's been turned around. I always put the open end toward the middle of the bed."

He picked up the pillow to turn it over, on the sheet underneath it was a faint smudge.

"Look at that, suh," he said. "That wasn't there, I'll swear it. That sheet was clean."

Tony stripped the covers back, but there was no other mark on either of the sheets. Then he pulled back the lower sheet to look at the mattress and stood staring.

About a fourth of the way down from the head of the bed and perhaps a foot from the right hand side was a small hole. It looked as though it might have been made by a pistol bullet, and when Tony sniffed at it he fancied that he could detect the odor of powder, but there were no powder marks about it. He turned the mattress back and found a similar hole on the under side. The set of box-springs beneath it had also been perforated.

"Ever see that hole before?" he asked the boy, whose eyes were wider than ever.

"No suh. That wasn't there when I changed the sheets yesterday."

"Pull the bed over," said Tony, and when it was out of the way he carefully searched the carpet underneath it, but found nothing there. Indeed there was no evidence that the bullet, or whatever had made the hole, had touched the carpet.

The columnist motioned the boy to push the bed back into place, and stood for some minutes looking down at the hole. He could think of no way in which it could have been made except by a bullet fired into the mattress. But why should anyone do that? Had there been someone on the bed? But even a Colt thirty-eight would not be powerful enough to send a bullet through a mattress and a set of springs. Besides, there was no sign of blood, and the sheets ware unsoiled except for that little smudge at the top.

With a grunt of disgust Tony turned away. "Fix the bed just like it was," he said, "and I don't want you to say a word to anybody about this."

"No suh," said George, and began smoothing up the sheets.

When he had finished, Tony took him for a tour of the apartment, and confirmed his guess that the long windows opening on the terrace were not always locked. But there were no more discoveries until they reached the kitchen. There, as George was casting his eye along the line of cooking utensils which hung above the range, he uttered an exclamation of surprise and hastily took down a heavy skillet.

"Look at that!" he cried, and pointed to a sharp indentation in the bottom of the skillet. "What could have done that?"

"You mean it has just been done?" Tony asked.

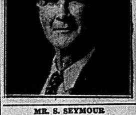
"Here's How I Keep Feeling Fit and Well"

Several Years Ago Was Feeling Rundown. Had Aches and Pains, Dizziness and Couldn't Sleep. Found Syntona Gave Him Prompt Relief. "Take it Now Whenever I Feel Out of Sorts," He Says.



MR. S. SEYMOUR

Thousands of Ontario men and women have found Syntona Herbal Compound the ideal remedy for occasional disorders of stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and resulting indigestion, nervousness, loss of appetite, dizziness, backache, and rheumatic aches and pains. Many of them, like Mr. S. Seymour, 165 Province Street South, do not hesitate to say it is the best medicine they ever used and are constantly recommending it to friends and neighbors.

"My experience with Syntona began several years ago when I was badly run down and having a lot of rheumatic aches and pains in my arms and limbs,' said Mr. Seymour. "My back was lame and sore. I was always needing something for constipation and got dizzy, light-headed feelings. I couldn't get my proper sleep at night and felt fatigued and listless all the time.

"After finishing a short treatment of Syntona the aches and pains had gone away and I was enjoying the first sound sleep I had had in months. My appetite had picked up and I felt more energetic. It also got my bowels moving more regularly and the dizziness, together with that tired, listless feeling, disappeared. Since then I have been able to keep fit and well by using Syntona whenever I feel out of sorts. It is my favorite medicine and has never failed to help me. I am always glad of the opportunity to recommend it to others."

Go to DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville, and find out how Syntona can help you, too.

Pin Ball Machine Operator Fined $100 in Court

"Pin ball machine operators in this city pay the highest municipal licence fee in Ontario, I am told", stated W. O. Dwyer, Kingston defence lawyer, while defending a local merchant, who appeared before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today charged with keeping a common gaming house, namely the operating a pin ball machine. "With such a heavy city licence fee surely the municipality expects the operator of such pin ball machines to derive some revenue", continued Mr. Dwyer before he was interrupted by Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson, who told the court there have been no city slot machine licences issued for 1944 as yet.

The operator of the pin ball machine pleaded guilty through Mr. Dwyer and was find $100 and costs. The machine was not confiscated after Mr. Dwyer assured the court, device would be removed from the city immediately and that no other machine would be set up at 227 Front Street. The charge was preferred by Constable A. K. Collins, of the Anti-gambling squad of the Provincial Police.

"This cat and mouse game can't go on forever. If fines are levied machines must cease to operate, as they are illegal under the Criminal Code", stated Magistrate Lloyd after the accused man had pleaded guilty. Mr. Robertson agree that licencing such devices made matters complicated when court proceedings were entered upon, but still maintained that such machines are illegal under the law. A second charge of the same nature against an employee was dismissed upon mutual consent when Mr. Dwyer referred to the dual charges as "double-barrelled counts".

Canadian Finds English Train Trip Interesting

By VERNON M. KIPP
(Special to Ottawa Journal and Ontario Intelligencer).

LONDON, Jan. 31. — (By Air Mail)—It is a deeply moving experience for one who believes, as I happen to, that the British Empire (or Commonwealth if you will) is the greatest agency for good the world ever has known, to visit the British Isles for the first time, and more especially when that visit comes in the midst of war.

The first sight of the British home-land, a crowded British port, British warships in grim readiness, British soldiers and British guns—thing like these turn one's thoughts back to the centuries of glory and danger. And then one steps into the little carriage of an English train, and begins to see life as it is lived in these islands while they fight their own and the world's battles.

It was a first-class compartment intended for four passengers on each side. Before we had stopped at many stations there were 18 passengers in the compartment, most of them standing. There were a young naval officer and his wife, housewives going to a larger town for their shopping, all interested in the strangers, curious too in their reserved British way. The women objected to being given seats, said they had no special rights, obviously were rather proud of the equal status with men which they have earned so magnificiently in these years of war.

Later in the day we were in another train, this one built on the lines with which we are familiar in Canada. It was not crowded, and at no time was any passenger standing. Most of the men were in uniform, British officers going about their affairs, a few women. A Scottish girl told us of having entertained a young Canadian flying officer from Toronto, and showed us his grateful letter of thanks. She said they all liked the Canadians and were glad to show them hospitality. I was able to tell her, in return, of the great pleasure which thousands of Canadians have found in leaves spent in Scotland.

While we moved towards London enemy airplanes were over the city, but we heard and saw nothing of them. At 6.25 a guard came through the car and called "Pull your blinds, please", and the passengers fastened tightly across each window its dark curtain. The lights of the car were not dimmed. Suburban trains have nothing more than dim blue lamps, but not curtains.

There was no restaurant car on the train, nobody came through selling anything to eat or drink, and at a big station where we made a brief stop members of our party who tried to buy tea or coffee were refused because they had not brought their own cups. In the washroom was water, but neither soap nor towel. We opened our "U. S. Army Field Ration K," which had been supplied us on ship. Each man served this ration gets three small parkages weighing each something like a pound, the container of heavy cardboard made waterproof. A supper package was typical. It contained a tin (3¾ ounces) of beef and pork loaf, six substantial biscuits, two ounces of chocolate, a package of four cigarettes, three cubes of sugar, a package of bouillon powder, a stick of gum. The dinner ration had a tin of good cheese, the breakfast package a tin of pork with egg yolks, all very nourishing but not quite like a dinner at Grosvenor House.

We gave the cigarettes and the sugar cubes to the Scottish girl, and she took them away happily as souvenirs.

• •

The English countryside rolled by the train, with few scars of war visible. The fields were green and pleasant, the homes neat if needing paint, the roads empty of traffic save for the occasional military convoy or car.

For some hours an Englishman sat opposite us in the car. He read and smoked and said not a word except, once, "Thanks," when we offered him a cigarette and he accepted it. At last, outside London, he reached his destination, put on his coat, gathered his things — and then, surprisingly, said goodbye to us very cordially, shook hands, hoped we would have a pleasant visit. There was the famous British reserve, which perhaps is mostly shyness, succumbing in the end to the responsibilities of a host.

• •

So we came late at night to a London station, the hospitality of our reception by officials of the British Ministry of Information, the weird experience of a ride, on what seemed the wrong side of the road, through dimly-lit streets to our hotel. Of London there will be more later on.

CROWN ATTORNEY TO ATTEND FUNERAL

The sympathy of police court officials was extended to Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., in County Police Court this morning when it was learned his brother, Charles Thompson, had died in Buffalo, N.Y. The fact was brought to the attention of the court by Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson who extended the sympathy of the Hastings Bar Association to the bereaved. Magistrate J. L. Lloyd also added his personal regrets. Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Donnan will leave Friday to attend the funeral in Buffalo.

Publicity Campaign To Popularize Himmler

New York, Feb. 10. (AP)—A Nazi home front publicity campaign to popularize Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler as a possible successor to Hitler was reported today by the United States office of War Information.

A dispatch in the Stockholm newspaper Social Demokraten told of plans for distribution of 4,000,000 picture postcards showing Himmler in two smiling poses, the O.W.I. said. A previous Swedish dispatch said the humanizing campaign was begun because the German public "connects his name with concentration camps".

Social Demokraten said German newspapers had begun to print "funny" anecdotes about Himmler.

Airman Pays $100 For Leaving Scene of Crash

Cpl. A. S. McGrath of No. 6 Repair Depot of the R.C.A.F., pleaded guilty to charges of failing to stop at the scene of an accident and render assistance and careless driving when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. Fines amounting to $110 and costs were levied.

The charges arose out of an accident, which occurred in front of the Trenton R.C.A.F. station on the night of January 4, when two airmen were struck down by a motor vehicle driven by McGrath. The airmen, AC2. Guest and AC2. Holt, are still confined to hospital as the result of their injuries. They were found lying alongside of the highway in an unconscious condition. "I might inform the court these two airmen will doubtless be permanently disabled, but that part of the misfortune is a civil matter", related Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

P/O. Rouse appeared as observing officer and spoke in mitigation of sentence. A charge of dangerous driving was withdrawn and substituted with the careless driving count. A fine of $100 and costs was imposed in the leaving the scene of an accident count and ten dollars and costs in the lesser careless driving charge.

POLICE COURT

Five cases of traffic infractions were heard before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Thursday's county police court, with fines levied in each case.

Clifford McCammon, Belleville, was assessed ten dollars and costs after pleading guilty to a charge of permitting a motor vehicle to be driven with the wrong licence plate affixed. Speeding charges, preferred under the War Measures Act, resulted in James Montgomery, Montreal, paying $27.50 while Gerald Foster, Demorestville, was assessed $15 and costs on a similar charge. Chas. Sherry, Belleville, was convicted on a common speeding charge, while Mabel Hopkins, Trenton, was fined two dollars and costs for infraction of the light section of the H.T.A.

Jos. S. Johns, Wellington, pleaded guilty to having two sheets of loose gasoline coupons on his person and was fined $17.25, including costs. P.C. Carruthers testified that Johns had stolen the coupons from his employer. It cost Mrs. W. Murray, Thurlow, a total of $7.70 for failure to procure a 1943 township dog licence.

Governor Bricker Criticizes Press For Interference

Washington, Feb. 10 (AP)—Governor John W. Bricker of Ohio, appearing before Washington correspondents at a news conference, sharply criticized today what he termed "interference" by a part of the British press in this country's presidential election.

The 50-year-old governor, an announced candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, told 75 newsmen gathered in a hotel room that he believed the United States ought to elect its own president without international interference. He had been asked to comment on a recent article in an English newspaper suggesting that President Roosevelt ought to be re-elected.

"I think we ought to elect our own president and it's none of their business," Bricker said, referring to the British press.

"I think we ought to take care of that matter without outside interference."

Describing the winning of the war as the most important single issue of the presidential campaign, Bricker said that if the Republicans were successful there would be no interference with the present military command.

HOGS

Toronto, Feb. 10—(CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Barrie and Stratford $17 delivered, Chatham $16.40 plus transportation, Hamilton $17.05 delivered, Hull $16.95 delivered.

TRYING TO FERRET OUT DANES

New York, Feb. 10 —(AP)— German Gestapo agents have been making an effort to ferret out Danes sympathetic to the Allies by masquerading as "English-trained saboteurs landed by parachute," the Swedish newspaper Aftontidningen said in an article reported today by the United States Office of War Information. The Gestapo agents carried forged papers and English money in an effort to establish their identity, the article said.

34,179 U. S. DEAD

Washington, Feb. 10 —(AP)— Announced casualties of the United States armed forces now total 150,478, the Office of war Information reported today.

The total, combining the latest war and navy department reports shows 34,179 dead, 51,292 wounded, 34,746 missing and 30,261 prisoners of war. Of the last group, the O.W.I. report said, 1,936 have died in prison camps, mostly in Japanese-occupied territory.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb.1 10 (CP)—The gold stocks recovered part of Wednesday's losses and the western oil issues were narrowly higher in the quiet trading of the early Toronto session today. Industrials and base metals weakened slightly. Turnover totalled 396,000 shares for the first three hours.

Kerr-Addison climbed 30 cents to 9.75 and other strong golds were Macassa, Queenston, Kirkland Lake, O'Brien, San Antonio, Madsen and MacLeod-Cockshutt. Beattie was down 5 cents to 1.88. Beattie rights were listed today on an if, as and when issued basis and the bid on these was four cents.

Nickel and Smelters sold higher, Chromium weakened 20 cents to 1.30 and Pend Oreille was off 2 cents to 1.40.

Utilities were higher, senior oils were lower and other industrial groups held fairly steady.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 10 (AP)—Timid buying continued to prop rails and other scattered stock market favorites today but many leaders still were unable to attract worthwhile support.

Prices, uneven at the start, failed to establish a real direction near the fourth hour. Dealings were sluggish throughout.

Ahead most of the time were Chrysler, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, Engineers Public Service and International Harvester.

Canadian issues were dull, with Canadian Pacific up a fraction and Dome down a fraction.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 10 —(CP)— Cattle sales were dull with prices about steady in trade on the livestock market up to mid-session here today. A few butcher heifers brought $9.50-$11.50 and butcher cows $7.50-$9.

The few calves offered were steady at $14-$16.50.

Common to medium lambs were steady at $6--12.

The few sheep sold were steady at $3-$.6

Hogs were steady at $17.15 dressedweight with sows $13 dressed.

The War Today—
Swift U. S. Victory in Marshalls Gives Allies Measure of Japanese

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

The quick victory over the Mikado's stronghold in the heart of the Marshalls has enabled us to complete measurements of the Japanese and to confirm that while he is tough, crafty and ruthless, he can be handled—not easily but well.

The Kwajalein Atoll job has, so to speak, put the Allies over the top both militarily and phychologicaly in the preliminary offensive leading to the final assault on the main enemy citadel—the Japanese mainland. In the words of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, comander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet, this triumph will "serve to speed up the tempo" of operations.

Tokyo gets the feel of this, too. Premier Tojo tells his legislature that the war is 'increasing in ferocity day by day and we are now being confronted with the situation where the fate of the greater East Asia sphere and the rise and fall of Imperial Japan will re decided The present situation does not indicate that the road is to be easy." Nipponese military and political leaders believe the outcome of the war will be decided this year.

Axis Depends on Defensive Aircraft

It's significant that in this changing situation the Japanese, like the Hitlerites, are concentrating on the manufacture of defensive types of aircraft rather than the offensive heavy bombers. That's the thermometer with which we get the enemy temperature. The men of the Rising Sun have taken a page from the Nazi book of strategy and are going to fight defensive, delaying action in the hope of tiring the Allies out so that they will be left in possession of some of their ill-got gains.

One of Japan's main difficulties is lack of sea transportation. The Domei news agency yesterday informed the controlled Asiatic press that transportation problems are limiting the country's use of the resources of the occupied areas.

That's gladsome news. Untold wealth lies in China and Indonesia—but the Mikado hasn't the ships to bring it home. Upon these riches he is dependent to win the war.

Chinese Drive Japs From Posts In North Burma

New Delhi, Feb. 10. (CP)—Chinese troops have driven the Japanese from their strong positions eight miles west of Taro in Northern Burma, an Allied communique said today, but ran into determined enemy resistance ten miles northeast of Taipha Ga in their drive to clear the way for the new Ledo Road.

To the southeast British patrols operating on the Arakan front, where Japanese forces have made slight advances, discovered Tuesday night the town of Taung Bazaar which fell into the enemy's hands last week, had been evacuated.

The Japanese were still attacking west of Kaladan but Allied patrols repulsed three attacks Sunday, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

In the Tiddim sector of the Chin Hills British troops were consolidating their positions around Fort White. Other forces smashed two enemy units near Sumprabum, 80 miles north of Myitkyina in Northern Burma.

United States medium bombers and fighter-bombers strafed the highway between Myitkyina and Sumprabum Tuesday.

American planes yesterday attacked the Japanese-held town of Seinnyinbya, south of Buthedaung, returning pilots reported fires visible for twenty miles.

R.A.F. dive-bombers shot up other Japanese targets in the Buthedaung area, in the Upper Chindwin Valley and in the vicinity of Fort White. R.A.F. fighters intercepted a Japanese formation sweeping over Western Burma near Maungdaw and shot down three planes.

'Beneficial' Results In Tests With Pills For Gas Burns

Washington, Feb. 10 (AP) — A technique for fighting mustard gas burns with pills containing the gas itself is reported by British investigators who say the method was employed on volunteers with "beneficial" results.

A recent report by the British Homeopathic Society says volunteers who bared their forearms to the blistering action of the gas over a period of seven days had its effects markedly lessened by taking the pills.

Stating that 280 persons in the London and Glasgow areas participated in the tests—147 of them receiving the pills and the rest not—the report said:—

In a deciding percentage the burns caused by the gas were superficial when the volunteers took the drug, as against a higher percentage of medium or deep burns in the controls (those who did not take the pills)."

The report, originally presented to the British Ministry of Home Security, was condensed for release in this country by Dr. R. B. Lawrence, of Richmond, Va., chairman of the Public Relations Committee of the American Institute of Homeopathy.

Dr. Lawrence said the report "has neither been accepted nor, rejected by the Ministry of Home Security—it has simply been filed for reference."

Says Most of Beer Exported to U. S. Re-Shipped Overseas

Ottawa, Feb. 10 —(CP)— The "overwhelming" bulk of beer exported by Canadian brewers to United States last year was for reshipment to Empire troops throughout the world, Campbell L. Smart of Montreal, president of the Dominion Brewers Association, said today in a statement issued here.

Mr. Smart's statement said:

"The figures released yesterday from official sources showed an abnormal increase in beer to the United States by Canadian brewers in 1943. The overwhelming bulk of the gallonage shipped to the United States was for re-shipment to Empire troops throughout the world; a negligible quantity remaining in the United States for domestic consumption.

HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK TARGETS ON CONTINENT

Brunswick in Germany, Nazi Fighter Base in Holland Pounded

HIT INSTALLATIONS

By W. W. HERCHER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 10—(AP) — U.S. heavy bombers today attacked targets at Brunswick in central Germany, Army Headquarters announced.

Heavy bombers flew the 450-mile path to the German aircraft manufacturing centre and the Berlin radio said savage fighting developed.

At the same time formations of other four - engined bombers smothered the big Nazi fighter base at Gilze-Rijen, Holland, and strong forces of U.S. two-engined bombers flew against military installations in Northern France.

The Gilze-Rijen attack probably knocked out many enemy fighters which would otherwise have been in the air against the bombers attacking Brunswick.

No figures on planes shot down on the Brunswick attack or on Allied losses were available immediately.

The U.S. air force now has conducted 10 major operations against the continent in the last 13 days.

Pound Installations

The marauders hammered at installations backing up the Nazis' Atlantic wall in Northern France for the third straight day after flying 550 sorties in 48 hours without a single loss.

The extended daylight sweeps across the channel began immediately after R.A.F. Mosquito bombers ranged over unspecified targets in western Germany last night.

The American attack was made under an umbrella of R.A.F. Spitfire fighters. It followed yesterday's successful surprise attack on railway installations at Tergnier, France, a target which took the marauders 100 miles inland for the longest trip in the history of their European operations.

Loaded Passenger Bus Crashes Into Hamilton Home

Hamilton, Feb. 10—(CP) — The crash when a loaded urban passenger bus hit the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ross here today "sounded like an earthquake" to Ross, cracked plaster in every room, buckled floors and threw cement foundation blocks 10 feet in the basement.

The bus driver, William Nauman, and 24 passengers were taken to hospital after the accident, but hospital authorities said none of the injuries were serious enough to be fatal.

No cause was determined immediately for the accident. The bus, swerving suddenly from the street to crash across the sidewalk, demolished a cement pillar at the front of the Ross home and smash forward into the front of the house. While Ross, cleaning shoes in the basement, thought the impact was an earthquake, his wife—who thought he had been fixing the furnace—thought it was a gas explosion. Then she ran to the front of the house and found the bus practically in her living room.

Ross aided police and passersby to extricate the driver, who was pinned to his seat by the crumpled bus front.

Included among those admitted to hospital were Harold Stage, leg and chest injuries, Harold Gornall, fractured ribs, William Bennett, broken leg, fractured ribs and shock, and Florence Tylodsky, leg and arm injuries.

SPITFIRES FLY OVER NICE HARBOR

Score 4 Hits on 8,000-Ton Freighter, Down One Nazi Plane

Algiers, Feb. 10 —(AP)— Allied Headquarters announced today that Spitfires flew over Nice harbor yesterday thereby disclosing that the Allies have fighter plane bases within easy range of southern France—a prerequisite to any invasion of southern France.

The Spitfires scored four hits on the stern of an 8,000-ton freighter and battled with several Fock-Wulf 190s, shooting down one.

Spitfires are operating from a newly constructed landing ground on the Anzio beachhead, it also was disclosed.

Engineers went to work with bulldozers on the morning of the initial landings less than three weeks ago to prepare the base, laboring from dawn to dusk under occasional shellfire.

Light Snowfall Saves County And City Thousands of Dollars

Despite the fact that a very considerable depth of snow had fallen by this time last year, Hastings County has saved approximately $4,000 by reason of the almost complete lack of snow thus far during the present winter. This is according to figures on the comparative costs of snow removal for the two seasons which were released today by County Engineer Larry Langlois.

Although heavy snowfall was received during December and January last winter, the really high costs of snow removal and snowplowing on the county road system does not come until February and March, it was stated. It is then, when as the result of further storms and drifts, the entire weight of snow shoved of roads earlier in the year, has to be pusher off the shoulder of the road to make room for fresh snow.

"People don't just seem to realize that the heavy cost of snow removal does not come until February and March", stated the enginer. "It is then that snow which has fallen earlier in the season must be gotten rid of before plowing can continue".

The engineer expressed the opinion that the present method of snow plowing seemed entirely wrong in that the snow must be moved over and over again. He intimated that relatively inexpensive machinery would be developed in the future to clear roads of snow at much lower than present costs. Although snowplowing on the county road system had been at a minimum this year because of lack of snow, sanding operations had greatly increased. This however, is not as costly and does not offset the absence of snowplowing.

No accurate figure for the comparison of snow removal costs in Belleville for the past two winters could be obtained at the city hall. Snow removal costs in the city are figured by the year with monthly accounts not being kept separately. Snow hauling costs for the first three months last year were $4,800 with $1,600 being spent in snowplowing and approximately $1,100 for shovelling. So far this year all such expense has been saved with the exception of about $100 for shovelling.

It was pointed out by the city engineer's department, however, that one heavy fall of snow could easily jump snow removal costs by $1,000 or more.

PORTER IS KILLED, 20 PERSONS HURT IN C.P.R. WRECK

Second Section Runs Into First Section of Train at MacTier Station

7 OF INJURED R. R. MEN

Toronto, Feb. 10 (CP)—The Canadian Pacific Railway said today in an official statement that a sleeping car porter was killed, and 20 other persons suffered minor injuries early today when the second section of the C.P.R. Transcontinental train en route from Vancouver to Toronto crashed into the train's first section while it stood in the station at Mactier, Ont.

Dead is porter P. Fox of Toronto. Among the injured are 13 passengers and seven members of the train crews. The C.P.R. statement did not specify on which section the injured persons were, and gave no names other than that of the man fatally injured.

The C.P.R. statement said there will be no interruption of train service as a result of the wreck. No details of damage to the trains were given.

The accident occurred at 5.02 a.m. and its cause is under investigation.

FIVE WORKMEN INJURED

Selby, Ont., Feb. 10—(CP)—Five workmen of Richmond Township received various injuries while engaged at a barn raising on the farm of Wilfred McCracken a mile north of here Wednesday afternoon.

John Schermerhorn, a leading carpenter on the work was most seriously hurt and is suffering undetermined back injuries and will undergo an X-ray examination today. Dr. E. R. Ellicott of nearby Napanee was called to give first-aid.

Expresses Regret For Air Attack

London, Feb. 10 (CP)—The British Minister at Stockholm has been instructed to express the British government's regret to Sweden over the reported bombing and machine-gunning attack by British planes on a Swedish Red Cross ship in the Argean Sea, it was disclosed today.

A Swedish report said the ship, the Wiril, was attacked by the R.A.F. Monday at Chios. She had been chartered by the Red Cross to distribute grain between Piraeus, port of Athens, and islands in the Aegean Sea.

Official circles in London said that for some reason not yet explained there had been a last-minute change in the Wiril's sailing schedule with the result that she left for Chios four days ahead of the agreed day for sailing.

IS THAT PALE YOUNG GIRL YOUR DAUGHTER?

Parents should not ignore the depressed moods, the listless, tired air, the pallor, headaches, fickle appetite—the crying spells—so many daughters exhibit during those years when they are passing into womanhood.

If her health at this stage is not maintained by a sufficiency of good rich blood, all kinds of weaknesses may arise to make her later life unhappy.

So should you notice any of these disturbing signs in your daughter, lose no time. Get some Dr. Williams Pink Pills at your druggist. They are wonderfully effective in helping to build up iron-impoverished blood and have helped to transform thousands and thousands of sickly, pale daughters suffering from simple anemia into happy active girls full of vitality and high spirits, hungry for meals, glad to help with the housework, attractive to others. Right now simple anemia may be undermining the strength and resistance your daughter needs so badly. Don't wait—get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today.

GREAT AIR ATTACKS AID BRIDGEHEAD DEFENCE

Countless Tons Of Bombs Dropped On 5 Key Points

Germans Claim To Have Penetrated Aprilia 10 Miles North of Anzio

FOE STILL ATTACKING

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 11—(AP)—Throwing practically every available combat plane, including four-engined bombers, into one of the greatest ground-support operations ever undertaken, the Allies launched a terrific onslaught yesterday to protect their Anzio bridgehead, already converted into a bristling hedgehog by hundreds of massed guns.

(The German high command, in a broadcast communique, claimed today that German troops had penetrated into Carroceto (Aprilia) in the Anzio-Nettuno bridgehead 10 miles north of Anzio, capturing the village railway station. "Mopping up of the Aprilia area was continued," the enemy asserted.

Nazis Claim 4,000 Prisoners

(The communique also said the Allies penetrated for the third time into the northern part of Cassino, 80 miles east of Anzio, but claimed they were again thrown out. It claimed British and United States forces had lost more than 4,000 prisoners and 89 tanks in the Nettuno area.)

Countless tons of bombs smashed down on the Germans at all points, ringing the bridgehead and their main operating points about Rome as heavy bombers were diverted from long-range targets to join medium and fighter-bombers in furious blows protecting the British and American troops resisting attempts to drive them into the sea.

The bombers added the weight of their explosives to the destructive blasts arched upon the enemy by Allied artillery in "time crashes"—a method of fire control by which hundreds of big guns all place shells upon a single target area in a matter of a minute or so, often erasing the target in a single blast.

The bombers dropped their missiles on enemy troops at five key points in the highway network around the beachhead area—Albano, Cisterna, Velletri, Campoleone and Cecchina.

Report Albano Bombed

Albano, which was heavily bombed, is within 1½ miles of the Papal Summer Palace at Castel Gandolfo where, the Vatican radio said, Vatican property had been hit. There was no confirmation here of the radio report and Allied spokesmen said Allied airmen had strict instructions to avoid damage to the Palace.

But despite the fury of the air offensive, in which 850 sorties were flown as against 30 by the enemy, the Germans apparently retained the initiative on the ground and lashed out in many probing attacks at various points around the bridgehead.

The main German attacks were in the Aprilia area, where heavy fighting was still in progress, and west and southwest of Cisterna.

The Nazis used tanks in these attacks, but not in the grand manner. It was evident their main effort was yet to come, and there were indications the heavy aerial assault may have delayed it.

Over 5 Divisions Used

They continued to add to their containing force and a new division, the 65th, was identified in their line, making five full division and a brigade called up to smash the bridgehead.

The 65th participated in the Sangro river defence in eastern Sangro river defence in eastern Italy ed by the Canadian 1st division in the December battle for Ortona on the Adriatic and was taken out of line to be reorganized and refitted at Genoa. Other German units in the Anzio battleline were the Hermann Goering and 26th Armored divisions, the 29th armored Grenadiers, the 715th infantry divisions and the Reichsfuehrer SS brigade.

In Cassino on the main 5th Army front where Americans made progress with the greatest difficulty, the Germans had turned almost every building into a fortress, and each one had to be stormed individually. Allied artillery levelled the town prison which had been turned into a Nazi fort, but the Germans still fought vigorously from underground dungeons and cellars.

The Allies took five buildings yesterday after shelling them, crawling into the debris and killing the remaining Nazis with grenades, machine-guns and small arms.

Special Canadian Service Troops At Bridgehead

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Feb. 11 (CP Cable)—Canadian special service troops are fighting alongside British and United States forces on the Nettuno bridgehead south of Rome, it was learned here today.

These troops are part of a Canadian-American special service force which was previously in action on the main Allied 5th army front.

On that front the Germans dubbed them "men with funny pants and dirty faces," a field dispatch from Foster Barclay, Canadian press war correspondent related last month.

They were trained in Montana as commandos, infantrymen, paratroopers and guerillas before going to Italy, and wear composite Canadian-American uniforms of special design with flashes reading "U.S.A.-Canada" on the shoulder.

It is understood the Canadians landed early in the Nettuno operation, probably with American units and shared in the advance towards the Appian Way.

During recent German counter-attacks on the bridgehead force, they have seen heavy fighting. German shelling has been reported severe, and there have been heavy attacks by infantry and tanks.

This is probably the fiercest action they have seen, although in the mountains on the southern 5th army front they carried out a number of hazardous operations against strong enemy opposition.

Barclay in his story gave the names of several of the highly-trained Canadians in the Special Service Force, such as a pair of Kitchener, Ont., youths who are deadly with tommy-guns, rifle and dagger, Fred Molson and Vet Veltenheimer.

Others he named were Pte. M. J. Overall of Niagara Falls, Ont., Cpl. Tommy Gott of Niagara Falls, Ont., Sgts. Kenneth Lavery of Brockville, Ont., and William Stubbs of Mooretown, Ont., and Pte. Gerard Lafleche of Sturgeon Falls, Ont., and Lieut. V. C. Jackson of Winnipeg and Grimsby, Ont.

Kalinin Foresees Final Blow, Clearing Huns Out This Year

London, Feb. 11 —(CP)— The Moscow radio in a broadcast recorded here by the Soviet monitor today quoted President Michael Kalinin as telling a group of Russian workers: "I believe that this year we will deal the final blow to the Fascist invaders and completely clear the enemy from all territory of the Soviet Union."

ROOSEVELT SAYS SITUATION TENSE AT BRIDGEHEAD

Allies on the Whole Control Seas and Air President Tells Press Conference

WANTS GOOD WEATHER

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 11 —(AP)— President Roosevelt said today a very tense situation and very heavy fighting existed at the Anglo-American beachhead south of Rome but that the Allies on the whole control the seas and air.

The President told a Press Conference that we are praying for good weather, to aid sea and air operations.

He opened the conference by saying the most important news in the papers is the capture of the Huon peninsula in New Guinea, with the Australians having moved up from the southeast to join Americans coming in from the northwest. He said it was tough country and the conquest means the strip of coast along northeastern New Guinea is clear.

Defended Pipeline

Mr. Roosevelt said the question of depleted oil reserves and plans for supplies from Iran (Persia) could not be made a political issue, and he inferentially defended a projected Persian gulf-Mediterranean Sea pipeline.

His discussion of the subject was developed by questions asked him at a news conference. He expressed the opinion that the United States needs petroleum supplies from outside for this war, if it keeps on going, and for the future.

Interior Secretary Harold Ickes, as petroleum coordinator for war, has announced that the United States will construct the pipeline. Some criticism, led by Senator E. H. Moore (Rep-Okla), has arisen in congress.

Answering an inquiry about reports that Russian, British and American delegates had discussed oil marketing at the Teheran and Cairo conferences last November and December, Mr. Roosevelt said this was not done that he knew of. Likewise he said he knew nothing of a British mission coming here to discuss the question.

BLOOD DONATION AND TEN DIMES ADMISSION

Storrs, Conn., Feb. 11 —(AP)—A pint of blood and ten dimes was the admission price at a dance last night at the University of Connecticut. The blood goes to the armed forces, the dimes to the President's infantile paralysis fund. A mobile blood bank unit from Hartford will redeem the blood pledge cards given by the dancers.

Have YOU Bought YOUR Share?

Service at sea is arduous most of the time, particularly so during cold, stormy weather, and it is made more difficult if the vessel is a small one as are the destroyers, corvettes and minesweepers. When the men come off duty they are tired and need rest and relaxation. Most of the patrol ships are not equipped with the comforts which we associate with ocean going vessels and so, many cities in Canada have been asked to furnish these extras that mean so much to the crew who are fighting our battles and doing a splendid job of it as we know.

Belleville has been honored by being asked to take on the task of making life easier on a corvette which is to be given the name of "Belleville" when it is commissioned.

Most people will think this is particularly fitting especially when we consider that about 600 boys from the Belleville district have joined the Navy. Only one other centre in Canada has a greater proportionate number of enlistments in this service than has Belleville. This is something of which we can be mighty proud, but it, also, carries with it an obligation to live up to.

* * *

To demonstrate our goodwill in acknowledgment of the honor of having a fine vessel named after our city, a campaign has been under way in the city for nearly two weeks. The purpose is to raise funds with which to provide the extra comforts, accessories and clothing for the crew and $3,500 has been asked for. So far the results have not been too encouraging, and only a week is left to raise the larger share of this amount. We know there have been plenty of demands for money for one thing and another, but because of the nature of the campaign it was felt there would be a popular response in a purely voluntary way. Small donations are what is needed, but there must be lots of them. In that way hundreds of citizens could feel that they have a real share and interest in the corvette "Belleville." Her crew, as well, would be proud of the fact that they served on a ship named after a city which took such a real interest in their ship. Everyone likes to be appreciated and sailors are no different from anyone else in that regard.

* * *

This is an opportunity where every person can do his or her share in putting this campaign over the top. It should be a matter of pride to provide the money without having to be called on personally for it. Let us all have a stake in the "Belleville" and don't delay until tomorrow but do it NOW. Slip that dollar bill or more into an envelope and mail it with your name to any one of our bank branches or the Comptroller at the City Hall, Mr. Harold Bateman.

Says King Must Act With Frankness In Matter of McNaughton's 'Ill Health'

Chicago, Feb. 11—(C)—The Chicago Daily News, in a copyright story by Victor Gordon Lennox, said yesterday that "Lt.-Gen. Andrew (Andy) G. L. McNaughton's refusal to endorse the Canadian government's announcment that he has given up command of Canada's forces in Britain because of 'prolonged ill health' promises to provoke a parliamentary debate in Ottawa with possible intra-commonwealth repercussions unless Premier W. L. Mackenzie King acts with courage and frankness."

Lennox, a war correspondent formerly stationed in Britain, wrote:-

"Using a well-understood formula, the Canadian government attributed McNaughton's retirement to ill health in order to avoid just the type of controversy that has now been provoked by his challenge.

"'Andy' insists he is perfectly fit and demands that those responsible for stating the contrary establish the basis for their announcement.

"Because he has been built up in Canada as a National leader of exceptional brilliance, who is mainly responsible for the existence today of a first-class Canadian army, McNaughton's enforced retirement may be seized by the parliamentary opposition as a stick with which to beat the Mackenzie King administration.

"A dramatic aspect concerns McNaughton's relations with Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, commander of the British Invasion Ground Forces. Several months ago the British press carried rumors that McNaughton would be retired because he could not see eye to eye with Montgomery.

"As a war correspondent stationed in Britain until recently, I can state that the British High Command was highly impressed with McNaughton when he first went to Britain, in 1939, to take command of Canadian forces.

"There came a change of heart when invasion exercises were held off the British coast last March. It became impossible to escape the conclusion that McNaughton, a former scientist for all his excellence, might not prove an inspired director of tactical operations in the field.

"Now that public discussion seems inevitable, it is possible that Mackenzie King will tear to shreds the rumor that long credited him with attaching a special condition to the sending of Canadian troops to Britain—that the troops should be employed only for defence of the British Isles or for French liberation via a western invasion.

"It may now appear that the real obstacle to Canadian troops being sent to other theatres was none other than McNaughton. He is said to have had an overwhelming personal ambition to build up a single Canadian army in Britain under his own command and to have opposed every suggestion that these battle-hungry warriors be sent to other more active theatres."

7 RED SPEARHEADS THRUST AGAINST TRAPPED NAZIS

Germans Being Slaughtered Like Sheep on Open Steppes, Says Red Star

DEATH OR CAPTURE

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Feb. 11—(AP)—The Red Army's seven spearheads thrusting against the steadily-closing circle of death around Nazi forces in the Dnieper bend were hacking German-held salients to pieces today and relentlessly cutting down all who refused to surrender.

Red Star, Soviet army organ, said the Germans were being slaughtered like sheep on the open steppes and declared the entire garrisons of the village of Yakhnov and Myled had been exterminated as two Russian columns isolated them from other Nazi units retreating toward Korsun.

Coming events may prove Korsun one of the bloodiest spots on the eastern front if the Nazis continue to fight back and refuse to give up in the face of sure death.

The corridor now had been reduced to a bare five miles' width and 15 miles' length and inside were the remnants of 10 German divisions—between 100,000 and 150,000 German soldiers whose slaughter or capture promised to be the greatest single German disaster since Stalingrad.

Civilian Population in Circle

Many inhabitants of Korsun and other towns within the circle have made their way to the Soviet lines by night, but the civilian population within the ring of Soviet guns was still a problem. Bent on wiping out every German, the Russians were forced to use tanks and Tommy guns in running down their foe and refrain from using their heavy artillery in a blazing barrage.

The indications are that no German officer had been able to escape the encirclement in the last 48 hours, and it was believed a number of high ranking Nazis were still caught within the Soviet ring.

To the south another body of Germans was threatened with encirclement in the Krivoi Rog area by Red Army thrusts to the north, south and east of that mineral centre, but the Germans showed no signs of attempting to pull out.

Even if they pulled out it would be a race for them to get to Kherson at the Dnieper's mouth or at Nikolaev before the Russians cut their escape route in the advance westward from Apostolovo.

Five Months' Campaign Cost Japanese a Division of 14,000 Men

TWO UNITS JOINED

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 11—(AP)—Complete occupation of Huon Peninsula, New Guinea, and the end of a five-months' campaign which cost the Japanese a division of 14,000 men was announced here today.

Australian troops, including veterans of the North African campaign and American soldiers, many of whom had triumphed over the Japanese at Buna on the Papuan Peninsula of New Guinea last year joined forces on a hot, coastal plain yesterday, chopping off another piece of Japan's captured territory.

The Aussies had fought and cut their way through the jungle for 150 miles along the coast, since launching the campaign with a landing effort north of Finschhafen Sept. 22.

The Americans invaded Saidor from the sea Jan. 2 and followed the coast 14 miles to old Yagomi, where the Australians met them yesterday.

Whole Division Destroyed

Today's communique said the great bulk of the augmented Japanese division, which consisted of three infantry regiments, a field artillery regiment, two engineer regiments and auxiliary services, had been destroyed in the pincer action which preceded the joining of the two Allied forces.

The combined Allied force may next move on Madang, Japanese base about 60 miles from Saidor. American bomber crews recently reported evidence that the enemy already had abandoned Madang.

The communique reported another raid on Rabaul, the heavily-hit Japanese base in New Britain, but made no mention of opposition to the attack. Enemy interception has been growing weaker in the air over Rabaul.

Airplanes and warships have teamed in blasting away at Japanese-held Marshall Islands now imperilled by American conquest of Kwajalein, it was announced at Pearl Harbor.

Yesterday, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz disclosed that Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday planes of many types dumped 114 tons of explosives on enemy bases in the mid-Pacific group. Wake Island also was bombed.

AIRLINER WITH 24 PERSONS ABOARD BELIEVED WRECK

American Plane Said To Have Crashed Into Mississippi River Early Today

ALL U. S. CITIZENS

Memphis, Feb. 11 (AP)—The coast guard reported today drag lines had located part of an American Airlines Transcontinental plane that crashed into the Mississippi River with 24 persons aboard.

A cryptic radio message from patrol boats to headquarters here said merely "piece of plane found." Later contact with the boat said it "definitely" was part of the plane.

The coast guard and U.S. engineers were conducting the search in a 22-foot channel 15 miles below Memphis where an employee of the engineers said he saw the ship crash and explode.

(At New York, American Airlines issued a list of passengers believed aboard the airliner. All were United States residents).

Charley Williams, watchman for a U.S. engineers crew about 15 miles south of Memphis, said he saw the plane go down.

"There was a terrific explosion and fire," Williams said. "It seemed to sink immediately."

Williams and his foreman, W. R. Wellborn, went to the crash scene in a boat but found no trace of the plane nor oil spots on the water.

"I heard the plane coming," Williams said. "It was quite low and appeared to be tipped a little to the right but the engines seemed to be all right and there were no flames.

"It angled into the river about half way across."

The Memphis Airlines office said the plane, en route from Los Angeles to New York, was last reported at 12:31 a.m. E.D.T. as it neared the river. Its gas supply was sufficient to keep it aloft until about 5 a.m.

Aboard the plane were 21 passengers and three crew members. All were believed to be U.S. citizens

The plane left Little Rock, Ark., at 11:50 p.m. and was last reported seven minutes before it was due here.

"No trouble was reported then," station manager J. O. Conner said.

KOTA HEAVILY ATTACKED

London, Feb. 11—(CP)—A German broadcast of a Finnish communique said today that 150 planes presumably Russian, attacked Kotka, 70 miles east of Helsinki on the coast of the Gulf of Finland, for two hours last night.

MEETS UNCLE IN ITALY

Sarnia, Feb. 11 —(CP)— Somewhere in the mud and mire of Italy Trooper Tuxis Beattie, despatch rider for a Canadian tank regiment, encountered a detachment of the Irish Regiment of Canada. The first acquaintance he met was his uncle, Pte. Basil MacDonald, son of Mrs. John MacDonald of Sarnia.

Defence in Depth May Be German Tactics When Invasion Launched

(By ROSS MUNRO)
(C. P. War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 11 (CP. Cable) — Invasion of Western Europe will be a lot more than just landing masses of Allied troops on certain beaches at certain times.

It will be the toughest and bloodiest operation of this war for the British, American and Canadian troops unless the situation changes radically between now and "D Day." The Germans are going to fight for every mile and every shattered building in every blasted town. There will be Ortonas and Cassinos in Western Europe. The Germans have had plenty of time to get ready and they probably have done their usual thorough job.

Two principal defence plans are open to Marshal Rommel and his anti-invasion forces of between 40 and 50 divisions scattered from Norway to Southern France.

1. They can stand and fight on the beaches and coastal strip, putting their main strength forward to try to smash the invaders before they land or as they are first getting organized ashore.

2. They can keep a strong screen on the coast and hold the main force inland to counter-attack the beachheads or failing that, stand on a prepared inland line. This is defence in depth.

It seems unlikely that in the west the Germans would risk their main forces in the coastal strip because of the tremendous Allied air power and the threat of airborne landings inland.

The alternative—defence in depth—probably is far sounder from the German point of view. This strategy would be based on the assumption that Allied assault forces with devastating support from the air and sea could not be prevented from getting ashore and gaining fair-sized beachheads in the first day or so.

There would be fighting for the bridgehead—for it would be a miracle if landings like those on Sicily and the toe of Italy were repeated—but the big battles would come later when the German commanders sized up the situation as they have done at Nettuno and decided where to strike with their massed divisions.

This is the shape the invasion battles may take. But whichever way the campaign develops there does not seem to be the slightest chance, short of collapse of Germany herself, that there will not be grim and terrible engagements soon after the landing.

The German air force is a question mark. It is likely being held back for the big Allied attack when it will probably come up to strike London, the invasion embarkation ports and landing points.

Frankfurt Target Of U. S. Bombers In Daylight Raid

Assault to Flatten Industrial Centre On Since Jan. 29

Other U.S. Bombers Attack Targets in Calais Area and 'Rocket Gun' Coast

BERLIN IS HIT

London, Feb. 11—(AP)—American heavy bombers blasted Frankfurt with tons of high explosive again today, striking the already hard-hit southwest German industrial and transport centre in daylight for the second time in four days and the fourth time since Jan. 29.

While this devastating assault to flatten Frankfurt was in progress, other United States heavy bombers attacked military installations in the Pas-de-Calais area and American medium bombers in their ninth operation in 11 days struck other targets in the "rocket gun" sector of northern France.

Today's operations kept the unprecedented Allied aerial assault going through another 24-hour cycle and followed yesterday's mighty attacks on the German manufacturing city of Burnswick and the Gilze-Rijen air base in Holland which precipitated furious air fights in which American heavy bombers and fighters were credited officially with downing 84 enemy planes.

Escorted by Fighters

Fighters escorted the bombers to Frankfurt and France.

Heavy bombers of the United States Army Air Force now have struck continental objectives in 12 of the past 15 days.

The assault to flatten Frankfurt has been under way since Jan. 29 when a record force of more than 800 heavy bombers hit the city with a daylight record of 1,800 tons of explosives.

It was estimated unofficialy today that more than 3,500 tons of bombs rained on that manufacturing and communications hub in three previous daylight attacks.

The rumble of explosives rolled back across the English Channel this morning as the bombers hit the Pas-de-Calais area.

Mosquitos Attack Berlin

The daylight forays came in the wake of R. A. F. Mosquito attacks on Berlin and targets in Western Germany last night and mine laying in German waters from which all R. A. F. planes returned safely. R. C. A. F. planes also carried out mine-laying operations without loss, it was announced

The Mosquito raid was their first attack on Berlin since the night of Feb. 6 but they have been over Western Germany every night this month but one. Berlin has not had a heavy attack since the night of Jan. 30.

There was no early report of losses today but a U. S. communique said 29 American bombers and eight fighters were lost in yesterday's raids.

RSM Angus Duffy Sent to England For Complete Rest

With the Canadian Forces in Italy, Feb. 11. (CP)— RSM. Angus Duffy, Trenton, Ont., one of the Canadian Army's best known and best liked sergeant majors, has returned to England on exchange. His place with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was taken by RSM. G. P. Fox of Toronto.

Duffy has been with the H.P.E. since 1924 and has been RSM. since 1939. He earned the rest by his conscientious work out here but left "under protest" and determined to return.

"He was wearing himself out", said an officer who described Duffy as "the kingpin of the battalion".

Predicts High Winds But Not Much Snow

(By The Canadian Press)

High winds, driving a fortunately light snow before them, gave southern and western Ontario residents a slight scare today. They thought the weather was winding up for a real blizzard, but Frank O'Donnell, the chief forecaster in the Dominion Meteorological Branch in Toronto, says it isn't so.

O'Donnell said today that the winds will continue for the rest of the day, but in diminishing violence and there will be no more than light snow. He said it would probably be slightly colder all through Ontario tomorrow, but with less wind.

The wind-driven snow blanketed the Ontario region west of Toronto overnight, but the general lightness of the snowfall prevented drifts big enough to block the back roads. Some Ontario points—including Hamilton and Guelph—said that if the storm continued today some roads would be blocked by nightfall. Windsor had the heaviest snow reported—an estimated five inches. Snow also was reported at Woodstock, Welland, London and Kitchener.

North Bay reported crisp and cold weather, with no snow. Kingston, Belleville and Peterborough reported fine—if crisp—winter weather.

INVENT NEW MACHINE

Burbank, Calif., Feb. 11. (AP)—Lockheed Aircraft Corporation yesterday disclosed the invention of a machine designed to set from 33,600 to 75,000 rivets an hour compared with a normal hourly rate of 350.

NEW TAXI RATES SET IN KINGSTON

A new taxi rate of tariffs has been established in Kingston, as announced by Judge Reynolds, chairman of the Kingston Police Commission. From any point within the city to another point within the city (the C.N.R. station included) a fare of 35c may be charged for one passenger, but if more than one passenger is on the same trip then the fee shall be 25c per passenger. Higher rates outside of the city were also adopted.

FARMER GETS 4-POUND FISH IN WATER HOLE

A fish line and hook with varied and fancy bait is not needed for successful fishing in the marshes of the county to the south it is revealed in a story emanating from Prince Edward County. The story concerns a Victoria district farmer who landed a nice four-pound pickerel with the assistance of an axe—of all things.

Ross Vanclief, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Vanclief, Victoria, one day this week drove the cows to water in a nearby marsh when he noticed a nice-sized fish in the water hole which had not frozen over from the night before. He took a swing at it with the axe he was carrying and stunned it with the blow. He scooped it out and the Vanclief family had pickerel for dinner.

Pickerel are almost unknown to frequent marsh waters in this district and it is considered a mystery how the fish worked its way nearly ten miles from the Bay of Quinte at this time of year.

C. Donan K.C., upon the death of Mr. Donnan's brother in Buffalo yesterday. Col. and Mrs. Donnan left today to attend the funeral.

You can extend the sincere regrets of my court and the Frontenac and Lennox counties Bars to Col. Donnan," Magistrate Garvin stated directing his words of sympathy to Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson.

Local solicitors present in the court included A. B. Collins K.C., Charles A. Payne K.C., E. O. Butler and E. E. Follwell.

RAYMOND McCOY SENT TO CONCHIE CAMP

Raymond A. McCoy of this city, was placed in the Chalk River conscientious objectors' internment camp yesterday by Constable M. A. McNairn of the local detachment of the R.C.M.P. McCoy was taken to Chalk River at the expiration of a month's jail sentence served here after being convicted before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on a charge of an infraction of the National Selective Service regulations. McCoy pleaded he was a conscientious objecter to serving in the armed services, but failed to report to the Chalk River camp, when ordered.

AULD PLEADS GUILTY TO ORILLIA CHARGE

John Auld, who was arrested in Belleville while wearing numerous Canadian army insignias and later sentenced to serve six months in the Ontario reformatory after pleading guilty to stealing an airman's wallet containing $51.00, today appeared in local police court before Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston, on a theft charge preferred in Orillia. Again Auld pleaded guilty and was sentenced to three months, that shall run concurrently with the terms meted out previously by Magistrate Lloyd. The Orillia charges were dispatched to Belleville by Chief Carson of that town in order to curtail court administration costs.

Earl Onderdonk One of Youngest P. E. Co. Wardens

One of the youngest wardens ever to assume that office in Prince Edward County, Mr. Earl Onderdonk, reeve of Ameliasburg Township, has been given that honor after only six years experience in municipal council. At the inaugural session of County Council he was elected Warden on the first ballot.

Elected to township council six years ago, Warden Onderdonk served in that capacity for three years then stepping up to deputy reeve a position, which he held for two terms. He is now beginning his second term as reeve of his township.

Having wide experience in community affairs, Warden Onderdonk is past president of the Ameliasburg Conservative Association and is serving on the directorate of the Ontario Agricultural Council for a three year term. For the past ten years he has been a trustee of Ameliasburg S.S. No. 3 school, while during the past three Victory Loans he has acted as chairman of the township committee. He was auditor of the Quinte Cheese Factory for five years.

Son of Mr. John Onderdonk, who operates a 200-acre farm in his township, Warden Onderdonk married the daughter of the ex-reeve in his county. His wife was formerly Miss Mabel Lloyd, daughter of Mr. Adam Lloyd of Hillier. They have a three-year-old daughter, Joan. A brother, Keith Onderdonk, is in business in Belleville, in the form of Weeve and Onderdonk.

Son Given Time To Pay Fines

A father and his son appeared in city police court here today before Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston, facing four charges of infractions to the Highway Traffic Act. They were Ennis Hancock and his 22-year-old son, Francis, of R. R. No. 2, Belleville.

The son, Francis, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving without an operator's licence and also to careless driving, while the older Hancock pleaded guilty to a charge of permitting an unlicenced person to drive his motor car and also of careless driving. The quartette of charges arose out of two accidents that the Hancock car was involved in at different times and places on local streets. The younger Hancock was assessed $10 and costs on each count and given two weeks in which to raise the assessment.

However, when Magistrate Garvin learned the older Hancock was supporting an invalid wife and family he remanded the fines for Ennis Hancock until called upon, providing, however, he paid $6.50 costs forthwith. Which he did.

Trenton and District

Majors T. S. 'Stan' Ketcheson, O. O'Connor-Fenton Wounded

Trenton, Feb. 11—Major T. S. (Stan) Ketcheson is reported wounded in Italy Jan. 31st., according to official information received by his father Mr. Walter Ketcheson of the Continental Can. Co. here, although the extent of his injuries were not ascertained.

Major Ketcheson was with the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment for several years previous to outbreak of war and left for overseas with the First Battalion in December 1939, as a captain. Shortly after his arrival in England he was promoted to Major and spent considerable time in taking various courses in army work. He returned to Canada last January and spent about nine months at different camps throughout the Dominion as an Instructor. He returned to England on Sept. 7th and left for Italy and his regiment.

Two brothers are also serving overseas, Lance Bombardier Douglas Ketcheson who enlisted in August 1943 is with the Provost Corps in England, and J. Horace Ketcheson who enlisted with the Signallers from Kingston and went overseas in Sept. 1943 is now in Italy.

Word has been received by friends here that Major O. C. O'Connor-Fenton of the Hastings & Prince Edward Regiment has been wounded in Italy, receiving shrapnel in the knee.

Major O'Connor-Fenton, who is a graduate of Bishop's College, Que., went over with the regiment as a lieutenant, being promoted to captain and major.

His summer home is at Presqu'Ile point where he has many friends. Shortly before leaving for Italy he was married, while on leave in Scotland, to an English girl, whom he met after his arrival in the British Isles.

Heavy Property Damage.

When a car and a truck collided under the C.N.R. subway on the Wooler road at the north end of Trenton on Wednesday about 4.20 p.m. considerable damage was done to both vehicles.

The car was owned by LaFleur's Taxi and driven by Thomas H. Coltman, Dufferin Ave., while the truck was a Quinte transport driven by Harry P. Burkett of Frankford.

The transport was proceeding north and the car in a southward direction and for no apparent reason collided, when directly under the subway. The left front fender, bumper, grill and hood of the car were badly smashed, while the truck received a damaged left running board. Neither driver was injured

Many Matters Are Considered As Belleville Presbytery Meets

Evangelism and Social Service Report is Presented

VACANCY NOMINEES

Study of social and moral problems, support of every effort to combat venereal disease and a "pledge to combat this danger by more diligent moral instruction and religious reading", opposition to any attempt to render ineffective "the modest restrictions now in force" in regard to the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages and approval of the speech of Prime Minister King of December 1942, and support of any effort to open a little wider the doors to war refugees were urged at the Winter session of the Belleville Presbytery of the United Church which met at the Tabernacle United Church on Tuesday, with the Rev. Dr. J. Semple, chairman of Presbytery, presiding.

The laymen of the Presbytery met separately and brought in a recommendation that the minister's salary on any charge be not less than $1,500 a year. It was decided to send this recommendation to the laymen of every charge within the Presbytery.

The Rev. H. A. Bunt of Deseronto, conducted the devotional service as Presbytery opened.

Rev. Dr. J. Semple Nominated.

Having been advised of certain vacancies in church offices Presbytery made the following nominations:

Associate Secretary of the Department of Evangelism and Social Service—Rev. Dr. James Semple.

Secretary of the Missionary and Maintenance Fund Committee — Rev. Denzil Ridout.

Moderator of the General Council—Rev. Dr. Jesse Arnup, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference—Rev. Dr. Basil Thompson.

Rev. Dr. Semple, nominated for the associate secretaryship of the Board of Evangelism and Social Reform has been chairman of the Bay of Quinte Conference and of the settlement committee of this Conference for ten years.

Tribute was paid to Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher of Marmora who has accepted a call to St. Paul's United Church, Bowmanville. Dr. Fletcher has been an active member of this Presbytery, a former chairman and enthusiastic worker in many phases of its work.

An encouraging report was given by the Missionary and Maintenance Committee by the chairman, Mr. H. B. Fetterley. Only a few charges failed to increase their contributions during 1943. Since the books are open for a few days still these charges may yet show an increase. The total for the Presbytery exceeds last year's by about $2000. A similar increase is maintained throughout the whole church which has raised $65,000 more than last year. Missionaries on the frontier and across the seas have been assured that the church at home is behind their efforts.

The Home Missions Committee recommended a grant of $500 to the Ridge appointment on the Coe Hill charge to aid in building a new church. The property committee gave its sanction to this building proposal and also to the Queensboro congregation's plan to build an addition to their church which will will used as a community centre.

The committee on Church Publications reported an increase in the number of subscriptions to the United Church Observer. It reported also that the first printing of the Bible in Canada is in process at this time by the United Church Publishing House. The first printing will be ready in the spring.

The Committee on Evangelism and Social Service of which Rev. E. M. Cook is chairman presented a lengthy report. It brought to the attention of the members of the Presbytery certain social and moral conditions with which the people ought to be familiar and which call for social and evangelistic effort on behalf of the Christian church.

Moral Problems.

The following statistics give the picture: There are 400 more wards in the care of the Children's Aid Societies than ever before. The number of juveniles under 16 employed increased from 2146 in 1939 to 9415 in 1941. This is for Ontario alone. Juvenile delinquency in all of Canada has increased from a ratio of 87 per 100,000 in 1939 to 101 per 100,000 in 1942. The most notable exceptions are Nova Scotia and New Brunswick. Illegitimacy has increased about 10% since 1939. The total of such births being about 10,000 per year. The number of divorces in Canada in 1918 was 114, in 1926, 790, in 1936, 2226, in 1941, 2461.

Combatting Venereal Disease

It was pointed out that the Hon. R. P. Vivian, Provincial Minister of Health, has recently stated that venereal disease has become the greatest single public health problem in Ontario. There were over 1000 more venereal infections reported in Ontario in 1943 than during 1942, making more than 13,000 in 1943 alone. For every case reported there is reason to believe that there are two more not reported. The overall picture for the Dominion is proportionately the same. The following resolution was passed: "Having become aware of the seriousness of venereal disease, both actual and potential, in community, family and personal life, we pledge ourselves to combat it by more diligent moral instruction and religious teaching. We also fully support all measures thus far taken by the Dominion and Provincial Departments of Health and urge pre-marital and pre-natal tests for venereal disease and also on all other occasions when individuals appear before medical practitioners for examination. We commend Lt.-Col. D. H. Williams and Hon. R. P. Vivian for their services and statements made by them."

Liquor Sale Restrictions

The situation with regard to the sale and consumption of alcoholic beverages was reviewed and approval given to the Prime Minister's speech of December, 1942. Opposition was expressed towards any attempt to discredit or render ineffective the modest restrictions now in force.

The report commended the Farm Forum and the Citizens' Forum radio programs heard Monday and Tuesday evenings respectively at 8.30, as real and effective schools of democracy.

Increasing Danger of Race Prejudice

Attention was called to the increasing danger of racial prejudice and even persecution on the North American continent, "an insidious growth whose roots are going down deeply but quietly even among ourselves." The trend of the times calls for vigorous Christian witness and protest. Full support was asked for the efforts of the Board of Evangelism and Social Service and other co-operating agencies in their efforts to open the doors a little wider to war refugees desiring to enter this country of freedom.

Concluding their report the committee called upon the church—ministers and laymen — to make the effort of evangelism dominant at the present time. All social and moral problems are fundamentally spiritual problems and it is the task of the church to win men to Christ so that His spirit will direct their lives and His kingdom become their supreme goal.

POLICE COURT

Melbourne Barriage, 18, of this city, pleaded guilty to two charges of stealing from the Canadian National Railways upon being arraigned before Magistrate J. B. Garvin of Kingston, here today. Sentence was postponed for one week after the accused youth had pleaded guilty to stealing cigarettes, valued at $200 and automobile tools valued at over $30. The thefts were committed over a period of eleven months during which time Barriage admitted to C.N.R. Constable A. Kendricks, that he had entered freight cars and stolen the goods.

E. E. Follwell, counsel for the accused, addressed the court and pointed out Barriage had no previous criminal record and had been employed by the railway for over two years. "He also made a voluntary confession as to the theft of the tools", added Mr. Follwell; who doubted if his client could make full restitution.

Asks for Enlargement.

S. G. Robertson, assistant crown attorney, asked for a week's enlargement after learning that Barriage had made application for enlistment in the Navy. His Worship admitted Barriage to $500 bail and enlarged the matter for one week for sentence.

Robt. S. Thomson, Toronto, who pleaded guilty to the theft of 25c from milk bottles in court last week, was sentenced to seven days, to date from the time of his arrest. "You can go now", remarked Magistrate Garvin.

Week's Remand Given.

Frank Duby, Belleville, appeared on a charge of causing wilful damage of his employer's machinery. "I was only retained on this case yesterday and would like a week's enlargement", requested E. O. Butler, counsel for the accused. Duby was allowed his liberty upon his own recognizance of $200.

Jessie Robinson, Cannifton Road, was assessed $7.50 after pleading guilty to a careless driving charge while on another careless driving count Norman Dobbin of Peterborough, paid $60.50 which included costs. The latter two charges saw the accused persons settled their matters out of court.

Mountain View Station Stages Splendid Show

One of the best boxing shows to be presented in the Belleville-Trenton area within recent months was staged at Mountain View Air Station Thursday evening, when a group of glove artists from the Kingston army camp competed with air station boys. Each and every bout was keenly contested with the large crowd of spectators being kept on their toes throughout the contest. The Air Force boys were coached by Cpl. Vic Bagnato, former Canadian Golden Gloves boxing champion of Toronto, while the Kingston boys were coached by Ronnie Headley, former Canadian welterweight champ from Ottawa, and Walter Hicks, well-known boxer from Toronto.

The bang-up show was made possible through the kind permission of Group Captain R. C. Ripley, commanding officer, with the co-operation of Flying Officer Carnie and Fred Tadman, K.C. supervisor.

BIRTH

CLARKE — At Belleville General Hospital on Monday, February 7th., 1944, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clarke (nee Bernice Farrell), Holloway, a son.

IN MEMORIAM

McMULLEN — In cherished memory of my beloved wife and our dear mother, Katharine McMullen, who entered eternal rest, February 11, 1943.

Deep in the heart lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest.
In memory's frame we shall keep it,
Because she was one of the best.
Our lips cannot tell how we miss her,
Our hearts cannot tell what to say.
God alone knows how we miss her
In a home that is lonesome today.

The Russians were "wiping them out", Moscow reported. Associated Press Moscow dispatches said the exhausted Germans, once estimated at more than 100,000 men, were being captured at an increasingly high rate. They also were dying under the crossfire of Russian artillery firing into the trap.

Korsun, pivot of the survivors' lines in the Cherkasy area, was reported under Soviet artillery fire and the Russians were within seven miles of the stronghold of two points.

Same Pattern at Stalingrad.

The same pattern that preceded the Stalingrad surrender of Field Marshal Von Paulus' 6th Army was being repeated in Korsun. A Tass broadcast from Moscow said the German commander, Lt.-Gen. Schermmerman, had sent all available men— even stretcher bearers and bakers—of the German 8th

Thousands of British Troops Trapped in Beachhead Salient On February 3rd But Extricated

Enemy Only Able to Interpose 1,000 Men Between Troops and Main Allied Force

TANK DESTROYERS USED

By HOMER BIGART
New York Herald Tribune Correspondent. Distributed by The Canadian Press.

With the 5th Army in Italy on the Anagio Beachhead, Feb. 8 (Delayed)—It now may be revealed that a German counter-attack on the night of Feb. 3 attained initial success and succeeded for several hours in trapping thousands of British troops in a salient that then existed north of Carroceto and south of Rome.

Fortunately, the enemy was able to interpose fewer than 1,000 troops between the isolated British spearhead and the main Allied force. These troops were supported by six or eight 60-ton Tiger tanks that appeared at dawn on Feb. 4 on a ride, only a few hundred yards from a highway which was the only possible route of escape.

The remarkable work of tank destroyers in knocking out four Tigers aided in restoring the situation. In the fierce, confused fighting, the British infantry not only broke up the trap but took 300 prisoners.

The bulk of the British force was extricated. Some equipment was lost.

Until late Friday, the situation remained disturbing. Reserves were put on the alert by the enemy capture of high ground dominating the main highway and preventing tanks from coming to the aid of the isolated force. A counter-attack launched from the main Allied line narrowed the gap somewhat while British 25-pounders held off reinforcements.

The German attack started an hour before midnight Thursday. Every enemy gun seemed trained on the long, thin salient where the British spearhead had halted 18 miles from Rome.

Two-Mile Salient

Their salient was about two miles long and scarcely a mile wide. The Germans were quick to exploit this extended position.

At 11.50 p.m. Tuesday enemy infantry was pouring through a wide breach and captured three British tanks. Reserves were altered. At midnight came the disturbing news from the left. "Situation very bad. No answer from left flank."

It was estimated that at midnight, nearly a battalion of Germans had broken through. They overran the main highway far behind the British line and for a while the salient was tightly sealed.

Oddly, the Germans failed to maintain pressure frontally. Some forward units were therefore able to fall back and, in bitter fighting, clear the highway. The gap was closed at 2.30 a.m., and an hour later some companies were able to report: "situation normal."

Several enemy pockets remained, however, and toward dawn the Germans began pouring in again from the right.

Dawn found Mark VI tanks (Tigers) squatting on the low ridge a few hundred yards east of the highway. Tank destroyers took them on and, ignoring casualties, finally succeeded in driving them off.

But now the pressure on the left had increased greatly.

At 11 o'clock, the Germans threw in fresh troops and sent a large number of tanks against both sides of the neck of the salient. For a while contact was maintained by motorcycle messengers who sped down the highway under mortar and rifle fire.

At four o'clock, an Allied relief force attacked from Carroceto with a mission to close the one-mile gap.

To reach their lines of combat, the British relief force sped by truck up the highway plastered by enemy shells. The moving was remarkably free of casualties — only one driver was wounded.

As in most battles, opportunities for a decision were forfeited by both sides. The Germans failed to commit enough troops to seal off the salient. The British, with too few tanks among the forward elements, passed up the opportunity to capture hundreds of Germans in crashing through to the main defensive line. As it was, scores of Germans went free because at the moment no infantry was at hand to round them up.

Willkie Outlines Farm Program

Des Moines, Feb. 11. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie, a probable contender for the Republican Presidential nomination, in an article in the March issue of Sucessfupl Farming Magazine outlined his own eight-point farm program:

1.—"Correct the glaring administrative weaknesses in the war effort on the farm front".

2.—"Then move onward to a program based on expanding markets".

3.—"Drop production control and produce to the limit.

4.—"Develop a sound national conservation program.

5.—"Support farm prices at a fair level and maintain basic-commodity loans.

6.—"Develop the distribution of nutritive foods on the widest basis possible.

7.—"Pursue every scientific possibility to expand the farmers' market.

8.—"Finally, co-operate with the world to make a prosperous agriculture at home".

Partial Siamese Twin Made One At Mayo Clinic

Winnipeg, Feb. 11. (CP)—Through an operation described as a "miracle of modern medicine and science", 12-year-old Ernie Defort, of Winnipeg, a partial Siamese twin, has become a normal, healthy and spirited schoolboy, the Winnipeg Tribune says in a copyright story published today.

Born with two extra arms, two extra legs, an extra liver and two extra kidneys, but only a single head and one heart, Ernie was taken by his mother alst October to the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., where the delicate operation was successfully performed.

When the bandages were removed six weeks latef, Ernie was a normal boy, except that he appears to have the intelligence of a youth or 18 or 19, the Tribune says. Today he is well up in his classes and participates in all the athletics of his grade.

No Hope for Increase In Sugar Ration Or in Canning Sugar

Ottawa, Feb. 10. (CP)—S. R. Noble, Prices Board Sugar Administrator, today described the world sugar supply as "extremely tight" and said there was no hope for any increase this year in the Canadian ration or in the canning sugar allocation.

"The world supply isn't great enough", he said in an official statement. "As a matter of fact, signs point to an over-all world shortage. The most optimistic authorities are hoping only that we will 'get by' in 1944.

"Do not be misled by stories about 'warehouses filled with sugar', in Canada, or about large shipments being received. Certainly there are warehouses filled with sugar. Sugar is an annual crop and we take delivery when we can get it. Storage stocks are based on actual needs. If we did not have some stocks on hand we would have to cut the ration right away".

Mr. Noble said shipping no longer is the all-important factor affecting the Canadian sugar supply. When Canada first rationed sugar it was because there were not enough ships to bring it into the country. Rationing now is continued because of deficient world stocks.

The Dominion depends upon importation for four-fifths of her sugar supply, allocated from a world pool under an agreement between Britain, the United States and Canada.

Robert A. Elliott

News of death which came suddenly to R. A. Elliott of Deloro on Wednesday evening was received with sorrow by a great circle of friends and by the community and country at large. Occupying a position of the greatest importance as general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company he had come in contact with business men and the people generally and became widely known.

Despite the heavy duties of his position, Mr. Elliott had for years played a prominent part in the life of the community in which he resided, both village and county, and the larger community of the Province and Dominion. His association with the Deloro plant was one of long and devoted service extending over a period of nearly thirty years which saw his rise to become the general manager. He served the village of Deloro with wholehearted devotion in the duties of his office as a member of the municipal council and later as the reeve of the municipality and as a member of the County of Hastings Council by virtue of his office as reeve.

His intense interest in every phase of work brought him prominence in his profession of engineering and latterly he had been president of the Professional Engineers of the Province. Always interested in sports and in baseball in particular his unbounded zeal gave him position after position in the baseball world which called him to the presidency of the C.O.B.L. and the O.B.A. as well as to membership on the Athletic Board of Control at Queen's University. As the head of a great industry employing a large number of men Mr. Elliott knew the very great importance of athletics and sports in relation to industry and in the improvement of the character and morale of the individual player and worker and the development of the life of the community.

One of the last positions of responsibility he had held was the Hastings County chairmanship in connection with the latest Victory Loan. His passionate patriotism, business skill and wide acquaintance, experience and the sense of confidence with which he inspired the committee and the canvassers made his appointment one that was immensely popular and very successful as the results of the canvass proved.

Mr. Elliott was a close follower of Canadian politics and had occupied positions of president and secretary in the local riding Conservative Association.

His genial character, spirit of good will, his interest in the people with whom he came in contact at all times, his natural gifts as a man of science, and as a business executive, his zeal in every noble cause which he adopted made him outstanding in the life of Deloro, of Hastings and the wider sphere of the national life, brought him wide popularity and recognition for his many worthy qualities and endowments and gave him a place in the hearts and minds of all who knew him.

The two communities of Deloro and of Hastings County were dear to his heart and these he served with all the generosity and zeal peculiar to him. By them he will be greatly missed.

His passing in middle life when it seemed that he had long years yet ahead of him in which to serve and develop the causes which he championed is particularly sad because he had achieved so much in the years which have passed and used his ability so unselfishly in the community as business executive and citizen.

Postcards of Gestapo Chief

One whom the world outside the Nazis cannot avoid thinking one of the most inhuman men in Germany and accordingly one of the most brutal and inhuman of all time is Heinrich Himmler, head of the Gestapo. Now it is reported there is a humanizing influence at work to develop his popularity among the Germans. One report says that humanizing is desirable because his name is so blackened by his association with concentration camps in the minds of the Nazis and all that this implies to Germans as well as to the people outside Germany. Another view is that there is an effort to polish him up as a possible successor to the reign of ignominy and failure achieved by Adolf Hitler.

It has been said again and again that Himmler is the supreme Nazi power in Germany through the control he has over all, including Hitler, and the knowledge of everyone and possession of the machinery of domination credited to him.

Anyway the Germans are being sent millions of picture postcards with the Gestapo chief's face wreathed in smiles. The idea is to increase his popularity.

How far the Germans will greet this smiling Hun, the man whom Hitler used as a spy upon the Germans and later the Italians and to do the most fiendish jobs across overrun Europe, only time can tell. Many Germans have no reason to welcome this bloody man who has sent many of their relatives to camps of imprisonment or to death. One of his henchmen, the "butcher," lost his life in eastern Europe when waylaid over a year ago. Stories of Himmler's appearance anywhere in Europe have always been taken as the sign that a blood purge of the overrun peoples is likely to get under way. This sinister, dark figure has signified repression and death wherever he goes.

The Nazi gangster crowd have the same criminal instinct—to betray one another when the time comes. Their only loyalty is the degraded god of self and the infinite number of evils which are associated with that sin of selfishness. Hitler in his purge some years ago showed how ruthless a Nazi can be to one who stands in his way. Himmler is ruthlessness itself and has all the mechanism for exercising his ruthlessness. Yet every Nazi watches every other Nazi—everyone is spied upon even as Himmler has spied upon countless numbers of Germans and Italians and of peoples of the devastated lands of Europe. Perhaps someone else is spying on Himmler.

Goering's "Ripe Plum"

A distinguished member of the British Diplomatic Service who served six years in Berlin said in the BBC's German program that it was no surprise to him to see from the German papers that the British raids on Berlin were described as "barbarous," "inspired by the Jews" and so on.

He said that before the war the idea of bombing cities was regarded as quite natural in German official circles. He remembered Goering saying to him that London was a "magnificent target—e large ripe plum" and he "made a noise with his lips like a small boy confronted by a large juicy plum." The broadcaster further remembered being told about the experience already gained in bombing Spanish civilians and he remembered Hitler in the crisis of 1938 threatening the use of the Luftwaffe. There was "no question of sparing civilians in Prague or London in those days."

Then came the war. Warsaw was bombed. Then Rotterdam, London, Coventry, Belgrade. Hitler never calculated, the speaker declared, that England would outbuild the Luftwaffe in three short years. Reprisals may console, he said, but they will not save Germany from British air power.

Glass "Cans"

("Newsweek" Magazine)

The glass manufacturers aren't making public statements, but privately they express belief that the industry can retain much of its war-boomed container business. They point out that one reason the can has enjoyed preference in the past for commercial packing is because it has lent itself to high-speed automatic and economical filling and sealing process. But techniques have now been developed which permit equally fast automatic filling and sealing of glass containers. With the can's advantage overcome, the glass people believe the consumer's desire to "see what he buys" will guarantee them a good share of the vegetable and fruit container business.

The sure way to wickedness is always through wickedness.—Seneca.

A FATHER REMEMBERS

Time was he used to say to me,
  As we went walking hand in hand,
A hero he would like to be
  And bravely serve his native land.
Now somewhere at an outpost far
  He has a fearful task to do,
And this I pray, where dangers are
  His boyhood dreams will all come true.

He used to say he hoped to be
  A man his comrades could admire;
First fellow at the camp to see
  The breakfast coffee on the fire;
One of the cheerful, helpful kind
  That makes life easier for all.
Now comes his chance. I pray they'll find
  Him first to answer when they call.

He wished so often to be true
  To some high purpose down the years,
Some great, unselfish deed to do
  In which man's courage best appears.
And now at beach or jungle grim
  He serves the cause with courage stout.
I pray some day will come to him
  The glory that he dreamed about.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

In pioneer times your rifle was your Man Friday and went everywhere with you. And no wonder, since Canada was a wilderness paradise filled with wild creatures ripe for the hunter with a steady trigger finger! . . . It is interesting to note that, in the West, the Winchester rifle was often priced according to the length of the weapon. The butt of the gun was placed on the ground. When the would-be purchaser had piled up enough skins, laid out flat, to reach the height of the muzzle, the firearm was his!

Whenever election day came along the pioneer citizen set aside his hunting rifle and went hopefully to the polls. The first elections in Upper Canada were held in 1792. The only qualifications required by a voter of that period was a freehold in land, assessed at 40 shillings sterling or more per year. Deed to his land did not have to be recorded, nor did he need to have it in his possession for any specified time before the election. This lackadaisical way of doing things naturally led to abuses. . . . Once the election results were declared, the successful candidates were chaired. This operation called forth powers of endurance and courage as well as faith in the chair-bearers. The chair was lashed to two strong poles carried on the shoulders of four adherents of the winning party who were often none too steady on their "pins".

ORIGINAL HOME OF CORN

In Europe American corn is generally called "Indian corn" or "maize" to distinguish it from corn in the sense of wheat, barley, oats and other "small grain."

American corn is of American origin and constitutes the most important grain crop in America.

"Maize" is believed to be a corruption of "mahiz," the native name of corn in the West Indies in the time of Columbus, who is supposed to have introduced this grain into Spain.

Botanists have been unable to identify the wild progenitor of maize as they have in the case of wheat, oats and rye in the Old World.

Maize is scientifically classified as a member of the grass family and many botanists are of the opinion that its ancestor is a species of wild grass known as "teosinte"—meaning "grain of the gods" in the Aztec language—found growing both wild and under cultivation in Florida, Central America, the West Indies and northern South America.

Luther Burbank supposed that the Indians, by selective breeding over a long period, transformed teosinte into corn, and he himself attempted to evolve maize from teosinte in the same manner, but with little success.

Teosinte, unlike corn, does not produce ears in the axils of the leaves, but bears the seeds at the top somewhat like millet or Kaffir corn. Only occasionally do the tassels of corn bear half-abortive grains.

Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, an American archaeologist, came to the conclusion that maize culture in the New World began about 2,000 or 3,000 B.C., a little later than wheat culture in Egypt and Mesopotamia, and that it was derived from teosinte or some other heavy-seeded wild grass common in the highlands of Central America or northern South America.

Proof that maize was grown by the North American Indians in prehistoric times is supplied by the fact that charred kernels of corn were found in mortuary vessels in stone slab graves unearthed in Davidson county, Tennessee.

Modern corn is a product of scientific breeding and culture and the varieties known to the pre-Columbian Indians were greatly inferior to those cultivated at present.

MITCHELL—VOSBOURGH

The marriage of Frances Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Vosbourgh, of Brighton to Jesse Albert, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Mitchell, of Wooler, was solemnized recently at Renfrew. Rev. H. B. Neal, former pastor of Wooler United Church, officiated. The couple was unattended.

The bride was becomingly attired in a heavenly blue sheer dress made on princess lines. She wore a corsage of American Beauty roses and gold locket, the gift of the groom. For travelling, she donned a teal blue rabbit hair wool suit, black silver-fox trimmed coat and hat and black accessories.

The happy couple left on a honeymoon trip to Ottawa, North Gower, Cornwall and other eastern points. On their return they will reside near Wooler.

JOHNSTOWN W. A.

The regular meeting of the Johnstown W. A. was held on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. A. Bush with a large attendance. Mrs. Wm. Harry, president, called the meeting to order. Mrs. E. Bush and Mrs. E. Stickle conducted the devotional and Mrs. E. Brooks called the roll. Business discussions were mostly concerning Red Cross work. Mrs. W. Harder offered her home for a quilting the following Wednesday. Mrs. W. Vandervoort kindly donated a quilt to the Aid for the Red Cross. Several readings were given by the ladies and a duet by Mrs. C. Curtiss and Mrs. E. Bush. The March meeting will be held in the form of an "at home" at Mrs. G. C. Stickle's home in the evening. Mrs. E. Bush, the hostess, served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

COLLEGE HILL WOMEN'S GROUP

The February meeting of College Hill Women's Group was held at the home of Mrs. Harold Huycke, Moira St. West, with an attendance of thirteen members and six visitors. The devotional period was in charge of the president, Mrs. F. Cook. Mrs. Tebworth, treasurer, gave a report of the year's work. Receipts amounted to $177.87, 62 pr. sox were knitted, 56 quilts, 12 layettes and 84 articles of clothing were made and donated to Red Shield. Plans were made to hold a rummage sale. Sunshine and Cloudy Day groups were formed, with Mrs. Burley and Mrs. Johns as leaders. Mrs. (Major) Marsh spoke on the Red Shield work being carried on and of the great need of quilts and clothing. She said that in this busy time one should keep his mind on Christ and His teachings as a life giving source. A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Marsh for her inspiring talk. Mrs. B. W. Brown, of Salvation Army closed this part with prayer. Lunch and a social time concluded the meeting.

AVONDALE NEIGHBORS' AID

The February meeting of the above association met at the home of Mrs. W. Craig, with Mrs. H. Elvidge, president, in the chair. There were twenty-three ladies present. Reports were read and business discussed. Gifts were presented to the retiring executive members. Mrs. Windover, Mrs. Lough and Mrs. L. Reid received cups and saucers, while Mrs. White and Mrs. Chambers received cut glass dishes. The meeting was then turned over to the program committee, Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Lee, who held several interesting Valentine contests. Winner of the "Poison Heart" was Mrs. W. Denyes and the scrambled Valentine words contest was won by Mrs. Audrey Lee. Winners of the "Heart Loves Card Game" were Mrs. L. Reid and Mrs. F. Denyes. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Craig, assisted by Mrs. Wright and Mrs. Lee. Mrs. Reid thanked Mrs. Craig for the pleasant afternoon.

GOOD MANNERS

SUGGESTIONS FOR A WEDDING RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I'm in a quandary about my wedding reception.

My fiance is in the service, and we are going to be married next month, on a Sunday afternoon at four o'clock. My father is dead, my mother and I have very little money to spend for the reception. But my fiance and I have many friends, and we want to have them with us at our reception. What to do? It has been suggested that I hire a small hall, and have a buffet supper there, but this would mean hiring a caterer too. I also have considered having a supper in a hotel for just our closest friends, but I'm afraid that would cause hurt feelings among the others. I would be so grateful if you could suggest something that would not be too expensive, yet still be proper.

—H. S.

First, dear girl, I judge from your letter that you are placing too much emphasis on the foods you think you will be expected to have served. But please remember that nowadays, at even the most elaborate of receptions, the simplest foods are served. Remember too that the important point is that your friends want to be with you and you want them to be with you, and the food can be, and should be, of the simplest kind. I even wonder if your home is really too small to accommodate your friends there and serve only the two really necessary items: (1) something cold (domestic champagne, or a punch made of fruit juices, or even ginger ale), in which to drink to the "happiness of the bride and groom." and (2) the bridal cake. Of course wherever the reception is, you may also serve small sandwiches, coffee, perhaps ice cream .. but even these aren't necessary. Hiring a hall and having a caterer serve a buffet supper, or having a supper in a hotel for some friends .. these are on the expensive side. If your home is too small, and if it isn't possible to give your reception in the rooms connected with your church, I suggest you "shop" for a tea room or a hotel or inn that has a private room for this kind of occasion, and make arrangements for their serving only the bridal cake and "drinkable", or perhaps add the simplest of sandwiches, and perhaps coffee. This will cost much less than hiring a hall and serving a buffet, or giving a supper-party at a hotel. And since your reception will be at tea-time, a simple menu is ample.

Manners at the Movies

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Where should a girl stand when she is waiting for a man to buy movie or theatre tickets?

2. If the girl reaches the door of the lobby first, should she stand there and wait until he comes to open the door, or should she open it?

—C. M.

1. While her host stands in line to get the tickets, the girl should stand aside and wait for him in the lobby. She should be out of the way of the others standing in the line.

2. She should wait and give the man a chance to open the door. A polite escort wants to do courtesies of this kind .. if a girl will give him the opportunity, and not dash ahead impulsively and "independently."

VIRUS PNEUMONIA AND THE WARTIME MORTALITY RATE

Deaths from pneumonia are on the increase; not from the usual type of pneumonia, but from a new variety called virus pneumonia. According to statistical studies, the general death rate throughout the country appears to be rising. This rise in mortality has amounted to almost ten per cent in many areas of the country. It does not appear that the war can be blamed directly for this increase.

Statistics indicate that virus pneumonia is the chief factor responsible for the increase in the general death rate thus far. In fact, about one-fifth more deaths have occurred from pneumonia in the first part of this year than during the past year.

Virus pneumonia is caused by an organism so small that it cannot be seen through the most powerful, ordinary microscope. Furthermore, it does not seem to respond to treatment with sulfa drugs as does the pneumonia caused by pneumococci and streptococci germs.

Influenza is another disease that is probably caused by a virus, although there does not seem to be any direct connection between virus pneumonia and influenza.

Many health authorities doubt that an epidemic of influenza and pneumonia, such as took place in 1918 will develop during this war. On the other hand, everything possible should be done to keep outbreaks of pneumonia from occurring, in order to keep the war effort from being hampered. Prompt isolation and treatment of all infected persons will be helpful from this standpoint.

Another disease which seems to be on the increase this year is meningitis, a disease caused by a germ known as the meningococcus. Just why this disease has increased in incidence is not definitely known, although it may be the result of overcrowding in many areas.

There has been a rise in the number of deaths from cancer, diabetes, brain hemorrhage and heart disease. In fact, the death rates from all of these conditions, with the exception of diabetes, are the highest on record. Perhaps the extra strain produced by wartime conditions help to account for many of the cases of brain hemorrhage and heart disease.

Accidents in homes are on the increase, even though many persons spend less time at home now than they did before the war. Carelessness is often the factor chiefly responsible for unnecessary accidental deaths.

While increases in the abovementioned diseases are the unpleasant side of the picture, there are some facts which are cheerful. The number of maternal deaths is on the decrease, due, possibly to better care. Furthermore, the birth rate is increasing, and the number of deaths from tuberculosis has been markedly reduced.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

BEAUTY SCORES, POINT BY POINT.

Be content with the good looks blessings that have been given to you; if you have small defects of face or figure, try to erase them and, if you can't then stop fretting. It isn't expected, when the fairy godmother stands beside the girl-baby's cradle and waves her hand, that she is going to give the little cherub the works. Perfection just isn't in the cards.

Famous lovelies of the past who tweaked the noses of kings and turned the pages of history probably had their good looks worries. It has been said that Lily Langtry, the great beauty of the later period of Queen Victoria's reign, was downright homely at times; at least, so I was told by a sweet old lady who knew the Jersey Lily well. "It isn't that her features were perfect," she said, "but she carried a certain glory or radiance. When she bawled she looked like any other woman. Her nose got red."

Getting down to ordinary cases, what matters a parade of freckles over the impertinent nose if just above them are twinkling, pretty eyes? Fight the freckles, play up the eyes. Fine eyes rate high; they are intriguing.

With a gentle voice and the kind of a laugh you like to hear, small defects will vanish; at least you are not aware of them. She who never smiles, whose voice is like the sound of a nail skidding over a plate, can be as beautiful as the dawn, but no fellow will want to drag her places or fold her to his manly chest.

A stunning figure that is carried in a queenly fashion, that displays lovely lines, gives to dry goods what is known as chic, compensates for a nose that is a bit too large or a trifle too short. One cant' have everything.

Beautiful hands! What charm they have! Almost any woman can make her hands lovely by careful treatment, expressive by cultivating graceful movements of the fingers. Shape and size are not particularly important.

Long, thick, curling eyelashes are a distinguishing mark. They're romantic. If yours do not qualify, lubricate them morning and night with mineral oil and see them quicken and grow. It has been done, time and again.

How about the elegant coiffure that can be bought at any beauty shop, even though the thatch be not so abundant that you can't get the comb through it? And daintiness of person, that's a big asset! And how about a sweet disposition Without it, the whole good looks composition goes sour.

TREAT YOURSELF TO A BEAUTY MASK

If you want to put your best face forward this Spring—treat yourself to a real old-fashioned beauty mask. And we do mean old-fashioned! Grandma used them, and without benefit of powder or rouge usually managed to present a rosy face to the world. Give yourself a good 15 minutes for your beauty mask. First clean your face thoroughly with a smooth, rich cold cream followed by a healthy soap and water lather to "remove every trace of dust, dirt and stale cosmetics." To help soften blackheads at this stage, poultice your face with towels wrung out in hot water. All cleaned up? Now you can do a really good job on those enlarged pores with a mixture of uncooked oatmeal and almond meal and a few drops of milk. Mix to form a paste. If you want your mask to bleach, add a few drops of lemon juice or peroxide. History's favorite siren, Cleopatra, liked a simple honey mask, and this is a popular treatment used in more expensive beauty parlors. Just pat generous gobs of liquid honey into the skin, like cold cream. If, like Lillian Russell, you prefer milk, try buttermilk. Whichever mask you choose, leave it on your face 12 to 15 minutes. Remove with cold water.

Great Goal-Tending Features Service Hockey League As Trenton, Bombers Score Wins

Mohawks and Six-Ardees Lose to Scramble Up the the Standing of Loop

CLEAN CONTESTS

Trenton "Flyers" moved into sole possession of first place in the Quinte R.C.A.F. service hockey league at the Hume Arena last night, when they eked out a 2-1 win over the Deseronto "Mohawks" before 400 fans, who saw two low-scoring games as the Mountain View "Bombers" chalked up their first win of the season by beating No. 6 Repair Depot 3 to 1 in the second game of a twin bill. The loss for the Repair Depot lads dropped them into second place in the league standing.

Keen goal-tending featured both games as Gariepy starred for the losing Mohawks, while Prudhome turned in a stellar game for Trenton. In the second game Reading was practically invincible in the Bombers' nets, making saves, that bordered on the impossible, with Jackson for No. 6 also looking good.

Set up Strong Defence.

With Trenton setting up a strong defence Coach Padre Malki's "Flyers" remained atop of the league and undefeated in four starts when Trenton eked out a 2-1 win over the Deseronto "Mohawks". Trenton scored in the initial frame, the Mohawks evened the count in the second but the Flyers had more speed and staying power to notch the only goal in the final canto.

Gariepy, in the Mohawks' nets, kept the score down considerably with some miraculous saves, while Pridhome in the opposite end of the rink also turned in a creditable goal- keeping effort. However Trenton's speed and their strong defence proved the deciding factor in an all-out game filled with strong hockey.

A three-way combination play opened the scoring with Paul Raymond, former Montreal Canadien forward, ringing the bell with Ellis and Voss assisting. In the middle session Flookes sallied up the right boards and boring in behind the Trenton defence nicked the corner of the net for the equalizer. It was while Flookes was serving a penalty in the last frame that Trenton moved five to the attack and were rewarded, when Kelly let drive a long shot, that fooled Gariepy and gave Trenton the edge. The Mohawks were on the attack with Currie in the sin bin when the final bell sounded.

The lineups:

Mohawks: Goal, Gariepy; defence, Wicken and Boyd; centre, MacLelland; wings, Flookes and Lalonde; subs, Steele, Zately and Brown.

Trenton: Goal, Prudhome; defence, Currie and Kelly; centre, Ellis; wings, Raymond and Voss; subs, Dart, Tessier, Wismer and Bean.

Summary.

1st period.
Trenton: Raymond (Ellis, Voss) .................. 14.53
Penalties: Flookes and Kelly.
2nd period.
Mohawks: Flookes .......... 16.15
Penalty: Lalonde.
3rd period.
Trenton: Kelly .............. 7.51
Penalty: Currie.

Three Goals in Period.

In the nightcap affair three goals in the initial period were good enough to have the Mountain View "Bombers" chalk up their initial win taking No. 6 Repair Depot into camp to the tune of 3 to 1. It was the "Six-ardee" squads first loss in four starts and dropped them to second position, while the "Bombers" climbed into third place by virtue of their win.

Pat McReavey, former Boston Bruin star in the N.H.L. was in on all three goals of the Bombers' goals scoring the first from Dan Cowley and setting up the next two for Fuger. McInnes scored the Repair lads' lone counter on a combination play with Goddhue and Landriault.

The game was marked with some stiff and heavy body checking on the part of both teams while Reading, in the Bombers' nets, turned in a spectacular chore of goaltending, with Jackson in the opposite end of the rink running a close second. On Monday night the No. 6 sextette had triumphed over the Bombers 6-4, but "Dutch" Cain's charges got sweet revenge over Bud Corbett's second place outfit last night. On Monday night another of these fast and thrilling service puck loop games will be played at the Hume arena.

No. 6 Repair epot: Goal, Jackson; defence Stewart and Campbell; centre, Landriault; wings, McInnes and Goddhue; subs, Derry, Feldman, Dixon, Pfaff and Howes.

Mountain View: Goal, Reading; defence Cowley and Savard; centre McReavey; wings, Fuger and Bauer; subs, Aube, Ducquette, Boudreau, Barker, Scott and Brock.

Blink Bellinger Tops Scorers In Senior O.H.A.

Toronto, Feb. 11—(CP)—Official scoring records released today showed Blink Bellinger of St. Catharines Saints atop the Ontario Hockey Association Senior "A" scoring parade with a slim one-point margin over Hamilton's Johnny Conick. Bellinger has 17 goals and 35 assists for a point total of 52. Conick remained the leading goal-getter with 29, coupled with 22 assists to give him the runner-up spot. Red Reynolds of St. Catharines is one point back in third with a 50-point total made up of an equal number of goals and assists. Doug Runions of Hamilton has 27 goals, 22 assists for fourth spot in the tightly-packed leading quartet. Paul Mundrick of the Saints rocketed into the "big six" last week by running his total to 42, on 21 goals and 21 assists, with Dillon Brady of the Majors trailing him by one point with 16 goals and 25 assists.

In the Junior "A" circuit, Ken Smith, Bob Love and Bill Ezinicki of Oshawa Generals continue to hold the first three places in that order, with 62, 58 and 55 points respectively. Bob Schnurr of St. Michael's College shares third spot with Ezinicki with 55, following by two Galt standouts, Johnny Ubriaco and Nellie Podolsky with 43 and 36 points.

Charles Harvey, Who Outfoxed Hitler, Dies on Way to Bout

(By the Canadian Press)

The man who took $25,000 from the Nazis although Der Fuehrer ordered the money to be held in Germany, Charles J. Harvey, 79, former New York Boxing promoter and manager, died while proceeding to a ring show in Madison Square Garden. The incident occurred in 1935 when his boxer, Steve Hamas, was matched to fight Max Schmeling in Hamburg but Harvey had the money deposited in a British bank to his credit before either he or Hamas entered Germany for the bout.

Four clergymen of Washington, D.C., yesterday asked a Congressional Committee, investigating juvenile delinquency, to place all pro wrestling under the control of a commission, curb the appearance of female wrestlers and eliminate all Walkathons.

Three Peterborough rinks scored victories in the opening round at Seigniory Club, Que., in the 13th Annual Sewell Curling Trophy competition for women yesterday. Skips were Miss H. Fanning, Mrs. G. Woods and Mrs. O. A. DeGraw.

Following a meeting yesterday at Chicago of Directors of the American Association, President George Trautman declared the League's Clubs were considering the sponsorship of pro football in the baseball parks next fall. Plenty of young players were available for the baseball season which opens April 19, he said.

Former Fordham University runner, Jim Raffery, 27, of the New York A.C., National A.A.U. 1,000-yard champion, has been booked to race Gil Dodds of Boston and Bill Hulse, national miler, in the New York A.C. games Feb. 19 in Madison Square Gardens. Raffery won the two-mile feature at the Millrose Meet last Saturday.

During the first 25 days of the Hialeah Park meeting, a record 156 selling platers have been claimed for a total of more than $300,000. Fourteen were claimed Jan. 28, a record for one day in turf circles. The activity is said to be due to a shortage of good horses.

Cleveland Indians of the American League yesterday received word of the rejection for army service of Pitcher Al Smith, last year voted the most valuable member of the tribe. Rejection of the 35-year-old hurler was due to an old leg injury. He won 17 and lost seven games last season.

Two more players of major league experience yesterday received 1-A classification for the U.S. armed services when they appeared before the draft board at Aliquippa, Pa. They were pitcher Joe Beggs of the Cincinnati Reds and infielder Pete Suder of the Philadelphia Athletics.

Toronto, Feb. 11—(CP)— One of the greatest of the old-time hockey players, Si Griffis says modern hockey is faster, more scientific and packs more thrills than at any time during the 25 years he played with leading teams throughout Canada.

Si, now a Vancouver newspaper executive, knows whereof he speaks. He was twice with Stanley Cup teams—Kenora Thistles in 1906 and Vancouver Millionaires in 1915. None of the 60-minutes men of the early hockey era could possible stand up for more than 10 or 15-minute stretches at the modern gait, says Griffis, who adds: "But we can still cherish the thought that we blazed the trail and laid the foundation for the fastest game on two feet."

BOSTON BRUINS IN FOURTH PLACE OF NATIONAL LOOP

Defeat Chicago Black Hawks Right in Windy City by 5-4

WINGS BEAT RANGERS

If there's any communique from Boston Bruins headquarters today it will say—"everything is going acording to plan." The Bruins are on the March again.

By beating the Black Hawks 5-4 in a rousing finish before a crowd of 10,032 at Chicago last night, the Bruins climbed back into fourth position in the National Hockey League. The only other game saw the Detroit Red Wings chalk up an 8-3 victory over the luckless Rangers before a crowd of 12,932 at New York.

The Bruins climbed over the Hawks into the last play-off spot by dint of two resounding victories this week, their 3-0 shutout triumph over Canadiens Tuesday and their success last night.

At Chicago last night the Bruins won the hard way, leading 4-1 at the start of the third period and then watching Chicago ram in three straight goals. With the score tied 4-4 the fireworks started when a brief battle flared and Pat Egan of Boston was waved to the box. He swung at a spectator and the entire line-up of both teams joned in the turmoil.

The clincher was fired by Bep Guidolin, assisted by Calladine and Cain, just six seconds before the final bell. Brennan, Boll, Kopek and Egan got the other Boston goals, while Smith, Purpur, Bentley and Gottselig scored for Chicago.

The Red Wings played like a machine in beating Rangers.

Carveth had three goals to lead the Detroit parade and Liscombe had two, Jackson, Armstrong and Brown getting the others. Rangers' scorers were Boucher, K. MacDonald and Dill.

What's Doing in Sport

Buffalo (AP)—Erie and Bradford, Pa., where admitted to the Class D Pony League at a meeting here yesterday to make the circuit an eight-team loop. A 126-game schedule will open in May, with the season closing Labor Day.

New Orleans (AP)—Valdina Zenith is no more. The candidate for the Louisiana derby recently purchased by William Helis has undergone a change of name and will be known henceforth as Olympic Zenith, it was announced last night.

New York (AP)—Judith Allen, of screen and radio, former wife of wrestler Gus Connenberg and boxer Jack Doyle, yesterday was named defendant in suits for divorce and an accounting in the State Supreme Court by her third husband, Cpl. Rudolph Field of the U.S. army signal corps.

Kitchener (CP)—The local rink skipped by Perry Hall yesterday won three games to take the district final in the British Consols series and will now compete at the Toronto Granite Club Feb. 22 for the provincial title. Hall's four defeated two rinks from Ayr and one from Galt.

Kingston, Feb. 11 (CP)—Skip R. G. H. Travers will lead a Kingston rink into the Ontario playdowns for the British Consols curling trophy following victory in the district eliminations here. The veteran skip directed his rink to four victories.

BUFFALO BISONS CAN'T LICK CAPS.

Indianapolis Capitals and Buffalo Bisons battled to a 4-4 draw last night in the American Hockey League's only scheduled encounter. Caps have not been defeated by Buffalo this season.

Fred Thurier scored two counters for Bisons in the first period. His wingers, Fred Hunt and Larry Thibeault, set-up the puck both times. He added their third counter in the second period and bagged the fourth tally early in the final period.

Winky Smith scored Caps' first goal just 48 seconds after the start of the second period. At almost the half-minute mark Bernie Ruelle added their second. In the final period Nakina Smith scored at 10:37 and seven minutes later Alex Ritson deadlocked the contest.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

The Editor's Handicap

On one thing there is general agreement: Anyone could do a better job than is being done by those responsible for any publication. That continues to be a fact, whether it be a newspaper, a magazine, a column, or merely a letter to the family forum. For an editor, life runs along—not so much like a song, but to a tune like this:

If we print jokes people say we are silly.

If we don't, they say we are too serious.

If we clip things from other papers, we are too lazy to write them ourselves.

If we don't we are stuck on our own stuff.

If we stick close to the job we ought to be out hunting news.

If we get out and try to hustle, we ought to be on the job in the office.

If we don't print contributions, we do not appreciate true genius; and if we print them, the paper is full of junk.

If we make a change in the other fellow's copy, we are too critical.

If we don't, we are asleep.

Now, like as not, some folks will say we swiped this from another paper.

Which we did.

The Old Arbitrator

Whenever the name of Bill (Old Arbitrator) Klem is brought up it's good for a story and the boys in the back room were talking about him only last evening. It was just 30 years ago now the late John J. McGraw took a touring team of major league baseball players down under to Australia. Klem was included in the party as the umpire and once on board ship he took $1,000 away from McGraw and Germany Schaefer on a bet that pertained to the rules. Later Klem returned the money and told McGraw never to question "the old arbitrator's" decisions or knowledge of the rules again.

It was the next summer in Boston that McGraw came storming out of the dugout to demand that a balk be called against Dick Rudolph, whose pitching delivery was so tricky that a balk was not easy to detect.

"The same old Klem!" howled McGraw in supreme disgust, profiting nothing from experience. "When are you ever going to learn the rules?"

"I learned you the rules last winter," retorted Bill.

"And it's about time you got to know something about grammar," snapped McGraw. "You can't learn anything to anyone. You can teach him, but you can't learn him."

"Mister McGraw," said William sadly, "it begins to look as though I can neither learn you nor teach you. You're just hopeless."

Two Close Games

Puck fans saw four evenly matched teams battle things out in the district service loop last night when the Trenton "Flyers" remained undefeated by eking out a 2-1 win over the "Mohawks," while the Mountain View "Bombers" chalked up their initial win of the season by stopping the speedy No. 6 Repair Depot sextette and then going on to win 3-1, all the scoring being done in the initial period. Pat McReavey, former Boston Bruin scored one for the Bombers and then set up two others for Fuger. However, the feature of both games was the outstanding goal tending by all four goalies, Gariepy of the Mohawks and Reading, of the Bombers being exceptionally good on the night's play. The boys will be back at it again Monday night. Incidentally nearly 500 took in last night's games as the fans are beginning to warm up to the fast wide open hockey that is being provided by the Air Force squads.

As the result of last night's twin bill, Trenton recovered the league leadership, while No. 6 dropped back into second place and the Bombers moved up to third.

Hockey Chatter

The puck business at the Hume Arena is really a going concern these days with the juniors, juveniles and Air Force service leagues hitting on all sixes simultaneously. Toots Holway's juniors invade the Trenton rink for the first game of the junior O.H.A. play-offs tonight where a win would be most acceptable. However, the locals haven't won a game in Trenton in this campaign and by the same token they haven't lost a home decision to Stan Jackson's kids. According to Billie Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A., the junior players at the Trenton main station are not eligible to play with Trenton, although Schmidt and Krohler did play with Jackson's dandies to help beat Belleville's weakened sextette last Friday night. It is doubtful if Billie Holway's injured knee will be right enough to play tonight in Trenton, leaving Belleville shorthanded again. In the meantime Bill Dennis' good juvenile team is keeping in practice for their initial home game here next Tuesday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 300

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Expert bridge is really very simple. Dig deep down into the reasons for any clever act and it begins to look easy. See what happens with this pair of partnership hands:

♠Q
♥9 8 3
♦A K J 5
♣A K J 6 2
NORTH
♠9 3
♥A 5 4
♦Q 6 3 2
♣Q 7 4 3

If you were parked in the south seat, you would become declarer at a contract of either five clubs or five diamonds. Did I hear you think it looked better in clubs? Oh, yeah?

If you play these hands with diamonds as trumps, you can take 11 tricks. With clubs as trumps, you must be content with only ten tricks. Let me show you why.

With clubs as trumps, you must surely lose a spade trick and two hearts. There is no possible way of saving any one of those three losers. Not without an accident.

Because the diamond suit, when it is not trump, can give you no help in saving outside losers. In the four rounds of diamonds, both your hands must follow suit.

However, if diamonds are the trumps, there is a different story to tell. The diamonds can then be used for pulling opponent trumps and the fifth south club can help save a heart loser.

Suppose opponents start out leading spades. You will win a trick by trumping the second round of spades with a south diamond. That leaves you three trumps in south and four in dumy.

You can still take four rounds of trumps. With the trick you have trumped, five club tricks, and the ace of hearts, you can jolly well chalk up 11 tricks with diamonds as trumps.

The point is, when two trump suits are discovered, partner should show a preference for the suit that is most equally divided in the pair of hands.

It sounds very expert. But it is simple when you know it.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sleepy Lagoon"

An evening of good, solid fun is in store for all those film fans who visit the Capitol Theatre, where Republic's "Sleepy Lagoon", starring Judy Canova is now playing.

Judy was never better than she is in her current role of small town girl who crashes politics. Her native village, "Sleepy Lagoon" is inundated with the flood of transient workers who have poured in to work at the local defence factories. The thousands of workers, unable to find good, clean fun in the tiny town, have been frequenting dance halls and gambling dens operated by a nefarious character known as "The Brain."

Judy is put up as mayoralty candidate on an all-femme reform ticket backed by energetic suffragette-type Sarah Rogers, played hilariously by Ruth Donnelly. She wins the election and sets about to re-establish law and order in Sleepy Lagoon.

But the job isn't as easy as it sounds, and Judy finds herself enmeshed in a hilar?;'s series of predicaments which give her ample opportunity to prove her merits as a top ranking comedienne.

Dennis Day plays opposite her in the male lead, and other members of the cast are Joseph Sawyer, Ernest Truex, Douglas Fowley, Will Wright, Herbert Corthell, Ellen Lowe, Forrest Taylor, Kitty McHugh, Eddie Chandler, Jack Raymond, Margaret Reid and Mike Riley and his Orchestra.

"Robin Hool of the Range"

A thrill-laden, action-packed yarn of the old west, "Robin Hood of the Range," opened at the Capitol Theatre yesterday and brought audience a full share of excitement! Starring stalwart Charles Starrett, the Columbia picture takes place in the Sierra Valley at the turn of the century, with a large railroad plotting a land grab.

A Community Sing Song and the serial "Secret Service In Darkest Africa," complete a splendid program of entertainment for the entire family.

AT THE BELLE

"True to Life" Funny

A four star fun film produced by Paramount is now closing at the Belle Theatre loaded with laughs, gags and some mighty tuneful music. It is "True to Life" starring Mary Martin, Franchot Tone, Victor Moore and Dick Powell. By all means see it as it has Belleville rocking with laughter.

"Mardi Gras", in Color

Betty Rhodes and Johnny Johnston head a cast of stage and screen stars in "Mardi Gras", a Paramount musical parade in technicolor.

Your hits of yesterday and tomorrow are in the new Community Sing film presented at the Belle Theatre every week.

Wallace Beery in Technicolor

Screen veteran Wallace Beery makes his first appearance in Technicolor in M-G-M-'s "Salute to the Marines', coming this week-end to the Belle Theatre.

Although he has appeared in fifty-three feature - length films since beginning his screen career 30 years ago, he has never been photographed before in color.

In "Salute to the Marines", Beery portrays the "diamond-in-the-rough" role that has made him famous—a tough, two-fisted, yet lovable Marine sergeant. The story pivots about this sergeant who retires from the corps only to take up arms from the Phillipines again when they are sneak-attacked by Jap hordes.

Battle scenes between Marines and Filipinos and the invaders highlight the action-packed photoplay. The cast includes Fay Bainter, Reginald Owen, Ray Collins, and Keye Luke. Marilyn Maxwell and William Lundigan are the romantic interests in the story. S. Sylvan Simon directed and has brought out many deft touches.

"Stork's Holiday" is the title of the latest M-G-M- colorfun cartoon to be presented on the same program with the Canadian Paramount Newsreel. The first from closing Chapter of the "Batman" serial will be exhibited Saturday matinee. Continuous shows will be presented on Saturday.

Throne Speech Is Adopted After Four Divisions And Sharp Exchanges in House

M. J. Coldwell Charges Liberals Had "Regimented" Saskatchewan

MANY SPEAKERS

By JAMES MCCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Feb. 11 (CP)—After sharp debate and four divisions, the House of Commons today is free to proceed with consideration of war appropriations totalling $3,650,-000.

In swift succession Thursday night the House voted down a sub amendment to the address in reply to the Throne speech moved by J. S. Roy (Ind-Gaspe) by 178 votes to seven; A sub-amendment by Dr. Pierre Gauthier (BP-Portneuf) by 171 votes to seven; and the main Progressive Conservative amendment by 126 votes to 50.

The address was adopted by a final vote of 146 to 21, with the Progressive Conservative voting with the government and the C.C.F. and New Democracy groups against it.

Dr. Gauthier's sub-amendment expressed regret the government had not suspended conscription for army service and mutual aid to the United Nations.

Mr. Roy's sub-amendment said the government had failed to follow moderate participation in the war as promised in 1939 and failed to demand a proper partnership for Canada in United Nations' conferences.

Sharp Exchanges Heard.

The Progressive Conservative amendment said the government failed to provide for demobilization needs, adequately assist an effective agricultural program, give labor its rightful place in the national partnership and lessen mureaucratic controls and regimentation.

Concluding hours of the debate were marked by sharp Liberal-C.C.F. exchanges, continuing a feud which started Wednesday when Agriculture Minister Gardiner and T. C. Douglas (CCF-Weyburn) exchange verbal blows on subjects ranging from C.C.F. leadership in Saskatchewan to farm prices.

Yesterday, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, spoke for his party's record and said the Liberals had "regimentated" Saskatchewan. He condemned Liberal Federal policies prior to the war.

The government's reply was made by Resources Minister Crerar who said that if C.C.F. pre-war policies had been followed Canada would not have increased her defence forces.

Removed From Context Claim.

The Minister quoted remarks by Mr. Douglas in pre-war defence estimate debates. Mr. Douglas said the quotations had been removed from their context and were tantamount to misrepresentation.

The last Liberal word was with Gordon Ross (L-Moose Jaw), who said that no matter how much Mr. Douglas quoted Hansard it was still evident his party had opposed increasing the defence estimates.

A side debate was that in which L. P. Picard (L-Bellechasse) and H. E. Brunelle (L-Champlain) said that Wilfrid LaCroix (L-Quebec-Montmorency) had criticized the government policies and Prime Minister Mackenzie King unjustly. They suggested he should cross the floor if he did not agree with the government.

The defeated amendments to the Throne Speech were supported last night by Mr. LaCroix and Emmanuel D'Anjou (L-Rimouski).

Answering Mr. Picard, Mr. La Croix quoted Disraeli who once said in the British House of Commons that the government, not himself, had changed policy. Only his electors could remove him from his seat, the Quebec member said.

Mr. Picard said he opposed isolationist elements in Quebec, and Frederic Dorion (Ind-Charlevoix-Saguenay) said he felt some of Mr. Picard's remarks were aimed at him.

"The present administration is to blame for any isolationism in Quebec because of the kind of election campaigns it has carried on in that province during the past 25 years," he said.

Rodney Adamson (PC-York West) also raised the question of party loyalty, and said that Liberal members who criticized the new government wage-control order should vote for the Conservative amendment which condemned the order.

Position Unsatisfactory Claim.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver South) said Canada's position in the war on the Pacific was unsatisfactory, since the Dominion had failed to accept its share of the responsibilities there. Canadian troops had returned from Kiska in the Aleutians and Australians, New Zealanders and Americans had been left to do the Pacific fighting.

Home defence troops remained in Canada although Canada's duty was to take her full share in the Pacific.

A British Comonwealth policy on defence and on foreign affairs was advisable, said Mr. Green, but Prime Minister King believed otherwise.

Other speakers yesterday were J. A. Marshall (ND-Camrose) and E. E. Perley (PC-Qu'Appelle.

Mr. Coldwell said there had been "no more devastating machine in the democratic world" than that organized by Mr. Gardiner in Saskatchewan, Federal government employees had been out in force with cars belonging to the Dominion when the Liberals contested the recent Federal by-election in Humboldt constituency, won by Joseph Burton, a C.C.F. candidate. The C.C.F. would want to know about their expense accounts, he said.

The Liberal government in Saskatchewan had regimented people "in poverty and want."

Condemned Support Given.

From 1931 to the outbreak of war C.C.F. supporters had condemned the support given by "powerful interests throughout the world to Germany, Italy and Japan." The C.C.F. had denounced Hitler "when some of our Liberal friends in Saskatchewan were addressing meetings in Swastika-decorated halls."

Prime Minister King had cabled appreciation to British Prime Minister Chamberlain of the United Kingdom after the Munich agreement in 1936, but Mr. Coldwell said he did not rejoice "when the gallant little nation of Czecho-Slovakia was sacrificed."

Mr. Crerar said the C.C.F. had opposed "modest" increases in defence estimates before the war. The C.C.F. had urged a policy of goodwill and had opposed the shipping of materials to Axis countries.

"It is a difficult and dangerous thing in peace time for a government of one country to throw down a challenge to the government of another country in that way," said Mr. Crerar.

Douglas Asks Questions.

T. C. Douglas (CCF-Weyburn) had spoken of "bogey-men" being trotted out in the House and asked who Canada was preparing to fight against, said Mr. Crerar.

If the C.C.F. viewpoint had been accepted there would have been no increase in defence estimates and there would have been no preparation against dangers that were rising.

When war came, Mr. Coldwell had said no assistance should be sent overseas. If the C.C.F. policy had been adopted Canada would have done nothing in helping to win the war.

AT THE McCARTHY

"In Old Oklahoma"

A tale of the rugged pioneer days of Oklahoma is brought to the screen by Republic in "In Old Oklahoma," based on Thomson Burtis' story, "War of the Wildcats," which is due to show at the McCarthy Theatre next.

With John Wayne and Martha Scott in the leading roles, and Albert Dekker playing the "heavy" lead, the picture starts off with an intriguing situation in the very first feet of film. Cathy Allen, played by Miss Scott, has written a book which is considered very daring and shocking for 1906 and is obliged to leave the small town where she has been teaching school. In spite of her book, Cathy herself is an unworldly, almost naive young girl, attractive and with an independent spirit. On the train she meets and is impressed by Jim Gardner (Albert Dekker), husky, self-assured oil operator traveling in his private car back to Sapulpa, which he has transformed into a boom oil town, pouring wealth and power into his pockets. Cathy also meets Dan Somers, (John Wayne) itinerant cowboy and ex-rough rider, as attractive as Jim but not as flashily impressive, and much more sincere.

The three leave the train at Sapulapa, Jim has the town in his pocket. He's the big boss of everything that counts. His latest well is just coming and now all that stands between him and complete success is a lease on the oil rich Indian territory.

Dan, being friendly with the Indians, protests against his scheme to victimize, and the antagon'sm already existing between the two rivals for Cathy Island is fanned into a violet flame.

7,500 Service Men Entertained At Hospitality House

Picton, Feb. 11. — During the past year, 7,500 service men registered at the Sir Thomas Picton Chapter Hospitality House, it was revealed in the annual report of the Secretary, Mrs. A. H. Walton. Meals are served there at nominal cost and produced a revenue of $4,000. Free writing facilities, regular entertainment, games, music and other facilities are provided.

General work of the Chapter included scholarships to graduates of the hospital, grants to several I.O.D.E. funds, calendars placed in all schools, winter wreaths placed on graves of R.A.F. airmen killed here, collections of clothing for Russian relief.

Ten thousand cigarettes were sent the local regiment overseas. Grants made to prisoner of war fund. Polish Relief, Minesweepers' Fund, British Children's Clothing Fund, 33 ditty bags filled.

The chapter adopted the corvette Pennell and provided many comforts for members of the crew.

Not Wounded as Reported.

"I am directed to inform you that official information has been received from Canadian Military Headquarters overseas, that Pte. Eric Mead, was not wounded in action, as previously reported but was an ordinary casualty suffering from exhaustion". This information was conveyed in a letter received yesterday by Mrs. H. G. Mead from the Director of Records at Ottawa. He was reported wounded on January 30th. He had been previously wounded last July but rejoined Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment five months later. He had been overseas since 1939.

Wounded January 30.

Pte. George Kellogg was wounded in action Jan. 30, his father, Frank Kellogg, was advised. He was also previously wounded. He went overseas in 1939 and formerly resided at Cherry Valley.

Pte. Harold Norton was also wounded in action, his wife here was advised. He had been overseas since 1940. No details were given.

Paper Needed For Salvage.

There is a great need for paper, stated Wray VanLuven, district salvage supervisor, in an address at the local Citizens' Committee Wednesday night. He urged monthly collections of paper here. Plans were made by the committee to send treats to all county men overseas, there being sufficient funds on hand from previous salvage campaigns for this purpose.

Uses Axe to Get Pickerel.

Using an axe, Ross VanCleaf, Ameliasburg farmer, secured a fine pickerel, which provided a tasty dinner. He went to the water hole in the marsh, when he saw the fish. Striking a lusty blow with the axe he stunned the fish and then scooped it out. It weighed four pounds. How the fish got to the spot, ten miles from the deep water of the Bay of Quinte district, is a mystery.

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 8

"It's been done since yesterday mornin', that's sure. That's a special skillet for flapjacks. Mistah McKibben got it down in Virginia. I made him some for his breakfast yesterday mornin', and it was as smooth as glass then."

Tony took the skillet and looked at it closely. The indentation had evidently been made by a heavy blow with some sharp instrument. Or perhaps somebody had been using it for a little pistol practice. He remembered the hole in the mattress.

"That's all for tonight, George," he said and replaced the skillet on its hook and handed the boy a dollar.

"Thank you, suh. When kin I get my things?"

"I'll speak to Lieut. Duffy. Tomorrow afternoon, I should say."

"Thank you, suh," said George again and took his departure.

Tony glanced at his watch, saw that it was nearly ten o'clock and suddenly realized that he had no dinner. He left the apartment and the building.

It was after midnight when Tony walked up the steps of the old house looking down on Washington Square. He found Garrity seated at his desk, rattling away on his typewriter. He finished his typing with a flourish and pulled the sheet of paper out of the machine.

"Anything new?" Tony asked.

"McKibben's death is going to make quite a stink," Garrity answered, lighting a cigarette. "He was just another low-down thief."

"Have you got a list of his victims?"

"Not yet. I'll see that you get a copy as soon as I do."

"All right. Now I've got a little something for you," and Tony told of Lily Edgerton's return, and of the hole in the mattress of McKibben's bed and the mark on the skillet.

"Well, I'll be blown," said Garrity. "Can you make any sense of it?"

"Just a glimmer, and I don't want you to use it for the first edition, because I'm going to refer to it in my column. After that go as far as you like."

"I get you," said Garrity, and took his leave.

Tony sat down at his desk and dialed Chelsea 3-7992. Somewhat to his surprise, Duffy answered.

"That you, Jim?" he asked. "Don't you ever go home?"

"Just getting ready to. Any news?"

"I looked over McKibben's apartment tonight. There's a hole in the mattress on his bed that looks as though it had been made by a bullet. I'm curious to know what you'll make of it."

"All right," said Duffy. "Thanks for calling me. See you tomorrow."

Tony replaced the receiver in its cradle, spread out his notes and started to work. An hour later, with a sigh of satisfaction, he pulled the last sheet of paper from the machine, read over what he had written, made a correction or two, folded all the sheets together and slipped them into a long envelope addressed to the city editor of the Record. He placed the envelope on his desk where Clarence would find it when the messenger arrived who came up every morning from the office. It was a good column, he thought, as he got up and stretched. Better than average, anyway.

Only three paragraphs had anything to do with the people of this story:

Rhino not Reno:—Lily Edgerton started for Reno yesterday as per schedule, but en route, exercising a woman's prerogative, changed her mind and decided to stick to Rhino. So she left the train at Buffalo and hurried back to New York. Nobody knows how Rhino feels, but he also may decide that it is time to settle down. As Whittier once said, "Death softens all resentments."

I, Said the Sparrow:—Who killed Jack McKibben? Was it a man he had robbed of his money, or a woman he had robbed of her reputation? Or was it that handsome, dark-skinned youth with the soft southern accent who was chasing him all evening, fire in his eye and a pistol in his pocket?

One Up and One to Go:—But why did the murderer place a blood-stained carnation on the lapel of the dead man's coat—stained with blood, not McKibben's? Nobody has found an answer as yet to that one. And why did he fire a bullet through McKibben's bed? The answer is that "Mack" was not killed with his own gun. He could not have been, for he had it in his pocket all evening. The bullet found beneath his body had not passed through his heart. It had passed through his mattress.

• •

Duffy came in about noon next day, just as Tony was starting to go through his mail. He sat down, got out a cigar and glanced amusedly at the gloves Tony was wearing.

"You handle your letters as though they were poison," he said.

"Some of them are—this one, for example," and Tony pushed across the desk a letter written in a clumsily disguised feminine hand on a sheet of pearl gray, faintly scented note paper.

Duffy leaned forward and read it without touching it:

It would be interesting to know the name of the overplump blonde in a mink coat who spent Monday night with a well-known swing-dance artist in West 52nd Street. If her first name happens to be Cecile, there will be the devil to pay in a certain Park Avenue penthouse not so far from 68th St., when her husband gets back from Chicago.

"Some jealous hussy trying to get even," Duffy commented. "Probably the regular girl friend of the swing-dance artist."

"Precisely," Tony agreed. "Cecile should have been more careful. It's astonishing how careless all the Ceciles get when they really want something." He picked up the note and sniffed at it. "Maybe this poison penster will put the husband wise. Maybe she'll try blackmail. Maybe she'll get hold of a pistol and take a shot at somebody—and then there's more work for the homicide squad."

"Something like the McKibben case?"

"Yes—something like it. Do you wonder I want to keep my fingerprints off anything like that?"

"But you can't use that sort of stuff. It's libelous."

"Only if somebody comes forward to say the cap fits," Tony pointed out, "and that almost never happens. But I don't use tantalizers—that's what we call items without names—I leave that to some of my competitors. I think I know the answer in this case," he added, looking at the letter appraisingly, "so I'll file this carefully away until something breaks."

"I suppose you read the papers this morning?" asked the detective.

"Of course. I always do."

"They're nagging me because there hasn't been any arrest."

"So I noticed. I also noticed that you intimated an arrest might be expected today. Have you any idea who?"

"I sort of thought it might be that handsome, soft-speaking southerner you've been writing about."

"Have you got anything on him?"

"Only that he was chasing McKibben and had a lump in his pocket."

"Do you know who he is?"

"Not yet, but I'll find him."

"Have you found the girl?"

"No, but I have a hunch that I'm going to find both of them in the same place," said Duffy slowly. "As I figure it out, it was on account of the girl that the boy was after McKibben."

"Yes, I think you're right," Tony nodded.

"Suppose you tell me all you know about him," the detective suggested.

So Tony told him all he knew, while Duffy listened thoughtfully, rolling his cigar from one side of his mouth to the other. "And what about that bullet hole in the mattress?" he asked.

"You've seen it?"

"Yes. I went around this morning."

"And you saw the skillet?"

"Yes. I noticed that, too."

"Well, there is only one possible explanation. McKibben wasn't shot with his own gun. He had it with him."

"Yes—Lily Edgerton told me."

"The murderer used a high-power cartridge which sent the bullet right through McKibben's body. Then he picked up the bullet and the shell, got McKibben's gun out of his pocket, or out of the drawer if he'd put it back there, placed the skillet under the bed, fired a shot at it through the mattress, retrieved the bullet, placed it under the body and the shell on the floor beside it."

"Sounds plausible," Duffy agreed.

"I went through McKibben's apartment last night, as I told you over the phone," Tony continued, "but I didn't find anything except that bullet hole. McKibben's boy says there is a towel missing from the bathroom."

"Yes, he told me. Can you make anything of that?"

"Not a thing. But it certainly seems to me it would be dead easy to get into the place from the windows just above the terrace."

"I though of that myself," said Duffy, "and I looked the ground over. There are two apartments on the seventh floor which have windows overlooking the terrace. One is occupied by a psychotherapist named Jerome Metcalf and the other by a fellow named Dudley Graham, who is a nephew of Herschel Schneider, the lawyer. Schneider is attorney for the company which owns the building. The original company went into bankruptcy a few years ago, and he organized another which bought the place for about twenty cents on the dollar. He took over for himself the penthouse on top of the building where he has been living ever since. Quite a swell place, they tell me. That's when McKibben moved in too. He had placed some of the bonds for Schneider and I imagine got a rebate on his rent."

Tony couldn't help smiling at Duffy's tone. Schneider's many triumphs in the courts hadn't endeared him to the police.

"Maybe you'll get something on him some day," he said.

"I hope so!" Duffy grunted. "This Dr. Metcalf strikes me as pretty smooth, too. He has had his office there for a couple of years and must have a good practice from the look of things."

"He has," nodded Tony. "One of the best in New York. I've heard of him. Neurotic women flock to him."

"He looks sort of like it. Quite a showy person, with shiny black eyes and a little black beard. I had a talk with him. He says he didn't hear any row or any shot at McKibben's place Monday night. He's a bachelor and has one servant, a Jap. During office hours he also had a receptionist—a looker."

"Did he know McKibben?" Tony asked.

"Yes. He was one of his customers. Said he had lost quite a lot. I haven't had a chance to check that up yet. He was polite enough, but I could see he was not telling me any more than he had to. I'm going to keep an eye on him."

"I would," Tony nodded.

"This Graham, who has the other flat," Duffy went on, "acts as a sort of agent for his uncle. He's married, but I understand he plays around a good deal."

"I've seen him at Max's," said the columnist. "He's got a good-looking wife. I remember he had some sort of run-in with McKibben once, but I don't know what it was about. It might have been about his wife."

"He couldn't have had anything to do with this, because he has been out in Hollywood for the past month, looking after some of Schneider's movie interests."

"Wife with him?" Tony Bigelow asked Detective Duffy.

"So the building superintendent said. "I'll check it."

"Might as well be certain they're both away."

"All right," Duffy agreed. "I got a list of the other tenants—here it is. They all seem fairly respectable."

Tony ran through the names and recognized some of them—a vice-president of the Bankers Trust; the broker who had managed to get control of the Monongahela Corporation on a shoestring; the minister of a fashionable Fifth Avenue church; the junior partner of a well-known publishing house; even a columnist—a politico-sociological one—which is the kind that really pulls down the money because they don't have to do any leg work, and can spend all their spare time on lucrative lecture platforms.

"Who is this Arcadius Bellini who has the apartment next to McKibben's on the sixth floor?" Tony asked. "That's a queer name."

"He's just another nut," chuckled Duffy. I went to see him. An old guy in skullcap and velvet dressing gown, white whiskers, and eyebrows like John L. Lewis. He's a scientist of some sort and also a literary gent. He thinks there has never been any writer since Shakespeare. He says Hamlet was nuts, and that Othello had a complex because he was black. You ought to go in and see him some day. You'd find his daughter worth looking at. He keeps her dressed up like—maybe it's Juliet."

"Could he tell you anything?"

"Nothing except about Shakespeare. He had never even heard of McKibben. It's a good thing "Mack" didn't lamp the girl, or he'd have broken down the door."

"I'll remember to stop in the next time I'm out calling," said Tony. "But he sounds inoffensive. I'll make a copy of the list, if you don't mind."

Want Referendum To Abolish Beverage Rooms in Hotels

Toronto, Feb. 11 (CP) — The Ontario Temperance Federation, which ended its annual convention here last night, voted to ask the Ontario Government to conduct a provincial referendum on the question of abolishing beverage rooms in hotels.

The convention also passed a resolution asking the Federal Government to appoint a royal commission to investigate all aspects of the liquor problem, especially whether the Federal Government should take over the manufacture, sale and import of alcoholic beverages.

Bolivia Govt. Ousted Report

Santiago, Chile, Feb. 11—(AP)—The newspaper La Hora said today it had received a private but unconfirmed report that the recently established Nationalist Government of Gualberto Villaroel in Bolivia had been ousted in a counter-revolution and the leaders jailed.

The newspaper's information was similar to a broadcast by the Santiago station, Radio Agricultura, last night.

In Buenos Aires, Adolfo Costa Durels, the Bolivian ambassador to Argentina, said he had received no official confirmation concerning reports of a revolution in Bolivia. There were indications that telephone communications with the Bolivian capital had been interrupted.

The Villaroel Government seized power from President Enrique Penaranda in a coup d'etat last Dec. 20. It had been unable to obtain recognition of any country except Argentina, however.

Says Nazis Create English-Speaking Nazi Air Units

Men to Man Captured U. S. "Forts" and Use Them to Sneak Alongside U. S. Formations

Washington, Feb. 11. (AP)—The creation of special, English-speaking Nazi units, to man captured Flying Fortresses and use them for sneaking into or alongside of an American bomber formation was reported today.

The official United States Army Air Forces publication Air Forces says American pilots have reported several instances of unidentified B-17s appearing in their formation or flying along out of gun range but parallel with the flight of the formation.

"They engage in mock air battles with Nazi fighters", the publication says, "and attempt to work out new tactics which will give their fighters more of a chance against our big bombers.

"Only crews who speak perfect English are chosen to man the bombers. To make things as real as possible the members have nothing to do with other German airmen, and have contact with the regular Luftwaffe only through liaison officers.

"They plan their tactics with great secrecy and try to act like Americans. After each 'battle', the liaison officer makes a long report to the fighter group, pointing out mistakes and making suggestions".

Inspectorate Changes In South Hastings

As the result of a regrouping of the public school inspectorate in Hastings County, the South Hastings district, with the exception of the city of Belleville and the township of Tyendinaga, has been joined to that of Centre Hastings, it is announced by Mr. A. W. McGuire, B.A., of Tweed, appointed inspector for the combined district. Mr. McGuire will be required to establish residence in Belleville not later than September 1st., 1944, it was stated.

Duties of the Inspector over the newly combined district will commence on September 1st., 1944, with a supervising teacher to be appointed to assist the inspector. The new inspectorate includes the town of Trenton, the villages of Frankford, Tweed, Stirling and Madoc, and the townships of Sidney, Thurlow, Rawdon, Huntingdon, Hungerford, Madoc and Elzevir.

Allied Position In Pacific Improves But Task Big One

London, Feb. 11. (CP Cable) — The Allied position in the Pacific is looking better than ever "but our task in the Far East may take years and we are under no illusion that the war is half over", Walter Nash, New Zealand's Minister of External Affairs and Minister to the United States, said last night.

The toughest job lies ahead, added Nash, who has arrived in Britain for discussions with the government. Nash said a "take-it-easy" policy would lengthen the war by another year or two in Europe and the Pacific.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J S McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is taken internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem Roid is pleasant to use is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

Sidney Draws Up Road Program

Following recommendation from the district municipal engineer, Mr. Smale of Kingston, that municipalities within the counties draw up a post-war program for possible completion following the war, Sidney township council has adopted a program calling for a road expenditure of $132,000 over a five-year period.

The program was approved at the last meeting of the township council but is still subject to the approval of the department. The terms of the program are not binding on the township and will be completed only if funds are available. Gravelling of all township roads was included in the five year program, the amount also to take care of regular maintenance and the purchase of necessary equipment.

Deputy Reeve Nicolson was appointed to dispose of junk accumulating as result of the fire which destroyed the township hall and road equipment.

Wages Discussed.

The question of wages for township employees came up for discussion in council, members deciding to adjust rate of pay for men doing township work to 45 cents perhour. Reeve Fred Wilson was appointed to investigate the dumping and burning of garbage in the township gravel pit on the 1st lot in concession one.

Relief accounts for the month of January were ordered paid, also the following accounts: Municipal World $15.83; James Texts, $15.50. The Clerk was authorized to communicate with Mr. Frank Baalin making an offer for five dollars for his interest in Pt. N. Pt. Lot 24, 4th concession, indicating if the offer is not accepted the council would take steps to redeem the property.

Delegates to the Ontario Association of Rural Municipalities will be S. M. Nicolson and B. Bleecker, and to the Good Roads Convention, F. H. Campbell and S. Danford.

Corvette Committee Holds Third Meeting

The third general meeting of the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Corvette Fund Committee was held in the Council Chambers of the City Hall Thursday evening when the Committee assembled to discuss recent developments in the campaign. It was decided that an appeal would be made in the manufacturing plants, to the employees as well as the employers, which would result in a substantial amount being given to the Fund.

Saturday, February 19th., was set as the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Tag Day, and the Committee appointed Mrs. E. J. Neate, Regent of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E., chairman. Tags will be sold to the public by ladies of all the organizations and clubs of the city on this day, and the public is requested to respond generously, especially in the event that the weather is inclement. Contributions to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund are entirely voluntary, no canvassers or solicitors for funds operating in the city.

The Coca Cola Company of Canada, through the courtesy of Mr. Aubrey Coe, manager of the local plant, donated several games to be included in the equipment of the mess room aboard the "BELLEVILLE." They include table tennis, bingo, dominoes, checkers, Chinese checkers, playing cards and a dart game.

Soot-Blackened Yanks Capture Town, Wipe Out Nazis

By REYNOLDS PACKARDO
Distributed by the Canadian Press

At the Anzio Beachhead, Feb. 11. —American soldiers who blackened their faces with soot from cooking utensils and wiped out the entire Nazi garrison of a town in a daring night plunge behind the German lines returned yesterday jubilant and happy.

The force, slinging hand grenades, occupied the town in half an hour, killing sixty Nazis, wounding scores of others and taking nine prisoners. Their own losses were comparatively light.

Once in the town, from which the Italian occupants had fled, the men worked in small groups, cleaning out the houses one by one.

Two groups of fifteen men were particularly successful in close teamwork. Both were armed with rifles, pistols, tommy-guns, sub-machine-guns, bazookas, automatic rifles, grenades. They took turns. One would chase the Germans from the houses while the other group would catch them as they tried to make a getaway.

JEWELRY STOLEN FROM HOME

Toronto, Feb. 11 —(CP)—Several thousand dollars in jewelry was stolen last night from the home of Hugh T. Kelly, retired Ontario Supreme Court Justice. Police said the house was ransacked in the search for valuables.

RHEUMATIC
ACHES and PAINS.

If just one bottle of Ru-Ma does not show you the quick, easy way to get real relief from rheumatic aches and pains, it costs you nothing. Don't suffer longer; try Ru-Ma today and if you are not pleased with the results, your money will be refunded by J. S. McKeown. This is a generous offer to all rheumatic sufferers.

Anonymous 'Phone Tips Blamed on 16-Year-Old Boy

New York, Feb. 11 —(AP)— A series of anonymous telephone tips to the Federal Bureau of Investigation that saboteurs planned to dynamite and destroy New York City's tunnels were blamed by police today on a 16-year-old Bronx messenger boy.

The phone calls resulted in heavily augmented guards on all vulnerable structures in the metropolitan area. When another call came in late last night, the F.B.I. was ready and traced it to a Bronx telephone booth. A youth identified as James Gerritt, found still talking, was charged with malicious mischief.

Senator Duffus Suggests Kawartha National Park

Peterborough, Feb. 11 —(CP)— Senator J. J. Duffus of Peterborough outlined the possibility of a Kawartha National Park as a post war project at a Service Club (Kinsmen) meeting here last night.

He said the Ontario government has thousands of acres of land all through the Peterborough district and if this was acquired and turned over to the Dominion, it could be developed by the National Parks Department.

They would build roads through, dam up streams here and there, he said, and generally convert it into a great asset.

NEW YORK STOCKS

New York, Feb. 11. (AP)—Rails, with selected industrials and utilities, enjoyed another early bulge in today's stock market but profit taking on the recent advance eventually stemmed the move. Near the fourth hour initial gains running to a point or so were substantially reduced or cancelled.

Pullman was among favorites touching a 1943-44 top. In front most of the time were N.Y. Central, Western Union "A", North American, Johns-Manville, Montgomery Ward, U.S. Rubber, Goodrich, J. I. Case and Douglas Aircraft. Losers were Chrysler, Anaconda, Du Pont, American Telephone and American Can.

Canadian Stocks were irregular. Distillers Seagrams and Lake Shore added fractions. Dome Mines was off a fraction and Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker were unchanged.

Poultry Receipts Somewhat Smaller

Toronto, Feb. 11 (CP)—The fresh dressed poultry market is quiet with receipts falling off, the Dominion Department of Agriculture reports. Some withdrawals from storage have been necessary to fill fairly good local demand. Some retailers are contracting for heavy chicken for early summer trade. There is a fairly good demand for heavy chicken from the Maritimes. Approximately 20,000 lbs of heavy chicken was shipped to the Maritimes this week. Last week 500 boxes of light weight chicken went forward to Ottawa. Prices to producers and country shippers are unchanged at:

Chicken: Grade A milk-fed, 5 lbs. and up 32-33, 4 to 5 lbs. 31-32, under 4 lbs. 30-31; Grades B milk-fed and Grade A 5 lbs. and up 30-31, 4 to 5 lbs. 29-31, under 4 lbs. 28-30, Grade B, 5 lbs. and up 28-29, 4 to 5 lbs. 27-29, under 4 lbs. 26-28; Grade C, 5 lbs. and up 25-26, 4 to 5 lbs. 24-25, under 4 lbs. 25.

Proposes Tax Pool to Equalize Costs of Power

Toronto.— To reduce the cost of Hydro to $39 a horsepower in 65 municipalities which now pay over $40, some as high as [illegible], the Ontario Hydro plans to ask all Hydro municipalities to contribute 4 1-2 cents a horsepower to a general fund, Dr. Thomas Hogg, chairman of the Ontario Hydro, announces.

At the same time the Hydro plans to amalgamate the Georgian Bay, Eastern Ontario and Niagara systems with a consequent saving, Dr. Hogg believes, which will much more than offset the 4 1-2 cents per horsepower contribution.

Applied to Toronto, Dr. Hogg sees the scheme working out this way. Toronto pays $22.60 per horsepower for Hydro; the city would be asked to pay $22.64 1-2; but the amalgamation of the three systems may bring the cost to Toronto down to $22 per horsepower.

Instead of Flat Rate.

The contribution plan is the answer to the cry in outlying municipalities for flat Hydro rates to municipalities all over the province. Of the 65 centres which will benefit from the contribution scheme, 11 pay over $50 per horsepower for Hydro, and the remainder pay between $40 and $50. The 4 1-2 cents contribution, said Dr. Hogg, will amount to $50,000, a negligible amount, he considered, when it is remembered that Ontario municipalities paid in $36,000,000 for Hydro last year.

Since ultimately the municipalities will own all the assets of the Commission, it isn't fair to use reserves to bonus the high cost municipalities, he said.

The contribution scheme, it is revealed, will not benefit Sarnia where the agitation commenced, since Sarnia only pays $27 per horsepower for Hydro.

Local Productions.

While declaring that the amalgamation of the three systems will likely mean a cut in wholesale rates of power to municipalities this year, Dr. Hogg said that a decrease in rates within each centre will have to be decided on its merits. Toronto, for instance, would face a heavy program after the war, including extended street lighting and replacements for which reserves may have to be set up.

The amalgamation will not change the cycle frequency anywhere. Centres on 25 cycle will remain so as will also those on 60 cycle. Frequency changers at strategic points will be employed to divert power wherever it is needed.

Merging of the three systems will mean construction of a high voltage line from Peterboro to Barrie to link the Eastern Ontario and Georgian Bay systems.

Loads Still Rising.

Further restrictions on the use of power next winter are almost certain if the war goes into next year, Dr. Hogg predicted. Contrary to the previously-held opinion that demands for power would by this time have reached their peak, Hydro loads are still rising, he said, but added reassuringly "We'll get through next winter all right".

"We are comfortable enough right now, but we are operating on a shoe-string with everything running to capacity", said the Hydro chairman. He foresaw a drop in industrial demand of 400,000 to 500,000 horsepower when the war ends, but pointed out on the other hand that all restrictions would be off and the domestic and commercial demand would be increased. Looking over the whole picture, he did not visualize, a surplus because some of the power available now is only temporary.

Dr. Hogg foresaw a $50,000,000 capital expenditure in the five years following the war "if this goes through". After a temporary readjustment period at the war's end, he looked for 20 years of prosperity.

Baltic States Undecided to Welcome Reds As Liberators Or New Masters

By ROBERT STURDEVANT
Associated Press Staff Writer

Stockholm, Feb. 11—(AP)—With Russian armies now fighting in Estonia the three little Baltic states find themselves uncertain whether to welcome Soviet troops as Liberators from German oppression or as new masters bent on re-incorporating them into the giant Soviet Union.

On the question of their ultimate position in Europe may well rest the success or failure of the Atlantic charter, setting forth that adherents "seek no aggrandizement, territorial or other" and "wish to see sovereign rights and self government restored to those who have been forcibly deprived of them."

So far Russia has said little other than quietly to insist that they are a part of her former territory, which she is liberating from the Nazis.

Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania were part of Czarist Russia. They became independent republics in 1920. In 1940 Soviet Russia absorbed them and incorporated them into the Soviet union by means of plebiscites which Baltic nationalists declare was anything but democratic. In any event it was overwhelmingly pro-Soviet.

To understand the Baltic problem it is necessary to recall that these republics were formed on territory previously belonging to the Russian empire. Democracy proved a heady wine. In the 1930s there was a tendency toward political unbalance, complicated by numerous party factions, with the result that strong-man governments arose, particularly in Latvia and Lithuania.

Russia considered these governments hotbeds of Fascism, and charged they plotted against her.

The Belts, while acknowledging some tendency toward dictatorship, asserted that the backsliding was simply evidence of growing pains.

The War Today—

Hitler Hoping for Lucky Break In Delaying Action at Beachhead

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The fierce struggle for the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead south of Rome might become one of the sensational battles of the war—and a bloody one.

It isn't great in the sense that it can be decisive, whichever side wins. Its importance lies in no small degree in its moral effect.

The enemy's violent attempt to annihilate the Anglo-American force in the big beachhead is part and parcel of the delaying, psychological war which Hitler is waging in an effort to gain time. He hopes by this to get some lucky break.

Dnieper Bend

We see the same thing on a monumental scale in the Dnieper bend on the Russian front. There the Nazis have long been risking 500,000 men in a fantastically dangerous holding operation which is more than half political. They are protecting the gateway to the Balkans to prevent a revolt among their satellites there.

So it is with the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead. Hitler needs a spectacular victory to impress wavering supporters and hand his stricken people a ray of hope. He must persuade friends and foes that Germany is still a mighty power.

Staging is Perfect

The stage setting is perfect. The Allied force is almost at the gates of Rome, after a triumphant amphibious invasion which centred the eyes of the world on the scene. If the Fuehrer can smash it, his propagandists can blow the feat up into a victory as high as the Alps.

Official reports say the Allies have been holding their own. However, the position is difficult. The Germans, who apparently possess numerical superiority, are on high ground which overlooks the beachhead. They're flinging everything they can get hold of at the invaders.

Still, the invaders have air superiority—an invaluable asset—and a naval fleet off shore is backing them up. Officialdom expresses confidence they will win the day.

VICHITE ORDERS POLICE TO CRUSH UNDERGROUND OF FRANCE

London, Feb. 11 (CP)—The German-controlled Paris radio said last night Joseph Darnand, new secretary-general for the maintenance of order in the Vichy regime, who is back in Paris from Hitler's headquarters, had launched a campaign to crush the French underground before the Allied invasion by ordering the country's policemen to shoot anyone caught with firearms. The broadcast was recorded here by the British Ministry of Information.

Weekly Polish Paper Banned

London, Feb. 11. (CP) — The weekly Polish newspaper "Wiadomosci Polski", published in London, was banned today when the Ministry of Information withdrew its official support, necessary in order to obtain paper.

The publishers said the Ministry of Information had informed them it "no longer approves production of any copies in the United Kingdom" and present paper stocks will be frozen for "further directions".

The Ministry declined to comment beyond referring to Minister of Information Brendan Bracken's speech in the House of Commons several months ago when he said he "considered it quite proper to withhold supplies of paper from foreigners using it to foment discord among the United Nations".

The weekly had been outspoken on the Russian-Polish border dispute. Its editor called the Ministry's action inexplicable declaring: "Our policy has been anti-German and pro-Polish. Our columns are open to all classes of opinion".

Earlier today it was reported Prime Minister Churchill had received a personal message from Premier Stalin outlining the Russian viewpoint on the Russian-Polish dispute. The contents were said to have been communicated to the Polish government here.

Official British quarters declined to comment, but it was understood that the message had been transmitted to London last weekend by Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, British ambassador to Moscow. The message was said to have been in reply to a letter from Churchill which Sir Archibald carried on his recent return to the Russian capital.

Partisans Army Has Fallen Back In Dalmatia

London, Feb. 11. (CP)—The Yugoslav Partisan Army's 19th Division has fallen back from Northern Dalmatia into the Province of Lika in Croatia after bitter fighting Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) announced today.

His broadcast communique gave no further details of the action in the Dalmatian sector, but reported successful operations in both Eastern and Western Bosnia. Enemy attacks in Slovenia and Croatia were reported repulsed.

PROBABLY SAWBILL DUCKS NOT FLOCK OF GEESE—MINER

Kingsville, Ont., Feb. 11 —(CP)—Predictions of an early spring based on reports of a flock of geese flying north over Huntsville were received with skepticism by Jack Miner, operator of the famed bird sanctuary here. He ventured that what Huntsville residents saw was a group of sawbill ducks, which fly in formation like Canada geese and have a similar long-range appearance.

Plan to Amend Wage Order, King Tells House

Ottawa, Feb. 11. (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday told the Commons that the Government proposes to amend the new wage-control order and that it will make public early next week a labor code on compulsory collective bargaining.

Mr. King made his statement on these labor matters at the opening of the House sitting. In the galleries were a number of Labor Union officials who came to Ottawa yesterday to canvass members of parliament for support in protesting the wage order.

Speaking of the Labor code, the Prime Minister said consultations with the provinces and labor organizations had been completed.

Expression of Views.

"Many representations" had been made to the government by members of parliament, labor organizations and others regarding the wage order. The Standard Railway Brotherhoods had presented their views on the order and the Canadian Congress of Labor would meet the government today. Meetings would be held shortly with the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor. He invited these organizations to express their views on the order.

"When the government has these various representations before it, the government will then be in a position to consider what amendments should be made to the order", Mr. King said.

"It is the intention of the government to make certain amendments, but we wish to have these representations from the leading labor organizations before us when we are considering these further amendments".

Bonuses and Basic Rate

Mr. King said merging of bonuses with the basic rate held some benefits for workers and should not be postponed. Establishment of a House Committee on industrial and international relations might be effected later but amendments to the order could be expedited without a committee reference.

Mr. King also said he could not agree with a suggestion from Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, that the code be implemented by a bill rather than by Order-in-Council.

Loses Finger Tips While Cleaning Gun

Aboard H.M.C.S. Swansea, Feb. 11 (CP)—Able seaman Gerald Higgins, of Gananoque, Ont., was gloomy when he accidentally lost the tips of three fingers while cleaning an Oerlikon gun aboard this frigate—but his gloom turned to joy when the ship's company presented him with $152.

Higgins, treated by surgeon Lieut. A. K. Mathison of Vancouver, spent his birthday in a sick bay cot. Officers and men dropped in to wish him well, and cook Wallace Walters of Halifax presented him with a big chocolate cake.

"You're lucky this cake didn't fall," said the cook. "They dropped depth charges while it was cooking." Then came a birthday card, signed by everyone aboard ship, and finally $152. Only one thing worries Higgins now—being put ashore to convalesce.

Five-Year Program of County Road Construction Outlined

Annual Expenditure of $200,000 Proposed After War Says L. Langlois, County Engineer

Details of a proposed post-war road construction program recently adopted by Hastings county council and which calls for an estimated expenditure of $1,000,000 over a five-year period, were released this week by County Engineer Larry Langlois. The program was drawn up by the engineer on the recommendation of Toronto and although adopted by county council still has to be approved by the department.

It was pointed out that this program was in addition to any other plans that have been or are being made by the county to meet post-war conditions. It calls for an annual expenditure of $200,000, this figure including the cost of all regular annual maintenance operations and new road and bridge construction. The $500,000 allotted for maintenance over the five-year period is deemed necessary in view of the fact that much new equipment and machinery is necessary.

Until actual conditions could be more clearly foreseen it was indicated by the engineer that a tentative program calling for an expenditure of $200,000 per year was all that was advisable to prepare. However, it was considered possible that larger annual amounts than this might be found necessary in the first two or three years and smaller amounts during the latter part of the five-year plan.

Divisions.

In broad divisions the suggested annual amount for road expenditure in the five-year period following the war are: Maintenance, $87,500; new equipment, $12,500; bridges, $10,000, and road construction, $90,000.

Explaining the amount set aside for maintenance, Mr. Langlois admitted that the figure might seem large, but pointed out that much necessary maintenance and repairs has had to be postponed during the war, especially so during the past two years. The chief reasons for this had been because of lack of manpower and scarcity of materials.

Maintenance costs were termed by the engineer to include ditching, culvert repairs, gravel resurfacing, guide rail repairs, weed control and brushing, patching and seal coating of pavements, shouldering, blading, snow fence erection, snowplowing, sanding and other operations. Maintenance expenditures must also include less visible outlays for such as machinery repairs, gasoline and oil, workmen's compensation, assessments, superintendence, insurance and tools. The uninitiated are usually unaware of the many drains on funds through road maintenance costs, stated Mr. Langlois.

Need New Equipment.

Much new road equipment would have to be purchased for the county road systems as it has been impossible to buy even badly needed machines. Some machinery which the county possesses would have to be replaced before the five-year period is completed while other equipment was obsolete when the war broke out four-and-one-half years ago. Purchase of adequate snow plowing equipment would be a large item.

The amount set aside for bridges was only tentative as the actual expenditure on this phase of construction would likely vary considerably from year to year. Many of the county bridges are in need of repair; several should be strengthened to carry present-day loads and others should be widened and probably some replaced entirely.

Suggested Improvements.

Road construction program on the 20 county roads included widening of rights of way, as well as widening of the actual road beds, improving drainage, elimination of sharp turns and corners, reducing of sharp knolls to improve vision, in addition to paving and construction of some mileage of cheaper types of hard surfaces other than actual pavements.

The more important roads in the county system would receive attention first, it was expected by the engineer. By way of illustration he mentioned the completion of regrading and paving of the remaining miles on the Madoc road, south of Madoc. Improvements on all of the 283 miles of county road were included in the program with no area being neglected.

Throw Back New German Assaults On Bridgehead

Front Lines Have Stayed 'Relatively Unchanged' During Past Few Days

BAD WEATHER PREVAILS

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 12 (AP). — Allied naval units, including two British cruisers, thundered into action to help repulse a new German assault on the storm-swept invasion bridgehead below Rome, and a headquarters officer said today despite Nazi pressure the front lines there have "remained relativley unchanged during the past few days."

On the main 5th Army front, American forces made new gains in bitter struggles within Cassino, and in the hills to the west drove within a mile of the Via Casilina, the Germans' only corridor into the town.

Rain, snow, sleet and gales prevented allied air blows against the Germans pressing against the invasion bridgehead, leaving them free to move up troops and supplies, harried only by naval and land artillery bombardment.

The single Nazi attack yesterday was flung unsucessfully against the American troops in the area west of Cisterna, headquarters said, where hard fighting continues.

Naval units including the British cruisers Mauritius of 8,000 tons and Dido of 5,450 tons moved close inshore to shell the left flank of the Germans as they attacked.

Core Remains Secure.

(CBS correspondent John Daly said this morning that "after four anxious days, the core of the Allied beachhead below Rome remains secure."

(The German communique broadcast by Berlin said Nazi artillery broke up heavy Allied tank attacks against "new German lines near Aprilia, knocking out 17 tanks.)

The gains by Allied troops in bitter fighting in Cassino included the jail which the Germans had converted into one of their main fortresses, continuing to hold out in its basement even after allied artillery and tanks had levelled the structure to the ground. The Germans are resisting there no longer.

The Allied units also knocked out a number of strong points in the northern part of the town. Their push in the hills to the west threatened to choke off the Nazi supply route into Cassino.

Fighting in the mountains around Cassino was impeded by heavy snow fall but more artillery was brought up to back up the Allied infantry.

Three thousand Germans have been captured on the beachhead and on the main front in the last week, for a total of 13,000 Nazis taken since the invasion of Italy began last September, headquarters announced. That is the equivalent of about one division. The enemy also has suffered heavy tolls of dead and wounded.

In the Garigliano sector west of Cassino the Germans put in a determined local attack against the British near Mount Orfino, three miles northeast of Castelforte. On the 8th. Army front two enemy patrols were driven back in the Orsogna area.

Reinforcing Continues

Bad weather retarded shipping operations, but movement of reinforcements and supplies to the invasion beachhead continued, a long period of good weather after the first landings enabled the Allies to build up adequate supply bases there with a comfortable margin, it was stated.

The fact that no German attacks of great intensity or extent were launched on the beachhead yesterday may have resulted from the terrific Allied air blows on the previous morning before bad weather forced a cancellation of many sorties.

It also is possible the Germans already may have spent their offensive strength against the beachhead, and must regroup before undertaking a major drive.

While they have been hammering repeatedly for the last week and many of their thrusts were vigorous and hard to cope with, they have not yet made any general onslaught to drive the 5th. Army into the sea.

A 45-mile-an-hour gale blew in from the Mediterranean this morning, but there were signs by noon that the weather was abating, giving hope that Allied planes might be able to strike the Nazis again around the beachhead.

REDS FIRE NEW VERBAL BLAST AT POLISH GOVT.

Again Suggest Intention to Oust Anti-Russian Elements

BREACH WIDENING

By JUDSON O'QUINN
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, Feb. 12 — (AP)—Russia fired a new verbal blast at the Polish government in London today, again suggesting a firm intention to force the ouster of alleged anti-Russian elements or set up an administration chosen from the union of Polish patriots in Moscow.

"The Polish Emigre government, having Fascist politicians in its makeup, has lost all sense of reality and is living in the phantom world of a Hitlerite mirage," said a Pravda article broadcast by the Moscow radio and recorded by the Soviet monitor.

"It has completely cut itself off from the real Polish people who are waging a bitter struggle against the German invaders and their Polish accomplices. The London Polish politicians are backed by no one in Poland except pro-Fascist agents who are helping the Germans."

This new Soviet attack, on top of reports that Premier Stalin's reply to Prime Minister Churchill objected to certain members of the Polish government, suggested the Polish-Soviet breach is widening rather than narrowing.

War Estimates Down 240 Million

Ottawa, Feb. 12. (CP) — The $3,650,000,000 war estimates for 1944-45 introduced in the House of Commons yesterday by Finance Minister Ilsley, down $240,000,000 from the current fiscal year, indicate general cuts in the home-war establishment, increase in battlefront expenditure, existence of a substantial surplus of munitions and a gathering strength of man-power.

Hansard, official record of debates, today published a lengthy breakdown of the appropriation by Departments— figures placed on the record by Mr. Ilsley but not read in the House.

In the R.C.A.F., figures for the cost of flying training contracts are cut from $33,805,829 to $29,345,667 but maintenance of overseas squadrons is up from $303,783,729 to $345,664,964.

In the Navy, capital expenditure —including construction— is down from $36,579,608 to $17,990,462 while ships in larger numbers and in action further from Canadian shores are expected to use $27,806,604 worth of fuel compared with $25,257,798 in 1943-44.

WILL RESIDE IN KINGSTON

Kingston, Feb. 12 —(CP)— Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton is expected to arrive with his wife next Wednesday to take up residence for some time in an apartment here, it was learned today. The former commander of the Canadian army overseas, now holidaying at the Seigniory Club, Quebec, has many friends at Military District No. 3 Headquarters and at Royal Military College here.

CASSINO, ITALY, UNDER ALLIED BOMBARDMENT

A view of the much-headlined town of Cassino, as seen from a nearby Italian hilltop now in possession of Allied forces. The Germans made this Italian mountain town into a stronghold to bar the road to Rome, but it is gradually being pounded to dust by Allied artillery. Allied troops now hold about one-quarter of the town.

Britain and U.S. To Confer On Oil Problems

Washington, Feb. 12 (AP)—British and United States representatives are scheduled to meet here for a round-table discussion to "work out a complete designed to encourage the efficient development, conservation, and equitable distribution of the world's petroleum resources," it was announced yesterday.

Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius said the discussions would centre on the near east, where the United States has just made a pipeline deal for perhaps 20,000,000,000 barrels of untapped Persian Gulf crude oil.

The date and details of the Washington conference still are a state department secret.

Foreign Secretary Eden has had to answer many questions in the House of Commons since Britons heard the United States planned to construct a 1,250-mile pipeline at a maximum cost of $165,000,000 to siphon oil from Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to Mediterranean shipside.

Announcement Arouses Opposition.

The announcement also aroused opposition to the plan in Congress. Senator E. H. Moore (Rep.-Okla) said it threatened international complications that would be the "breeding places of future wars," contended Oil Administrator Harold Ickes had no authority for the project, which he said amounted to an international treaty requiring Senate sanction.

The proposed pipeline—approved by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait rulers, eager for oil royalties—leads into reserves about equal to all Britain is believed to have amassed in Iran and Iraq.

Remaining unattached Asia Minor deposits are estimated at 40,000,000,000 barrels, twice the known oil reserves in the United States.

President Roosevelt said at a press conference yesterday the United States will need outside oil if the war lingers on and eventually, anyway, if she keeps depleting her reserves four times faster than discoveries are made.

The present record rate of depletion is 1,500,000,000 barrels a year. Some say there is only a 15-year supply left.

BRACKEN WANTS CONFERENCE ON LABOR QUESTIONS

Criticizes New Govt. Wage Control Order And Asks Labor Bd. Be Set Up

RIGHTS FOR EMPLOYEES

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 12 — (CP)— Sharply criticizing the new government wage-control order, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative National leader, on Friday night proposed a conference of Dominion and Provincial authorities on labor questions and asked for establishment of a National Labor Relations Board.

"The struggle for fair and adequate wages is still an important and necessary function of organized labor," Mr. Bracken said. "Trade unionism has not yet passed out of the combative stage and I think that one of the responsibilities of government is to bring this struggle to an early and satisfactory conclusion."

He said that employees should have full rights to bargain collectively and there should be no encouragement to company unions. Workers, however, should be entitled to organize voluntarily in any individual company without interference by outside influence. Representatives of organized labor should be included in the membership of all government agencies affecting labor.

Must be Given Voice

Mr. Bracken said labor and agriculture must be given a voice with business and industry in influencing decisions of the government.

The larger interests of labor were bound up with the prosperity of the community and workers should have opportunity to work.

"It is, therefore, the joint responsibility of management and government to see that Capital is so organized that productive use can be made of all the workers seeking admission to the ranks of industry."

Mr. Bracken said: "There is one thing which may weaken the cause of labor, its the possibility that its leadership may become over-stimulated by success and headstrong to a point where it begins to trespass upon the functions of government or the interests of the people at large.

In guaranteeing labor its rights, labor should also be required to respect the rights of agriculture, industry and the public generally.

"In the past, business and industry have had a dominant influence in the decisions of government," Mr. Bracken said. "In the future, not only business and industry must sit in and be heard by the government, but labor and agriculture must sit in and be heard.

Losses of Allied Ships Not Likely To Disturb Plans

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 12—(CP Cable)—Losses of Allied ships and landing craft operating in the Nettuno bridgehead in Italy where Allied forces are fighting strong German formations is not likely to disturb western European invasion plans here.

German bombers, sometimes using radio-controlled glider bombs, have hit a number of ships plying to the bridgehead with supplies. Troops and ships have been shelled but the losses are not considered serious enough to upset the second-front shipping calculations.

Invasion preparations here are to a large degree independent of what happens in the Mediterranean now so far as landing craft and combined operations shipping are concerned. Much of this type of shipping now in the Mediterranean probably will remain there for any other amphibious tasks decided upon.

Good Number Available.

Small assault craft and landing ships of the type the Germans have been bombing and shelling on and near the beaches are expendable and the fact that none was lost during the initial Nettuno landing when there was no opposition leaves a good number available at this stage where things are tougher.

Providing landing craft and other shipping for a second front has been a major problem for the High Command but the situation is much easier now. Production in the United States has greatly increased recently and British manufacturers have been able to turn out hundreds more than were expected. Some are coming from Canada, too.

There seems little worry here now that shipping will be insufficient by "D-Day" (invasion day) to take troops to Europe as well as tanks and guns to keep the armies supplied.

Liberal Youths To Meet in West

Ottawa, Feb. 12 — (CP) — A National Convention of Liberal youths will be held in Winnipeg not later than June 1. it was announced yesterday from the National Liberal Federation meeting. It is expected more than 500 delegates will attend.

The decision to convene the Liberal young people was reached at a meeting of the Youth Committee of the Federation at which Miss Leigh McDougall of Neepawa, Man., presided. The Winnipeg meeting will set up a youth organization to replace the 20th Century Liberal Club which functioned from 1932 to 1939 as the voice of Liberal youth.

The name of the new organization and the age limit for members will be decided at the convention.

West-Central Part of Province Hardest Hit by Snow Storm

By The Canadian Press

Highway gangs throughout Ontario were hard at work today clearing roads of snow that fell in a volume of two to six inches during the last 24 hours — with the west-central part of the province hardest hit by the storm which meteorological officials say will abate by tomorrow.

While reports from North Bay said there had been no snow recently, indicating the storm missed the northern part of the province, travellers in the districts of Peterboro, Belleville, Toronto, Hamilton, and deep into western Ontario were having the toughest going of the year.

While temperatures mainly stayed several degrees above zero, country roads were blocked through most of western Ontario and buses and trains generally were having trouble staying on schedule. Reports from Guelph, Sarnia, Stratford, Woodstock and Galt agreed that going on all roads and streets was heavy, but that there were only few instances of complete impassability. Some buses were stuck in Welland early today, but later resumed their regular schedules.

FINNISH PARTY URGES PEACE WITH RUSSIA

Suggest Govt. Move At Once to Learn Terms Under Which Peace Can Be Secured

PAPERS COMMENT

By ROBERT STURDEVANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 12 (AP). —Renewed discussions of the possibility of peace rose in Finland today and sections of the Finnish press warned citizens to keep cool and wait to see what steps the government was preparing.

The Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau, a German-controlled news agency, reported 18 trains were leaving Helsinki daily, carrying evacuees to summer holiday towns outside the city following the heavy Russian bombing of the capital Sunday night and a second heavy attack on Kotka, 70 miles to the east, Thursday night.

Five hundred refugee children arrived at Haparanda, Sweden, from Helsinki.

Earlier dispatches from Helsinki said an important political party and a workers' newspaper have suggested that the Finnish government immediately seek to learn Russian peace terms.

"The whole world knows that the Finnish people want peace as soon as possible on bearable conditions which guarantee our independence", the newspaper Arneterbladet was quoted. "Our ally (Germany) knows that as well as the others".

The expression in favor of peace overturns by the parliamentary committee of the Finnish Social Democratic Party, voiced at a meeting yesterday was the first action by any of Finland's major parties since United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned the country last week to get out of the war or take the consequences.

The Conservatives and Agrarians have not met since Hull's statement but information here indicated it had taken effect on them. One Helsinki correspondent said even the Fascist Iki Party's newspaper had been discussing the statement "respectully".

The workers newspaper Arneterbladet said the Finnish government's "wait-and-see" policy was "no longer clever". It recommended that steps be taken to clarify "the complete uncertainty" regarding peace terms.

"This is possible only by asking our neighbors about peace conditions", the newspaper added.

These expressions for peace came in the midst of extensive diplomatic and political activity in Helsinki, the dispatches said. Included was a conference between Sir Henrik Ramsay, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the German Minister, Von Bluecher.

A RUNDABOUT WAY

London, Ont., Feb. 12—(CP)—Months of accumulated resentment smoldered between the lines of a letter received by a London girl from a Canadian sailor. Excerpt: "After leaving where we were before we left for here, not knowing we were coming here from there, we could not tell if we would arrive here or not. Nevertheless, we now are here and not there." The censor appended a rueful note, saying "You can't be too careful, nowadays."

Capture of Ortona Toughest Canadian Battle With Exception of Dieppe

Ottawa, Feb. 12 —(CP)— Fighting in the Moro Valley, culminating in the capture of Ortona Dec. 28, was the toughest Canadian battle of this war with the exception of Dieppe, it was indicated by casualty figures given Friday in the House of Commons by Defence Minister Ralston.

On the basis of Col. Ralston's statement and other official figures, the six weeks' fighting between Nov. 23 and Jan. 8 resulted in a total of 2,744 casualties, compared with a total of 3,543 for the much longer period of fighting from the time the Canadians landed on Sicily, July 10 to Nov. 23. The Italian campaign started Sept. 3.

Col. Ralston said that up to Jan. 8 Canadian casualties in Sicily and Italy totalled 1,354 deaths, 299 missing, 86 prisoners of war and 4,655 wounded. The Minister added: "Those figures, of course, have grown since Jan. 8."

From Col. Ralston's figures today and previous official casualty reports, the following comparisons were possible:—

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sicily and Italy to Jan. 8 | 1,354 | 4,655 | 299 |
| Sicily | 475 | 1,814 | 150 |
| Italy (Sept. 3-Jan. 8) | 879 | 2,841 | 149 |
| Italy (Sept. 3-Nov. 23) | 238 | 811 | 45 |
| Italy (Nov. 23-Jan. 8.) | 641 | 2,030 | 104 |

Here is a comparison of the Sicily-Italy campaign up to Nov. 23 with the recent six weeks of the Italian fighting:

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sicily-Italy (to Nov. 23) | 713 | 2,625 | 195 |
| Italy alone (Nov. 23-Jan. 8) | 614 | 2,030 | 104 |

Reds Now Fighting At Approaches of Korsum in Dnieper

Communique Says Wild Confusion Within Nazi Groups Now Isolated

BLOW UP 11 JUNKERS

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Russian army is fighting at the approaches to Korsum, last big centre of resistance by encircled German divisions in the upper Dnieper bend and "operations for their extermination are coming to their logical conclusion," Red Star, the Russian army newspaper, said today.

The dispatch reported wild confusion within separate groups of Nazis isolated from the main body of the trapped enemy as the Red army drove its spearheads into their wavering ranks despite clinging mud and lack of roads.

An attempt by 11 Junker transport planes to reach the encircled Germans was frustrated when Soviet artillery dominating the area blew the planes to pieces when they landed in an open field within the Cherkasy death ring.

Gen. Kilolai Vatutin's 1st Ukrainian army today was consolidated along a 220-mile line stretching from southwest of Luck (Lutsk) to a point north of Uman, with the important rail hub of Shepetovka, captured yesterday, in the centre.

Repair Most of Line.

A branch of the Kiev-Warsaw trunk railway runs from Luck through Rowne (Rovno), Shepetovka and Berdichev to Kazatin and Progrebische. Soviet engineers are known to have repaired most of the southern section of this line and by quick attention to the sections around Shepetovka should have this main communications artery operating within a short time.

From almost any place along this line, it was pointed out, Gen. Vatutin is in a position to launch a drive for the Odessa-Warsaw trunk railway, last supply line between Warsaw and the remnants of the German armies in the Dnieper river area, which is about 40 miles to the south.

Four cities along the Odessa-Warsaw line lie within striking distance of the Soviets' forward wall—Lwow, close Toluck and Rowne, Tarnopol and Proskurov not far from Whepetovka, and Zhmerinka a short distance from Russian positions southwest of Kazatin.

Severing Line Would Help.

Severing the Odessa-Warsaw line at any point would cut off thousands of Germans to the south from their home bases.

A Red Star dispatch from Shepetovka told details of a rule of terror by the Germans on the Russian city, saying "thousands of Soviet people were killed and buried in the northwestern suburbs after torture. The city was reported destroyed with nothing left of its big sugar plants and lumber mills.

In the north the Russians are preparing for a drive on Luga, but many swollen streams made an obstacle for ski-men.

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS HIT OBJECTIVES WITHOUT LOSS

Other Allied Formations Head Out Toward France in Daylight

37 PLANES DOWNED

London, Feb. 12—(CP) — R.A.F. Mosquito bombers attacked objectives in central and western Germany overnight without loss the Air Ministry announced today, and other Allied formations headed out this morning toward France.

American heavy bombers swept over the French invasion coast near Pas-de-Calais in strength, carrying out the 13th United States Army Air Force mission in 16 days.

Shortly afterwards, R.A.F. fighters and other strong Allied formations were reported crossing the channel.

The Air Ministry communique did not name the objectives hit by the night-flying Mosquitoes.

The first of today's daylight formations went in the direction of Boulogne followed shortly by others heading toward the Pas-de-Calais invasion coast area. Both bombers and fighters were included.

The new blows followed on the heels of strong blows yesterday by United States heavy bombers against Frankfurt and the invasion coast.

Thirty-seven Nazi planes were downed yesterday during operations in which American fighters made the greatest number of sorties ever flown from British bases. Five U.S. bombers and 15 fighters, one of them British, were lost.

32 Nazi Planes Downed

Thirty-two of the German planes destroyed were knocked down by American fighters, two were downed by Norwegian pilots in supporting sweeps and the other three were bagged by gunners in U.S. heavy bombers. In the last six major daylight operations American escort planes have accounted for 130 of the 177 German planes destroyed.

Besides pounding Frankfurt for the second time in four days, the big bombers yesterday struck at unspecified objectives in Germany while United States heavy and medium bombers and R.A.F. Mosquitoes lashed at the French invasion coast.

About 20 German raiders last night crossed the southeast coast of Britain and dropped a few bombs on London and a southeastern town. Four raiders succeeded in reaching London. A few persons were killed.

NO NEW RADIO TUBES

Toronto, Feb. 12—(CP)—There's probably a valid reason if your radio isn't acting properly these days. A survey of dealers shows that nearly every radio in Canada now needs new tubes (or a touchup job on the old ones.) And new tubes, they say, just can't be had until the war is over.

A/SGT. R. D. PICKELL WOUNDED IN ITALY

One of three brothers overseas with the Canadian armed forces, Acting Sgt. Raymond D. Pickell, 24, son of Mr and Mrs. Albert Pickell, 12 Bay Street, Belleville is reported wounded in Italy, according to word received by his mother. Sgt. Pickell was wounded on February 1st, it was stated, the seriousness of his condition not being indicated.

Sgt. Pickell enlisted in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment at Picton in 1939 and went overseas with the first contingent. He saw action both in Sicily and in Italy. Prior to going overseas he had worked in Bloomfield district although he was born in Belleville and went to city schools. One brother Walter is a mechanic with the Canadian forces in Italy, while the second brother, Eric, is with a Canadian hospital unit in England.

TWO BELLEVILLE BOYS GRADUATE AS BOMBERS

Two Belleville boys and one Trenton airman were among the Royal Canadian Air Force graduates who received their wings Friday at different air training stations across Ontario. Belleville boys to graduate were Sgt. F. J. Andrews, 125 Victoria Avenue, who was a member of the air bomber class at Malton, and Sgt. J. D. Godwin, 44 Gordon Street, who graduated as an air bomber from No. 4 Air Observer School at London on Thursday.

The Trenton boy, C. E. Derry, 49 Crown Street, graduated from Dunnville, as a pilot, with his commission as pilot officer becoming effective at graduation.

FORMER MISSIONARY TO BE GUEST SPEAKER

Rev. W. H. Mitchell, B.A., B.D., will be the guest speaker at Bridge Street United Church during the evening service on Sunday. He will deliver a message to the congregation of his experiences as a missionary in China and India where he was stationed from 1930 until the present. In 1939, as a superintendent of transportation of medical supplies, he became one of the three Field Supervisors of Relief for the American Advisory Committee. Travelled extensively over four provinces of China in this capacity and is thoroughly familiar with the problems of war refugees and victim of famine. His return to Canada was made via India, Australia and Honolulu, taking six months to do it.

REV. J. F. EVERSON WINS CONTEST

The many friends in and around Belleville, of the Rev. J. F. Everson of Springville United Church and formerly of Plainfield will be pleased to learn, that he recently received a cash prize as the result of being a winner in the letter-writing contest sponsored by Dr. Archer Wallace of the United Church Publishing House, in Toronto, on the subject, "What the War Has Taught Us." The essay of four hundred words will appear in "Onward" in the course of a few weeks.

SUDDEN EPIDEMIC OF CHIMNEY FIRES KEEPS DEP'T. BUSY

A sudden epidemic of chimney fires and overheated stove pipes resulted in a busy time for the local fire department Friday night and Saturday morning with no less than four such alarms being answered within a few hours. Friday evening a chimney fire on Ridley Ave., sent the reels running, while overheated stove pipes on Ridley Street and at 313 Albert Street, did the same things this morning. A blocked chimney at 276 George Street also required attention of firemen, Saturday morning. No damage was reported by Fire Chief William Lynch at any of the above calls.

BIKE BELIEVED TAKEN BY PRANKSTERS

While he was procuring his quota of Ontario Intelligencer newspapers for delivery, Douglas Cross, 45 Bettes Street, left his bicycle parked opposite the City Hall. When he emerged with his papers for delivery young Cross found his bicycle missing. Police were notified and later the bicycle was found abandoned, apparently taken by pranksters, who merely went joy riding for a short distance.

MOTORIST PAYS FINE FOR CARELESS DRIVING

Considerable property damage resulted from a two-car crash at the intersection of Pinnacle and Dundas Streets early Friday evening. Alphonse Cain, Foxboro, told police he had stopped, while proceeding south on Pinnacle Street, to observe the stop-street regulations, when another automobile, driven by Donald McFarlane, Shannonville, struck the Cain vehicle on the lefthand side as McFarlane was making a turn off Dundas Street, into Pinnacle. McFarlane admitted to police he had taken a wider turn than he expected, he also agreed to pay the damages, which collectively amounted to about $80. police stated. McFarlane also paid a fine for careless driving.

Prices Steady On Slim Market

Farmers' reaction to the first taste of real winter to be experienced in the Belleville district this season was reflected in the attendance on the local produce market Saturday when only a very small percentage of the usual number of vendors turned out. Attendance on the inside market was at its lowest ebb of the season, while only three or four trucks were seen on the market square.

Heavy snow which began to fall late Friday afternoon—continued throughout Saturday morning with six inches having fallen by mid-morning. This was drifting on east and west country roads but the snow was light and farmers reported no difficulty in cars making their way through.

Prices of produce offered on the market maintained last week's level with eggs being quoted at 38 cents for Grade "A" and 35 cents for mediums. Overweights sold at 42 cents the dozen. The fowl offering was small with the general price being 40 cents the pound or $1.50 to $1.60 per bird. Top grade fowl was offered sparingly at 45 cents the pound. Several vendors offered dairy butter at 40 cents.

Best grade McIntosh and Spy apples sold at $3 the bushel with peck lots going at 75 cents. Talman Sweets sold at $2 to $2.50 the hamper. A few vegetables were offered in basket lots on the inside market at regular prices while potatoes were up slightly from last week and retailed at 50 cents the peck or $2.19 the bag.

15 New Members Enter Air Cadet Corps Since Feb. 1

Present members of the Belleville Air Cadet Corps are entering enthusiastically into the current drive for additional cadets to add to the squadron roster and since February 1st., have brought in 15 boys who have been accepted into the corps, it is announced by the squadron commanding officer, Air Cadet Flying Officer Dawson Boyd.

The campaign for additional recruits was started on February 1st., and although the squadron nominal role is now due to be sent in to headquarters, all new cadets accepted into the corps by Monday evening of next week will be eligible to attend the air cadet summer camp. This in itself is felt will be a splendid inducement for district boys to become air cadets, while the splendid training afforded by the varied instruction given will be an added encouragement.

As a means of getting present air cadets to show greater interest in bringing new boys into the corps, air cadet officers are offering to cadets an identification bracelet as worn by members of the armed services for each new boy brought in and accepted into the squadron. A grand prize of really worth while nature is being planned for the cadet responsible for bringing in the greatest number of recruits.

The commanding officer specifically pointed out that Monday was the deadline for new recruits being eligible for summer camp next season. And as an added inducement for boys coming in by that time it was stated Monday evening all corps members will visit No. 5 Initial Training School for drill and P. T. instruction. Boys reporting at the orderly rooms on Church Street by 7.30 will be taken along to the air station. Age limits for boys becoming air cadets are from 15 to 17 1-2 years.

Large Attendance At Funeral Of R. A. Elliott

One of the largest attendances at a funeral in the Deloro district was at the home of R. A. Elliott, the late general manager of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, who died suddenly of a heart attack at his home in Deloro last Wednesday. Officiating at the service Friday afternoon, was the Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, of Odessa, former pastor of St. Andrew's Church, Marmora. Many prominent business associates of the late Mr. Elliott attended the service as did many of his former friends and associates from the district and Belleville. Among those from out of town were Capt. George White, M.P., Madoc, and Mr. William Kay, of the Raybestos Company, Peterborough. Mr. Elliott's daughter, Mary, who has been stationed at Vancouver with the R.C.A.F., (W.D.), is expected to arrive at Woodstock sometime today to attend the committal service of her father. The service has been delayed until Sunday afternoon pending her arrival.

The pall bearers at the Deloro service were: Messrs. C. R. Whittemore, W. W. Hilton, Floyd Gray, H. O. Loveless, H. C. Barlow, H. R. Dalton.

The honorary pall bearers were: J. A. O'Brien, president of the Deloro Smelting and Refining Company, S. B. Wright, Col. A. V. Yates, C. H. Buskard, J. A. Paquet, J. A. Rice, M. J. Corregan, H. A. McNally, J. H. Hemphill, H. A. Haacke, Joe Judge, N. A. Kilpatrick, Don Robertson, S. Sandham, W. Mumby.

The body was conveyed from Deloro to Woodstock following the service at the home.

He Found Out

You may have heard the story about the two Irishmen who made a wager to ascertain which one could lean out of a window the furthest. The one that fell out won.

Well Carl Lewis of No. 1 West Moira street is not exactly an Irishman, but he did fall out of an apartment window into the streets early Friday evening. There is no doubt he leaned out too far and therefore today he is in the Belleville General Hospital under the care of Dr. E. MacDonald who reported that fortunately Lewis had not sustained any fractured bones but suffered painful bruises.

Four-Day Limit Set by Democrats For Convention

Washington, Feb. 12—(AP) — A prospective four-day limit for the Democratic National Convention was interpreted today by Republicans and some Democrats as a significant indication that leaders expect President Roosevelt to be nominated for a fourth term.

Because most conventions run longer, an announcement by Chairman Robert E. Hannegan that the Democrats would meet in Chicago Wednesday, July 19, and probably would wind up that week, was seized upon by the Republicans as discounting any time-consuming contest for the presidential nomination.

Senator Chan Gurney (Rep.-S. D.) said he thought the Hannegan announcement made it clear the president was "giving his party due notice of his intentions now." And, Senator Gerald P. Nye, (Rep. N.D.) asked: "Is there any reason why they shouldn't finish it in one day?"

But Senator Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentuckey told reporters he couldn't read any special significance into a short meeting. "The war's on and we want to do a good job quickly," he said.

Buy Your Share in "Our" Corvette "BELLEVILLE"

With one full week of the campaign left to go, the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" FUND has not quite reached the half-way mark of the $3,500 objective. Response has been generous in each instance of individual donation, while several of the business places, stores and factories have collected sums toward this worth-while project, but there must be a greater and more active interest taken before the full amount will be obtained. No exaggeration can be too great, no emphasis could be too strong to accentuate the work that is being done day by day by the men who live...and too often die...aboard such vessels as will be H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" and to be permitted to contribute toward their welfare is a privilege next to being permitted to serve along side of them. A dollar bill placed in an envelope and mailed to the Fund will not only help to swell the fund, but will give unlimited satisfaction to the donor in the knowledge that he or she has taken part in an effort that will bring some measure of comfort and ease to a group of hard-pressed men who, whether they have these comforts and ease or not will continue to do the job they have voluntarily taken upon themselves.

Today is the time to get out and follow the lead set by those who have already contributed the sum of $1,376.00 and the following firms and individuals who have sent in their donations within the past twenty-four hours:

When Hot Action Is Over, Corvette's Crew Relaxes With Food and Coffee

"STAND BY, DEPTH CHARGE STATIONS!"

That command is probably the one most often heard by Canadian sailors when they man Action Stations in the war at sea. For the depth charge is the Royal Canadian Navy's principal weapon in anti-submarine warfare. The simple and effective "ashcan" plays a large role in the escort duties of our fighting ships.

It is simply an oil drum packed with about 300 pounds of explosives, enough to wreak total destruction on a U-boat if it explodes within a few feet of the hull. As the range increases, effectiveness decreases, naturally. But up to fifty yards it can do material damage, and at the very least, it can shatter the nerves of the sub's crew, not to mention batteries, gauges, etc. Even if great destruction is not brought about, experience has shown that the depth charge will force a sub to the surface where she can be finished off with gunfire or perhaps rammed.

Again, "Action Stations" have just sounded. Every man is at his post; anti-aircraft gunners settled in the harness back of their guns; fire and repair parties ready; the ship's doctor, with his assistants, laying out instruments, bandages, in the "sick-bay."

Millions of stars dot the night sky. A silver moon paints a white path on the waters of the sea. Hard to connect this scene with violence and destruction, but this is 1944, and many of the old traditional methods of sea warfare have been changed by the fast flying bomber and night fighter.

Enemy Aircraft Sighted.

Up on the bridge the skipper is anxiously scanning the night skies with his binoculars; gunnery officers by his side. The "RDF" operator reports: "Enemy aircraft coming in . . . green 130 . . . four miles." "Green 130 . . . two miles."

The skipper snaps out an order: "Engines full ahead." Engine room telegraphs to full ahead; the ship surges forward, and starts to zigzag. Another order from that motionless figure: "Open fire," and the gunnery officer passes the order along to his crews.

A blaze of fire streaks up through the night skies; crash of sound fills the ears; tracers stream from the guns in great arcs of red as they leave the guns. The "kerump, kerump" of exploding bombs as they strike the water.

One bomb, a heavy one, explodes and throws up a huge shower of water just about a hundred feet away from the ship, on the port side. The ship rocks in a violent manner. Another bomb lands on the starboard side. We slice through two cascades of sea water. All's well so far. We settle on an even keel. The powerful impulses of the engines, below, can be felt . . . wide open they are. But what is it like below. Let's take a look.

The raider has gone. The engagement has been brought to a successful conclusion. That is, the ship was missed and there were no casualties, and it is possible that the enemy plane was hit by ack-ack, although it is just possible he wasn't. But the ship is safe, and that is what counts this time.

Feeling of Tension.

"All Clear" is sounded. Anti-aircraft gunners unbuckle their harness, fire and repair parties stow their equipment as the ship's doctor supervises the replacing of instruments and bandages. It is night and, once again, the night air is fresh and the night skies serene. But, there is a tension. A keyed-up feeling of relief which will not dissipate itself readily in the sudden quietness after the drone of the Jerry bomber has died on the distant air holds the crew.

One man, a gunner, feels that a cup of steaming hot coffee will help; another, also a gunner, but of another crew, finds that a cup of hot chocolate relieves his nerves. They meet at the companionway.

Below decks the cook has slept through the encounter. During the day he is a busy man and he needs his rest when he can get it, and it will take more than a single Jerry to bring him out of his hammock before the hour when he must arise to begin another day. The two gunners, with others who have been released from immediate duty, step slowly and deliberately over the lintle of the entrance to the crew's mess. Hot water is on the range and coffee is at hand in a cupboard, as is sugar and canned milk; small sacks of prepared chocolate are beside the coffee. A minute or two passes before the aromatic scent of coffee and the pungent odor of steaming chocolate fills the air of the compact quarters. The recent attack is discussed in casual tones by these men as they sip their drinks. The nearness of the bombs which might well have sent the small ship to the bottom is mentioned in terms which would make the average land-lubber listener believe they had fallen miles away. Truly, the saying that a miss is as good as a mile, holds true here.

Always Ready.

"Werrp-werrp-werrp." It is the ship's action siren again. Another raider is coming in for a try at this Canadian corvette. Cups clatter on table tops and heavy boots scrape and clang on the metal stair treads as the men rush to their stations for the second time within a half-hour. There may be other alerts during the night, and there may not be another for a full twenty-four hours, but the one right then is the important one.

Thus is life lived aboard a Canadian corvette. Thus will life be lived aboard the Canadian corvette H.M.C.S. "Belleville" when she has been launched, fitted and commissioned in the very near future and takes to the sea lanes, or takes her position on the port or starboard side of a convoy sailing from an Eastern Canadian port for a destination unknown.

The coffee and chocolate the members of those other gun crews enjoyed so much will be as equally enjoyed by the crew that mans the "Belleville" this summer, and during the long cold nights of the winter of 1944-45. It is this that makes the City of Belleville Corvette Fund a worthwhile effort, one in which every citizen should be proud to take part.

Until February 19th the Corvette Campaign will appeal for funds to make up a total of $3,500, and to support this campaign is the same as though you donated your money direct to a member of the crew, only in total, everyone, your friend, your brother, or father will share completing brave deeds.

McNaughton Has Nothing to Say At Present Time

Seigniory Club, Que., Feb. 12. (CP)—Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, former commander of the Canadian Army overseas, has "nothing to say just yet" regarding the report concerning him given the House of Commons by Defence Minister Ralston, it was learned last night. It is understood Gen. McNaughton wishes to consider the report made by Col. Ralston before deciding whether or not he should make a statement.

MISS MARGERY CURLETTE, B.A.
(Toronto)

One-time principal of Westbourne School for Girls, Miss Margery Curlette died Friday at the Toronto General Hospital. Miss Curlette was a graduate of St. Hilda's College and for a number of years taught in Atlanta, Ga., and later was on the staff of the Brantford Ladies' College. She was a co-founder in the establishment of Westbourne School for Girls, Bloor St., Toronto, retiring as principal in 1915. Miss Curlette was a member of the University Women's Club, the Toronto Ladies' Guild and the Church of the Redeemer. No immediate relatives survive.

Interment will take place in Glenwood cemetery, Picton, on Sunday afternoon, about three o'clock.

LATE MRS. HESTER (JENNIE) BAILEY

The funeral of Mrs. Hester Jane (Jennie) Bailey, widow of James Walter Bailey, and late residence, 90 Moira Street West, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Friday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at Elmwood Cemetery, Corbyville, was conducted by the Rev. J. A. Dilts, minister of Holloway Street United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. J. B. Patterson, J. M. Hudgins, J. Smith, F. Ashmore, B. Mason and H. Sager.

LATE MRS. SAMUEL COLDEN

Friday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Samuel Colden took place from the family home, 106 1-2 Station Street. The service in the home and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Major William Marsh of the Salvation Army.

The bearers were Messrs. F. Kirkpatrick, R. Dulmage, J. Baker, W. Christie, C. Haley and W. Brenton.

6 Cheese Factories Are Now Operating

Output Weekly Only About 300 Boxes, Says J. L. Irwin

With less than one half the number of cheese factories operating in the Central Ontario district this winter, only approximately 350 cheese are being manufactured each week, it was anounced this week by J. L. Irvin, Chief Dairy Grader. No factory in the immediate Belleville district is operating this winter, the nearest being at Trenton.

The six cheese factories operating in the Central Ontario district are Riverside Dairy at Trenton, Cloverdale factory near Wellington; Enterprise and the United Empire Loyalist factory at Adolphustown; and Newburg and Centreville factories in the Napanee district.

Rabaul's Three Main Airdromes Heavily Bombed

Guadelcanal, Feb. 12 — (AP) — Airplanes of almost every type slashed at Rabaul's three main airdromes Wednesday in the heaviest assault since the current Solomons - based air offensive against the enemy's New Britain stronghold began last Dec. 17.

Today's communique reported South Pacific planes shot down 20 enemy aircraft, probably downed seven more and damaged others on the ground, at the cost of two fighters.

More than 250 planes, the greatest striking force ever to fly from New Solomons bases, hit Rabaul.

Japan has lost more than 110 planes over Rabaul thus far during February.

Warships Range Coast

Allied warships still are ranging the coast, turning their big guns on the enemy as requested by the ground command. Six-inch guns of the cruisers—the Mauritius has nine and the Dido six—can hurl shells as far as ten miles inland, thus reaching almost every part of the German front.

While the position of beachhead troops admittedly was difficult — holding terrain with few natural defences against a more powerful German force—there was reason to believe they not only would hold, but eventually, after the Germans spend themselves in repeated attacks, would drive the enemy out of the area.

There also was a good prospect that the main 5th. Army force will break through and join the bridgehead troops.

But no speedy victory was in sight. The outlook rather was one of a hard, costly and prolonged fight that will push the Germans from Central Italy barring some wholly unanticipated bad break.

This battle for Rome is far from being an isolated operation, but is linked closely with the whole European war. It is fact the Allies' Winter campaign against the Germans.

This southern offensive also is tied with whatever attack may come across the English Channel in the Spring. In distracting the Germans from their preparations to meet the Channel threat and by draining their strength, it may be a deciding factor in the outcome of coming western front operations.

FINNISH PARTY

In Madrid, the Spanish News Agency EFE said in a dispatch from Berlin that "Berlin political circles according to a semi-official announcement express their doubts that Finland can long oppose the influence and pressure of the various Allied nations".

The United States office of War Information quoted Athungarian Telegraph Agency report that Marshal Baron Carl Gustaf Mannerheim, commander-in-chief of Finnish armed forces, had left his field headquarters for talks with President Risto Ryti.

Ready For Converted Blows.

Moscow, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Russians were ready today to strike concerted blows against every major Finnish port on the Gulf of Finland in the wake of the powerful assault by large formations of their planes against the port town of Kotka on Thursday night.

There was every indication today that the raids aimed at cutting off the. Finns' communications with Germany will continue.

With Leningrad liberated and the southern shore of the Finnish Gulf in Russian hands, it is less than an hour's round trip to many of the important ports of Finland.

The Russians announced earlier today the Kotka raid damaged a cullulose works and military installations and fires were observed near the telegraph station and navy defence offices. The bulletin said four Russian planes were lost.

BRACKEN WANTS

"Jointly these can give us maximum production and maximum employment, and acting together they can see that one group takes too much of the national income or contributes too little to its production."

Production capacity, increased during the war, held promise of a much higher living standard after the war if production facilities were used to the best advantage.

To achieve this, management and labor would have to recognize their interests were complementary. Profit should not be regarded as something evil.

"Profit is exacted even by the socialist states," Mr. Bracken said. "It is essential to progress. Our problem is to see that exploitation is prevented, but that enterprise is encouraged, so that it will continue to function and provide the maximum number of jobs."

He did not consider it proper for the government to legislate as to how the earnings of a private corporation shoould be distributed, but taxes should be levied to ensure quick re-investment of accumulations of capital.

"There is a tendency in official circles to lay more emphasis on social security legislation than on full employment and a high level of production. Such a policy carried too far will make the private citizen a pensioner whose soul is a pawn to the political party in power."

Economic fluctuations which originated within the country could be brought under control. International consultation should be undertaken to maintain stability in all countries.

Mr. Bracken said the new wage-control order was "a most arbitrary ecdree," freezing wages wherever possible. Labor had been given scant representation on the Board to administer the order.

The accomplishment of labor's purpose was not to be found in state socialism.

"Our workers will do far better for themselves to join forces with courageous and experienced management to create a dynamic enterprise wherein, through their collective bargaining agencies, labor may receive fair wages and an improved standard of living." Mr. Bracken said.

THROUGH THE DIAL SIGHT

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

Per capita Belleville is rated as second in place in Naval enlistments in Canada, being led by Vancouver. Somewhere in the vicinity of 800 ratings and officers have joined the Silent Service since the outbreak of war and many local boys were already serving on the high seas when Canada entered the war. As a gesture of appreciation to these men who have gone from the city, Belleville is sponsoring a corvette which will soon be launched at Kingston and will bear the name H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE." The ship will be outfitted with everything that is necessary for the comfort of men aboard her and for their personal comfort while on duty, such as clothing and mitts, socks and leather jackets. The city has opened a campaign to raise $3,500 for this purpose, and in the first week raised over one third of the total amount.

A sergeant was drilling the recruit squad in the use of the rifle at the Armouries the other night. All went smoothly until blank cartridges were distributed around. The recruits were instructed to load their pieces and stand at "ready," before the order was given.

Sergt.-Major Tice—"Fire at will."

New Recruit (puzzled, lowering his gun) — "Which one is Will?"

During a lull in A.E.F. activities in London, a colored boy from Tennessee got in a poker game with a few English chaps. Picking up his cards he found four aces. Someone had just bet one pound. The colored lad said: "I don't know how yo' boys count yo' money, but I'll jes' raise yo' one ton!"

Thursday's announcement from Ottawa regarding the "streamlining" of Reserve Army training didn't altogether come as a surprise to the local Garrison. There had been rumors to that effect for some time past. A peacetime program of training is now in effect, which maintains a 30-day period of training, 15 at summer camp and the remainder spread over eleven months. The reasons given from Ottawa was the "increased efficiency that has been achieved in the reserve forces." However, intense training for officers and N.C.O.'s will be continued. This means only 45 nights of training for 1944.

Come February and the annual election of officers for the Argyll Light Infantry Battalion. On Tuesday night Lieut.-Col. B. C. Donnan, commanding officer, presided at the annual election that saw Major B. C. Sisler named president of the Officers' Mess, Lieut. G. W. Jackson secretary and Lieuts. C. J. Riddell and C. A. Richardson members of the Mess Committee.

Boys in the armed forces can take it on the chin any way it is dished out to them, even a gag at their expense.

The squad of recruits had been out to the rifle range for their first try at marksmanship. They knelt at 250 yards and fired. Not a hit. They moved up to 200 yards. Not a hit. They tried 100 yards. Not a hit:

Captain (bawling) — "Tenshun! Fix bayonets! Charge! It's your only chance.

Gotta piano you don't want?

Flt.-Sergt. Gould at No. 5 I.T.S. stopped the dial sight recently and inquired as to the possibilities of getting a used piano for the Sergeants' Mess up at No. 5.

"Naturally we would appreciate the gift of such a piano and we would take good care of it. However, if we have to pay a small cash fee for a used piano, that'll be alright too," stated Flt.-Sergt. Gould. Persons having a used piano they would like to dispose of call either Flt.-Sergt. Gould or Sergt. Cooper at No. 5 I.T.S., phone 2680.

There was no drill for the local C.W.S.F. until this week, Major Harden feeling the girls had enough responsibilities running the Armouries canteen four nights this week . . . However, they are planning for a gala musical night on February 27th when the Trenton R.C.A.F. band will present a variety concert at the Armouries . . . Several members of the C.W.S.F. have transferred to the Argyll pipe band for the winter, but by spring the girls hope to have a band of their own . . . Actually all that is holding them up today is the jack of pipes.

Purely Personal . . .

After reporting a very successful year the Argyll Chapter of the I.O.D.E. re-elected all officers for 1944 with Mrs. B. C. Donnan as Regent . . . The names of Mrs. L. Shiels and Mrs. H. R. Gibson were added to the list, while Mrs. N. W. Wilbur will take care of the publicity . . . The Argyll Chapter's principal endeavour now is the provision for their adopted corvette H.M.C.S. Snowberry . . . Captain R. B. Cooper was home on furlough this week previous to assuming new duties at Halifax . . . Sergt.-Major Charlie Holmes was unable to get around this week as the result of an attack of sciatica . . . He is recuperating at the Kingston military hospital . . . Sergt. Sammy Goodman was in Montreal on business last week, but says they come too fast in the Quebec metropolis . . . Three at a time is rather piling it on, eh Sammy? . . . Sergt. "Nick" Nixon had the misfortune to slip and fall on the west steps leading into the Armouries last week and fractured two bones in his ankle . . . They miss "Nick" around the Mess now that he is recuperating from the accident at home . . . Incidentally the swelling was so great it was several days before the fracture could be reduced . . . Sergt. "Rosy" Turner, signal instructor from the R.C.S.C., has been transferred to the Garrison School at Ottawa . . . Lieut. Willis Jackson secretary of the Argyll Officers' Mess, announced there will be a Ladies' Night for the officers and their escorts at the Armouries on Feb. 19th. . . . Capt. S. A. Sword, officer commanding 34th Battery, R.C.A., was confined to his home through illness this week . . . Major E. Jones, 44th Field Reg't., was on battery parade Wednesday night.

The officers and men of the Argyll Light Infantry took in Thursday night's R.C.A.F. double-header of service league hockey at the Hume Arena as a regimental treat. It was an acceptable surprise for all ranks as two good games were enjoyed. Next Thursday night is the regular Argyll monthly sports night.

The name of Tpr. D. Wellbanks was struck off strength of the Argyll Infantry decrease announcement this week. Tpr. Wellbanks enlisted in the Canadian Navy.

Found.

A young recruit stood on guard with fixed bayonet when a shadowy figure appeared.

"Who goes there?" he challenged.

"Ribbentrop," was the reply.

The sentry threw down his rifle with a cry of delighted surprise: "Why, you're the fellow they're all looking for! Wait a minute and I'll tell the sergeant."

Congratulations.

Friends of El Wickerson will be pleased to learn he has gained his commission in the Royal Canadian Navy. Today he was promoted to the rank of Probatory Sub.-Lieut. in the Paymaster's Department of H.M.C.S. York. Sub.-Lieut. Wickerson was keenly interested in sailing prior to the war, his sloop "The Cricket," being one of the better known sailing craft up and down the bay. Congratulations are in order.

Madoc and District

St. Peter's W.M.S.

Madoc — The regular monthly meeting of St. Peter's Presbyterian W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Waldon on Thursday afternoon, with a good attendance of members and visitors. After the president, Mrs. W. Miller, had conducted the business period, Mrs. Armstrong assisted by Mrs. Spencer took charge of the devotional exercises. The topic which was on British Guinea was very ably given by Miss Mary Mackintosh. Special mention was made of the Presbyterian meeting which is to be held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Belleville. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Miller in serving afternoon tea.

Red Cross Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Women's Division of Madoc Branch of Red Cross was held in the Community Hall on Thursday evening with the chairman, Mrs. Kenneth Nicol in charge. Reports were given by the Hazzard's and Harts unit on the work accomplished during the month. Reports were also heard from the conveners of the Wool, Quilt and Sewing Committees. A letter was read by the secretary, Mrs. Watson from the president, Mrs. McEachran regarding the urgent need of sweaters and gloves for the navy and air force. The society at Madoc asks the co-operation of good knitters to help along in this important work and wool is available from the convener, Mrs. Hart or the chairman, Mrs. Nicol. # Bracken Advocates the Easing Of Border-Crossing Restrictions

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 12 —(CP)— Easing of border-crossing restrictions between Canada and the United States was advocated here yesterday by J. Bracken, National Progressive Conservative Leader.

In an interview with Detroit and Windsor newspapermen, Mr. Bracken said: "If international finance or some other limiting factor is to continue to jeopardize our relations with people across the American border, it is time we gave consideration to other means of meeting common problems without forbidding personal contacts."

The former Manitoba premier, here to address a meeting of labor organization members, criticized the border-crossing rules which now forbid Canadians from taking more than $5 to the United States while Americans are allowed to take back $100 worth of goods from Canada to their homes.

"Canada's supply of American dollars is now almost an embarrassment," said Mr. Bracken. "It is time the Canadian government recognized that it is doing irreparable damage to relationships of the two peoples along the border line . . .

"I am not prepared to say there should be unlimited travel, but that time is approaching. In the interests of both the tourist trade and international relationships, travel should be opened up at a time when transportation and other factors will permit of the increased travel without impeding the war effort. In the meantime, I feel that some relief should be accorded to Canadians living along the border. They should have the same privileges of cross visits as do their American friends."

Tweed and District

Tweed —(Special)— A meeting of the local branch of the Progressive Conservative Association was held in the council chamber on February 9th with a good representation present. Mr. John Sager, president, was in the chair and all routine business was attended to. The ladies association was reorganized with Mrs. Howard Countryman as president; Mrs. S. A. McCarey, 1st vice president, Miss C. Meiklejohn as secretary treasurer.

Mr. S. A. McCarey was elected as 1st vice president to represent Tweed association for South Hastings.

Mr. Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., was present and addressed the meeting.

Social News.

The Parks Board met in the council chamber on February 7th with all members present. Much business was discussed and new by-laws drawn up.

Ottawa, Feb. 12—(CP)—Decorum is the hall-mark if the 19th parliament, with veterans of Parliament Hill sometimes sorrowing for the vigor and barbs of old-fashioned political debates.

They were satisfied this week, when Liberal-C.C.F. antagonism—spurred by the prospect of a not too far away election—burst into a political row on the House floor.

Two men small in stature but long in debating ability were the spark plugs—Agriculture Minister Gardiner and T. C. Douglas (C.C.F.-Weyburn). Both are experienced debaters, and both had able and noisy supporters behind them.

The contrast between the staid House droning through routine business and the same place in a political squabble is astonishing. Members who normally hold their peace shout such discourtesies as "sit down!" and "let a man speak!" Everyone rattles the top of his desk. And some raise the desk lids and let them drop with a devastating bang.

A row may be between two particular parties, as in the case of the Gardiner-Douglas debate, but the Progressive Conservatives, the New Democracy group, the Independents and all the others participate enthusiastically, applauding the sharp comment and the dour response with the enthusiasm of spectators at a ball game.

There's nothing like a bit of politics to spark up a debate.

Language Oddity: Walking into the Centre Block through the Senate door, the first things to catch the eye are signs saying: "The Standing Committee . . . will sit . . ."

Hansard Clipping: F. D. Shaw (ND-Red Deer): "I might have expected a statement from some lesser satellites of the (C.C.F.) party."

Karl Homuth (PC-Waterloo South): "There are no satellites. They are just duller stars."

Mr. Shaw: "It all depends on the interpretation you put on the word 'satellites.'"

G. H. Castleden (C.C.F.-Yorkton): "They are not always lit up either."

Mr. Homuth: "Some of them can stand a lot of it."

Deputy Speaker J. A. Bradette: "Order!"

AMBASSADOR TO INTERVENE

London, Feb. 11. (CP)—The Cairo radio in a broadcast recorded by The Associated Press said yesterday Pope Pius II had invited the Hungarian Ambassador to the Vatican to act as an intermediary in lodging a protest with Mussolini's puppet Italian Republican regime against violation of the Vatican's extra-territorial rights.

BATTLESHIP AGAIN AFLOAT

Washington, Feb. 12. (AP)—The United States Navy reported last night that the battleship Oklahoma, capsized in the Japanese bombing raid on Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1941, is afloat again.

CAMERAMAN KILLED

London, Feb. 12. (CP Cable)— Lieut. Terry Rowe of Winnipeg. Canadian Army Film unit still cameraman, has been killed in action on the Nettuno beachhead in Italy, it was learned here. Rowe formerly was a staff photographer on the Winnipeg Tribune.

On the Dnieper Bend

More than a year ago German military power suffered one of its greatest defeats at Stalingrad. Today in the Dnieper Bend another event of devastating importance in its losses to the Germans is being enacted where 100,000 to 150,000 German troops are crowded into an area only five miles wide and fifteen miles long. Upon this circle of death modern Russia is beating with all the might of her power to smash and destroy a large section of the German military machine.

What will be the ultimate loss which the Germans will suffer at this place remains to be told but the small extent of the area into which the Germans are crowded would indicate that the Nazi losses will be very heavy.

Here as at Stalingrad has come the opportunity for which a military leader is eagerly waiting, the opportunity to destroy the military power of the enemy by wiping out a large body of the foe as an effective force by casualties or by the capture of the enemy in large numbers. The Russians are swiftly eliminating the enemy according to the latest news.

Wood and Timber

Timber has come into great prominence during the four and a half years of war and the trend of things to come is indicated by the place wood and wood construction occupy today. Canada Lumberman in its February number says that the 1943 parade of exceptionally large and highly-engineered timber structures underscores the sensational advance of timber into the field of heavy construction during the past few years. Everywhere it is apparent that timber, ine one decade, has progressed from a simple carpentry material into a major engineering material."

The reason for this is given that "timber's unused strength, formerly wasted, has at last been brought into play. The cumbersome, bulky construction of recent history has been superseded. Timber constructions with efficient trimly designed trusses and sweeping arches now dot the continent." The shortage of metals during the war, greatly accelerated the development of timber as a structural material. Engineers, long used to steel, had to work on wood and found that they could use it to great advantage. The Lumberman points out that these engineers found the already developed system of timber engineering awaiting them. Everyone knows what timber and lumber have achieved in the construction of buildings for the army, navy, air force and the war industry in general.

Canada Lumberman points out that there are over six hundred different types developed out of the needs of the day. What it calls "the new birth of timber" began, it points out, in 1933 when a small metal ring as a timber connector came into use. "With this ring timber was wedded to heavy construction." It is stated that timber, pound for pound, is as strong as steel and had always been known to possess that strength. This ring it is explained "has been the Dutch boy's finger in the dyke for the strength of timber formerly seeped away at the joints."

So Canada Lumberman sees wood now occupying a foremost place in building materials.

The Short of It

In the pre-war years of the Nazi menace, when Hitler was always referred to as "the Austrian paper hanger," the label frequently carried the adjective "little." This, we assume, says a Chicago Tribune columnist, implied that he is deficient in physical as well as moral stature; dictators are frequently short of inches if not of breath. But his pictures suggest a man of fair to middling height. When the reports of his post-mortem examination are given to the world, we will probably learn that he ran to five feet eight or ten inches. Hitler's former running mate, Mussolini, now retired from the track because of political spavin, is closer to the dictator type; he stands five feet five inches in his balcony slippers. Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's one-man government until the home-brewed Nazis assassinated him, was truly a little man; a smiling gnome of four feet eleven inches. Napoleon, Hitler's historical ancestor, fitted between Mussolini and Dollfuss with five feet one and three-quarters inches . . . These measurements come from a book called "Why Be Short," by Paul O'Neill.

Mr. O'Nell, who has assembled some curious lore about shortness and how to prevent it from getting you down, lists sixty-eight men of high renown, from princes to poets, who belonged to the great race of sawed-offs. They include Alexander the Great, Augustus Caesar, Sir Frances Drake, General U. S. Grant, John Paul Jones, Louis XIV, Admiral Nelson (five feet five inches), and the Roman Emperor Titus. The writer's theme seems to be that if you feel humiliated when your friends call you shorty, think of such mighty men as these, and also of Aristole, Balzac, Chaucer, Chopin, Heine, Horace, Ibsen, John Keats, Plato, and Richard Wagner.

The average height of the ancient Roman male, when the civilized world was under the heels of their legions, is said to have been five feet two inches. Perhaps this questionable fact gave the Japs their delusion of irresistibility.

One Way to Punish Hitler

Make Hitler 'chute twice daily from a plane with parachutes packed by himself, is the suggestion for the, treatment of Hitler after the war which won a prize out of more than 700 suggestions in an American contest. A U. S. paratrooper proposed this means of handling the aggressor. The judges picked this idea as the winner on the ground that this scheme involved the element of fear, arguing that Hitler would appreciate the strain of jumping with unreliable parachutes and they commented that every person shrinks from precipitately colliding with an unyielding surface.

There will be almost as many ideas for treatment of the arch criminal of the war as there are individuals no doubt and these would undoubtedly feel that no system of punishment would be adequate for the monster who brought this war to pass and who has permitted atrocities against men, women, and children, and overrun peoples of Europe.

4,000,000 Homes to Rise

Four million houses must be built in the first 10 years of peace, F. L. Wallis, president of the National Federation of Building Trades Employers, stated in London. To attain this goal the industry must average the highest production between the two wars. The only material likely to be in short supply for awhile is timber, but this will be only temporary. President Wallis thinks internal fittings of houses may be standardized to speed productions at lower cost. Noting that the Ministry of Works reported building costs up 105 per cent. Wallis says he is convinced that a house which cost $3,000 in 1939 can be built today for only 60 per cent more, and this may be reduced to 25 per cent.

Will Not be Stranded

(Constance Martin in Reader's Digest)

Each Sunday afternoon a certain automobile full of darkies came to my friend's filling station in Georgia to buy two gallons of gasoline. They invariably had him put the gas in two one-gallon jugs instead of the gasoline tank.

One day the station operator's curiosity got the best of him and he asked them why. The driver explained:

"Well, suh, we puts one gallon in de tank jes before we leave town and rides until de car stops going. Den we knows it's time to come home. And so we puts in de other gallon. We ain't never got stranded out on de road yet!"

LINCOLN

God sent him to a cabin first to learn
That toil will ever be man's chief concern;
To live with toilers and to share the fears,
The hopes and all the sorrows of the years.
God gave him humble parents, as he gave
His only Son, who came men's souls to save;
Tried him with hazards from his earliest youth;
Filled him with furious longing for the truth;
Made learning difficult. To prove desire,
Left him to read by candle light and fire;
Forced him to walk long miles a book to gain;
Tested his will with weariness and pain.
Tall and ungainly, with no gift of grace,
God set the light of glory in his face;
Gave him that splendor which the spirit wears
And shines through heartaches and outlives its cares.
And when at last went Lincoln to his Lord,
The love of humble folk was his reward.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

February 12th., 1924.

A Junior Sunday School Hockey League was formed at a meeting held at the Y.M.C.A. A majority of the boys interested are Trail Rangers and the players must be under sixteen years of age. So far the following Sunday Schools have entered the league: Christ Church, Bridge Street Church, St. Andrew's Church, the Baptist Church and the Tabernacle.

At Napanee in a Bay of Quinte Hockey League game the team of that town defeated Belleville, the score being seven to two. The following composed the Belleville team: Scott, Goyer, Blute, Whalen, Symons and Armstrong. Subs: Arnott and Arnott.

Mr. Wilfred Hebert of Brandon, Manitoba, is here on a visit to his mother and other relatives.

30 YEARS AGO

February 12th., 1914.

There is an aeroplane factory in Belleville and it is the first and only aeroplane factory in the Dominion. The factory was established here five months ago by H. R. Polly and his brother. The engineer is F. Davidson, who for three and a half years was head constructor with the Curtiss Aeroplane Company and who started with the Curtiss Company in its infancy. The first machine has been completed at the plant here and will soon be placed upon exhibition. It is made of 3,000 pieces of silver spruce, mahogany, rock elm, white ash and black walnut, connected with the best nickle steel, Shelby steel tubes and guyed with special aeroplane cable. It is the strongest, lightest of its size and the finest constructed aeroplane in the world and is equipped with one of the most powerful motors made. Belleville citizens should support this industry and turn out in large numbers to view the aeroplane when it is placed on exhibition in the city hall.

40 YEARS AGO

February 12th., 1904.

The city council threatens to build three and a half miles of granolithic sidewalks this coming summer, but the measurements may shrink a mile or two. How about the gravel walks the Mayor suggested in his opening speech? Some good gravel walks would be better than several miles of granolithic walks on paper.

The oldett inhabitant has never seen the equal of the quantity and depth of snow which is now on Front Street; and still it comes and more to follow.

Gen. Guy Simonds Likely to Lead Corps in Invasion

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 12 (CP).—It is a reasonable and logical deduction that Lt.-Gen. Guy Simonds of Kingston, Ont., is commanding the Canadian Corps in Britain.

At least one Canadian Corps is in the line in Italy under Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar. Other Canadian troops here are preparing to share in the western invasion of Europe.

Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom, who had been leading a corps here, left the command due to ill health and Simonds was promoted from major-general to lieutenant-general commanding a corps. All this has been announced officially.

Thus it is logical to suppose that Gen. Simonds may command a corps here and lead it in the invasion.

The 40-year-old Simonds is well-fitted for the job. He had staff training on a corps and army level. He commanded the Canadian 1st Division in Sicily and Italy. He had experience with tanks when a regiment was under his command in Sicily.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the British 8th Army and Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, whom Leese replaced as commander when Montgomery went to Britain to command the British invasion forces, tutored Siminds in fighting Germans and he has been an apt pupil.

ACCUMULATED RESENTMENT

London, Ont., Feb. 12. (CP)—Months of accumulated resentment smoldered between the linse of a letter received by a London girl from a Canadian sailor. Excerpt: "After leaving where we were before we left for here, not knowing we were coming here from there, we could not tell if we would arrive here or not. Nevertheless, we now are here and not there". The censor appended a rueful not, saying "you can't be too careful, nowadays".

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Few people turned up their noses at the humble eel in the days of the French regime in Canada. This fish was one of the staples of the menu. Salted and barreled like herrings, the supply lasted well on into the winter—right through it if the cold weather persisted.

The eels looked like snakes as they wriggled their way towards the nets that led into the prisons prepared for them. These castings nets were fastened to the narrowest end of boxes. The boxes were set on the shores of the St. Lawrence where they would be covered by high tide but left dry during the ebb. When the traps were covered with the tide, the eels, which love to be near the greenery of the banks, ventured in too close and soon found themselves captive.

Recipe for cooking eels, as given by an historian of New France, is simple and to the point: "The best method of preparing this fish, is to hang them up in a chimney and suffer them to fry slowly in the skins, which come off of themselves and all the oil runs out".

Speaking of food, brings to mind the great banquets served by the people "of quality" in that far-off era. Then, the spoons and forks were usually of silver, and the plates of Delft ware. Knives were seldom supplied, for each guest brought his own. Some of the designs wrought in the handles were elaborate and beautiful. Some were simplicity itself. Many knives lird horn handles. . . . .This custom of "toting" one's knife somewhat parallels a practice of today—that of taking a tea-bag along to a tea-party, in order to avoid a guilty feeling in accepting a second cup of the rationed brew.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Tired Eyes.

A moving picture shown recently presented the hero trying to strengthen his eyes by certain exercises so that he would be "fit" to join the army.

That exercises will strengthen weak muscles used in turning the eyeball in various or certain definite directions is known but that exercises can do away entirely with glasses is not true; this belief or idea is causing much distress, pain and even damage to the eyes.

However in these days when the eyes are being used for close work in industry, there are many cases of "tired eyes" that need careful attention or treatment to give relief from pain and prevent permanent damage. To this eyestrain has been added increased physical strain, emotional stress, and the more rapid rate at which we all now live our daily lives.

In Hygeia, The Health Magazine, Conrad Bernes states that the definitions of eyestrain are varied, ranging from weakness or speedy tiring of the eyes with pain, to poor or impaired vision. "Symptoms of eye tiredness may include headach, dizziness, general fatigue, confused or even double vision, aching of the eyes, blurring of print, the appearance of tears while reading, a pulling sensation in the eyes, inability to read for any length of time, a desire to close or cover one eye in reading, redness or the border of the eyelids and at times even congestion and inflammation of the membrane lining the eyelids, the conjunctiva".

An instrument called an ophthalmic ergograph has been devised to test the ability of the eyes to withstand fatigue. In testing the eyes for fatigue small print or a line is brought up to the eyes and then drawn away. As the object is moved back and forth, a pen records the movements of this object. The number of times the object aproaches the eyes per minute is controlled by a signal bell. When the bell rings the patient pushes the control lever away from him, watches the object and as soon as it becomes blurred pulls the lever back and holds it until the next signal bell. This complete test lasts fifteen minutes. Eye fatigue is not always caused from use or overuse of the eyes; other causes are certain foods, alcohol, tobacco, lack of oxygen in blood, sinus disease, improper glasses, and poor lighting.

2 GIRLS' VIEW OF POST-WAR PLANNING

Kitchener, Feb. 12. (CP) — The lofty purpose of the Kitchener-Waterloo survey for Post-War Planning was shattered temporarily when a canvasser popped the usual question about post-war prospects to two Kitchener girls. "We have no boy friends", one of the girl replied, "so our prospects aren't too bright".

RUG FOR LEGISLATURE

Toronto, Feb. 12. (CP)—Another "floor" price the rug now adorning the floor of the Ontario Legislature chamber cost $1,500. It weighs half a ton in a single section and it took 12 men to carry it.

The War Today— Hitler's Aim to Distract Attention From Eastern Front

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

One of the several pressing reasons why Hitler is risking everything to win a sensational victory at the Anzio-Nettuno bridgehead below Rome—and he has created a very serious situation indeed for the Allies—is to distract the attention of his people and wavering allies from his own dire straits on the Russian front.

As the signs now read he cannot be far from a general withdrawal of the whole vast Nazi force. This was some 1,200 miles long in its more prosperous days, but the Red armies have driven it so full of salients that it now totals over 2,000 surpentine miles—an unwieldy and highly vulnerable battle line. The wonder is—and this is a tribute to German generalship—that the Nazis haven't been stampeded long before this.

The present three great Russian offnsives against this line—north, centre and south — are acting as mighty levers that are detaching the Germans from strategic anchors without which the front cannot continue to hold. The northern two-thirds of it will have to pull back at least to positions running from the vicinity of Riga, LaLtvia, southward through Brest LiLtovsk, in pre-war Poland, to the Carpathians.

Meanwhile Marshal von Mannstein's forces on the extreme southern wing, which have been clinging so stubbornly to the Dnieper bend death-trap, are in the astonishing position of having been swung around until they are facing north by northeast and project dangerously eastward from the rest of the line. This has been brought about by the Red drive from Kiev westward into Poland.

What Hitler Dreads.

Thus Mannstein's Dnieper bend troops have their backs toward the Bessarabian border, and whatever forces he is able to save from annihilation will have to retreat to the Dniester river, which forms this border, unless there is a sharp change in the present position. That's the crisis which Hitler has been trying to avoid—being driven up against this Bessarabian gateway to the Balkans. He's terrified that such a retreat will precipitate an upheaval among his Balkan satellites—a fear fully justified by their present state of unrest and revolt.

There is one peculiar development which might work to Hitler's advantage and enable him to delay his general withdrawal. This is the phenomenal arrival of spring and its mud already in parts of the Russian front—something which, according to the experts, hasn't happened before in generations.

Washington Spotlight

(By C. R. BLACKBURN)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 11 (CP) — A picture of Russia, 25 years hence, with a population of 222,000,000 people, most of them highly skilled, was foreseen in a speech this week by Adolph Berle, studious and prophetic United States assistant secretary of state.

He foresaw Brazil, a country greater in size and resources than the United States, with a population of 90,000,000 in 1970.

On the other hand, according to his forecasts, the United States will have increased its population only slightly if at all, Britain will have dropped to 42,000,000, Germany to 64,000,000 and France to 37,000,000.

He estimated the 1940 populations of these countries at 135,000,000 for the United States, Russia 175,000,000, Great Britain 46,000,000, Germany 69,000,00, France 41,000,000, and Brazil 42,000,000.

The power and capacity of the peoples in the countries where Berle expects the populations to increase sharply may rise to heights now undreamed of, because of the advance of technical knowledge and invention.

The point of Berle's dip into the future was to emphasize to the students of Duke University, where the speech was delivered, the importance of mankind of "The Good Neighbor Policy."

VOTELESS WASHINGTON

Recent appointment of Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo of Mississippi as chairman of the Senate District Committee has revived arguments for and against giving District of Columbia citizens a vote. Bilbo's position makes him, in effect, Mayor of Washington, D.C., which does not elect anybody, belongs to the whole United States and is run by the Senate Committee.

The usually passionless Washington Star says Washington's voteless state makes it "a living contradiction of the very fundamentals of democratic government . . . its uniqueness is a disgrace which makes a sham of fine phrases as to our moral obligation in respect to self determination for other peoples in other lands."

HAIL AND FAREWELL?

Favorite subject of quippers in the United States is the travelling of Eleanor Roosevelt and her rare visits to her White House home. But she was home the other day and the White House calendar listing the President's engagements had the following entry: "3.45 p.m., the Australian minister, Archibald MacLeish and Mrs. Roosevelt." Quipped the local "news" editorially: "Reunion in Washing-But it hold plenty of meaning for ton."

12 More Jap Vessels Sunk By U. S. Subs

Washington, Feb. 12 (AP)—Destruction of 12 more Japanese vessels by American submarines was announced yesterday by Navy Secretary Frank Knox.

The sinkings bring to 584 the number of Japanese ships sunk, probably sunk or damaged by submarines since the United States entered the war. Included were three transports, two large tankers, six freighters and a large auxiliary ship. All were sent to the bottom in Pacific and Far East waters.

The sinkings cut still farther into the Japanese supply lines which have been trying to keep materials moving to enemy garrisons in the Pacific.

Knox reported that in many instances Japanese garrisons left on scattered islands are "dying of starvation." He specifically referred to islands in the Marshall group in the mid-Pacific where American occupation of Kwajalein has cut off several other enemy bases in the group, and to Bougainville, saying that "little food grows on those islands and they have to supply them."

SAYS NEW TUBE NEEDED BUT CANNOT BE HAD

Toronto, Feb. 12. (CP)—There's probably a valid reason if your radio isn't acting properly these days. A survey of dealers shows that nearly every radio in Canada now needs now tubes (or a touch-up job on the old ones). And new tubes, they say, just can't be had until the war is over.

The mouse deer or chevrotain (literally "little goat"), which is native to the East Indies and western Africa, is believed to be the smallest hoofed animal in the world. Adults of this species have bodies no larger than a jackrabbit, weigh only about five or six pounds, have legs scarcely larger than lead pencils and stand only nine to twelve inches in height at the shoulders. These tiny animals, which represent a stage of evolution between the swine and the true deer, are hornless and look more like hoofed rodents than ruminants.

FRONT ROAD LADIES' AID

The Front Road Ladies' Aid held their February meeting at the home of Mrs. Sam Geddes. There were fourteen ladies and four children present. Following the tieing of a quilt, the president, Mrs. G. Cummins, opened the meeting. A few items of business followed. Mrs. H. Greatrix gave a reading and the meeting closed with prayer. The collection was $1.90. For the March meeting, which is to be held at the home of the president, each member is asked to bring some article of children's clothing for the box to be sent to Britain. Mrs. Geddes and convers served a lunch.

CENTENARY Y.P.U.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Marshall kindly opened their home on Thursday evening to the Centenary group for their regular meeting. Citizenship convener, Fred Edmondson, took charge of the program and during the worship service the Scripture was read by Dorothy Ray. The convener's topic was "The Church and the State" and following an educational talk on the subject, everyone took part in a lively discussion. The president took charge of the business period and the meeting closed with prayer. The hostess served lunch and everyone expressed their appreciation to the Marshall family for their kindness.

FOXBORO GUILD

The regular monthly meeting and pot luck dinner of the Presbyterian Church, Foxboro, was held in the Sunday School room on February 9. A fair crowd was present and $8.20 realized from the dinner. Mrs. (Rev.) MacDonald was in charge of the program for the meeting. The Scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. Lake and prayer followed by Mrs. MacDonald. Miss Nellie Bell was appointed flower secretary and asked to send cards to several sick members of the congregation. Plans were made for the world day of prayer program. Readings were given by Mrs. Ketcheson and Mrs. MacDonald.

BETHANY W.M.S.

The monthly meeting of the Bethany W.M.S. was held on Feb. 9, at the home of Mrs. Harry Walker. The president, Mrs. F. Easton, conducted the worship service, the theme being, "The Bible, the Common Possession of the World Church." A reading, "The Great Fraternity", was given by Mrs. P. Osland. Passages from the Bible were read by Mrs. R. Miller, Mrs. R. Ritz, Mrs. V. Hamilton, Mrs. W. Clare and Mrs. H. Walker. During the business period, it was decided to observe the day of prayer at the home of Mrs. F. Easton. In the absence of the group leader, the worship service was conducted by Mrs. F. Walker. A reading was given by Mrs. G. McPherson, after which Mrs. Horace Casey sang a solo. Readings were given by Mrs. W. Casey and Mrs. G. Denike entitled "The Lepers are Cleansed." Following prayer led by Mrs. F. Walker, Mrs. S. Cooley and Mrs. E. Treverton favored with a duet. A temperance reading was given by Mrs. P. Osland. Mrs. Clarke gave a paper on "The Master's Call to Service," closing with a poem, "My Response." The study book was given by Mrs. John Ritz. There was an attendance of nineteen and the collection amounted to $4.36.

Women Teachers' Federation Meets

The regular monthly meeting of the Women Teachers' Federation was held in the Y.M.C.A. rooms on February 9. Miss Olive Elson took the chair in the absence of the president, Miss Jane Smyth. Miss Elson introduced to the assembly the guests of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Smith. After a report on membership, the secretary read the minutes. Miss Grace Tucker reported the sick benefit news and Miss Fay Young the district federation news.

Mr. Smith, who teaches the work of the Public Utilities Commission and the use of public utilities to the children in Belleville Public Schools, spoke to the teachers about his work. Mr. Smith explained that it is his aim to educate children in understanding the use of electricity, water and gas so that in the years to come, there will be a more enlightened public. At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Smith showed some interesting slides dealing with water purification plants.

MRS. W. H. ROLLINS RE-ELECTED PRES. FOR FOURTH YEAR

Women's Progressive Conservative Club, Belleville, Hears Miss Jeanne Travers

OFFICERS ELECTED

At the annual meeting of the Women's Progressive Conservative Club on Friday night in the Conservative Club rooms, Mrs. W. H. Rollins was unanimously re-elected president of the organization for the fourth consecutive year. The officers for 1943 were all returned to office, with the exception of Ketcheson Ward, when Mrs. Simpson was elected to take Mrs. Arnott's place as chairlady on her retirement from the position.

The business part of the meeting was conducted with Mrs. Rollins in the chair. Excellent reports from the secretary, treasurer, finance convener and Can-a-Month Club convener were given, showing proof of a most successful year. Mrs. J. Cormier, as treasurer, said that $262.40 had been given to war charities and Miss Gertrude Lazier, reporting for the Can-a-Month Club, stated that $215 from that fund had also been given to war charities, making a grand total of $277.40. Foster Ward headed the collection for the year in the Can-a-Month Club, with Ketcheson Ward rating second and Baldwin third.

Miss L. Warham, finance convener, is to be warmly commended for her fine work in organizing and conducting the bingos and euchres which realized such excellent results during the past year. A vote of appreciation should also be extended to Mrs. McLuskie, as secretary, Mrs. J. Cormier, as treasurer and Miss Gertrude Lazier as Can-a-Month Club convener, for their untiring work and effort and fullest co-operation towards making the year of 1943 a successful one.

Congratulates Club.

Guest speaker of the evening was Miss Jeanne Travers, who is the president of the Business Women's Progressive Conservative Association in Ottawa and founder and organizer of the Can-a-Month Club. Opening her address, Miss Travers congratulated the women on their fine work both in the organization and in the mobile kitchen. She said that these mobile kitchens are doing an excellent job "over there," and they have been known to save 900 lives in one night. Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth, was heard to remark that it was one of the best equipped units she had ever seen.

Miss Travers read a letter from Lord Bennett concerning the money sent to Lady Glamis to provide for the children made orphans from the war. She then spoke of money which was being sent in from all over Canada to help with this fund.

Think of Whole of Canada.

Miss Travers went on to say that in politics we should think of the whole of Canada and not merely of our own province. "We have got to live together," she said, "and only like this, we will be able to develop." She told about the School of Citizenship which exists in Vancouver, B.C., the ideal of which is to educate the women to take public office and to teach them to become stateswomen.

In closing, Miss Travers urged the women to do a lot more thinking about the homecomings of the boys from overseas and told them the very encouraging fact that the Belleville club heads the Dominion of Canada for contributions to the Can-a-Month Club.

Mrs. J. W. Kinnear extended a vote of thanks to Miss Travers for her most interesting address. Miss Gertrude Lazier, on behalf of the Women's Conservative Club, made a presentation to Mrs. Rollins for her work in the club during the year. Mrs. Rollins expressed her thanks for the gift and also her appreciation to the officers for their co-operation with her.

During the meeting, Mr. Bill Navan played several piano selections and also for the round of community singing and proved himself an entertainer of fine note. Miss Jean Freeman delighted her listeners with two vocal numbers.

The officers elected are:

Hon. Pres., Mrs. J. W. Kinnear, Mrs. E. McCarthy, Mrs. George Stokes, Mrs. R. D. Arnott; Past Pres., Mrs. H. Naylor; President, Mrs. W. H. Rollins; Vice-Pres., Miss G. Lazier; Sec., Mrs. J. McLuskie; Treas., Mrs. Cormier; Fin. Con., Miss L. Warham; Can-a-Month Con., Miss G. Lazier; Auditors, Mrs. McLuskie and Mrs. H. Naylor; Chairladies, Foster Ward, Mrs. . McKenna; Samson Ward, Mrs. H. Naylor; Ketcheson Ward, Mrs. B. Simpson; Baldwin Ward, Mrs. A. Rose; Bleecker Ward, Mrs. Ostrom; Coleman Ward, Mrs. F. Byrne; Murney Ward, Mrs. W. Adams; Pianist, Mrs. G. Stackhouse.

Dress Leisurely

Jinx Falkenberg believes in dressing leisurely.

By HELEN FOLLETT

EVERYBODY is in a hurry these days. That means that everybody is more fatigued than usual, more likely to be cross and crabby. It's wise to grab a few minutes for self indulgence now and then, put oneself in order, catch one's breath.

Hurried dressing in the morning means that you start the day all wrong. A few sweeps of the comb won't make a hairdo; slapdash methods with powder, rouge and lipstick will not produce a complexion that will excite admiration. Worse still, the hurried dresser has a breathless look when she gets wherever she is going. The haphazard grooming for the merry evening is even more unpardonable. Every hostess is entitled to have her guests arrive looking spick and span and lovely.

Notice the beauteous lady who floats in to the party all serene and calm. Looks as if she hadn't a care on her mind, nothing to do but beauty chores, even though she has been working at an office all day or attending to various war duties. The explanation; she has given herself sufficient time to get into her glad rags, arrange her locks, lay on the various items of the beauty kit, using discretion and a keen eye.

Before dinner she had a leisurely bath, used cold creams while soaking in the tub. Elegant for freshening the complexion.

Don't forget to powder the ear lobes. Soap-shined ears are no help to the ensemble.

Apply a little vanishing cream to the backs of your hands; it will make them look soft and velvety.

Use perfume sparingly. A little is always enough, but it isn't fair to insult the public nose by using too much.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Watch Your Mouth Lines

Wielding the lipstick is a part of the day's activities. Everybody's doing it, from little fourteen, to grannie who, in her young days, shivered and shook at the mere mention of face paint.

It is a good idea, if one is chasing beauty rainbows, to survey the lips in their natural state. They are more expressive than most of us realize. It is not enough to apply the rouge; they should assume a pleasing form. Eyes stay always as they are, but the contour of the mouth changes with changes of character. Don't let the years impair yours.

Have you ever tried lip reading? If so, you have discovered that the prude keeps her lips tightly pursed together. The selfish, lazy girl is inclined to let hers relax and go soft. She of the bright, expressive eyes, keeps the lip ends lifted.

The mouth can express sweet emotions and ugly ones, too—sulkiness, anger, petulance, intolerance. One look and you know the story.

The tissues surrounding the mouth are delicate, subject to change. By continually assuming a certain expression-like pulling in the chin and pursing the lips, lines around the mouth will form, the soft underpadding of the skin will soften.

Mouth breathing is a bad habit, gives one a vapid look. Also, it dries the mouth. Mouth breathers have pale complexions because they do not inhale as deeply as they would if they breathed through the nostrils. A throat and nose specialist will discover the cause quickly enough.

During the face washing, lips should be bathed with soap-suds, though it is best to remove the lip pigment first with a cleansing cosmetic or thin cream. Cigarette smokers, especially, should have regard for this twice-daily attention.

Lip biting is a senseless habit which has almost vanished since the lipstick became an institution.

When applying your massage cream after the bedtime face washing, give a treatment to your lips to keep them firm and youthful looking. Place the first finger in the center of the upper lip, thumb at one end, second finger at the other. Keep the finger in the center stationary, draw up the thumb and second finger to it; your lip will form a Cupid's bow. Recommended to keep tissues firm.

Holloway St. Y.P.U. Entertains Baptist Group

Holloway Street Y.P.U. entertained the Baptist Young People at their last regular meeting.

During the business period an interesting letter was read from Coder Frank Morton, R.C.N.V.R., who was in England at the time of writing, thanking the young people for their remembrance at Christmas.

The meeting was then turned over to Ray Gunsolus, Citizenship convener, who, after welcoming the visitors gave the call to worship. The scripture was read by Dorothy Craighead and the comment was given by Pat Thurston. Ana English played for the hymns and Beth Robertson led in prayer. Barbara Diment sang a solo.

The guest speaker of the evening was Mr. Maurice McCloud, of Selby who was introduced by Marion Daniels. Mr. McCloud gave a very interesting message interspersed with flashes of humor on a subject vital to young people, "A New Generation Facing a New World."

"We must not allow ourselves to become cynical, though many of us have had our dreams shattered by this war," he said, "but rather we must take the good that is left and build a finer type of life than has ever been in the history of the world."

Going back to the treaty of Versailles, which was meant to end all wars Mr. McCloud cited as the reasons for its failure (1) the demands on Germany, and the ultimate period of depression, (2) the lack of concerted action (3) the desire by some countries, like Italy, for territorial aggrandizement only, and (4) the failure of the Americans to accept the idea of the League of Nations."

"It must be different this time," he said emphatically. "We must have definite plans for the post-war world—not selfish planning as many are doing in regard to luxuries to be enjoyed on our return to pre-ration days, but rather we must make plans which will be of highest value in the building of a finer national life."

"What we want to gain from this war," said the speaker in conclusion "are the Four Freedoms—freedom from want, freedom from fear, freedom of speech and freedom of worship. The greatest aid of all in developing a higher type of national life will be derived from walking with our eyes toward God."

Lunch and a social hour brought this very enjoyable meeting to a close.

Fashion Flashes

A LITTLE TOUCH of glitter marks some of the new afternoon prints. A flower print in red and green on black or off-white, has tiny sequin bows either side of the sweetheart neckline and holding up the draping of the short sleeve.

EASY AND EFFECTIVE ways of dressing up basic black dresses is to be found in bright-hued accessories such as gloves and bag of bright pink suede. Nice with navy or brown as well.

MANY WOMEN spend their precious shoe coupons on a plain but well made pump in black or brown suede or black patent and then dress it up with clip bows in white kid or faille.

COME SUMMER and you'll be seeing a lot of the straw handbag. Natural straw, on the lines of a big guard, with tapering sections and handles of black faille, makes a pretty and useful bag.

Water and Intestinal Sluggishness

By taking proper quantities of water over a short period of time, many of those who have constipation or intestinal sluggishness may be relieved. That is the belief of Doctor David C. Ditmore, of Boston, Massachusetts. He says that there are three kinds of constipation. One is caused by disease in other parts of the body or in the bowel itself; the second is not caused by any disease; the third also is not caused by a disease, but some diseased condition may aggravate it. They variety which is not due to any disease is the most common type. Before a diagnosis of this type of constipation is made, it is necessary to have a complete examination to make sure that disease processes are not present.

In treating constipation not due to disease—primary constipation—four things are necessary. The first of these is the proper use of water.

Water acts in several ways. It makes the contents of the bowel more fluid. It aids in providing bulk and thus stimulates the movements of the muscles of the bowel; and it carries with it everything within the bowel if a sufficient amount is taken. Persons vary a great deal in their ability to absorb or take up fluids from the bowel, so that the amount of water needed in each case must be decided by the physician.

Doctor Ditmore believes that the more drinking of large quantities of water throughout the day is not of any particular benefit. Doctor Ditmore has found that if four ordinary glasses of water—approximately one quart—are taken in divided amounts before breakfast, the best results are obtained. The water must be drunk over a period of from one-half to one hour.

Any feeling of fullness that drinking this amount of water produces quickly disappears. The water does not cause indigestion or excessive gas formation. Cool water is just as satisfactory as warm water.

The second part of the treatment is to use a diet that supplies adequate bulk. This means eating at least two cooked vegetables twice a day, not including tomatoes, potatoes and salads. The diet may contain any other foods that the patient desires.

The third part of the treatment is for the patient to take additional amounts of ordinary table salt. One-fouth of a teaspoonful of salt in a glass of water, taken before breakfast, usually will suffice.

The fourth part of the treatment is the use of some chemical substance to stimulate the action of the bowel. Of all the substances advised, Doctor Ditmore believes that mineral oil is the most satisfactory. Ordinary laxatives and purges, he believes, should not be used. So-called bulk-producing products may be irritating and soon lose their effectiveness. Hence, Doctor Ditmore does not advise their use.

It pays to have at least one glitter blouse to get the utmost out of a suit. A nice model is a softened shirtwaist blouse in white crepe, with self-bow neckline, the fabric dotted all over with tiny rhinestones.

Learn Shorthand and Be a Success in the World

SHORTHAND NOT DIFFICULT

If you have ambitions of being a private secretary you must be excellent at shorthand. Even a stenographer, is usually required to know the fundamentals and be able to work it accurately.

In shorthand, as in all other arts, practice makes perfect. When you have learned a lesson have the words in that lesson dictated to you. The more times you write each word, the better.

Our 32-page booklet, prepared by the famous Pitman system, contains 18 lessons with exercises and two pages of additional short forms.

Do not sacrifice neatness for speed. Speed in writing will naturally follow neatness and accuracy.

Pitman shorthand is used throughout the English-speaking world to record rapid speech. In countless offices the system speeds up the conduct of everyday business affairs.

To be successful and keep up with the world learn shorthand and practise it daily.

"Little Sister's Chum" Wants to Write to Friend's "Big Brother"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Recently a pal of mine sent me her older brother's address and asked me to write to him. He's in the Navy, and I've always admired him, but I've been his "little sister's chum." Our families are friends of long standing. Mother said it would be all right to correspond with him, but I'd like your opinion also. Would it be correct if I wrote him a friendly letter, before I heard from him?

B. L. W.

Don't waste another day, but write to your friend's big brother. If people only knew the heartening effect letters have on soldiers, they'd never hestitate about writing to family friends of long standing, as in this case.

The time when letters to soldiers are inadvisable and absolutely discouraged by the War and Navy departments is through such organizations as "Pen-Pals" etc. In the beginning of the war, the enemy made use of such letter-writing clubs, to discover the sailing and destination of troop ships, and the submarines went after them accordingly with terrible and murderous effects.

Consider His Fiancee Avaricious

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have the best little woman in the world for my mother. She worked early and late, after my father's death, to bring us up and educate us. She refused two good men who wanted to marry her, because she was afraid to take the risk of a step-father for us kids. And now that she's old and broken in health, I took out the full amount of insurance, $10,000, and made it over to her.

At a certain post I met a very attractive widow with three children. We became engaged, and the date of our wedding was set. However, this lady demanded, in no uncertain terms, with a raised voice, that I turn over the entire insurance I had taken out from my mother to her. I offered to divide the insurance, naming both my mother and my wife as beneficiaries. But she said she wouldn't go on with the marriage if I would not consent to name her as sole beneficiary. This has changed my feelings toward her and I've decided to call quits on the engagement. What's your opinion?

A. W. G.

It seems to me you're very wise to stop, look and listen before going on with the marriage with such a selfish person. As you say your mother has done everything for you and her other children, and certainly now that she is old and not well, you should take account of her sacrifices. It shows a very unlovely trait in a woman to be so grasping, and I'm glad you've taken the attitude you have, instead of weakly succumbing to this lady's demands. A good many service men seem putty in the hands of these possessive-plus females.

Birth Announcements

1. I am going to have a baby soon, and would very much appreciate some information about birth announcements. I have decided to tell our relatives and friends the happy news by written notes rather than by engraved or printed announcements. Do you approve?

2. My husband is an officer, at present stationed overseas. If you approve of my writing notes, how should I sign them?

3. What information should be written in the notes, other than the date of the baby's birth.

4. Would this note-paper be suitable?

5. Many of the announcement-notes will be sent to my husband's relatives and friends, most of whom I have met. However, when I have not met both Mr. and Mrs. should the notes be addressed to both Mr. and Mrs.?

6. Should notes be sent to our friends here in this city?

7. Should my return address be written on the envelope? (So many of our friends are in the Service, and therefore change their address quite frequently.)

Mother-to-be

1. Most enthusiastically I approve of your writing notes. . .so much more friendly and personal, what relatives and friends want to receive.

2. You might still sign them as if your husband were here. . .Mary and John, or, in some cases, Mary and John Strong. Or you may sign them with your name only, and in the body of the note write something like this, "I am so happy thinking how happy (and proud!) John will be when he gets my news!"

3. Don't forget to write the baby's name. The name, the birthdate, the fact that you are both "well and flourishing", and some piece of news about your husband.

4. The notepaper on which you wrote to me will be perfect for these notes. . .white, double-sheeted, excellent size for notes.

5. In all cases you may address the notes to Mr. and Mrs. (even though you know only one), or just as properly, you may in all cases address the note to Mrs., and begin the note, "I want to tell you and your husband (or 'you and Bill') . . ."

6. Write notes to those friends whom you can't tell verbally or perhaps by telephone.

7. Yes, by all means write your return address on the envelopes.

Announcing a Divorce's Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a divorcee, and am to be married soon. Would it be proper for my sister, or my daughter, or a very close friend, to announce my marriage? I cannot write personal notes to all my friends and my fiance's friends. What is your advice about making this announcement?

Mary.

If you are not to have formal marriage announcements (and these are not necessary, or even in very good taste for a divorcee), you may send the marriage announcement to your local newspapers, and, if your fiance lives in a different city, to the newspapers in his city. Naturally you would tell your close relatives and friends by word of mouth, or by notes to those who live at a distance. And your fiance would do the same. The notes to your relatives and close friends should be written by you. Announcing your marriage informally, and in the ways I have suggested, is in good taste, and gets the news properly to those most concerned.

The First Impression Of You

By MRS. BEECKMAN

When you are introduced to someone, that someone is going to think something about you. You have it in your power to direct what that Something will be. You may be good-looking and well-dressed. But, believe it or not, vastly more important than these are your manners and your voice. The things you say and the way you say them . . .These are the real picture of what you are.

WORKERS NEED SLEEP

An authority observes that workers who carry responsibilities often lose sleep because they get overtired and nervous. Hours of trying to get to sleep intensify nervous strain and amplify worries out of all proportion. This authority discourages the use of sleeping powders except upon prescription by the family doctor. He adds, however, that taking a moderately hot bath before going to bed usually soothes the nerves and thus helps overcome sleeplessness. The efficacy of the bath is increased if a tablespoonful of pure mustard is mixed to a paste with cold water and then added to the bath. The warm glow and gentle drowsiness that follow five or ten minutes of relaxation in this mustard body bath will induce sleep readily.

Wife Preservers

To remove the odor of fish from tea towels and dishcloths, boil them for five minutes in one tablespoon baking soda added to one quart of water. Rinse in warm, then in cold water. Soda water will also remove fish odor from the hands.

"BEAUTY BUILDS MORALE" SAYS ELLEN PERRY

New York Beauty Expert Here All Week for Consultation.

Women with beauty problems will be pleased to hear that Miss Perry, noted beauty expert of New York and London, will be at George Pauley's Drug Store, February 14th. to 16th. inclusive for consultation without obligation.

The beauty business is conceded to be one of the greatest morale builders in these troubled times. Women have taken over a big responsibility in the present struggle, and psychiatrists maintain that cosmetics serve to counteract fatigue and increase efficiency among women. Britain's Supply Minister's Chief Medical Officer says:

> "Make-up is good for health because it makes women happy. When a nation's women are healthy, happy and well groomed, the morale of its men is at high tide."

From wide experience in New York and London, Miss Perry will demonstrate the Barbara Gould modern simplified system of beauty care, using Barbara Gould beauty preparations. You will find her advice sincere and thorough, covering skin, eyes and exercises, for all have a direct bearing on beauty.

To mark her visit, George Pauley's Drug Store is offering all Barbara Gould Beauty Preparations at a 20% discount February 14th. to 19th., and invites you to take advantage of Miss Perry's knowledge and skill and to make a substantial saving in these exceptionally fine beauty aids.

TEACHING JUNIOR TO EAT SPINACH

Hutchinson, Kas., Feb. 12 —(CP) —The first time spinach was placed before Hugh A. Grant, Jr., his father told him:

"You're too young to eat spinach. Don't touch it."

The boy passed it up. The next time spinach was on the table he asked for "just a little taste."

His dad turned him down, cold, but the next time Junior begged for a taste Grant gave in.

Young Grant has liked his spinach ever since.

On the Frozen Fronts of Russia or the Supply Lines of Canada
FORD V-8 ENGINE

—it's a great power plant!

AS BITTER COLD and driving snow descend on the Russian front, Russian attacks are intensified. For Russian troops are at home in winter warfare, and Russian motorized equipment is built to operate in intense cold.

Pushing forward with troops and supplies as part of the Russian offensive are Canadian-built, four-wheel drive trucks; Ford engineers devised ways to "arcticize" these trucks with heaters and other devices to make them operate efficiently at 40 below zero and lower.

In the extreme winter of Northern Manitoba, these trucks were put through exhaustive tests to make sure that they would start quickly and operate efficiently under the severe Russian weather conditions.

The power plant in these and all other Canadian-built Ford army vehicles in service today in the far parts of the world, is the Ford V-8 engine. Developed by Ford engineers in pre-war days, it set a new standard of performance in the cars, trucks, and buses of a nation at peace. Always it has been noted for the smoothness and surging power which only a V-type, eight-cylinder engine can give.

Today it is proving its efficiency and economy on the bitter testing grounds of war, and is helping to keep transportation and essential supplies moving on the home front.

In peace and in war the Ford V-8 engine has stood the test: On the frozen fronts of Russia or the highways of Canada, it's a great power plant.

Trenton Juniors Score Two Goals in Overtime to Defeat Belleville Kids in First Game

Locals Ahead Practically the Entire Game Played at Trenton

BACK HERE WEDNESDAY

Trenton, Feb. 12 (Special)—Coming from behind, after Belleville had scored the first tally in the overtime period, Stan Jackson's Trenton kids snatched a 6 to 5 win over the Belleville squad in the first game of the junior O.H.A. group playdowns here Friday night. Belleville led 1-0 at the end of the initial frame while the home sextette bounced back with two goals to the visitors' one in the middle session to knot the score at two-all. Both the last stanza and Belleville moved the ast stanza and Belleville moved to the fore with the first goal in the overtime period. Lemorre set up two subsequent goals for Trenton late in the belated period to give the home team victory. The second game of a best-in-three series will be played in Belleville next Wednesday night.

It was late in the first period before any scoring happened when Harry Wardhaugh kicked through with some tidy stick-handling to give Belleville the only goal in the initial frame. A lone effort by Maxwell evened the count early in the middle canto but Belleville went ahead again, when Barrett rapped home Meagher's long pass. The season's largest crowd saw LaMore whip home Maxwell's rebound as all was even to start the last frame.

Goals Score Alternatively.

Goals were scored alternatively in the final period with Day scoring for Belleville alone, Hamilton retaliated for the homesters and then Meagher put Holway's crowd one up batting home Johnnie Semark's pass. Filion then drove home Lemorre's corner pass and all was even at 4-4, when the 60- minute bell sounded.

It looked like a Belleville victory when Moher scored early in the extra time, but Lemorre set up two in succession for Maxwell and Hamilton as Skipper Jackson's homesters made sure of at least a third home game in the event of Belleville winning at home next Wednesday.

The lineups:

Trenton: Goal, Harvey; defence, Stojan and Filion; centre, Taylor; wings, Scott and C. Johnson; subs. Lemorre, Hamilton, Maxwell, LaMore and Campbell.

Belleville: Goal, Fitzpatrick; defence, Rosetti and Bush; centre, H. Wardhaugh; wings, Moher and Day; subs. Meagher, Semark, Soules, J. Wardhaugh, Barrett and Green.

Referees: St. Louis of Belleville and Bowen of Trenton.

Mr. Picobac waved a censored letter. "From Pete," announced he. "Open it."

With trembling fingers Mrs. Picobac tore open the envelope. "Hi, ya, mum? Hi, ya, dad?" she read. "Hope you are all keeping well. We'll be seeing you. Remember me to all. Love — Pete." "H'm," ejaculated Mr. Picobac. "He didn't say much."

"He said it all in the last word," declared Mrs. Picobac.

Mr. Picobac filled his pipe thoughtfully. "I guess he meant it at that," mused he, settling down for a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke.

PAUL MUNDRICK SCORES FOUR FOR ST. CATHARINES

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Catharines Saints won their 24th game of the Senior O.H.A. season last night and went into a practically unbeatable seven-point lead over Hamilton Majors with a 6-5 triumph against the latter team at Hamilton when Paul Mundrick ran wild to score four of the winners' goals.

The visiting puck-chasers from the peninsula assumed a commanding 4-2 margin before the first recess; kept two tallies ahead of majors in the second period which wound up 6-4, then held off the home club in the final frame, with Clarence Shillington notching the sole score.

Apart from Mundrick's sterling performance, Red Reynolds and Joe Delmonte earned one counter apiece for the Saints. For Hamilton, Johnny Conick and Shillington grabbed off a pair each, Dillon Brady being good for a Singleton. Hamilton's next game is at Toronto Monday night, with the bottom-rung Tars presiding as hosts.

In the Junior "A" series of the O.H.A., Kroehlers sprang a 7-3 surprise on Galt Kists at Stratford with the help of two new Westerners, Kullman and Kapusti, the former scoring a brace for his debut in the east. Tindall was also a two-goal sniper for Stratford, the balance being divided by Sclisizzi, Jackson and Kapusti. For Galt, the scorers were Ubriaco, Curik and Kazarian.

Coming out of lengthy rest because of injuries, recreationists held Brantford Lions to a 2-1 victory at Port Colborne, Powell getting the deciding goal for the visitors after eight minutes of the third period.

Military Draft Making Deep Inroads Into Ranks of Golfers

(By The Canadian Press.)

The military draft is making deep inroads into the ranks of leading U.S. golfers with the result the touring fraternity will shortly become a skeleton of its former makeup. Among those departing from the $5,000 open tournament now in full swing at Ontonio, Texas will be Harold (Jug) McSpaden, winner of the recent Phoenix and San Francisco tourneys, who will report Feb. 17 at Philadelphia for board examination. Sam Byrd, former Detroit baseballer, will report Wednesday at Birmingham, Ala., while George Fazio left San Antonio last night to report to his draft board at Ambler, Pa.

President Ed Dudley of the Professional Golfers Association said at San Antonio only one more tournament, the New Orleans open Feb. 25 to 28, had been definitely scheduled for the winter season.

Declaring the St. Louis Cardinals, "with good men two-deep for every position," appeared to be the team to beat in the National League, President Branch Rickey of Brooklyn Dodgers yesterday expressed worry regarding his own team. Five of his regulars, including Bobby Bragan, Mickey Owen, Arky Vaughan, Bill Herman and Dixie Walker, were going before their draft boards March 15, he said. "If we lose them, it will be a terrible blow," he added.

Ted Broadribb, Manager of Sgt. Freddie Mills of the R.A.F. announced at London he had cabled a challenge in behalf of his fighter to promoter Mike Jacobs of New York for a title bout with Sgt. Joe Louis, if and when the heavyweight champion arrives in Britain.

Lieut. Gordon (Mickey) Cochrane, former Detroit Tiger manager, has rounded up 16 major and minor league ball players for the team at Great Lakes naval training station for his third season there but no less than seven of the candidates are pitchers.

Because of back and knee conditions, Bronko Nagurski was classified as 4-F after his pre-induction examination at Fort Snelling and it was announced yesterday the former grid star and wrestler of Minneapolis had been rejected for any military service.

Jane Crum of Orangeburg, S.C., yesterday captured the final of the women's golf tournament at Palm Beach, Fla., with a 9 and 7 victory over Mrs. Harvey Mack of Easton, Pa. Miss Crum was one over women's par for the Palm Beach Country Club course.

The Narragansett Racing Association yesterday announced at Pawtucket, R.I., the holding of two race meetings for a total of 70 days during the 1944 season. The spring meet of 28 days opens April 12 while the autumn series will get under way Aug. 14.

Discharged from the U.S. army because of injuries suffered at Casablanca, pitcher Tommy Warren from Tulsa, Okla., has been signed by the Brooklyn Dodgers. The club also announced the signing of catcher Ray Hayworth, 39, who had previously played with the team.

The Metropolitan Jockey Club yesterday anounced the holding of the $25,000 Wood Memorial Handicap at Jamaica track, New York, Saturday, April 22. Last year's handicap was won by Count Fleet.

Gil Doods, Boston divinity student, will go to the post as a father in the mile feature at the Boston A.A. games at Boston Garden tonight, his wife having presented him with an eight-pound son, John Lloyd Dodds. His chief opponent will be Bill Hulse, holder of American outdoor mile record.

With Calumet Farm's Mar-Kell scratched, the popular choices for the $5,000 Black Helen Handicap at Hialeah Park today are Wise Moss and Sylvestra, the jockey for the latter being Ted Atkinson of Toronto who has been making an impressive showing at the winter meeting.

Toronto, Feb. 12. (CP)—The Allan Cup Hockey competition this year is certain to be a hollow affair. Except for Quebec Aces the teams which figured at the season's start to provide all the action have been disbanded or will not enter the play-offs.

Powerful Pacific Coast teams representing the three services have been broken up. Trail Smoke Eaters, considered the West's strongest civilian team, have announced they will not enter the play-offs because players are tied down by essential war jobs. Only remaining B.C. candidates are two mediocre civilian teams, in Vancouver and New Westminster.

The strong Alberta Service teams are ineligible. Calgary Buffaloes, western intermediate champions, decline to be coaxed into the Allan Cup parade. If Alberta is represented at all it will be by a pick-up crew from Edmonton.

Saskatchewan's outstanding team this season is the unbeaten Saskatoon Navy, ineligible for interprovincial play. Moose Jaw victories and Flin Flon Bombers may compete for the title of Saskatchewan's second-best Allan Cup candidates.

Manitoba is unlikely to have a representative while the Lakehead has a couple of teams from which an all-star contender may be chosen.

Star-studded service teams in Toronto and Kingston have withdrawn from the O.H.A. and Ontario has only three teams to contest the Senior Crown—St. Catharines, Hamilton and Sudbury. The three-team Ottawa City League will send its champions into the play-offs.

Champions of the Quebec League—probably either Quebec Aces or Montreal Royals—should enter the Allan Cup race as favorites. Breakup of the Maritimes Service Leagues makes it unlikely a Maritimes Champion will emerge strong enough to upset the Quebec winners.

Incidentally:

Dick (New York News) Young says Jack Adams of Detroit attempted to swap Bill Jennings and Kenny Kilrea for New York's Bryan Hextall and quotes Lester Patrick as saying: "Can you top that for pure gall". Hextall has 36 scoring points, Jennings eight and Kilrea two. . . .Bus Wycherley, former major leaguer now in the R.C.A.F., fired five goals as Toronto Fuels beat Canadian Industries 9-5 in the Toronto Metropolitan hockey league.

B.C.I. JUNIORS BEAT ST. MIKES BY 3-1 COUNT

"Irish" Lead in First Period but Winners Score Three in Third

Coming from behind with a third period rally, Coach Harold Mott's Belleville Collegiate kids snatched a third period win over St. Mikes kids in the first game of the Junior C.O.S.S.A. hockey series at the Hume Arena yesterday afternoon to the tune of 3 to 1. St. Mikes led 1-0 at the end of the initial frame and there was no score in the middle period.

Bob Lucy opened the game's scoring with a solo effort midway through the initial stanza as neither squad registered in the middle period.

It was pretty much B.C.I. in the last frame as the "Collegians" rammed home three goals. Maurice Vollick whipped in the equalizer on a pass from Strahan and then Vollick put the B.C.I. one up on a solo effort. Johnnie Locke cinched the piece for the B.C.I. when he rang the bell from Strahan's pass.

The line-up:

Belleville Collegiate—Goal, Dodson; defence, McIntosh and Smith; centre, Vollick; wings, Strahan and Locke; subs. Wannamaker, Thrasher, Rapino, Hubble, McCreary and Little.

St. Mikes—Goal, Scanlan; defence, Moher and Donovan; centre, Semark; wings, Lucy and Graham; subs, Meagher, Lorimer, Upper, Duffy, Barrett and Brian.

Referee—St. Louis.

CONTEST MEANS PLENTY FOR LEAFS

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens—always an incompatible pair in National Hockey League combat—clash tonight in the only N.H.L. game scheduled Saturday.

This time the result means little from a point standpoint to Canadiens, who now lead the second-place Detroit Red Wings by six and a half games with all teams already set for the stretch drive. But it holds plenty of meaning for Leafs, now only a point ahead of the four-place Boston Bruins and another two ahead of Chicago Black Hawks.

Whatever the result against Canadiens, Leafs should gain ground against their two rivals in the battle for the last two play-off berths. On Saturday they travel to New York for an engagement with the tail-end Rangers, while Boston entertains the tough Red Wings and Chicago plays host to the equally formidable Canadiens.

The Boston-Detroit tilt is expected to mark the return of Bill Cowley, star Boston centre who suffered a shoulder separation against Toronto Jan. 8. Bruins are currently in the throes of a winning streak, having defeated Chicago and Montreal in their last two assignments.

What's Doing in Sport

Los Angeles (AP)—The committee on public morals of the State Assembly yesterday postponed action until March 7 on charges by Willie Ritchie, State Boxing Inspector, that gambling was ruining the boxing game. Ritchie is the former lightweight champion of the world.

Seigniory Club, Que. (CP)—Leading her nearest rival by five points in the Women's Curling tournament for the Sewell Trophy, Mrs. G. Wood of Peterborough skipped her rink to a 16-4 win over Mrs. W. A. McGregor of Outremont yesterday.

Vancouver, (CP)— Carl Robertson, sports editor of the Vancouver News-Herald yesterday swore out a summons against Manager Coley Hall of the St. Regis Senior Hockey team, alleging common assault. Hall is a local sports promoter.

Quebec, (CP) — Protesting the cancellation of an exhibition Hockey game with Quebec Aces by Montreal Canadiens of the N.H.L., the City Council yesterday called on the Quebec government for the establishment of a Provincial Sports Commission in a formal resolution. The local coliseum where Aces play their home games is city-owned.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

FAIR

Two young Scotchmen were at loggerheads over the sharing out of the estate which had been left jointly to them in their father's will. As a last resort they agreed to accept the decision of an old friend of the family.

"Boys," "said this wise man," "Donald will divide up the estate exactly as he thinks fit."

At this onald's face beamed, but that of Hamish grew visibly longer.

"And then," continued the arbitrator, "Hamish will take whichever half he prefers."

(One down.)

Rattling home two goals in the only overtime period of the group Stan Jackson's Trenton kids came from behind so often it wasn't ever funny and grabbed a 6-5 win over Toots Holway's locals in the first game of the junior O.H.A. play-offs. It was the closest the local sextette have come to beating Trenton at home this season and now all Skipper Holway's team has to do is get a little moral support from the local fans and maybe FO. Jackson won't think so much of his charges.

The score sheet shows that Belleville was never headed last night until the overtime period. Twice in the third stanza the locals were out ahead and after Jerry Moher scored the first overtime goal, that put the locals up four times in the game, they failed to hold their advaltage. Maybe the small ice surface in Trenton confused the locals, but from afar it looks like a steadier defence would have won the day. On the other hand it may have been too much Maxwell. Lemorre and Hamilton who spoiled the locals' broth, but again a strong defence could halt this trio.

(Stirling rallies.)

Jerry Quinn's Tweed kids tossed a real scare into the ranks of Coach Neal's "Combines" out at Stirling last night. With something like ten minutes left to play the tally stood exactly 5-5. However, the smooth-working Combines steadied away and banged in no less than five goals in the last few moments to win 10 to 5. Skipper Quinn says he won a moral victory and tables will be turned when the Combines move into Tweed on Wednesday night. "We held them close for the better part of the game and after all it was our first group game. The next one will be different," predicted Coach Quinn, as he pointed out the fact the Combines could not stop "Spike" Meraw, who scored four goals.

On the other hand Ralph Neal is satisfied that his Combines were late in starting Trumble getting three goals, Doug Patterson two and eBrt Bastedo one. Of course, as goes the Bastedo-Patterson line, so goes the Combines, says we.

RACE TIGHTENS.

"Dutch" Cain's Mountain View "Bombers" can climb mighty close to second place in the Quinte service puck loop by taking the "Mohawks" into camp Monday night. However, the Deseronto airmen are improving each night out, they only fell by the wayside 2-1 against Trenton Thursday night.

Local fans are beginning to warm up to the style of hockey dished up by the district Air Force loop. After all when one team can trot out a front line composed of Gene Bauer, brother of Boston Bobby, Frank Aube, former Montreal Royal senior and Lou Boudreau, ex-Quebec Aces' star winger, as can the Bombers and then get beaten by a courageous band like Bud Corbett's No. 6 Repair Depot lads, well such a hockey league has what the fans need.

However, in the meantime Coach Padre Maika's Trenton Flyers continue to lead the parade, but not by too large a margin.

REMEMBER WHEN . . .

Just three years ago today Mary Rose Thacker, 17-year-old Winnipeg girl, successfully defended her North American figure skating championship in the women's singles at Philadelphia. Ralph McCreath, University of Toronto senior took the men's singles title. He is now in the Canadian army.

Speaking of fancy and figure skating artists should remind one that on Feb. 18th the Quinte Skating Club is holding its annual "ice carnival" at the Hume Arena. A galaxy of gayly bedecked figure skaters will be featured in the only ice carnival of the season to be featured in Belleville.

THIS AND THAT . . .

The grapevine carries the report that there is a movement afoot in Washington to make J. Edgar Hoover, FBI chief, czar of horse racing for the United States. . . . Paul Schreiber, veteran batting practice pitcher of the Yankees, estimates that the work he does during a season is the equivalent of pitching 100 nine inning games. . . . The fight game is infested with slippery individuals, promotors and boxers, but Henry Armstrong and Joe Waterman, Portland, Oregon, promoter, are two men who believe that honesty is the best policy. . . . Hammering Henry has battled for Waterman 19 times and there has never been a contract between the two nor have they ever had a dispute about money. . . . Ford Frick, president of the National League, says the top players by positions during his regime have been Dizzy Dean, Gabby Hartnett, Bill Terry, Frank Frisch, Pie Traynor and Travis Jackson. . . . Frick's outfield? He refuses to name one—too tough, he says.

CONDITIONS HORRIBLE

Washington, Feb. 12. (AP)—Conditions in one prison camp in the Philippines "were so bad that 2,200 Americans and more than 20,000 Filipinos are reported to have died in the first few months of their detention", the State Department said in protests dispatched to the Japanese Government on Jan. 27.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 301

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Don't tell me that I stay too long with the same hands. People will say we're in love. Anyway, there is not enough space in one day to dish up all the dirt about any one deal.

I have been aching for some time to spill my idea of another virtue in Horse Sense bidding. The cards we have been looking at for two days will act as an example. Here they are:

SOUTH
♠Q
♥9 6 3
♦A K J 5
♣A K J 6 2
NORTH
♠9 3
♥A 5 4
♦Q 6 3 2
♣Q 7 4 3

The bidding goes like this:

| SOUTH | NORTH |
|---|---|
| 1 C | 2 C |
| 2 D | 3 D |
| 5 C | 5 D |

The first two raises by north show four tricks. South should be very much encouraged by that and support for two strong suits. Because south has seven tricks.

If north has another trick, south could see a slam in their pair. But south jumped to five clubs and shut out slam information. With the aces and kings he holds, why didn't south probe for a slam?

The answer is found in the Horse Sense rules for bidding. To bid a slam, we must first learn how many aces and kings we have. To get that information about aces and kings, we bid four no-trump.

But to bid four no-trump, we must (1) see 12 tricks (2) know what's trumps and (3) hold two aces and kings—or better. Does south have what it takes for the four no-trump convention bid?

He has two aces and king or better. He knows what's trumps. But he has not yet discovered 12 tricks in the pair. Therefore, he is not in a position to bid four no-trump.

What I am trying to tell you is that Horse Sense keeps you from going beyond your depth. It looks like an exclusive, too.

AT THE McCARTHY

"IN OLD OKLAHOMA"

Turning back a few pages in history, Republic brings a robust episode from the days of our national development to the screen in their latest de luxe photoplay, "In Old Oklahoma" based on Thomson Burtis' story, "War of the Wildcats", which opened today at the McCarthy Theatre to an audience which indicated by frequent applause their approval of the story itself and its sincere portrayals, contributed by such cinema favorites as John Wayne, Martha Scott, Albert Dekker, Marjorie Rambeau, George "Gabby" Hayes, Cecil Cunningham and Grant Withers.

The emancipation of women plays an important part in the plot. Cathy Allen (played by Martha Scott) has written a book filled with revolutionary ideas about the place of women in the expanding nation. Although she is in reality a very naive and unworldly person herself, the citizens of her town rise up in righteous wrath and expell her from their midst.

Leaving town in chagrin and disillusionment, she meets two very diverse men on the train, two men whose conflicting passions destined to change the history of the pioneer southwest. One of them played by John Wayne, is earnest and genuine, with a real concern for the welfare of the Indians, whose oil-rich lands are coveted by the other man, played by Albert Dekker, a self-assured man-of-the-world.

Cathy is torn between the two; she admires some things in one, and other things in the other, and this conflict rages to torrential fury.

A color cartoon entitled "Meatless Tuesday", the latest edition of Universal Worldly news rounds out an excellent program.

AT THE BELLE

"SALUTE TO THE MARINES"
(In Color)

Filmed in co-operation with the U.S. Marine Corps, M.G.M.'s "Salute To the Marines" stars Wallace Beery in a two-fisted, action-packed wartime story that is as inspiring as Old Glory itself. The photoplay is now at the Belle Theatre.

Done up in technicolor, the picture is not only a tribute to Wallace Beery's thirtieth year in motion pictures, but also a salute to the fighting Marines, the "fightin'est men" in the service.

Beery, in a "diamond-in-the-rough" role that has made him famous, portrays a bellowing, tough-as-they-come leatherneck sergeant, veteran of 30 years in uniform. Returned from the corps, he later organizes a Filipino "army" to fight the ruthless Jap hordes invading the Philippines.

Teamed with Beery for the first time is personable Fay Bainter, remembered for her stirring performance in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley". As his peace-loving wife, Miss Bainter persuades Beery to leave the service he loves for domestic life.

The supporting cast performs admirably. Reginald Owen is a Nazi fifth columnist, Ray Collins is Beery's veteran colonel, Marilyn Maxwell plays Beery's comely daughter, William Lundigan is a young leatherneck flier in love with Marilyn, Keye Luke is Beery's Filipino punch-drunk boxer pal, and Donald Curtis, also in love with Marilyn, is an infantry lieutenant.

Highlight of the picture is the technicolor battle scenes at the climax.

There's plenty of action, comedy, romance and entertainment for all in "Salute to the Marines". The Canadian Paramount News and "Stork's Holiday", another of the ever-welcome M-G-M- colorful cartoons, precede the feature attraction.

Continuous shows will be presented today.

AT THE CAPITOL

"SARONG GIRL"
(First Belleville Showing)

Ann Corio, long known as "the loveliest lady of burlesque", comes next to the Capitol Theatre as the star of "Sarong Girl", the Monogram musical comedy in which she is seen as a burlesque performer who abandons her profession following a raid, and becomes the centre of a series of hilarious incidents.

Contributing to this interesting event in local film circles is an excellent supporting cast which includes the famous comedy team of Tim and Irene, Bill Henry, colored comedian Mantan Moreland, Dami O'Flynn, Henry Kolker, Mary Gordon and Johnnie "Scat" Davis and his orchestra.

Comedy predominates throughout the picture, and there is a wealth of catchy songs and pretty girls to combine in the making of what may be definitely classified as the greatly desired "escapist" type of entertainment. The story illustrates what can happen when a crusty millionaire attempts to interfere with the career of a burlesque queen, and proves that a synthetic mother is vastly to be preferred to a synthetic love affair.

"Stand By For Action."

The added special attraction, M.-G.-M.'s "Stand By For Action" is the mightiest naval drama of all time! Drama unmatched since "Mutiny On The Bounty" spectacularly rode the waves! What a picture! Cheers for its heroism! Laughter for its humor! America will love it as it loves the navy!

You'll thrill when the captain says "We've got 22 babies aboard this ship! They were bombed out of Pearl Harbor! They were torpedoed at sea! But they're going to live, comes hail or high water! This man's navy is taking them home!

A great cast of stars including Robert Taylor, Charles Laughton, Brian Donlevy are in this naval drama "Stand By For Action" with Walter Brennan, Marilyn Maxwell, Henry O'Neil and Marta Linden.

The Canadian Universal News will also be shown.

NO PREFERENTIAL DRAFT SOUGHT FOR BALL PLAYERS

Commission Says Clubs Will Stand on Their Own Feet

TO MEET GOVERNMENT

Chicago, Feb. 12 —(AP)— Kenesaw Mountain Landis, commissioner of baseball, announced last night that club owners of professional baseball would not ask for preferential draft treatment of their players during the war.

The commissioner's statement was occasioned by the exchange of correspondence between Stephen Early, secretary of President Roosevelt, and J. G. T. Spink of St. Louis, publisher of Sporting News, a weekly paper devoted chiefly to baseball. Spink sought an expression from the White House on the game's future during the war.

"Mr. Spink is not a member of the baseball organization and does not speak for anybody but himself," Landis said in his statement. "Nobody authorized to speak for professional baseball has requested preferential treatment of any kind for any player. Most emphatically, no such request will be made while we are engaged in this war."

Landis authorized publication of a hitherto unpublished letter he wrote to Maj.-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Director of Selective Service, which expressed baseball's attitude. The letter, written to Hershey last Dec. 23, said in part:

Some Sort of Scheme.

"Reports drift in here that there is under way some sort of scheme for the exemption, or deferment, or other preferential treatment of professional baseball players under the Selective Service law.

"In accordance with the President's letter of Jan. 15, 1942, to me, suggesting the continuance of professional baseball but observing that—'I know you will agree with me that individual players who are of military or naval age should go without question into the services'—I have repeatedly stated on behalf of everybody connected with professional baseball that we ask no preferential treatment, that we would be disgraced if we got it and that we desire that all laws and regulations having to do with this war shall operate upon our personnel precisely as upon the other 130,000,000 of our population.

"Arguments that preferential treatment would serve 'morale' can only have the effect of making that word odios . . ."

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Feb. 12 —(AP)— They're trying to take the fun out of hockey and who do you think is responsible? None other than Red Dutton, who never dodged any fun of fighting as a player . . . As managing director of the National Hockey League, Red's new idea is that officials shouldn't interfere in a fight unless more than two players are involved and the best fracases always develop when one athlete tries to pull someone off a teammate, is pulled in turn, etc, etc., while the poor ref in the middle absorbs most of the punches . . . In the first fight we've seen under Red's new order, the boys tossed a few roundhouse rights, wrestled a while and then just looked at each other sheepishly . . . It was as dull as a boxing contest.

JUG McSPADEN SETS MERRY PACE

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 12. —(AP)—Confident Harold (Jug) McSpaden, setting a merry pace along golfdom's winter tournament trail, held the firstleg—a dazzling four-under par 67—on his fourth triumph today as he moved out ahead of the field in the second 18 holes of the Texas open.

The Philadelphia professional defied near-freezing weather and a stiff north win to bag five birdies yesterday in finishing two strokes in the lead in the opening round. He had only one over-par hole.

Despite the unfavorable conditions 12 pros equalled or bettered par on tough Brackenridge course.

The weather caused some 30 withdrawals to cut the field to around 125 for today's second round.

Two strokes behind McSpaden were Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., Pete Cooper of Rainesville, Fla., and Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind.

Grouped at 70 were Sam Byrd of Philadelphia, Abe Espinosa of Brownsville, Texas, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N.Y., and Leonard Dodson of Kansas City.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was looking at the comics on his way to the sporting page, and ma said William, I dont see how you can read those so-called comics day after day without the slightest vestige of a change of expression on your face. I mean why dont you either stop reading them altogether, or if they're really comics why dont you berst out into an occasional laugh or at least a few restrained chuckles? I remember when we used to positively shriek with laughter over the funny pages, she said.

Those were the days of innocence, pop said. We are now living in an age of reason. In other words the world has become more fillosophical. We realize that blows on the head and landings on the seat are not the occasions of mirth that we once so fondly fancied, he said, and ma said, Fillosophical of all things for land sakes.

And she quick went and looked at the paper over pop's shoulder, saying, Now just take The Winged Scorpion instants. We'll just take a look and see what he's doing so fillosophical. He's pointing into a cave and what's he saying? He's saying, "Here it is—the new secret hoard of kroxite, the deadly new explosive that could blow the whole world to smithereens. Let us secrete ourselves and trap the Hooglanders when they come for their fiendish weapon." And then the Scorpion and the 2 queer looking creatures with him hide behind the rocks. To be continued tomorrow. Now where is all the fillosophy for land sakes? ma said.

Well, the secret hoard of kroxite might be a simbol to the secret hoard of power which lies within each of us and which so easily may be turned to evil purposes, pop said, and ma said, Yes, and on the other hand it might not. And besides, why is it called a comic? she said.

Merely tradition, my dear, just as family life is still called family life although in 9 cases out of 10 the radio does all the talking and the children are all out, nobody knows where, pop said.

And he turned to the sporting page and blew smoke over.

Maximum Salaries Increased for Teachers

Smiths Falls, Ont., Feb. 12 (CP)—Board of Education yesterday increased the maximum salary for its pubic school teachers holding first class certificates from $1,200 to $1,400, and the salary of those holding second class certificates from $1,150 to $1,350. The maximum is to be attained by annual increases of $100, and the change is retroactive to Jan. 1.

The Board struck its 1944 estimates at $66,000, $5,000 above the 1943 estimates.

CHAPTER 9

"You can keep that one," said Duffy. "I've got a duplicate. And here's that letter you got," he added, passing it over. "Our expert says it was written on a No. 6 Underwood, which has never been used for heavy work, since the type is very little worn, although the machine must be four or five years old. It would be easy to identify for the lower-case 'a' is a little out of line, and there is a nick in the tail of the 'g'."

"What about the writer?"

"He is fairly accustomed to using a typewriter, but not a trained typist. Our expert says he is probably a professional man of some sort—one who types his own reports. Maybe a lawyer or a doctor."

"Why not an author?"

"The type isn't worn enough."

"Why not a woman?"

"Our expert says the way it's written is distinctly masculine, though it has certain feminine traits, too."

"We seem to be getting warm," remarked Tony, with a smile. "What we're looking for is a lawyer or a doctor who knew McKibben, who has class three blood, and certain feminine traits, who knows how to use a typewriter but not very well, and who owns a No. 6 Underwood with elite type, the 'a' out of line and the tail of the 'g' nicked. If you can find anybody with these characteristics who also had a grudge against McKibben, you've got your man."

"Well, have you heard anything from McKibben's ex-wife?"

"Not a peep. Can't say I blame her."

"What relatives did he have?"

"None that we've been able to discover. He comes from somewhere in Virginia."

"His ex-wife might know."

"She sailed for Europe yesterday —hopped a boat as soon as she heard McKibben was dead. I'm putting some heat on her husband."

"What are you going to do with the body?"

"It will keep awhile," answered Duffy grimly.

"Did you see Lily Edgerton?"

"Sure. But we haven't got her letters. We haven't found any letters yet. McKibben probably kept them in his safe."

"You haven't opened it?"

"No, but I'm going from here to do it."

"I'm inclined to think you'll find something interesting."

"The trouble with this case is that there are too many things that are interesting," said Duffy. "This Edgerton dame says he was not above trying blackmail when he found himself in a tight place, and I don't know any better way to invite assassination."

"What did he do with his money?" Tony asked.

Duffy grinned. "What a lot of other people did—tried to support the market when it was flopping. Wouldn't believe there could be a depression. Well, I've got to be getting along."

"Maybe I'll run down after a while and see what's in that safe."

"Okay," said Duffy as he left the room.

Clarence came in as soon as he had closed the outer door after the detective. "A messenger brought this just now, suh," he said, and handed Tony a long envelope. It was from the office and he found that it contained a letter from Garrity:

> Dear Tony:
>
> It's impossible to get a full list of McKibben's customers until after the safe is opened, as all his books are in there. But I managed to get the names and addresses of some of the heaviest losers from his bookkeeper and am sending them along. I'll shoot you a complete list as soon as I get it. This one looks like an excerpt from the Social Register.
>
> Garrity

Enclosed was another sheet of paper with six names: Mrs. Thos. Rolfe, H. R. Condit, Dr. Jerome Metcalf, Lawrence Terry, Miss Susan Tremaine, James W. Somerset and the addresses ranged from Great Neck and Westchester, to upper Fifth Avenue. Tony knew something about the owners of all the names except one: Lawrence Terry, and his address was Westchester Avenue, in Mount Vernon.

Finally Tony put the list to one side and finished his mail. Then he called a taxi and headed downtown.

McKibben's office was on the sixth floor of a very sedate Wall Street building and when he entered he found the outside room filled with anxious-looking people, two policemen keeping them in order. Tony had seen such crowds before—outside the Bank of the United States, when it suddenly closed its doors—in brokers' offices when the market was nose-diving.

He crossed the room to the policeman in front of the inner door, gave him his card, and asked him to take it to Lieut. Duffy. The policeman was back in a moment and motioned him inside.

Tony proceeded across the inner office, where four or five people were talking gloomily among themselves—the office staff, evidently—to a door on the farther side marked "Private."

"Hello, Tony," said Duffy, who was seated at a desk inside, watching a man who was slowly turning the combination of a big safe, one ear tight against it. "Sit down. We couldn't find the combination anywhere—nobody knew it except McKibben, apparently—so we had to bring down our expert. He says he thinks he can get it."

The columnist looked about the office. It was large and luxuriously furnished in the best stockbroker tradition—a great, polished desk with a swing chair back of it, a heavy rug on the floor, half a dozen heavily padded chairs, an imposing row of file cases along one wall. On the desk was a battery of telephones and beside it was a dictograph, with a transcriber attachment. The whole place breathe affluence, security, confidence.

At that moment the man at the safe pushed down the lever and swung open the door.

"Great work, Bob!" Duffy commended and looked into the safe. "I'm afraid, that hunch of yours didn't work this time, Tony," he added. "I don't see much in here."

There was a pile of ledgers and account books in one corner, but the shelves above them were empty except for a litter of bank books and memoranda. In one drawer were perhaps a dozen packets of letters neatly tied up and carefully docketed. Duffy chuckled as he looked at them.

"These must be the billets-doux," he said. "But I don't see any securities, unless they're in here," and he indicated an inner locked compartment. "I've got McKibben's keys" and he took a bunch out of his pocket and tried one after another. "Here we are," and he pulled the little door open.

There was nothing in the compartment except a small wax cylinder.

"What's this?" he murmured, taking it out and looking at it.

"Maybe my hunch is going to jell, after all," said Tony. "That's a dictograph cylinder."

"Of course. But why should be keep it in there?"

"Maybe it's a contract of some sort."

"You can't make a contract on a dictograph cylinder."

"Suppose we try it out," and Tony turned to the transcriber and opened it. "Slide it on."

The detective did so with some difficulty, for it did not fit exactly. Tony closed the machine and turned on the switch.

For a moment there was a confused whirr, and then a woman's voice, shaken with emotion was saying: "The baby isn't his, and he doesn't suspect anything, and every day it is getting more and more like its father, and I'm so afraid, I'm so afraid. If he notices it, I'll kill myself. I couldn't bear it. He has been so good to me and I love him more than ever."

The voice stopped suddenly and the whirr and mutter began again.

Tony snapped off the switch.

"Well, well," exclaimed Duffy. "I don't wonder McKibben locked it up. But why should any woman tell him that?"

Tony took the cylinder out of the machine and examined it carefully. "This looks to me as though it had been made from another record," he said. "You see how it has been trimmed away on either side of the recorded portion. It is only a part of what was on the original record."

"Then she didn't say it to McKibben," observed Duffy thoughtfully. "And he had it locked up in his safe, so he must have considered it valuable. Blackmail, eh? Maybe this is what Lily Edgerton was talking about. It sounds like her voice."

"It does," Tony nodded.

"I'll have to see her again," said the detective. "She must know more than she told me. But where in the world would McKibben get a record like that?"

The columnist made no comment for he had the glimmer of an idea in his mind, but he decided to keep it to himself until he had thought it out.

"I'll lock this up again," Duffy said and carefully replaced the cylinder in the compartment of the safe, locking the door. "I've got to check up on the people outside, while the staff gets me out a list of the customers. Speaking of customers," he added with a smile. "You're not the only person who gets anonymous tips," and he drew a letter from his pocket.

"Sure," Tony agreed. "You depend on them more than I do."

"This was sent down from H.Q. a while ago," and Duffy held the letter out to him. The envelope was addressed "Attention Lieut. Duffy." It had a special delivery stamp on it, and had been mailed at the West Sixty-ninth Street office.

"Somebody who knows you are working on the case," Tony said, "but who doesn't know your address."

"And somebody who lives somewhere around Central Park West," Duffy added. "Maybe in that same apartment house. Remarkable how all these letters come from there. Go ahead and read it. It has been tested for fingerprints. There aren't any."

Tony drew out the single sheet of paper and read:

> It might be worth while for the police to inquire whether any of John McKibben's customers has recently committed suicide.

The words had been typed with a black ribbon on a plain sheet of paper which looked as though it had been torn from a pad.

"This looks familiar to me," Tony commented.

"It ought to," Duffy agreed. "It was written on the same machine as the note you got. See that nick in the tail of the 'g'?"

Yes, there it was in the second word and the 'a' in 'any' was definitely out of line.

He handed the letter silently back to the detective.

"I'll check up, of course," the latter said, "as soon as I get the list of customers. But I don't see the point. McKibben certainly couldn't have been killed by somebody who had already killed himself."

"Maybe he left some revengeful relatives," Tony suggested. "Anyway, there are plenty of customers left, from the looks of the outside room, and some of them appear to be pretty desperate. Then there are the writers of the love letters," and he nodded toward the safe.

"I don't want you to mention them, Tony," said Duffy, "nor this cylinder, either. Not yet."

"All right, I won't," the columnist agreed, and three minutes later he was out on Wall Street again. As he turned up toward Broadway, the thing he had been trying to recall ever since he had read Garrity's note flashed into his head. Lawrence Terry—why, of course!

He hurried across the street to the Bankers Trust building, went up to the library on the third floor and asked to see a copy of the Record of the day before. He was looking for a short item about a suicide—yes, here it was:

> Mount Vernon, N.Y., April 11. —Lawrence Terry, of Westchester Avenue, was found dead this afternoon, sitting at his desk in his study. He had shot himself through the head, and the revolver was still grasped in his hand. A note on the desk stated that he had killed himself because of ill-health.
>
> The body was found by his son, Franklin Terry, who stated that his father had been suffering from a severe nervous trouble for the past two years and that the family had moved from Virginia to Mount Vernon about a year ago in order to be near a specialist in New York, who had been treating his father.
>
> Previous to his illness, Mr. Terry had been a member of the faculty of William and Mary College at Williamsburg, Va. He was fifty-two years of age and leaves two children, the son, Franklin Terry and a daughter, Leda. The body will be taken to Virginia for burial.

For a moment Tony stared fascinated at the word "Leda." Then he returned the paper to the file, hurried up to Broadway, took the subway to Grand Central and just managed to catch the 3:10 express for Mount Vernon.

Monday afternoon Lawrence Terry had been found dead in his study, and yet at midnight that same day his daughter had been dancing in a night club. How, in heaven's name, explain that?

She had gone with Jack McKibben to his apartment, and nine hours later his dead body had been found on the floor of his bedroom. What had Lawrence Terry's death to do with that? Only yesterday—could it have been only yesterday?"

It hadn't taken so long, after all. Less than thirty hours. Tony had located the girl, and now he was on his way to clear up the mystery. He would have to work rapidly, for he knew perfectly well that Duffy would soon be on his trail. He sat erect with a sudden start.

"I've got a hunch that I'm going to find both of them in the same place," Duffy had said. Could it be that the dark-skinned southerner was Leda's brother, Franklin? Had he been looking for his sister to tell her of their father's death? Or had he been looking for McKibben with murder in mind?

In Manhattan

By H. M. PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

New York, Feb. 12. (CP)— The civic centre, now after two months firmly established as a popular home of revivals of successes of other years, this week presented "Porgy and Bess", the negro musical with the haunting songs by George Gershwin, "I Got Plenty of Nuttin'", "Bess, you is my Woman now", "Summertime" and "It Ain't Ain't Necessarily So".

This is the third time "Porgy and Bess" has appeared in New York and at the popular prices charged at the centre—the apple of Mayor La Guardia's eye—it ranks as the most attractive show in town.

London is reported preparing a production of "The Voice of the Turtle" in which Vivien Leigh will take the Margaret Sullavan part and her husband, Laurence Olivier, the Elliott Nugent role. The play, based on the week-end love affair of an actress and a soldier, written by John Van Druten and produced by Alfred De Liagre, is having an enormously successful Broadway run.

"Decision", the play about American Fascists that got a decidedly mixed reception from New York drama critics, is making a fight for it with the help of an aggressive advertising campaign and may settle down for quite a run.

The one new play of the past week is "Peepshow", the story of a Don Juan who is haunted by his conscience, in the person of another actor who shadows him throughout his amours with the wife of his best friend and with his own fiance. It was written by Ernest Pascal and has John Emery and Tamara Geva as its leading actors. David Wayne takes the part of the conscience. It is not likely to be around very long.

Ralston Says McNaughton Relieved of Command Because Practically Unable to Carry On

Minister of Defence Gives Statement in Response to Questions

ILSLEY'S STATEMENT

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Feb. 12. (CP)—Defence Minister Ralston said in the House of Commons yesterday that Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton was granted leave of absence and relieved of his Canadian Army command overseas after army doctors had reported he should be freed of military responsibility for an extended period and the General himself had declared his physical inability to carry on and asked to be relieved.

The Minister's statement, in response to questions from opposition members came as the House was launched on the 3,650,000,000 war appropriation debate, expected to be the longest single discussion of the session.

Finance Minister Ilsley gave the House a breakdown of the $3,650,000,000 on war funds sought for 1944-45—$240,000,000 less than the corresponding vote last year.

With the addition of non-war estimates, also tabled yesterday by the Minister, Canada's 1944-45 bill stands at $4,352,369,059 compared with $4,500,880,494 last year. These totals do not include any allowance for any mutual-aid allotment which, however, is expected to be less in 1944-45 than the $1,000,000,000 voted in 1943-44.

Mr. Ilsley said no war effort could be called too big and that Canadian sacrifices, apart from those of persons bereaved by war, could not be compared with those of Britain, Russia and conquered countries.

Col. Ralston described his recent visit to Italy and his pride in the achievements of Canadian troops in the Mediterranean area.

Misrepresentation Made Is Claim.

He said there had been "misrepresentation" about disbandment of the 7th and 8th divisions in Canada. They had been formed, he said, at a time when Japan was a threat to the west coast and were disbanded after the Aleutians had been cleared by United States and Canadian forces.

Their disbandment had permitted more fit men to go overseas. Only in "exceptional circumstances" were any fit men released from srvice.

The defence minister set forth the need for a well-trained defence army at home, noting there had been a "stand-to" on the east coast Christmas Day following an alarm, and one on the Pacific coast later.

Canada proposed to keep the army headquarters overseas as a Canadian organization "to add to your contribution to victory and provide the world with further demonstration that Canada is all-out in her war effort," Col. Ralston said.

In other parts of a general statement on the army, made in connection with the $3,600,000,000 war appropriation bill, Col. Ralston said that:

1. Two divisions, a corps headquarters and some army tropos comprise the Canadian force in Italy;
2. The force in England consists of the army headquarters, a corps headquarters and three divisions;
3. The army headquarters will be maintained and British or other allied troops may serve under it when the time comes for action;
4. Canadian casualties in Sicily and Italy up to Jan. 8 totalled 1,354 dead, 299 missing, 86 prisoners and 4,665 wounded.

One Corps in Britain.

While only one Canadian Corps remained in the United Kingdom, those in authority were "extremely glad' to have the army headquarters there, along with army troops, so they "may direct and administer and support the Canadian Corps along with other formations of British or other Allied troops which may be put into the same army organization". The other "self-contained" Canadian Corps was in Italy.

When Col. Ralston had finished his recital of events prior to granting of leave of absence to Gen. McNaughton who now is in Canada, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, said he intended to ask whether any other factors, apart from those of ill-health, entered into the "resignation" of Gen. McNaughton.

"I shall deal with that", said Col. Ralston.

It is expected the Defence Minister will answer questions as the debate continues next week.

Read Doctor's Reports.

Opening his discussion of Gen. McNaughton's physical condition, Col. Ralston read a report of two army doctors, dated last Dec. 11, that Gen. McNaughton still showed "definite signs of exhaustion" which had been noted on Nov. 26 at a previous examination.

The doctors recommeded he be relieved of military responsibility for three months.

Col. Ralston said the medical examinations were not suggested by the Canadian Government as far as he knew.

In a note dated Dec. 7, Gen. McNaughton, writing to Maj.-Gen. Price Montague, senior staff officer at Canadian military headquarters overseas, said his experience of the previous few days had shown his health was not good enough to permit him to perform his duties as commander properly.

Asked to Be Shown Message.

The General said he believed someone else should take charge and that he "must and will" accept the situation with the best grace he could muster. He asked that Col. Ralston be shown the message.

Col. Ralston said he was in Italy at the time. He had set about making arrangements which resulted in Lt.-Gen. Kenneth Stuart, chief of Staff, assuming temporary command overseas in place of Gen. McNaughton.

Gen. McNaughton now was on leave and his only task was to endeavor to get well, Col. Ralston said. The House and country wished him speedy recovery and many years of usefulness in the service of Canada.

There had been rumors and "so-called 'inside' and 'off-the-record' reports" about Gen. McNaughton's leave.

"If you ask me whether Gen. McNaughton's leave.

"If you ask me whether Gen. McNaughton and the government were always in absolute agreement in everything, I would undoubtedly answer 'No'," the Minister continued.

Man of Strong Character.

"Gen. McNaughton is a man of strong character and strong opinions. He is no 'yes-man.' . . . That there should be at times divergence of views between the military and the government is inevitable. But I can say that those differences of opinion have not interfered in any way with the loyal carrying out of plans when a decision has been reached.

"I can say, too, that those differences of opinion have never altered in any way the high regard in which the government hold Gen. McNaughton, both as a man and a soldier".

Col. Ralston said three brigade groups were retained in Canada. They were needed because certain scales of attack still were a possibility.

After the "stand-by orders given recently following alarms on both coasts, Col. Ralston said, he could imagine the condemnation there would have been had there been nobody to stand at the alert.

"We have a training brigade in the east and we have a few infantry battalions", he said.

"We have troops in Labrador, Newfoundland, in the Caribbean and in the West Indies, all of which are included in the strength of Canadian troops in Canada. . .

Good Insurance is Claim.

"I think we have rather a tidy situation . . . We are still at war and we do not know what the future may hold. I think that it is good insurance to have these troops trained for whatever role they may be called upon to fill."

A reduction of 3,000 had been made in troops on non-operational service in Canada, but the essential services of ordnance, army service, medical corps, provost corps and the like had to be continued and great reductions in the number were difficult.

"I believe that Canadians will feel that Canada is hitting on all six cylinders with a self-contained corps in Italy with autonomy and self-dependence equivalent to the Canadian corps in the last war," said Col. Ralston.

Mr. Ilsley said army services would require $1,535,000,000 in 1944-45 against $1,764,000,000 in 1943-44, air services $1,090,000,000 against 1,129,000,000, and naval services $410,000,000 against $489,000,000 in addition to these were the estimates for the Munitions Department — $163,000,000 against $166,300,000 — and for the war appropriations of other departments.

Mr. Ilsley said the estimates represented the completion or near-completion of the construction program of the three armed services.

Bickell Refused Labor Director On the Board

Ottawa, Feb. 12 (CP).—An exchange of correspondence preceding the resignation of J. P. Bickell and his board of directors of Victory Aircraft, a crown company, over a government request for inclusion of a labor director was tabled in the commons Friday by Munitions Minister Howe.

A new board of directors under president V. W. Scully and including a labor director, has since taken over.

In another return Mr. Howe described Victory Aircraft production as "satisfactory" after Mr. Bickell became president.

In a letter dated Sept. 29, 1943 Mr. Howe asked Mr. Bickell to consider the appointment of a labor representative on Victory Aircraft board of directors in accordance with crown-company policy.

Replying Oct. 21, Mr. Bickell said he had accepted his job on the understanding he choose his own directorate and concluded that "therefore we should make way for others" who would carry out the government policy on this regard.

Answering Mr. Bickell on Oct. 30 Mr. Howe Wrote:

"When you accepted your present responsibilities I pointed out to you that it is government policy to have a representative of labor on the boards of crown companies. At the time you objected to this practice and I did not press the matter.

"Since then I have found it necessary to insist that government policy in this regard be followed."

The minister added that if Mr. Bickell could not accept this policy he would have to accept his resignation.

In a further letter, dated Nov. 15, Mr. Bickell said Mr. Howe had promised that he (Bickell) could have a free hand in appointing his own board of directors. He said this "understanding has been disregarded" and asked that his resignation be accepted."

Lektron Concrete Ship Can Go to Europe in 48 Hours

Torpedo-Shaped Submarine Ship, Travelling 70 Per Cent Submerged at Fast Speed is Believed to Have Possibilities for Cargo and Passengers

(By Capt. Chas. Borden, Condensed from "Mechanix Illustrated," New York.

There is a buzz of exciment among naval experts and representatives of the press, as Lektron, the torpedo-shaped submarine ship which travels 70 per cent submerged, knifes smoothly through the waters of San Francisco Bay at a spectacular rate of speed.

"It's incredible," an excited maritime official exclaims to a naval officer as they crouch forward in the semi-conning tower of the strange new ship of the future.

Half submarine looking somewhat like a new Churchill cigar, Lektron is the forerunner of a fleet of 400-foot, cylinder-like freighters designed to travel at a speed up to 80 knots. Built almost entirely of a secret, resilient aggregate and wire mesh, this concrete fantasy weighs but 22,000 pounds, is 124 feet long with a 7-foot beam. Costing over $80,000, it travels nearly three-fourths submerged when fully loaded, has a 5,000-mile cruising radius and space aboard for 55 tons of cargo.

Hal Hayes, the designer and builder, is a modest, likeable young fellow of thirty-one. Having built more concrete homes than any other builder in the world, and employing revolutionary concrete methods, he is known to builders throughout the United States and in foreign countries as the "Ford of the building industry." Sweeping aside the cobwebs of shipbuilding, Mr. Hayes, after twelve years' experience in experimenting with concrete in ship construction, worked out a design dispelling the general notion that a concrete ship must be slow and cumbersome. The result is Lektron, the nearest thing to a perfect streamline ever achieved in a sea-going surface vessel.

• •

Lektron can be adapted for use as a freighter, tanker or troop transport. Hayes is making plans for a fleet of 10,000 ton concrete semi-subs to be used for these purposes.

Have you ever tried to bend, bounce or stretch a piece of hard cement? Just try to imagine a block of cement that can be cut in two with a common saw! Picture a cement slap almost as light as wood and so flexible you can bend it into a complete circle as if it were rubber!

Seems inconceivable, doesn't it? But that's exactly what inventor Hayes can do with his rubber concrete. He has in fact, even used it in a set of truck tires, with fine results.

Although but one and one-fourth inches thick, the hull of Lektron has as much strength and is tougher than the four inch hull of cement generally used in ship construction. Pumice from the Mojave Desert makes Hayes' concrete 50 per cent lighter than ordinary cement.

In an official examination by the Maritime Commission before it was launched, Lektron was subjected to the severest test that can be given a ship. It was blocked up on the extreme tip of each end, leaving no support whatsoever in the centre.

• •

One official openly admitted he expected to see it break in two, but hull centre didn't sag a fraction of an inch. Finally 11,500 additional pounds (over one-half its own weight) was placed in the centre of the vessel and it sagged but one-sixteenth of an inch and showed absolutely no checks or cracks. No Liberty ship being built today could hold its weight without sagging if similarly tested. And, where a steel Liberty ship requires countless seams and girders to give its hull strength and to prevent its plates from buckling, Lektron's amazing strength is wholly in the concrete hull; it has no bracings, beams or hull supports.

Hayes stands ready to prove to the government that he can build concrete ships similar but stronger than the C-2 Libertys, taking but twelve days per ship and 30 per cent of the cost. He'll use mostly unskilled labor and only one-tenth the metal required in a Liberty ship. Much stronger than the Libertys, by eliminating building stress, they would travel twice as fast, carry twice as much cargo, and, built in three sections, would stay afloat even if two sections were destroyed. Having no seams or rivet holes, they would be practically leakproof. (A concrete ship still in service on the Pacific coast has not once in twenty-two years of coastal sailing found it necessary to use a bilge pump.) And, although a steel ship would buckle and sink, if afire, the new concrete ship is absolutely fireproof.

• •

The unusual feature of the futuristic Lektron and one of the prime factors giving it such great swiftness is the twenty-seven per cent reduced skin friction of the entire hull.

A steel Liberty or Victory ship not only has countless obstructions to wind and sea above the waterline, but full speed below the waterline, many things, including the steel plate edges, cause a high resistance and loss of speed.

Requiring no keep, because of inherent stability, Lektron cuts wind and water resistance to a degree never before reached on a sea-going cargo vessel and reduces overall sea movement to an absolute metacentre, prevent rolling and her length and low displacement prevent toss and dip.

"A hurricane would have no more effect on her than on a healthy fish," Mr. Hayes explains, "for inherent stability makes her impossible to capsize and streamlining gives her the sea-riding qualities of a large Dolphin."

• •

The Axis would have little chance to spot and no chance at all to stop a fleet of these vessels racing through the darkness at 80 knots.

To Hayes the Lektron designs is more than a vital war weapon. He thinks it will be the most important contribution in its field to the postwar "world you never knew."

Here is his idea of the twentieth century ocean liner:

"By applying discoveries made in the development of Lektron and a new process that greatly reduces friction between the hull and the water to a new ship design we can build a concrete transport, using the same horsepower, that could carry as many passengers as the Queen Mary across the Atlantic, at eighty knots per hour. The crossing from New York to Liverpool could be made in forty-two hours. It could be built with one-third the money, one-tenth the material and labor that went into the Queen Mary. Because of its greater speed, it could make twice the number of trips and carry twice the number of passengers per week.

• •

"After the war, these ships could be used as fast super-liners with luxurious promenades, dance floors, salons and swimming pools. They could more than hold their own against the air liner because of their greater comfort, luxury and safety and their ability to go, regardless of weather.

"We aim to concentrate at present," Mr. Hayes says, "on building ships that can evade the enemy and deliver the largest amount of cargo the greatest distance in the shortest space of time."

Lektron can do it now.

This Airwoman Serves At Sea

PL 23679 Life on the rolling wave is hardly what a girl expects when she joins the R.C.A.F., but Leading Airwoman Beryl Trewhitt of Yama, B.C., has a sea-going career in the Women's Division. She left the W.D. Precision Squadron for an equipment course at St. Thomas, Ont., and was posted to the Pacific Coast where her job is "loose equipment" check in big amphibious aircraft floating at sea. On the job, she wears the blue slacks and parka of airwomen's "protective clothing," and tops the ensemble with an orange "Mae West" life preserver—just in case. So far it has been an unnecessary precaution, for which she thanks her tree-climbing experiences gained picking apples in the Okanagan. The sure-footedness she acquired then is a big help stepping from dinghy to aircraft when the waves run high. On rough days her work calls for sea-worthiness, and Beryl reports with pride that she seems to be a good sailor.—RCAP Photo.

Reoccupy Town Of Taung Bazaar Taken by Japs

New Delhi, Feb. 11. (CP)—Allied forces in Burma have smashed into enemy positions and reoccupied the town of Taung Bazaar, which Japanese forces took in a surprise attack last Friday, a communique from the headquarters of Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten announced today.

Taung Bazaar is about 15 miles north of Maungdaw and about 65 miles north of Akyab.

In the Kaladan area of the Arakan front the Japanese have been forced out of some of their advanced positions, the communique reported. It is in this section of Western Burma that the enemy has been attempting to cut British supply routes.

Japs Attack Pass.

Japanese forces had been attacking Ngakyedauk Pass leading to the coast of the Bay of Bengal. Capture of this artery would place the enemy athwart the highway supplying British troops fighting in the Maungdaw-Buthedaung area.

Admiral Mountbatten's war bulletin reported that Allied troops had repulsed many Japanese attacks over a wide area of the Burma front and disclosed that R.A.F. heavy bombers had raided Bangkok, capital of Thailand, last night. Details of the raid were not reported.

Japan, meanwhile, expressed fears that a large Allied offensive was being prepared.

---

The Melbourne radio in a broadcast recorded by United States government Monitors Service said that "Allied troops have repulsed the greatest Japanese attack in the Arakan area of Burma".

"The Japanese have been driven beyond the Mayu Ridge", the broadcast said. "Allied troops are now massing for a counter-attack".

About Britain's Sub-Tropical Channel Islands, Now Held by Hitler

(By Hyacinthe Ringrose, in The New York Sun)

For the first time in many centuries British Normandy, where the King of England is officially his Majesty the Duke of Normandy, is occupied by a foreign invader. The army of the latest would-be world conqueror, Adolf Hitler, is in occupancy of this usual haven of peace and beauty.

The lovely archipelago of flowery habitations and balmy breezes comprising the six islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, Herm and Jethou is situated in the English Channel between Southampton, England, and St. Malo, France.

Known to us as the Channel Islands, and to the French as Les Isles Normandes, they are peopled by the last survivors of the imperial race of Normans. These gentle descendants of Vikings, knights and troubadours are bilingual, speaking the Norman French of long ago and the English of today.

Enchanting as the classic isles of Greece, Les Isles Normandes produce in great profusion the old-fashioned flowers of England and France; but nowhere else on earth can be seen such roses, lilies, asphodel, geraniums, fuchsias, begonias, violets, hollyhocks and lavender.

Geraniums and fuchsias grow tree high and the flora of this sub-tropical region have the vividness of color found usually only in the tropics.

In all seasons during years of peace flowers grown in the Channel Islands are found in abundance in the great market of Covent Garden, London, whose very name shows it wos originally a convent garden. The first vegetables of springtime and the last of autumn, especially potatoes, tomatoes, celery and lettuce, go to London and Paris from Jersey and Guernsey.

The natives of these Islands are subjects of the British Empire today not because they were ever conquered by the British, but because Guillaume le Conquerant, Duke of Normandy, defeated the English King Harold at the Battle of Hastings, in 1066, and thus became the first of the Norman Kings of England. The Norman Conquest explains why for so many centuries and down to the reign of Edward VII. the kings and queens of England signed themselves as "By the Grace of God", rulers of Great Britain, Ireland and France.

Until the Germans took over the Channel Islands in 1941, to the horror of the natives who have been for nearly nine centuries among the most loyal subjects of the British Crown, Americans knew little more of British Normandy than that Jersey and Guernsey and Alderney produced three famous breeds of cattle, named respectively after these islands.

Lovers of the theatre long past their maturity will recall that St. Helier, the capital city of Jersey, was the birthplace of the famous beauty of the Victorian stage, namely, Lily Langtry, the "Jersey Lily," who once built a residence in English style on 23rd. Street, near Ninth Avenue, New York city. Mrs. Langtry may not have been the most talented actress of the period, but her superb beauty as Rosalind in "As You Like It", and as Viola in "Twelfth Night" caught even the eye of royalty; and she was heartily applauded by the then Prince of Wales, who was Queen Victoria's son.

Mrs. Langtry was born with the surname of Le Breton; her father was rector of a church in St. Hellier and Dean of Jersey.

Observing Lady de Bathe's deep regard for her Jersey home, I once ventured to ask why she preferred Monte Carlo as a place of retirement. She replied: "I revere my birthplace; but when a person passes 70, as Dante and Tennyson both wrote, 'a sorrow's crown of sorrows in remembering happier things.' I could not be content to live in Jersey any more."

But the Channel Islands have been sanctuaries for many world citizens. Victor Hugo, Auguste Vacquerie, Madame de Girardin, General Georges Boulanger are among the most notable. After his expulsion from Jersey in 1858, Victor Hugo went to Peter Port, Guernsey, and purchased Hauteville House. This eyrie was the homeless eagle's nest for fifteen years; and here he wrote his best poetry and romances, including "Les Miserables."

The natives of the Channel Islands were converted to Christianity in the sixth century by missionaries from Ireland, Cornwall, Wales, who must have been brave Soldiers of the Cross to trust themselves to the tempests of the Channel in the frail boats of that period.

The Church of England is by law established in the islands; but the majority of the inhabitans are of the Roman Catholic faith.

One sees in the principal churches affiliated with Vatican that picturesque official resplendent in three-cornered hat, embroidered coat and knee breeches, white stockings and chain of office called a Suisse. His functions are to keep order, lead processions and escort the priest who collects from the congregation money for church expenses.

In the fifteenth century the islands were divided into two local governments, Jersey as one, and Guernsey, with the lesser islands of Sark, Herm and Jethou as the other. Each of these governments has a bailiff, who is also its chief justiciary. In 1923 it was my privilege to attend a session of the Royal Court of Jersey, held in St. Helier, as the guest of Sir William Vernon, then Bailiff of Jersey.

A curious and ancient custom practised in all the Channel Islands is known as the Clameur de Haro. Any native who believes that his personal or property rights are about to be infringed by another may raise the clameur, or clamor, by going with two witnesses to the prospective wrongdoer and crying: "Haro! Haro! a l'aide mon Prince! On me fait tort! (To my aid, my Prince! He is doing me a wrong!)" Then the person making the clameur says the Lord's Prayer in French. This proceeding has the legal effect of an injunction, which continues until the cause is judicially determined.

In former times the Normans were famous as voyageurs and conquerors; but for the past two centuries very few Channel Islanders have settled in, or even visited, foreign lands.

They are still of a race unexcelled among the world's noble hearted; of a blood fearless and unconquerable. They have a history of which they are proud without becoming insolent in their just pride of it. No more do they invade distant lands, and attempt to subjugate other peoples. Today they accept the opinion of Lord Tennyson, who was himself of the Norman strain on his mother's side:

"Kind hearts are more than coronets,
And simple faith than Norman blood."

MR. AND MRS. JACK MINER

On June 3rd last year His Majesty King George VI conferred upon Jack Miner, the Canadian Naturalist, The Order of the British Empire (O.B.E.), one of the highest honors the King can bestow upon a Canadian. It is doubtful if His Majesty ever conferred a degree on any Canadian which has been so unanimously acclaimed and praised by the public as this honor bestowed upon Jack Miner, who "Eddie" Guest, the Detroit poet terms "The best loved Christian in America," all of which came about by his love for children, birds, animals, music and his fellow men. Photo shows Mrs. Jack Miner in their home at their bird sanctuary with her husband, as she admires the O.B.E. insignia on her world-famous husband's breast.

REDS THREATEN GATEWAY TO LATVIA, LITHUANIA

Pskov Is Feeling Pressure of Two Russian Armies

Capture of City Will Cut Off a Great Number of Germans In Northern Sector

LUGA IS TAKEN

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Feb. 14 —(AP)— Pskov, gateway to Latvia and Lithuania, felt the pressure of two Russian armies today—one driving southward from the lower end of Lake Pelpus toward Pskov Lake and the other southward down the Leningrad highway and railway, a portion of which is in Soviet hands south of captured Luga.

An important railway and highway junction point, Pskov also is of historical interest as it was here at a railway station that Czar Nicholas II abdicated in 1917.

Six trunk railways and four main highways run in and out of Pskov. The Russians are 40 miles away at the closest point. Should they be able to reach the city, great numbers of Germans will be cut off from retreat from the Lake Ilmen-Staraya Russa sector.

Possession of Pskov would give the Russians an extremely advantageous position from which to launch operations to clear the Germans from the Baltic republics.

Estonia can be virtually cut off from Germany by a drive westward from Pskov. It is 85 miles from Pskov to Valk Junction, which controls every highway and railroad into Estonia and then it is just 90 more miles to Riga, Latvia.

It is expected that an all-out battle for Pskov should prove one of the war's most important.

Germans Mining Highway.

A dispatch to Pravda said the Germans are mining the Pskov-Luga highway and blowing up bridges.

This highway probably will be the scene of many battles as the Russians drive on Pskov, for the Germans are fortifying every village. But the Nazi command still is unable to stem the outflanking sweeps of ski-men and this probably is the way the victory will be won.

The 80 miles between Luga and Pskov are spotted with scores of villages. The railway parallels the highway about ten miles to the west. The immediate objective on this flank appeared the highway junction of Keoflava Pustin, midway between.

Guerillas greatly aided the Red Army in the Sunday capture of Luga. Pravda reported they severed the Lugo-Pskov Highway and railway Feb. 8 and Feb. 9 and blew up several trainloads of reserves moved up from Pskov.

Luga fell from an attack on the Germans' left flank by Gen. Khazov's troops, assisted by guerillas.

A dispatch from the front said the guerillas alone killed more than 1,000 Germans west and east of Luga and captured a supply column.

A big tank battle neared its climax northwest of Zvenigorodka as the weather improved and Soviet Stormovik planes went into action against Nazi armor trying to break through to relieve the weakening remnants of ten encircled divisions.

Nazi defences around Korsun, centre of this trip, were reported crumbling with the Russians closing in steadily on three sides.

MAYOR OF TREGLIO LIVED IN CANADA

Couldn't Get Passport When He Wanted to Return to Dominion

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(CP War Correspondent.)

Treglio, Italy, Feb. 14. —(CP)— This battlefront town, hidden away at the end of a muddy road, has a Mayor Joe Olivastri, a plump little farmer who speaks Italian with a Canadian accent.

Joe is unhappy. Treglio is his home and his birthplace but his heart is in Canada, in Montreal and in the Ontario towns of Peterborough, Midland, Orillia and South River, where he drove horses and operated a stationary crane for 28 years.

"Italy, she's a helluva place", he confided, "and she's going to be a helluva lot worse. I wish Doctor Harvey had sent my wife to Southern California".

Joe went to Canada in 1904 and returned to Italy in 1932 on the advice, he said, of Dr. Albert Harvey of Orillia. His wife was sick and the doctor believed the Italian climate might make her better.

Officialdom Blocks Return.

Though he brought his five Canadian-born daughters back with him, Joe never intended to stay here. He didn't count, however, on Italian officialdom and when he tried to return he could not get a passport.

So he settled down to farm the 70 acres of land his father left him, married off his daughters to local Italian men and prepared to lead a peaceful rural life.

"Then what do you think happen," he asked. "They make me the mayor".

That was in August, 1936, and Joe has held the job since.

We asked Joe about his own political beliefs.

"Just a same as the rest of them", he said. "I'm a Liberal. I always vote for the Liberals in Ontario".

MURDER PROBED BY SCOTLAND YARD

Girl's Outcries May Have Been Drowned Out by Barrage During Raid on London

London, Feb. 14—(CP)—Scotland Yard was given a new air raid murder mystery to solve today with discovery of the partly-disrobed body of Iris Deeley, 21-year-old member of the W.A.A.F. beneath an R.A.F. greatcoat in a victory garden plot in Eltham, Southeast London.

The girl had been strangled. A soldier's glove was found nearby.

The body was discovered near a footpath frequented by service men and women, and police believed the girl's outcries may have been drowned out by the noise of the barrage during last night's air raid.

GERMAN FIGHTER BASE IN HOLLAND HEAVILY POUNDED

Nazi Night Raiders Scatter Incendiaries Over London in Broad Attack

SIX SHOT DOWN

By E. B. SULLIVAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 14 (AP) — American fighter-bombers pounded the German fighter base at Gilze-Rijen in Holland today without loss, after German night raiders had scattered incendiaries over London in an attack touted by Berlin as made by "several hundred planes."

The Nazi planes dived low under a heavy barrage to lay incendiary bombs on parts of London.

The Berlin radio, seeking to salve the bomb-buffeted German homefront, asserted London was sowed with large fires in "another concentrated attack" on the centre of the capital.

London crowds milling along the blackened walks and streets in the usual after-theatre throngs watched the aerial fireworks, mostly well off into the suburban areas, and found the attack in no greater force than last month when the enemy sent some 80 bombers against London and parts of southeast England.

Fell in Coastal Area

Most of the bombs fell in the coastal area, causing casualties and damage.

British authorities estimated the total raiding force at 50 to 60 planes, of which some 15 reached London. Six were shot down, five over England and one after returning to France.

Fighters escorted the fighter-bombers striking into Holland in the 15th. operation of the strategic air force in 18 days. No enemy planes were met.

The daylight raid followed a heavy attack Sunday by R.A.F. and U.S. formations on the invasion coast of Northern France, in continuation of a two-months' offensive against Nazi installations there.

Escorted by swarms of fighters, heavy and medium bombers battered mystery targets in the area which Allied bombers now have hit on 41 days of the last 55.

The Vichy radio said Allied planes bombed several localities in the area of Rouen during the afternoon and reported 50 persons were buried in debris from one "very violent attack."

The blows against the invasion coast followed similar attacks Saturday.

British bomber formations hit undisclosed targets Saturday night in two widely separated areas — Southern France and Western Germany.

Thousands of Incendiaries

The German air force struck the London area with thousands of incendiaries last night, burning out two churches, a school and many houses in a thickly populated residential district. A bomb that hit a cottage in southeast England wiped out an entire family — father, mother and three children.

U.S. Bombers Cut Heart Out of Fighter Plane Production of Germany

Washington, Feb. 14 — (AP)— American big bombers pinpointing German aircraft factories have cut the heart out of fighter plane production in the Reich, it was reported officially today.

Charles E. Ellson, executive vice-chairman of the United States War Production Board announced that the war department had informed him that United States Army Air Forces raids had reduced Germany's capacity to produce fighter planes by 40 per cent.

Wilson's disclosure came in a statement declaring that as Axis production was knocked out U. S. aircraft production was just getting into full stride.

Will Drive To Set-Up Land, Air Forces On China Mainland

Chungking, Feb. 14 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stillwell has pledged the American central Pacific drive to establish land and air forces on the Chinese mainland will be supported by an aggressive land and air offensive from the interior.

The Commander-in-Chief of United States forces in China, India and Burma, who now is in the Ledo sector of northern Burma, said in a statement yesterday facilities are being prepared to accommodate the largest and newest cargo planes available, since "vital China-based air operations cannot wait for penetration of the blockade by land or sea."

Canadian Wheat Planted Within Sound of Fighting

Naples, Feb. 14 (AP)—Canadian wheat and British seed potatoes are being planted around Venafro within sound of 5th Army fighting the Allied military government announced today, in an effort to relieve Italy's food shortage.

Potatoes for a 2,000-ton crop were brought from Britain after fields were surveyed under fire, and the wheat was taken from storage in Naples. Spring planting of wheat is a small factor in the Italian supply, however, more than 90 per cent being normally fall sown.

Gen. Sir A. Smith Given High Post

London, Feb. 14—(CP)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Arthur F. Smith, commander of the London military district, has been named commander-in-chief of British forces in Persia and Iraq to succeed L.-Gen. Sir Henry Pownall, the War Office announced yesterday.

Gen. Pownall now is chief of staff to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied commander in southeast Asia.

The War Office also announced the appointment of Lt. Gen. Sir Kenneth A. N. Anderson, former commander of the British 1st Army in Tunisia, as chief of the eastern command in Britain, succeeding Lt.-Gen. J. A. H. Gammel.

Simultaneously Lt.-Gen. W. D. Morgan, former chief instructor at Woolwich, succeeded Lt.-Gen. Sir Henry C. Loyd as chief of the southern command in Britain. Gen. Loyd succeeded Gen. Smith as commander of the London district.

Pigeon on Nest Gets Room Service of Hotel

New York, Feb. 14 —(AP)— The pigeon which refused to leave an egg in her nest throughout Friday's snowstorm and then abandoned the nest yesterday, returned to its vigil today.

The bird, stationed on a fifth storey ledge of a hotel (the Commodore), is receiving room service from the hotel—water and dry cereal twice daily. Originally there were two eggs in the nest. She hatched one Thursday, but the fledgling fell from the ledge.

Newsman Writes of Visit To Canuck Fighter Station

This is one of a series of articles being written by Vernon M. Kipp of The Journal, now touring Britain as a guest of the British Ministry of Information. Today Mr. Kipp tells of a visit to a Canadian fighter squadron.

By VERNON M. KIPP
(Special to Ottawa Journal and Ontario Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 1. —(By Air Mail.) —We were guests for the day of the Royal Canadian Air Force, and through the mid-morning drove in R.C.A.F. cars to a front line Canadian fighter station in Southeastern England. The road through London took us down famous streets and beside famous buildings — Buckingham Palace, Constitution Hill, the Abbey, the entrance to Downing Street, and then through miles of suburbs with many a boarded shop-front hiding the scars of war. One shop, doing business, bore in large letters on its green front the legend "Prime Horse Flesh". There was little motor traffic even in mid-London streets, and that mostly military.

We came at length to the gates of the air station, our guides produced the passes without which its portals are closed tightly. The fields were dotted with sleek, powerful Spitfires, well dispersed, and plain wooden buildings. No machines were in the air—an operation scheduled for the day was cancelled because of low clouds, so we saw the station in a state of preparedness but not of combat. The Spits, as their pilots call them, were ready; the pilots were ready; but it was not a day for another of those sweeps over the continent in which bombers need fighter protection or the fighters go out on deadly missions of their own.

We looked over one of the machines on which an armorer was working. He opened up one of the wings and showed us the deadly little guns, the magazines from which cartridges are fed automatically when the pilot pushes a button, the camera which goes into action by the same motion to preserve a record of what follows. The Spit is a ferocious weapon of assault, and many a German has crashed before the guns of these machines operated by Canadians of this particular station.

There is a thrill in seeing "Canada" on the shoulder of a fighting man when one is in another country, and all of us felt a great pride in these fine, gallant airmen—the boyish-looking pilots whose modesty conceals deeds of incredible valor, the older men—but not much older—who hold the administrative posts. There are two Canadian squadrons at this station, the Wolves and the Red Indians, commanded by Squadron Leader Robert F. Buckham, of Vancouver, B.C., whose dog Mike reaches to the shoulders of a tall man when he stands up. We were shown around the field, taken to an excellent lunch at the officers' mess, shown how and where pilots are briefed for their operations, but perhaps the most interesting spot of all was the dispersal hut, a shabby wooden building about 20 by 30 feet, where pilots, wait, constantly on duty, for the word that will send them into the air.

The Canadians had tried to make the room home-like. There were blue curtains, for which the pilots paid, on the windows. There were a couple of sofas, some easy chairs, a rack with a few books, a heating stove of the Quebec heater type, a table with a few magazines —Maclean's, of December 1, part of a Toronto Star Weekly of December 4, a few technical magazines, an old radio. On the ceiling was painted the insignia of Oshawa squadron, which used to occupy the same quarters.

We talked with some of the pilots waiting there in readiness—in case of an alarm, Spits would have been in the air within three minutes. They were eager, enthusiastic, confident, but they did suggest that their long hours of waiting could be relieved greatly if the people at home would give them a little more help. They want home-town newspapers, current magazines, playing cards, sets of poker chips. Checkers and dominoes were not so good, they said, because pieces become lost.

Leningrad Civilians Suffered 20,000 Casualties During Siege

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Leningrad, Feb. 14 (AP) — The man who ran Leningrad under siege, taking stock after the longest such trial any city ever underwent, estimates that the civilians suffered about 20,000 casualties from shelling and bombings.

Of these, he said, about 5,800 were killed and 15,000 wounded.

This surprisingly small number of casualties among the original pre-war population of 3,500,000 was due to the rapid evacuation which left no one except indispensable workers and to the strict military discipline among those who remained.

P. Popkov said Leningrad "remains a city on a military basis." Therefore, he would not disclose the present population. Foreign reports that as many as 2,000,000 died, however, "multiply the real figure many times," he said.

Popkov, 41, the chairman of the Leningrad city Soviet for mayor, told British and American correspondents the story of the siege of Leningrad at a reception Sunday in Smolyn Institute — the historic buildings from which the Bolsheviks directed the 1917 revolution and now the city hall of Leningrad.

Separated into Three Periods

He said the organization of the city was separated into three periods. First women, children and aged men were evacuated eastward and others engaged in building the fortifications of the Luga-Kingisepp-Shimsk line. They retreated with the Red army when the Germans broke through to the suburbs of Leningrad in September, 1941.

During the second stage, he said, the population worked on fortifications in the city and on the outskirts. Everyone aged 14 to 65 was engaged in fire-fighting while all those unnecessary for the maintenance of the city were evacuated in the winter of 1942.

Popkov said that during the third period the keeping up of the economy and industry of Leningrad was a grave military problem.

The worst hardship, he said, was the shelling which caused 80 per cent of Leningrad's casualties.

FINNS REPORTED HOLDING PEACE TALKS WITH REDS

Finnish Leaders In Stockholm Add Significance to the Many Rumors

HELSINKI ANXIOUS

By ROBERT STURDEVANT
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Feb. 14 —(AP)— An expectancy of some concrete development in Finnish-Russian relations, perhaps within the next two or three days, was evident here today despite the lack of any official indication that Finland actually was seeking a way out of the war.

From Helsinki came a report that the Finnish capital was awaiting momentarily some definite governmental step toward peace as the Social Democratic Party continued heavy pressure on the nation's leaders to seek terms.

Speculation that something may be afoot increased yesterday with the arrival here by plane of Leo Ehrenrooth, Finnish Minister of the Interior. He had been preceded to Stockholm by Juhu Paasikivi, who helped negotiate the peace treaty that ended the Finnish-Russian war of 1939-40, and Eljas Erkko, former Finnish Foreign Minister.

Ehrenrooth ostensibly, came here on a mission in connection with the evacuation to Sweden of Finnish children living in areas which might be subject to Russian bombing. As a cabinet member, however, he conceivably could play an important part in any peace talks.

There were indications, meanwhile that Finland probably was feeling her way cautiously for fear that any move to get out of the war might result in German reprisals. This was reflected in a dispatch from Helsinki quoting a Conservative member of the Finnish parliament as saying in an interview:

"We must see the situation only from the point of view of what is best for our country. No one here wants to share Italy's fate."

It is known there is considerable anxiety in Helsinki lest Finland become "another Italy," particularly in view of the feeling that the Germans might try to retain nickel and copper mines in northern Finland regardless of developments.

Helsinki advices reported a continuous round of government conferences was behind held in the Finnish capital, but these activities were surrounded with great secrecy and there was no hint of their nature.

Weather Is Keynote of Whole Plan In Opening Second Front in Europe

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Feb. 14 — (CP Cable)— Weather is the great hazard and most unpredictable factor in the forthcoming second front in Europe. Yet it is the keystone of the whole plan.

Invasion forces must have good weather for the initial assault. It must hold, too, for a week or more to enable the Allies to pack supplies into the bridgeheads for big battles and to maintain tremendous air support for the ground troops.

If the weather turns foul—and it is impossible to be absolutely certain ahead of time that it won't—it could precipitate disaster at the bridgeheads.

Storms and high seas coming at a critical time after the first landings could wreck every plan and the second front could fail due to weather alone. The force on the continent could be cut off from supplies. Cloudy weather could limit Allied air support. It could even defeat and a stalemate in Western Europe with the war dragging on.

The supreme Allied command is preparing for almost any eventuality and chances for success would be good before the invasion is undertaken but the Allied leaders cannot do much about guaranteeing the right sea, wind and cloud. Luck plays the big hand there.

Illustrated in Italy

The Anzio and Nettuno operation in Italy illustrates all too clearly how vagaries of the weather can influence combined operations. The landing there was carried out under perfect conditions of sea and wind but trouble came within a few days.

Low clouds closed down over the bridgehead from the Alban Hills to the sea and several critical periods prevented Allied planes giving all the aid they could to Allied troops on the ground.

As a statement from Prime Minister Churchill on Saturday pointed out, spells of bad weather interrupt from time to time delivery of supplies but this situation was saved by building up reserves during the fair-weather period.

Still, if the bad weather had continued the bridgehead might have gone. But in the last few days the weather turned brilliantly clear. This probably was a decisive factor in saving the bridgehead and it is reflected in the new Allied confidence that the battle of Rome will be won.

Ran into Storm at Sicily

Anzio wasn't the only combined operation which ran into bad weather. A storm the night of the Sicily invasion last July 9-10 which blew up as the Armada was off Malta nearly caused postponement but the commanders gambled on it calming down. By dawn of July 10 it did but it was tough going in the small invasion boats and if there had been stiff opposition there might have been a slaughter.

So the second-front planners now pray fervently for good weather they want at the time chosen for the invasion and put their faith in meteorological officers assigned to predict what it is going to be like. No weatherman ever had such an important job but even they say they cannot be 100 per cent right in this tricky European climate.

From now until Spring and Summer the weather is less erratic here but even then it is not easy to forecast.

HOSPITAL BOMBED

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 14 (AP) — Fighting of a see-saw character but of lessened intensity has marked the Allied perimeter at Anzio in the past 24 hours, Allied headquarters announced today after weathering a weekend crisis.

Regaining the initiative in part after the blanketing of Allied air support by bad weather had given German armored units an edge, British troops drove forward and recaptured a bottleneck bridge over the railway west of Carroceto (Aprilia), 10 miles north of Anzio, with the support of tanks.

Emphasizing the indeterminate nature of the battle, however, the Germans again occupied the factory half a mile east of Carroceto after days of fierce fighting in which the battered packing houses and silo-like structures of Mussolini's agricultural enterprise changed hands four times.

While the Allied air forces again struck the German ring about the bridgehead and other objectives with the fury of 800 sorties, American troops paid with blood for a 200-yard advance in Cassino, 60 miles to the east, battering down each German stronghold in a house-to-house struggle.

Monastery Still Intact

The Germans, too, still held the ancient towers and buildings of the Benedictine Monastery atop the hill west of Cassino.

Following Saturday's Allied announcement that the Pope's summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, just north of the Anzio bridgehead, was saturated with Germans and therefore was subject to bombing, the Allies stated that the Mount Cassino Monastery was being used by the Germans as a part of their fortifications as well as an observation post and that it might have to be taken by direct assault.

But there was no report here, contrary to Rome radio declarations that the Abbey had yet been bombarded.

The German communique claimed an Allied penetration to the centre of Cassino has been eliminated. Rome was bombed last night, it asserted.

An official announcement here said the Germans again had bombed an Allied transit hospital near Anzio Saturday night and caused casualties. Previously the Germans had bombed one hospital and shelled another, both marked with the Red Cross insignia.

Another announcement said the Britons and Americans had taken well over 2,000 German prisoners in the beachhead fighting since the landings on January 22.

Troops Bombed

Enemy vehicles and troop concentrations both at the beachhead and in the Cassino area were attacked yesterday by medium and light bombers. Fighters also maintained battle line patrols.

Medium bombers swung into the north of Italy meanwhile and blasted the Bucine Viaduct south of Florence.

Approximately 800 sorties were flown by the Allied planes yesterday while only about 30 enemy aircraft were active over the beachhead area. Four were destroyed and two Allied planes were lost.

An announcement said the Allies have captured more than 2,000 German prisoners since the first landings on the beachhead.

After Prime Minister Churchill announced Saturday that Allied commanders in the Italian campaign had assured him Rome would be won, there was a coincidental renewed surge of Allied initiative.

Allied forces in the fan-shaped beachhhead regained the initiative in part at least from powerful German forces pressing in upon them, it became known Sunday, and the Allies are striking offensive blows in a fierce see-saw struggle.

Repel Counter-Attack

The Allies, reinforced with fresh troops, hammered at the Germans near Carroceto (Aprilia) 10 miles due north of Anzio and repelled a tank-supported enemy counter-attack, headquarters announced.

Meantime the Allied command announced that it might be necessary to assault the Benedictine Monastery atop Mount Cassino, on the main 5th. Army front 50 miles southward, because the Germans had turned it into a fortress. There was no evidence last night, however, that British or American troops had attacked the massive structure dominating the Cassino battlefield.

The Nazi-controlled Rome radio claimed that "Allied artillery has begun an intense bombardment of the monastery."

A dispatch written at the Cassino battlefront at 6:45 p.m., Sunday, by Lynn Heinzerlin, Associated Press war correspondent, featured the declaration of three battle-weary infantrymen that "they ought to wipe that monastery off the hill,' 'to eliminate the German observers and gunners shielded by its walls.

Chases Nazi Aviator Almost to Rome, Watches Him Crash

Algiers, Feb. 14—(CP)—Warrant Officer W. Downer of Midland, Ont., destroyed a Messrschmitt fighter plane over the beachhead south of Rome yesterday, Allied headquarters announced today.

Downer, flying a Spitfire, encountered two of the German fighters north of the beachhead.

"I shot at one of them, hit him in the wing, and saw his cannon blow up," the airman said. "I chased him almost to Rome and watched him crash among trees."

SAFE STOLEN WITH $500 IN CASH

Toronto, Feb. 14 —(CP)— Police reported today theft of a safe containing $500 in cash from the Lake Shore Meat Market in nearby Long Branch.

M. C. BURGESS NAMED RETURNING OFFICER FOR SOUTH HASTINGS

Appointment of M. C. Burgess, Trent Road, as returning officer for the electoral riding of Hastings South has been officially announced through a recent edition of the Canada Gazette, in which two appointments for Hastings are made. The two appointees for Hastings are Mr. Burgess and H. W. Sabine of Marmora who is named as returning officer for Hastings-Peterborough.

Well-known in the Belleville district, Mr. Burgess is employed as an insurance agent. Experience gained through assisting the previous returning officer in handling election returns will be of great advantage to him in his new position. Appointment of a new returning officer for Hastings South was made necessary as the result of the death of Lt. Col. W. R. Riordon, who had acted in that capacity. W. Sabine is the publisher of the Marmora Herald.

MOTHER PRESENTS 'WING' TO HER SON

Among the graduates at Mountain View Air Gunnery School on Saturday, was Sergeant Joseph H. Chambers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Chambers, Toronto, and grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Chambers, Eldorado. Sgt. Chambers graduated as a wireless air gunner and the mother was present at the ceremony to present him with his wings. Mrs Chambers was formerly Jennie E. Brown of Eldorado. Miss Norma Ferguson, Toronto, was also among those present for the graduation. He enlisted in 1943 and served at Lachine, Quebec, I.T.S., and Service Training School at Brantford before coming to Mountain View.

CIGARETTE BELIEVED CAUSE OF BLAZE

A carelessly thrown cigarette, which landed in a garbage collection basket in the side entrance of the Y.M.C.A. is believed responsible for a small blaze, which sent the local fire department on a hurry up call at 2.30 Monday morning. The blaze was discovered by Mr. Albert Harvey, night caretaker at the "Y", who learned of the blaze a short time after it had commenced.

Firemen reported but little difficulty in subduing the fire it being necessary to use only two or three cans of water to extinguish the blaze. Damage was held to a minimum, the fire blackening the walls of the vestibule and breaking through the ceiling in one small place.

Roomers at the "Y" use the side entrance to gain entrance to the building after regular closing hours, when the front entrance is secured for the night. It is thought that some one coming in late carelessly dropped a cigarette butt, which landed in the garbage basket, the fire gaining a start before being noticed.

MONGREL DOG TAKEN TO POUND

A yellow, long haired mongrel dog was taken to the police station on Saturday after being found wandering at large. The dog wore a collar, but no dog licence tag to indicate ownership. It was later turned over to Constable Thos. Thorne, custodian of the city dog pound and will be destroyed tomorrow unless otherwise claimed.

SEVERAL CHARGED WITH DRUNKENNESS

Several inebriates were taken into the custody of the law on Saturday night, the majority being as the result of disturbances reported to the police department. One was a woman who was disturbing the tranquility of the community in the north end of the city. An airman broke two water glasses in a downtown restaurant and after sobering up at the police station was turned over to the service police. After causing a disturbance at the Aajmaa Club a sailor lad was held when police apprehended him in an intoxicated condition. Civilians, including the woman, found under the influence will be charged with intoxication in a subsequent court.

Small Boy Dies After Fall From Top of Box Car

Falling from the top of a box car in the Belleville C.N.R. yards late Sunday afternoon, five-year-old Harry Way, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Way, 181 College St., died in the Belleville General Hospital early today as the result of a fractured skull. A preliminary inquest opened at the hospital today and following identification by the father the body was released for burial. An autopsy has been ordered.

The lad had attended Sunday School and later accompanied by his two brothers, John, 10, and Billie, 13, and a boy by the name of Royle, the lads proceeded to the east end of College St., where they were playing among some box cars on a C.N.R. siding. In some manner Harry slipped and fell from the top of one car apparently striking his head on either a rail or tie. He was unconscious when picked up by his companions, who had to carry the injured boy all the way home.

Efforts to get a physician proved futile and an hour later police were notified. P. C. Rathwell answered the call and immediately drove the boy, who was still unconscious, to the hospital where he was attended by Dr. F. R. Ross. He never regained consciousness and did some seven hours later.

A preliminary inquest was held before Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at the hospital at noon today with Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson conducting the investigation. The father of the lad identified the boy and the matter was adjourned. The jury impanelled by Constable Thomas Thorne included Alex Pigden, Joseph Walsh, Morley Mitts, George Wallbridge and Art Wilkinson.

The late Harry Way was born in Belleville a little over five years ago, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Herbert Way, 181 College St. Besides his parents two brothers and four sisters survive, they are William and John, Marion, Anna, Georgia and Marjorie. The body is resting at Martin's Funeral Home.

R.C.A.F. Catholic Chapel at Mt. View Dedicated

The first R.C.A.F. Chapel in No. 1 Training Command was dedicated at Mountain View on Sunday morning at eleven o'clock by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, M.C., Vicar Capitular of the Archdiocese of Kingston in the absence of the Army Bishop, the Most Rev. Leo. Nelligan.

The Chapel was filled to capacity by the air force congregation. Also assisting were Wing Commander Rev. J. E. Cahill, Command Chaplain, Wing Commander Rev. J. Ellis, Staff Chaplain, R.A.F. The celebrant of the High Mass was the station Chaplain, Flt.-Lt. G. Mulligan and the singing was by St. Michael's Junior Choir under the direction of Rev. Sister M. Canise.

In his sermon, Monsignor Nicholson spoke upon the importance and efficacy of the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in Catholic worship, and referred to incidents in the First Great war in which he served as Chaplain with the Canadian forces overseas.

Bancroft and District

Bancroft—Mr. F. J. Follis, who has been an employee of the Department of Highways office at Bancroft for the past ten years in the capacity of chief clerk, has been transferred to the offices of the Department of Highways at Huntsville. Mr. Follis moved his family from Bancroft on Tuesday of last week. Mr. Follis' absence will be greatly felt among the local residents as he played a prominent part in the interests of the village, having acted as president of the Red Cross Society at Bancroft for two years, and also took a keen interest in sports, acting as referee for most of the hockey games staged here. He recently was installed as Worshipful Master of Bancroft Lodge, A.F. & A.M. No. 482. Mrs. Follis was also an active worker in the Women's Auxiliary of the Red Cross, acting as secretary and was also an officer in Bancroft Chapter, O.E.S., No. 157.

Mr. McLean, formerly employed with the Department of Highways at North Bay has been transferred to Bancroft division of the highways, filling the position recently vacated by Mr. F. J. Follis.

Miss Rhona Price, who recently returned from Niagara Falls where she has been employed to undergo an operation in the local Red Cross Hospital at Bancroft for appendicitis, is progressing fine.

Rev. Robert McLaughlin, accompanied by Mrs. McLaughlin, Mrs. S. W. Palmateer and Mrs. James Vance attended the united presbytery meeting held in Belleville on Tuesday last at the Tabernacle United Church.

Mr. James Linn of Huntsville, was a business visitor in Bancroft last week.

Mr. M. McLean of Belleville and Mr. Hill, both of the Imperial Oil were in town last week on business.

Mr. F. Wiggins of Canada Packers, Toronto, was in Bancroft last week on business, visiting the local branch of Canada Packers, now situated at Bancroft.

LAUNCH NEW DRIVES

London, Feb. 14 — (CP) — The Germans have launched a new offensive against the Partisans in Yugoslavia and have taken some small towns, but are suffering heavy losses in the continuing battle, headquarters of Partisan Marshal Josip Broz (Tito) reported last night in a broadcast.

The weekend response to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" FUND was most gratifying when thirty-one individuals and companies donated $483 toward the equipping of the "BELLEVILLE." The committee in charge of raising the full amount of $3,500 announced that a list of the equipment and articles to be furnished the ship will be released at an early date. The list must be approved by the Naval Department beforehand and this is being done.

On Monday, February 7th, the name of Mrs. J. W. Barlow was listed among the contributors as having donated $10 to the fund. It was learned today that this was in error, that the credit should have gone to the Ladies' Auxiliary, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, of which Mrs. Barlow is a member. The correction has been made and Mrs. Barlow has contributed personally to the fund. Today's list of contributors is as follows:

Fire in Bywater Block Threatened Whole Building

Trenton — (Special) — Trenton firemen have been called upon to answer many calls within the past few weeks but none threatened to be more dangerous than the one which broke out Friday night in the Bywater Block over Shaw's Gift Shop. Firemen arrived within seconds after the call was made but even then it appeared the whole block, which is in the downtown section on Dundas Street near the west end of the bridge, was threatened with disaster.

The blaze started in rooms sublet by Mr. W. F. Spicer to Miss A. Hewton and another young woman. The girls had apparently gone out, as had the Spicers, and their stove became overheated causing the fire to start in the wall and floor of the room. By the time Fire Engineer Jesse Baker arrived on the scene the blaze had burned through the floor and was spreading down into the store below occupied by Miss O. Shaw. Heavy pressure from the hose was quickly brought to play on the area of the floor of the apartment and ceiling of the store while with smoke mask Engineer Baker made his way into the apartment above. So dense was the smoke that the room was completely void of oxygen and after just a few minutes the cannister of his smoke mask became so hot that he was unable to breathe through it and he was forced to return below. By this time, however, he had satisfied himself that there were no occupants in the apartment.

With a steady flow of water the fire was soon extinguished but considerable damage was done both to the store and to the apartment above. In looking over the situation on Saturday. Fire Chief Filion expressed the opinion that if the smoke had not been noticed at the exact moment it was by an airman who lives in an end apartment of the same block, in all probability all the seven or more families in the building would have been burned out as well as the stores below, including the office of the Robert Simpson Co.

Here is a concrete proof that Trenton has grown into a community where at least two full time firemen should be on hand at all times. Other towns its size are quoted as having one permanent fireman for every thousand of a population, while Trenton, with about 12,000, still struggles along with a voluntary brigade. When the alarm was sounded on Friday night it just so happened that every fireman but one was busy elsewhere with the result that Fire Engineer Baker had but one helper in addition to that provided by passing citizens and the police department. Mr. Baker was forced to make a lone entrance into the smoke filled apartment and had he become overcome with fumes, as was almost the case, his life might have been lost. As it was he was forced to use the inhalator on himself for an hour and a half after his return to the fire station, so filled were his lungs with the fumes and gas.

Incidentally, Mr. Baker remarked that though many families in town had been using soft coal all winter, and it was expected fires might result therefrom, not one of the many fires which have occurred has been traced to its use. The stove which became overheated in Friday's blaze was at the time burning coke.

CLEAR MANGROVE FORESTS

Freetown, Sierra Leone (CP) — More than 3,000 acres of mangrove forests have been cleared in the swamp districts of Sierra Leone, and nearly half this land is already producing rice.

SHOWS FOR NATIVES

Accra, Gold Coast (CP) — During the past year, mobile cinema units have travelled more than 11,000 miles, giving 650 shows to some 500,000 people in the native villages of the Gold Coast. They show propaganda and news films.

TELEPATHIC DEATH

Sheffield, England (CP) — Cecil Black, 50, died suddenly here late one day. The next morning, his twin brother, Percy, went to work as usual at nearby Gainsborough, but said "I feel something is wrong at Sheffield." The same day he collapsed and died.

Horticultural Society Observes 50th Anniversary of Founding

Belleville Horticultural Society observed its 50th anniversary on Friday evening, when members of the organization met at the Y.M.C.A. at their evening meeting. The society was formed back in 1895, 50 years ago with the late W. C. Reid acting as the first president. Since then many citizens of the city have served as officers and directors, Mr. A. R. Symons acting as president in 1924 and was again elected to the office for 1944.

That the society was in a sound financial condition was indicated by the treasurer's report which showed $279.92 as the balance on hand as of Dec. 31st., 1943.

At the meeting a letter of thanks was read from Lady Tweedsmuir, Elsfield Manor, Oxford, England, expressing thanks for the vegetable seeds sent to her to be distributed throughout England. The society is sending seeds again this year.

A letter was read from the Horticultural section of the Hydro Electric Club expressing appreciation for members judging gardens in this district. The winners were Mrs. J. C. Palmer, Ridley Ave., and Mr. R. J. Meservey, Gordon Street. A letter was also received from the Public Utilities Commission thanking the society for planting done at the Filtration Plant.

Delegates Appointed.

Mr. J. Boyle and Mrs. George Bonisteel were appointed delegates to the Ontario Horticultural convention to be held in Toronto, February 24th and 25th.

Reviewing the work of the past year the president indicated that Memorial Park should present a fine showing next spring as several hundred tulips had been planted on the park last fall. A complete survey of the work accomplished last year was made and plans were made for the work to be undertaken during the current year.

Officers elected for the year included Mrs. J. B. Findlay, Mr. A. B. Baird and Miss Helena Lynch as honorary presidents; Mr. A. R. Symons as president; Mr. J. Boyle and Mr. J. C. Palmer as vice presidents, with Mr. J. Watson as secretary treasurer. New directors for 1944 are Mrs. G. Bonisteel, Mr. D. M. Farrell, George Bonisteel, Mr. C. Symons and Mr. R. J. Meservey. Auditors are Mr. I. L. Moore and Mrs. Dorothy Grant. The planting committee chairman is D. M. Farrell.

Dr. G. F. Wright Has Three Sons In Dental Practice

Trenton —(Special)— Dr. G. F. Wright, 63 Lorne Ave., Trenton, who until two years ago practised dentistry in Trenton, has the distinction of having three sons who are also dentists, believed to be a Canadian record. Coming to Trenton from Madoc and Western Canada in 1915, Dr. Wright has practised dentistry for more than fifty years and when he attended the R.C.D.S. annual convention in Toronto in May 1941, with all three of his sons, he was registered as being the only dentist in Canada with three sons of the same profession.

One son still practises in Trenton, Dr. H. V. Wright, while another, Captain Charles E. Wright is serving with the R.C.A.F. at Trenton, and the youngest Dr. G. Fred Wright, is practising in Kingston. One daughter, Mrs. D. G. Mounteer, resides in Hagersville.

Two grandsons, both sons of Dr. H. V. Wright, are serving with the R.C.A.F., FO. Donald Wright, who has just recently arrived overseas, and FO. Gerald Wright.

GERMAN FIGHTER

It was the third successive night raid on the London area. The enemy force was estimated at between 50 and 60 bombers, but no more than 15 succeeded in penetrating the city's defences. Four of the raiders were shot down over Great Britain, while a fifth fell to the guns of a British intruder patrol over France while it was en route home.

Third Successive Raid

It was the third successive night raid on the London area. More planes than usual were in the attacking squadrons. Four planes were knocked down.

An East Anglican town suffered possibly its heaviest loss of the war. A number of stores were burned out in the shopping centre and two hotels and a moving picture theatre were hit.

A movie crowd at Wimbledon had a narrow escape when an anti-aircraft shell crashed through the roof of a theatre (Regal) just as the last of the audience was leaving the building. The exploding shell badly damaged the interior and started a fire.

IN MEMORIAM

FRAIN — In loving memory of our darling son, Tommy, who was taken from us one year ago today, February 14, 1943, age 1 year 9 months.

No stain was on his little heart,
Sin had not entered there:
And innocence slept sweetly on
That pale white brow so fair.

He was too pure for this cold earth,
Too beautiful to stay,
And so God's Holy Angel bore
Our darling one away.

—Sadly missed by Mummy, Daddy and Grandparents.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of the late Mrs. James Bailey wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy, also the beautiful flowers and those who offered cars for the funeral.

Mr. Wm. R. Eaton and family desire to express to friends and neighbors their sincere appreciation for acts of kindness, expressions of sympathy, floral tributes and cards during the illness and death of a loving wife and mother.

Mr. S. Colden and family wish to acknowledge with grateful appreciation the many acts of kindness and sympathy of friends and neighbours in their recent sad bereavement; also for many beautiful floral tributes and kind use of cars. Special thanks are extended to Dr. Cronk and Dr. Miles; Nurses of the Belleville General Hospital; Major Marsh of the Salvation Army, and Martin's Funeral Home.

Movie Cameraman Wounded in Italy

London, Feb. 14 (CP Cable) — Lieut. Colin McDougall, of Ottawa, a motion picture cameraman, has been wounded in Italy, it was announced today.

He is a member of the same Canadian army film unit as was Lt. Terry Rowe of Winnipeg, whose death in action on the Nettuno beachhead was announced last Friday. Presumably McDougall was wounded in the same action in which Lieut. Rowe, a still cameraman and former staff photographer of The Winnipeg Tribune, was killed.

They had teamed up in making pictures of the Canadian 1st. Division operations throughout the Moro River and Ortona battles in December before being switched from the Adriatic front to the Nettuno beachhead to make a photographic record of activities of Canadian special-service troops, members of a joint Canada-United force.

The death of Rowe and wounding of McDougall were the first casualties of the war for the Canadian public relations organization under which the film unit functions.

During the fierce Moro River and Ortona battles McDougall worked with his cameras well up with the Canadian troops and made daily trips into Ortona itself while a week of street fighting was at its heigth. His pictures are considered here as some of the best of the Mediterranean campaign.

MUCH COLDER ONE YEAR AGO

Last year at this time there was really something to squawk about when the thermometer dropped seven degrees from a registered point of 13.9 below zero to 20.5 below. Compared to that, today's low, 12.9 above is spring weather.

Kiwanians Entertain Service Men at 'Y'

The regular Sunday Open House program at the Y. M. C. A. was in charge yesterday of the officers and members of the Kiwanis Club. Many members of the Club joined Mr. H. W. Ackerman chaiman of War Services in extending a welcome while other members assisted in conducting the program about the building. Kiwanian Mr. Archie Harris chairman of Social Committee was in charge of the day's arrangements with Mrs. Harris directing the Kiwanis Queens, who gathered in goodly numbers in the kitchen and dining room to prepare and serve delightful afternoon tea at five o'clock.

Bill Naven officiated at the piano for the afternoon sing-song. In the evening the entertainment was in charge of Kiwanian Harold Carruthers, who led the sing-song and conducted the program, with Leo Riggs at the piano. The following numbers were presented:-

Hostess Trio—Inez Forster; Jean Freeman; Vera Blaind, with Verna Vanderwater as pianist and coach, presented two separate groups of songs. Group A. Maggie Blues; Old Ark's a movering; For me and my gal. Group B. Shoo shoo Baby. Wearyin' for you. Basin street Blues.

Miss Margaret Houston accompanied by her mother sang two delightful numbers. The audience insisted on an encore and Miss Houston sang "One Kiss".

Miss Joyce Dougherty vocal soloist with Stanley Hawthorne, pianist, both of Madoc, pleased the audience with a duet "Mairzy Doats" while Miss Dougherty favored with two solo numbers.

Mr. Shortt General Secretary expressed the greetings of the local association to the assembly and expressed the appreciation of the directors and staff to the officers and members of Kiwanis, the ladies assisting during the day and to the artists contributing to the evening program.

Mr. Shortt then referred to the splendid services rendered by Mr. Ron Hupfield during the past year in the Local Association in providing program and taking care of the needs of the active service folk of this district and those who find the Association a very great convenience as they travel to and fro. He called on Mr. Hupfield who is leaving this point for service overseas for a few remarks. Ron expressed his enjoyment in serving this constituency and bid farewell by introducing his successor Mr. Harold McKeig. The evening closed with the singing of several hymns and the serving of light refreshments.

WORK OF LABORATORY EXPLAINED TO CLUB

The varied branches of research and other work done at the Dominion Parasite Laboratory on Dundas Street was illustrated to members of the Energetic Club of Holloway Street United Church on Friday evening, when at their regular bi-monthly meeting the unit was addressed by Mr. George Wishart, entomologist at the local laboratory. As guest speaker of the evening Mr. Wishart carefully explained the many branches of work being done to protect Canadian crops and forests from insect and parasite enemies. Colored slides were shown to further illustrate the talk.

The evening's program was in charge of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McDonald's group who had arranged for the enjoyment of those in attendance a delightful Valentine party. Musical entertainment was afforded by piano and violin selections rendered by Ray and Leslie Lennox. Members enjoyed a tasty lunch to bring the evening to a close.

PRINCE HOHENLOHE, PRISONER

Lethbridge, Alta., Feb. 14 —(CP) —Prince Tassilo Hohenlohe, descendant of a noted family which played an important part in moulding the German Empire, is among the prisoners of war at a nearby internment camp, it was revealed today. He has been there more than 14 months.

A young man in his middle 20's, the prince receives the same treatment from authorities as other prisoners.

SODALITY HOLDS VALENTINE PARTY

Seventy-Five Couples Participate in Celebration at St. Michael's Academy

The Sodality of the Children of Mary, under the chairmanship of Miss Mary McLellan of the Social Committee, held a Valentine party in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy on Friday night. A large number of Air Force personnel from the Mountain View Bombing & Gunnery School, representing England, Scotland, Panama, Australia and various places in Canada, were present. Everyone signed the guest book and on examining it closely, it was found that approximately seventy-five couples were in attendance.

The small tea tables were arranged cabaret style, decorated in color schemes of red and white. The head table was designed similarly with hearts, cupids and roses. Colored lights illuminated the dance hall and along with good music supplied by the juke box, the scene assumed a feeling of warmth, good cheer and friendliness.

Miss Helen Hudon, dressed in a long blue frock accented with Valentine hearts, opened the evening's program with the appropriate recitation, "I'm Only Cupid." From then on, everyone just had "reams of fun" until about ten o'clock when a stage show was conducted, the performers of which proved themselves entertainers of fine note. Bob Flurey rendered two vocal numbers, as did Angela Pauline and Robert Lucey. Mrs. T. J. Flurey accompanied them at the piano, and also played for the round of community singing.

When the dancing was resumed following the floor show, Miss Betty Feeney and her partner, LAC. Hogg put on a sweet show of rug cutting and everybody stood around in awed admiration. The two spot dances were won by Mary Trualsch and LAC. Williams and Dorothy Feeney and Ken LaVallee. The lucky plate prize went to Miss Bertha O'Connor.

Hostesses for this affair were Mrs. George Wilson, president of the Catholic Women's League, Mrs. A. Dorian, Mrs. T. J. Flurey and Mrs. Hudon. Flt. Lt. the Rev. G. Mulligan of Mountain View and Rev A. L. O'Donnell were also present.

At the close of the party, Miss Nellie Dorian, president of the sodality, expressed her appreciation and thanks to the hostesses and to all those who had contributed towards the success of the evening.

COLLISION CAUSES OVER $100 DAMAGE

Swerving his automobile to avoid collision with a truck that was being backed out on Highway No. 14 in the village of Rossmore this morning, a motor car driven by W. Campbell, Mountain View, was in collision with a south-bound automobile driven by A. McKenzie, also of Mountain View. Property damage estimated at over $100 resulted to the front portions of both motor cars, as Mr. McKenzie's vehicle was forced off the highway into the ditch. Traffic Officer W. G. Milton investigated and reported no personal injuries were sustained by any occupants. Joseph White, Rossmore, was backing his truck out of his private driveway as Mr. Campbell approached from the south. The collision occurred on a curve making observations extremely difficult.

Boy Was Not Drunk, Gave Perfect Simulation Of Drunken State

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 14—(CP)—A choice, oft-cited example in juvenile delinquency addresses throughout the province was the case of a 12-year-old Windsor schoolboy reported inebriated in a classroom session. A police investigation produced by the proddings of shocked citizens revealed the story sprang from the lad's successful simulation of the drunken state, and the principal has now issued retractions to dozens of civil delegations and a representative of Premier Drew.

FATALLY GORED BY BULL

Windsor, Ont., Feb. 14 —(CP)— William L. Arps, 59, died today from injuries suffered Friday when he was gored by a bull on his farm on the ninth concession, Colchester North Township.

Arps was trying to put the bull in his barn when the animal suddenly turned and knocked him down. He was carrying a pitchfork at the time and warded off subsequent attacks by the beast but was unable to get up off the ground because of his injuries. He called out his dog who came and attacked the bull and chased it away.

MRS. J. P. A. CARDIN DIES

HMCS 'Belleville' Fund Is Worthy of Support

Steadily, slowly but surely, the amounts contributed by the citizens, clubs and organizations of the city to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Corvette Fund, are building toward the grand total of $3,500 set as the fund's objective. The total sum will be used to equip one of His Majesty's ships with as many of the comforts of home as it is possible to put aboard. No item will be too small for consideration and no article will be too large or expensive as long as it is practical and will bring some degree of pleasure or relief to the men who will man H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" in the days that are yet to come before the final phases if this war are reached.

Canadians have been justly proud of their country throughout this war, proud of their achievements at home as well as righteously boastful of the demonstrations of bravery and gallantry of their sons and daughters who have volunteered their lives for the sake of the grand ideal which is Canada's birth-right. To one of these services, rightly known as "The Silent Service," Canada owes more than will be known for years to come. The men who fight in ships fight a defensive battle at the same time as they fight on the offensive against the foe; their facing the enemy leaves their backs unprotected, and it is up to those who remain behind at home to give them that protection they expect with absolute confidence.

* * *

It may not sound like much to sponsor a ship; it may not mean much to the ordinary civilian that supplying articles of comfort and recreation aboard a ship could mean a great deal in the ultimate outcome of the war, but a few moments consideration will reveal that when men are comfortable they will do a better job, and no better job can be done today than that which is being done by these men who battle the elements as well as the enemy.

Every Canadian, old enough and still young enough, could say with meaning, "It might well be me!" when they think of a cold, stormy night at sea, with the wind whipping scud and brine from stem to stern of a small naval craft, its decks completely submerged beneath tons of icy waters of the North Atlantic. It is impossible to visualize exactly what this is like unless one has been on board such a ship on such a night, yet, the boys serving on them, thousands of them, know what it is like. Here in Belleville, from where over six hundred brave men have gone to take their places on the decks, behind the guns and in the stokeholes of Canadian naval ships, there are several hundreds who might say: "It might well be me!" But, through the bravery and self-sacrificing gallantry of those who have gone, nights like this on the North Atlantic are simply good stories in the pages of the daily newspapers.

* * *

No over-estimation of what should be done for the men who eat, sleep and live in these corvettes, the teeth of the Navy, can be made; no exaggeration of the value of the service they are performing can ever be given. To deny them the very things they have been taught to accept as their rightful heritage is next to denying them the right to return to their homes when their task is completed.

Backing H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" is not just another fund started to raise money. It is a personal matter: the personal business of everyone to take this opportunity to do something that will make life aboard as much easier as it could be left tedious and uncomfortable. Every contribution made to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund will purchase some single comfort or be massed into a larger amount to supply some much needed article of equipment which will make life just a little more liveable for these men.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hooey Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Trenton, (Special.)—Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hooey are today, (February 14th.,) celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary at their home on Murphy Street here, where they are receiving a host of their friends, many of whom are of life-long standing.

Mrs. Hooey is the former Emma Bentley and was born at Brougham, Ont., just outside Toronto, the daughter of the late Lewis Bentley and Sarah Ann Pierson and moved with them to Prince Edward County where they lived for many years on the farm now owned by Bob Dempsey at Albury. On St. Valentine's Day, fifty years ago Emma Bentley was married at the home of her parents there to Stuart Hooey, a prosperous young Trenton business man. Officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Duprau of the Methodist Church at Albury. Mr. Hooey was born in Cobourg, in 1857, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Hooey, but left there when he was about twenty years of age for Belleville where he conducted a grocery business.

In 1888, Mr. Hooey moved from Belleville to Trenton and located in a store in the old Daly Block situated where the Selrite store now stands. Looking out from his front window, Mr. Hooey could see on the other side of the street a small shoe repair shop where a young man named George Hughes diligently repaired the soles of most of Trenton's leading citizens. The property on which this shop stood was then owned by a Mr. Dan Murphy, and as Mr. Hooey daily looked upon the site he visualized a large block of stores with apartments above, though two-storey buildings in those days were considered none too practical. Though requested to do so many times by Mr. Hooey, Mr. Murphy steadily refused to sell his property but there came a day when the arrangements were finally made after the land had fallen into the hands of another local citizen, Mr. Robert Cummings.

With a clear deed to the land, Mr. Hooey set about to build his long-dreamed of block, and though discouraged by many, insisted on making it a two-storey building with apartments overhead. This turned out to be a wise move on the part of the builder as there was always need for the extra housing accommodation and the revenue derived was a considerable asset.

In those days contracts were unheard of and Mr. Hooey set about to get himself a foremen for the job of building. For this supervision two brothers were secured, Mr. James Simpson and Mr. George Simpson and with them worked several first-class carpenters, bricklayers and masons including the Sansom brothers, Jack, Bob and Tom and Mr. George Crowe. Labor was plentiful in those days and wages low and in a short time the very fine building which was later to be known as the Saylor Block came into being. Mr. Hooey conducted a modern and up-to-date licenced grocery in that block until 1914 when he moved with his family to Toronto. The block was later sold in 1920, to the late Mr. Wesley Saylor and is today known as the Saylor building owned by C. W. Saylor and occupied by a men's furnishing establishment and a shoe shop.

The Hooeys spent nine years in Toronto and then moved to Cobourg where they stayed for five years then moved back to Trenton.

They have three children Douglas of Detroit, Donald and Mrs. Marjorie Murphy both of Trenton. A grandson by a former marriage of Mr. Hooey's, Pilot Officer Gilbert C. Hooey, D.F.C., son of the late Barton Hooey and Mrs. Hooey of Oakville, Ont., was a casualty of this war. Decorated after daylight raids on Augsburg in April 1942, he was first reported a prisoner of war and later dead.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooey are both in excellent health and, having all their faculties, are able to enjoy every minute of their busy days. Though 87 it is only during the past year that Mr. Hooey has given up riding his bicycle, and many times thought nothing of cycling to Belleville and back in the morning and then out to Frankford in the afternoon. They are both ardent members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and Mrs. Hooey, in addition to doing all her household tasks, does considerable knitting for the local branch of the Red Cross.

Govt. Will Have Hard Struggle To Retain Seat

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 14 (CP Cable) — The West Derbyshire by-election in which voting takes place next Thursday is having a whirlwind finish and the Conservatives entertain some doubts that their candidate, the 26-year-old Marquess of Hartington, will have much margin to spare even in this seat which members of his family held almost without a break for three centuries.

Alderman Charles White, 52-year-old Independent Socialist, appears to be making a strong bid for the seat despite Prime Minister Churchill's letter last week supporting Hartington. The third candidate seeking the seat vacated by the retirement of Hartington's uncle, Col. Henry Hunloke, is Robert Goodall, an Independent Agriculturist.

Hartington, heir to the Duke of Devonshire and future head of the Cavendish family, said "we have good reason to be confident but it will be a very close thing." His mother added: "We shall only just pull it off."

The only time a Cavendish or family connection has not represented the riding was from 1918 to 1923 when White's shoemaker father held the seat and died two days before polling day in 1923.

Soldier Always Retains His Legal Domicile

Montreal, Feb. 14 (CP)—Even when a soldier served overseas he retains his legal domicile wherever he had it prior to enlistment, Mr. Justice E. Fabre Surveyer ruled today in Superior Court.

The ruling, believed the first of its kind here, was made when Mr. Justice Surveyer said that a soldier, even serving overseas, retains his legal domicile here and therefore is not required to pay into court security for costs as ordinarily asked from non-residents.

Five Fatalities During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Five fatalities were reported in Eastern Canada during the weekend. Four died in Ontario as the result of traffic accidents, and fire claimed one life in Quebec.

Eight-year-old Victor Bayliss of Toronto, was killed instantly Saturday when run over by the rear wheels of a transport truck while playing on the street. Mrs. Emily Butcher, 57, of Toronto, died in hospital Sunday of a fractured skull received Saturday when struck by a street car in the west end of the city.

Hugh Cameron, 60, was fatally injured Sunday night when struck by an automobile on a highway 5 miles south of Hamilton. Police said the automobile was driven by Vernon Robertson, 21. Alma Beavis, 41, of Peterboro, was killed on Saturday when the car in which she was driving collided with one driven by Dr. Alan Secord of Toronto, at Rouge Hills, just outside Toronto.

In Verdun, Mrs. Jean Paul Charlbois, 35, was found burned to death in the ruins of a tenement house which burned Sunday.

Eighth Gold Medal Awarded in 50 Years For Effort to Save

Hamilton, Ont., Feb. 14 (CP) — Officials of the Royal Canadian Humane Association here today said that only eight gold medals have been awarded in Canada in the 50 years' existence of the organization.

The information was revealed at the annual meeting recently at which it was stated that the gold medal awarded posthumously to Anthony Bennetti of Waterdown, last year was the first in the last 15 years.

Altogether, the foundation has made awards to 3,159 persons involving the saving of 3,658 lives.

F. P. Treleaven, K.C., was re-elected president and Major R. E. McLaren, who is a prisoner of war in Germany, was re-elected with other investigating governors. W. B. Powell and M. W. Wickens were added as members of the board.

It was further reported at the annual meeting that awards were made to eight members of the armed forces last year.

Anthony Bennetti, a non-swimmer, was awarded the gold medal posthumously for attempting to rescue three Waterdown children who stepped into a hole while wading in a gravel pit last June 4. All were drowned.

Thanks were extended to The Canadian Press and its member newspapers for their co-operation during the year.

Gen. E. W. Sansom Back in Canada

(By The Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, Feb. 14 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. E. W. Sansom of Stanley, N.B., recently retired from command of a Canadian corps in Britain because of ill health, has returned to Canada along with a large group of repatriated Canadian servicemen, chiefly "category" personnel being invalided home.

Nearly 200 British war brides of Canadians serving overseas along with their children, British and Empire air force personnel and a large draft of British merchant seamen and officers were included in the arrivals.

Lt.-Gen. Sansom went to Britain early in the war and had been with the Canadian forces training in Britain since. At first commanding a Canadian division there, he was promoted to his present rank and given command of the corps last year.

Majority of the Canadian soldiers who returned were those who had been placed in a low category because of illness or as the result of accidents in England, while a few has seen fighting in Sicily or Italy.

Solomons-Based Planes Hit Rabaul

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 14 (AP)—Admiral William F. Halsey's Solomons-based planes attacked the Japanese base at Rabaul, New Britain, with a 134-ton raid Friday, Allied headquarters announced today.

Three enemy planes were downed and probably five others were knocked out of weak interception, while the Allies lost two fighters, the communique said.

Communiques this month have listed 179 Japanese aircraft destroyed at Rabaul, with 159 of these being shot down and the remainder smashed on the ground; 78 probables are listed. Allied losses for the period stand at 21 planes.

DIES SHOVELLING SNOW

Japanese Troops Are Cleared Out Of Arakan Sector

New Delhi, Feb. 14 (AP) — Japanese troops who slipped behind British forces on one sector of the Arakan front in Burma are steadily being cleared out, an Allied communique said today.

"The situation is improving steadily," said the Bulletin from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's southeast Asia headquarters. It added the general situation in Arakan is unchanged "though there are indications that the Japanese position continues to deteriorate."

The Japanese, while attacking around the east end of Mgakyedauk Pass through the Mayu Range, slipped around to the rear and occupied a village 10 miles to the west," it was discloseed last week.

In the Tiddim zone to the north of Akaran, Japanese troops were dispersed by artillery fire in the Fort White area Saturday and Allied patrols probed enemy defences yesterday, the communique said.

In the air war, United States fighter-bombers and fighters marked the second anniversary of 10th. U.S. air force operations in India Saturday by flying 120 sorties to blast the Japanese in Northern Burma.

Other Allied planes continued to make wide sweeps over the battle areas.

Chinese Girl Leads With Perfect Marks In Army Course

London, Ont., Feb. 14.—(CP)—A Chinese girl—Esther Wong— led a group of 18 women students from the University of Western Ontario enrolled in the Women's Army course with a perfect set of marks in recent small arms training examinations, it was announced today.

The tests, conductd under the direction of Sgt. Major J. Cuthbertson of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps, were of the same standard as for men.

Miss Wong scored 85 out of a possible, 85. The total was made up of a possible 50 for grouping, 20 for application and 15 for snap. Runner-up to Miss Wong, was Lenore Joes of Sarnia, Ontario, with 84 and Helen Elizabeth Fraser of Ottawa, was third with 83.

Trenton News

Trenton, (Special.)— The women of King Street United Church held their customary Valentine Tea on Friday with a large crowd in attendance. The church parlors were tastefully decorated for the occasion with cupids, bows and hearts much in evidence.

The guests were received by Mrs. (Rev.) G. W. Martin, Mrs. O. May, president of the Association, and Past Presidents, Mrs. R. M. Foster and Mrs. G. E. Couch. Mrs. A. L. Bond and Mrs. Alex Fleming took the tickets.

Mrs. W. H. Ireland in charge of the tea table, had cleverly used red roses, white calla lillies and pussy willows to form a most attractive centre, with tall red tapers in silver candelabra. Tea was poured by Mrs. J. B. Little, Mrs. W. Saylor, Mrs. F. J. Farley and Mrs. J. B. Murdoff, while Mrs M. Tripp was convener of the small tables with members of the Association serving the guests. Kitchen arrangements were taken care of by Mrs. J. Orchard, Mrs. C. Crowe, Mrs. L. S. Weaver and Mrs. Mawsom.

Aprons, both attractive and practical, were sold by Mrs. Smithrim, Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Purdy, Mrs. Cobley and Mrs. Hearns. Home cooking was in charge of Mrs. Bird, Mrs. J. F. Cox, Mrs. Gainforth, Mrs. Broatch, Mrs. Wilson, and Mrs. Flindall, while Mrs. W. W. Weaver, Mrs. W. Potts and Mrs. Abbott attended the corner store.

Decorating of the rooms was rooms was done by Mrs. Burrows, Mrs. Farrell and Mrs. Cecil Roberts, while Mrs. Alex Fleming convened a much appreciated musical program.

Cars Collide.

Two cars collided at the corner of MacLellan Ave., and Shuter St., on Saturday night doing considerable damage to both.

A car driven by William Miron proceeding north on MacLellan, it is alleged, was struck as it approached Shuter St., intersection by another car driven by Thomas Wilson of 175 Shuter Street. The left door and fender of the Miron car were damaged and the right head light, bumper, grill and hood of the Wilson car smashed in. Trenton police investigated.

Personals.

Mrs. Marion Hewson, local representative of the Sun Life Assurance Co., attended their annual convention in the Royal York Hotel on Friday last.

Mrs. E. Shier and daughter, Sheila, have returned home after visiting friends in Toronto and Guelph.

Reported Missing.

Flt. Lt. "Sunny" Acker, of the R.C.A.F., who was stationed for some time in Trenton, is reported missing from submarine patrol duty overseas, according to official information received by Mrs. Acker of Montreal. "Sunny" had many friends in Trenton, who will hope that he may yet be located.

Murray Twp., May Have Election.

It appears that Murray Township is still more or less determined that a new election might be necessary following the accusation at February 12th meeting by Councillor Morrow that the present reeve, deputy and councillors, were not legally in office in so far as they had neglected to sign the necessary qualifying papers and oath of allegiance.

At November's nomination meeting all officers of last year's council as well as the reeve and deputy, were elected by acclamation, and Reeve Ab Smith claims that exactly the same procedure was followed as has been done for the past twenty years, but Councillor Morrow is said to object nevertheless, and says they are not legally in office.

A further nomination meeting to be held on the 21st will decide whether or not another election is necessary, and if so it will be held on the 28th of February when it will then be up to the people whether or not they still would wish Reeve Ab. Smith, Deputy Norman Findall and Councillors Lambert Whaley, Arthur Hayes and W. H Morrow, to carry on.

Confidence in Beachhead

Confidence that the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead will be held and that the Allied troops will go forward to Rome was felt and expressed at the weekend as the Germans were put to rout in an assault in which the Royal Navy pounded the enemy with the greatest effectiveness. Prime Minister Churchill voiced confidence in the ability of the Fifth Army to hold the beachhead on basis of generals' reports.

This was the sequel to the expressions of concern over the bridgehead at the latter part of the week.

Mr. Churchill's confident note has been substantiated by the events of the past couple of days.

Snow Shovelling

Though the first fairly heavy fall of snow has been long delayed this year, Saturday saw the sidewalks of the city generally cleared of snow fairly early in the morning and again later in the day by householders. Lack of practice with the shovel this year has not caused them to neglect their civic duty.

Snow shovelling is not a pleasant exercise at all times. While it gives exercise, this form of activity may be a little heavy for some persons owing to age or infirmity, and these persons should be cautious and work slowly or have some one else do the shovelling.

Some time in the future clearing of snow may be done by the municipality thereby assuring early clearing of the sidewalks after a storm, and relief of the task of shovelling from the householders. It is not likely there would be any opposition to a step which would mean a uniform clearing of walks at a very reasonable cost.

Meanwhile citizens will continue to clear the walks before their properties as good citizens should. There is no one who does not benefit by having the walks cleared so that walking may be made as easy as possible. Uncleared walks make walking difficult and show a lack of community spirit. Fortunately the vast majority of people concerned lose no time in making the way clear for the pedestrian as far as their walks are concerned.

If in the future there is some method devised for the removing of the snow from sidewalks as a public works undertaking so much the better.

What is Hun Thinking?

What must the German at home be thinking of the continued retreat of the German armies and the defeat after defeat they are experiencing as the Red summer offensive of 1943 has long since swept into the winter offensive and has now reached new victories in the making? To the Russians this remarkable series of successes and the forward march of the Red armies seem the perfect expression of the Russian confidence in their ability to deal Adolf Hitler staggering blow after blow. What is the Hun at home thinking of the air raids on Germany?

There is so great a difference between the tone of the German communiques today and those that were handed out in the early days of the German war against Russia. Reading them in 1941, the Germans must have felt with Hitler that the Muscovites were already defeated, then something happened and the tide turned as the Nazis were pressed back from before Moscow, never to go so far east again in that area. Nazi hopes must have risen again as the drive started through Ukraine on the road to the Caucasus and to Stalingrad. But again the Nazis were disappointed by staggering defeats.

This winter has seen the Russian army in its great stride as it nears the old lines from which Hitler launched his offensive back in 1941. Owen Sound Sun-Times refers to German retreats claimed to have been carried out "according to plan." The Sun-Times says that "the natural thought is that the Hitlerites must have planned to give up a lot of territory to the Soviet forces; they have been so steadily 'advancing backwards.' One wonders too why they had built so many defence lines if the plan was merely to hold them for a short time and then to abandon them in a hurry."

One may have noticed that Hitler has done a lot of retreating in order to 'shorten his lines of defence'—thus to strengthen his chances of stemming the tide of the Soviet advance. The explanation seems reasonable—until one finds, as disclosed by military authorities, that as a result of salients punched into the long battle line that line extends some 600 miles longer than it did last July . . . Doubtless the movements are 'according to plan,' but one suspects that the 'plan' is Mr. Stalin's.

It was certainly no German plan to get one hundred and fifty thousand men trapped in the Dnieper Bend and thousands in another sector. These trapping operations by the Russians are just what military men aim at and even the once called "invincible" German armies are subject to the same defeat by too long delays in retirement as the armies of a small principality in a miniature war, only the German losses are on a commensirately greater scale. Russian strategy shows brilliantly against the long German retreats which have been without letup for long over a year.

The blasting of Germany from the sky by the Allied air fleets was foretold by Mr. Churchill long ago even if Marshal Goering said at the opening of the war there was no possibility of Berlin being bombed. It has had the worst bombing of all.

These events must have an effect upon the home front German. He must in his own way be thinking just as Hitler is thinking what will be the end of all of this gathering of defeats, suffered by Germany. The signs are for greater disasters for Germany. Hitler has to continue making decisions or the German generals have to decide, but the civilian German is subject to Himmler's infernal spy machine, so he probably thinks only in his dull way. The Germans have never been brave enough to think out boldly in action against their rulers whether an Emperor or a Hitler or the Prussian Junkers. They have let them dictate their way and so dictators have controlled their thoughts and actions. They have avoided what the people of the democracies have done, the latter have been working for freedom, but the Germans have allowed their leaders to take the responsibility. This is the plight of the German, he has submitted to German tyranny and allowed himself to be made a war machine of aggression and he is willing to profit by Hitler's or any aggressor's deeds or promises.

Now Hitler is losing, the German by his dumb following of Hitler must share responsibility. But will the Hun at home think out loud? Many think he will remain inarticulate especially as the shadow of Himmler is over Germany's every man, woman and child. How far will the Germans dare to think?

The Bear's Shadow

It looks as if the bear in the adage when he saw his shadow in this part of the country the week before last was a true prophet for within a few days the summer-winter had disappeared under a light coating of snow which was increased by last Friday night's snow storm.

Winter time has been good to these parts so far with the pleasure of the mild weather, dampened by the thought of course that it might not last, but since the snow has come, not yet in the proportions of other seasons, the wintry mantle does not appear so hard to bear. The contrast of winter yielding to springtime when the snow has disappeared is a pure delight that Canadians know from past experiences. People would not enjoy spring so much in this climate if it were not for something of winter.

Snake Disables Plane

What the enemy could not do a snake did to the airplane of a New Zealand officer serving in India. Calcutta reports the plane almost crashed after a 1,500-mile flight because the steering gear failed to function properly. The interference was a five-foot cobra.

WAR-TIME VALENTINES

From the far-flung battle lines
Love will send its valentines;
Not, perhaps, in colored ink,
Trimmed with lacework, white or pink,
Nor a silver gift of gold,
By which giver's love is told;
Nor gardenias, spotless, fair,
For the shoulder or the hair,
But a daintier, subtler thing
Than bouquet or book or ring.
They will come on wings of thought,
Tenderly and truly wrought,
From the foar of thundering guns
Unto mothers from their sons;
From the roads that lead to Rome
To the sweethearts left at home;
From the lads who ride the skies,
Where the fearful missiles rise;
From the boys beneath the sea,
And wherever youth may be,
Beach or jungle barricade,
Task force, squadron or brigade,
And wherever they may stay,
Serving freedom far away.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 14, 1924

Water pipes at the Walker Hardware Company store were being thawed this morning when the flame of the torch came in contact with material used for packing underneath the north window and things looked serious for a few minutes. Water had no effect on the blaze and Everett Smith, salesman in the store, hastily obtained a fire extinguisher and this subdued the fire at once.

"Toots" Holway, a Belleville boy, who has been playing centre and defence with the Brockville hockey team has signed a contract to play with the St. Pats in Toronto. The Toronto team has been after "Toots" for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meagher have left to spend a week in Grand Rapids, Mich.

Mrs. A. Harman and Mrs. R. King are spending a few days in Toronto.

30 YEARS AGO

FEBRUARY 14, 1914

William Ryerson Dempsey, ex-M.P.P., for Prince Edward County died suddenly yesterday. He was one of the best known residents of the county and was born in the county in the year 1832. He served during the Fenian Raid in 1866. He represented Ameliasburg Township in the Prince Edward County Council for a considerable time and filled all the important offices during his time in the council. In 1898 he was elected a member of the Ontario Legislature.

Mr. Harry Hungerford, of Madoc, was in town today.

Volcano in N. Guinea In Violent Eruption

Somewhere in New Guinea, Feb. 14. (CP)—A volcona on Mount Goropu, 138 miles east of Port Moresby on the Papuan peninsula of New Guinea, is undergoing its most violent eruption in recent years. A series of rumbling explosions sounding like distant thunder or gunfire heralded the volcanic action last night. The sky over southeastern New Guinea and out over the Coral Sea was thick with volcanic smoke today.

CONDUCTORETTES TAKE OVER

Toronto, Feb. 14 —(CP)— Street car "conductorettes" had their innings here Friday night. Frequently twitted by T.T.C. male operators for failing to get runs, the girls took over the cars during the heavy snowfall while the men were assigned to a long, cold night's work on the sweepers and snow plows.

Cow's Unique Record

Logan, Utah, Feb. 14. (AP)—Parley A. Down's Cow has produced more than 400 pounds of butterfat annually since the war started, and, in addition, has contributed:—Dec. 24, 1941—twins; Jan. 29, 1943—twins; Dec. 30, 1943—triplets.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

There was plenty of "shining morning faces" in Canada 100 years ago . . .too many, in fact, because it was not yet fashionable to wear complexion powder. More violet-scented powder (made from pure starch) went into coiffures than onto noses. Some households considered it sinful to try to improve upon nature. Others looked with aversion on all beauty culture because they thought it on a par with the art of facial decoration as practised by the native Indians.

Wonderful, indeed, what an aborigine could do with a few smudges of charcoal worked up with grease. Talk about the primpings of coquettes . . . the Indian braves went them one better, often taking over an hour to paint their faces in fanciful designs! For this painstaking job the redskins carried small looking-glasses and they found delight in consulting their images from time to time. No two Indians ornamented themselves alike. Sometimes the head and the ears were painted a glowing red. The hair was cut in strange ways, or shaved off except for a tiny tuft right on top, to which bright decorations and feathers were added. Feathers were also thrust through noses and into ears. On their bodies, naked from the waist up except for a draped blanket, were sketched fantastic designs of white clay. All these horrible conceits were meant to terrify . . . and did! It is unnecessary to dwell on the sensations which an assemblage of painted Indians aroused in the breasts of the early settlers.

Bracken, Drew Tell Conservatives Of Their Plans

Drew Says New Election if Legislation Defeated at Next Session.

CREATE NEW DEP'T.

London, Ont., Feb. 14 (CP) — An address by John Bracken, National leader of the Progressive Conservative Party, and two announcements by Premier Drew of Ontario relating to the February 22 opening of the Ontario Legislature highlighted the 19th annual meeting of the Western Ontario Progressive Conservative Association.

Col. Drew told the meeting, held here Saturday, that the government will introduce a bill to create a new provincial department of planning and development modelled after two British departments, town planning and reconstruction. He also indicated that another election will be held if government-sponsored legislation is defeated at the forthcoming session.

"If we are defeated in the Legislature we will let the people decide the result," said the Premier in pledging that Government legislation will not be tailored to suit the taste of other parties, whose combined representation in the House outnumbers the government. (Death last Wednesday of Wallace W. Walsh, Progressive Conservative member for Haldimand Norfolk, left the party with 37 members compared with 34 for the C.C.F. and 15 for the Liberals.)

Mr. Bracken said greater measures of social security are necessary to assure Canada's future. Declaring that States and private enterprise, working co-operatively, could provide maximum production, full employment and social security without loss of freedom, Mr. Bracken appealed for an economy that "will assure young men a chance."

A National Problem

Referring to agriculture's position in the national economy, the Progressive Conservative leader drew attention to the fact that in past years one-third of the nation had been engaged in agriculture but received only one-sixth of the national income. This situation had existed so long, he said, that many people think it is inevitable.

"Agriculture is a national, not a regional problem," he said. "Export markets must be maintained. If Canada is left with only its home markets, the western farmer would be forced out of grain and into mixed farming."

Col. Drew said the function of the proposed new department would be to co-ordinate planning in all Ontario municipalities as part of a "complete provincial scheme." It is expected the Premier shortly will announce the name of a minister who will be responsible for the department.

Alma Beavis Killed, 3 Others Injured In Collision of Cars

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP) — Alma Beavis, 41, of Peterboro, Ont., was killed and three others were injured Saturday in an automobile collision on the highway near Rouge Hills, just outside Toronto.

Miss Beavis was travelling in an automobile police said was driven by Irene Telford, 45, also of Peterboro. Miss Telford was taken to hospital, where her condition was described as fair.

Police said the second automobile was driven by Dr. Alan Secord, Toronto veterinary. Two passengers in Dr. Secord's car, Clifford Hooper of St. Catharines and Donald Naismith of Toronto, suffered minor injuries.

The War Today— Beachhead Force on Offensive, Finland's Position Very Critical

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst.)

There's better news today from the furious battle of the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead south of Rome as a reward for those whose faith stood up during the trying days of last week.

The Anglo-American force has regained the initiative, at least in part, and has been attacking the surrounding Germans with great violence. That's an encouraging sign, but it shouldn't be taken as necessarily meaning that the crisis has been passed.

Our greatest need apparently is a spell of good flying weather to enable the Allied air force, with its heavy superiority, to get into full action. The battle may turn on air power.

Allied Success in Cassino Area.

Meanwhile American forces in the Cassino sector to the south are extending their efforts to smash through this tough spot, and are reported to have made some progress. A break-through here would tend to relieve pressure on the beachhead, quite apart from the fact that Cassino is the barrier which is holding up the general advance.

One reason the Allies haven't been able to take this heavily fortified town is because they have refrained —at least until now—from shelling the famous monastery which looks down from a hill-top and is being used by the enemy as an artillery post. This key position is the world's oldest monastery, having been founded by St. Benedict in 529, and it has been protected from damage. However, stern necessities of war may force the Allies to bombard it. Indeed, the Nazi-controlled radio says they already have started, though there has been no confirmation.

Great Russian Victory at Luga.

The other tense spot in the European war is Finland. The peals of triumph in Moscow over the capture of Luga are knells of tragedy for the Finns, whose hour of reckoning with Russia is thus brought appreciably nearer. Hitler's strength in that part of the war zone is dwindling rapidly.

Finland is in the position of having to make peace quickly or accepting a worse fate. The Helsinki government fully recognizes this, as is indicated by extreme activity pointing to possible negotiations between Finland and Moscow.

Paasikivi in Stockholm.

Significance seems to attach to the fact that Dr. Juho Paasikivi, who helped negotiate peace between Finland and Russia in 1940 has arrived unexpectedly in Stockholm, as have Finnish Minister of the Interior Ehrenrooth and former Foreign Minister Erkko. Stockholm is a logical place for a peace parley.

The capture of Luga ranks among the great victories of the Russo-German war. This is one of the keys to the turning operation that the Muscovites are now in process of carrying out against the northern wing of the Nazi front which now rests on the Baltic Sea north of Narva in Estonia.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

By The Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press

Ottawa, Feb. 14. (CP)—A decrease in the 1944-45 war appropriation for naval stores, including defaussing and anti-submarine equipment, may indicate the Navy expects less trouble with enemy U-boats and mines this year.

The Naval Stores estimate in the appropriations, tabled in the Commons Friday by Finance Minister Ilsley, totalled $34,678,967, compared with $57,651,110 in the current fiscal year.

The Army estimates included a big increase in the figure for civil salaries and wages—$16,199,853 against $8,832,678. While no explanation was given, there was a possibility the increase would go to additional staff required to handle mounting administration staff work now that one Army corps is engaged in Italy and another formation is ready to take part in the cross-Channel invasion.

The R.C.A.F. is tightening up on its repair and overhaul costs with a figure of $188,947,545, compared with $231,846,296.

Munitions:

Possibility of further reductions in the output of war plants producing ammunition and armaments is indicated in the appropriations.

While a large part of the production of these plants in Canada goes to other United Nations, the breakdown of estimated expenditures shows requirements of the Canadian Navy, Army and Air Force will total $149,453,863, a reduction of $40,023,803 from the 1943-44 expenditures.

Air Transfers:

When Capt. Harold Balfour, British Air Undersecretary, and Air Minister Power hold a press conference planned for later this week they are expected to reveal more information on plans to transfers to the R.C.A.F. Canadians in the R.A.F.

There has been some little misunderstanding on just what is intended. Air Force headquarters emphasize that the negotiations do not affect members of the R.C.A.F. who have been attached to the R.A.F. for operational duties. They will affect only those Canadians who enlisted direct in the R.A.F., most of them just before the outbreak of war.

Bracken House:

The Progressive Conservative Party apparently made a profitable business deal when it acquired Bracken House on Ottawa's Laurier Avenue as national headquarters. A week after the deal went through a real estate agent offered to buy the property, party officers say, at an advance of $1,000 on the purchase price.

Party headquarters, however, are not selling. It is figured the purchase price, plus cost of alterations, can be amortized and taxes paid for less than used to be paid in rent for the old uptown office.

LATE W. A. WALSH, M.P.P.

Simcoe, Ont., Feb. 14 —(CP)— With members of the provincial legislature, including Premier Geo. Drew, as well as a large number of civic and party officials in attendance, the funeral was held Saturday of the late Wallace A. Walsh, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Haldimand Norfolk who died suddenly on Wednesday in his 67th year.

UNDER MILITARY CONTROL

London, Feb. 14. (CP)—German authorities have placed the entire French Mediterranean coast under the same strict military control which long has been in force along the "invasion coast" of northern France, the German-controlled Paris radio said today. Affected, said the broadcast are the departments of the Eastern Pyrenees, Aude, Herault, Gard, Bouches Du Rhone, Var and Alpes-Maritimes.

DO FOXES CLIMB TREES?

A good way to start an argument is to bring up the question whether foxes climb trees.

The answer is "Yes," and "No."

Foxes are not true tree-climbers. They are members of the dog family and their claws are not adapted to climbing trees in the strict sense of the phrase.

All ordinary foxes occasionally walk or run up inclined trunks of trees and even climb into the lower limbs. But they cannot jump from one bough to another like many members of the cat family and they are not at home among the branches.

The American red fox does very little tree-climbing except to walk up slanting trunks or large limbs. Very rarely does this fox seek safety in trees even when pursued by dogs or other enemies.

The common gray fox of Eastern America is sometimes called "the tree-climbing fox," because it is very agile and often climbs trees, although it does not do so expertly.

This fox generally does not hesitate to climb trees either in pursuit of food or safety. Hunters, however, report that even many gray foxes when run down by dogs make no attempt to save themselves by climbing trees.

Apparently the gray fox ordinarily climbs only small trees and then only to a height of 20 feet or so.

Both the gray fox and the red fox will at times, when hotly pursued, spring into a low fork of a tree to elude the dogs and walk out on a limb to a height of 20 to 30 feet.

This is also characteristic of the British fox.

It is said that individual gray foxes have been known to climb small trees by clasping the trunk and ascending somewhat after the manner of a bear.

On this subject Dr. Elsey, noted American naturalist, wrote:

"Whether the grays ever climb trees in pursuit of prey I am uncertain, but they take to a tree as readily as a cat when hard run by hounds. I think it nearly certain that they climb for persimmons and grapes. Red foxes never climb trees under any circumstances; when hard run they go to earth. Gray foxes run before hounds only a short distance, doubling constantly and for a short time, when they either hole in a tree or den. It is but a poor pack which fails to kill or tree a gray fox in an hour's run."

WEDDINGS

GRINDROD—KENNY

Picton, Feb. 14—An interesting wedding took place at the Church of St. Mary Magdalene here when Ruth Iona Kenny, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Kenny, Trenton, became the bride of LAC. George H. Grindrod, R. C. A. F., Mountain View, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Grindrod, Picton. Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne officiated. The bride wore a wool suit of plumage blue with black hat and accessories. She carried sweet peas and carnations. Mrs. Vernon Lockwood, Picton, attended her sister, wearing a two-piece dress of navy blue with matching accessories, and carrying a bouquet similar to that of the bride. Mr. W. J. Walmsley was groomsman. After a trip to points west, LAC. and Mrs. Grindrod will reside in Picton.

BROWNING—HOLLAS

The Olivet Baptist Church, Toronto, was the scene of a lovely midwinter wedding on Saturday afternoon, Feb. 12, at three o'clock when Lillian May Hollas, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Hollas, of Toronto, became the bride of Douglas Browning, son of Mrs. J. Browning and the late Mr. Browning, of Belleville. The Rev. J. K. Holland officiated at the ceremony. Soloist on the occasion was Miss Jean MacDonald.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a picture of loveliness in a floor-length gown of white velvet, fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long tight fitting sleeves ending in points over her wrists and softly gathered skirt falling in graceful folds. Her fingertip veil of bridal tulle illusion was caught to her hair with a halo headdress and she carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Miss Joanne Holmes, of Toronto, as maid of honor, was wearing a street-length ensemble of plum velvet hue, with matching hat and carrying a nosegay of pink roses.

The bridesmaids were the two sisters of the bride, Grace and Marie Hollas, who were attired in acquamarine velvet dresses with matching hats and carrying nosegays of pink roses.

Mr. Jim Browning, brother of the groom, Belleville, acted as groomsman and the ushers were Jack Lindsay, of Toronto and A. A. Cargill, Signalman, Moose Jaw, Sask.

A reception was held in the church parlors following the ceremony, when the bride's mother received the guests wearing navy blue and corsage of pink roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother attired in a heaven blue ensemble with corsage of pink roses.

On the wedding trip west, the bride selected a gold dress, black coat with silver fox collar, silver fox muff, gift of the groom, black accessories and corsage of gardenias.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were from Belleville, Windsor, Capreol, Kingston and Cleveland, Ohio.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Party for a Married Friend

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have a friend who has been married two years, and now is just about to move into a home of her own. When she was married, she did not have a real wedding, and therefore received few gifts. Now I would like very much to have some sort of party or housewarming for her. All our friends are mutual friends, and I know they would all enjoy giving her something useful for her new home. Would this be proper and practical?

Also there is the problem as to where to give the party. My home is very small, and my friends and I cannot afford to rent a place to give the party. My friend's home is large. Is there any way I could give the party in her new home? As we are very intimate friends, I know she would not mind, if this would meet with your approval.

Should I invite both husbands and wives?

—C. H.

I think, don't you?, that all your problems would be solved, and most happily, by your planning to give a surprise housewarming at your friend's new home. Have every plan most carefully made beforehand. Have your party either late Sunday afternoon, or in the evening. Invite both husbands and wives. Give your invitations by word of mouth or by telephone, and pledge everyone to secrecy. Have it a "shower" housewarming if you wish, and have the guests bring individual gifts, or perhaps contribute to a joint gift. Plan a "carry-able" menu, and assign the items to be brought by each guest.

Then you'll have to get someone to be "in cahoots" with you, either to have the guests of honor at home, or to come home at some appointed time. You and your husband, or some other couple, might invite them to an early dinner, or to an early showing of a movie, and invent some excuse for going with them to their home, where the other friends would be waiting or would arrive presently. Or if you can find out when they are having someone in to dinner, the guests could arrive about the time the dinner is ending, having met somewhere in the vicinity. Since you know her so well, you'll undoubtedly be able to find out or connive a suitable opportunity; perhaps even if you know where she leaves a key, the party guests could take over the house, have everything in readiness, and all lights extinguished when the guests of honor arrive!

Addresses on Printed Paper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As a gift I received some stationery of the fold-over type, with my name in the centre of the page, and on the back of the envelope. On this kind of stationery where should the address and date be written?

—D. H.

Whether these are folded-over cards, the so-called "Informals" (as I judge they may be), or small note-paper (which sometimes, tho' not very often, have the name engraved in the centre of the first page), you may, if you wish, write your address in the lower right corner of the first page. Otherwise nothing is written on the front page. The message or note is written on the inside page or pages, with the date and address (if not written on the first page) written on the top of the page, as on any letter.

The Marry-Go-Round

DO MEN WANT TO BE FOOLED?

Those brave nurses and CWAC's, who have been dehydrating out in Africa without benefit of permanents, facials and long bobs, will get their reward in the knowledge that they have been loved and admired for themselves alone, not for the artful aids of their vanity cases.

"Woman's vanity-case," claims a masculine reader, "has been the grave of all man's illusions. Her frankness has robbed him of his Santa Claus and taken the edge off his thrills."

Fee-fi-fo-fum! Apparently he means, that once upon a time, men believed that a girl came into the world with a Veronica Lake bob, arched eyebrows, curved red lips, a Lana Turner figure and the fragrance of Enchantment, Amourette and fresh gardenias.

But that was so long ago! Only a middle-aged man can remember what a kiss was like without the taste of lipstick. And every man knows how and where a girl gets her "rose-petals complexion," her feminine curves and her healthy suntan glow. Doesn't he read the advertisements?

He has held the mirror while she "painted a nice, fresh face on herself," between dances. He has watched her repair her "smile" and touch up her girlish color between the hors d'ouevre and the soup; and has waited patiently after the demi-tasse for her to powder her nose and pencil a little extra shadow under her eyes.

Even her subtle, alluring redolence is no secret to him. He knows that it comes in a flacon which she will at any moment uncork and casually apply to the lobes of her ears, and it cost her PLENTY.

Moreover, she has told him confidentially just how she keeps from "getting fat," and has discussed her reducing diet, her soul secrets and the sex-question with him, quite frankly and unblushingly. He even knows her moral standards and just how many children she'd want if she married.

But is he grateful to her for refusing to go on fooling him? Does he appreciate her honesty and frankness in wising him up? Not a bit! He is as sore as a small boy who has just been told that "there isn't any Santa Claus." He WANTS to be fooled!

At least, that's what he thinks and says. But, I have noticed that there is a much better understanding and closer comradeship between young men and girls today because of this mutual frankness. And, after marriage, there are fewer shocks, surprises and disillusionments. When they marry, each knows what he or she is getting. Why should they want to be fooled?

When love is just a sweet, delirious intoxication, marriage is an awful headache. To be happy, you should go into marriage with your eyes wide open; afterward, you should discreetly close them.

Mr., Mrs. A. Thrasher Honored by Neighbors And Friends in Sidney

On Friday evening, Feb. 11, the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thrasher gathered at their home on the fifth concession of Sidney to honor them before they leave for their new home in Frankford. Mr. Sam Nicolson acted as chairman and asked Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher to occupy the seats of honor. Miss Ela Phillips read an appropriate address. Both Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher thanked the community for their gifts, which were a rose satin bedspread and an all-wool blanket. They also extended a cordial welcome to everyone present to visit them in their new home. Lunch was then served.

L.-S. Raymond Giffin Of Belleville Wedded In Dockyard Chapel

Halifax — Miss Doris Bellamy, daughter of Mrs. Mary Bellamy, of Athens, Ont., was married here recently to Leading Seaman Raymond Giffin, of Belleville, Ont., in a pretty naval wedding at the Royal Canadian Navy Dockyard chapel. Rev. J. B. Corston, R.C.N., of Saskatoon, Protestant naval chaplain, conducted the ceremony.

The bride, who wore a sea blue dress with a V-shaped neckline and white collar was attended by Wren Fay Wood, of Saint John, N.B., who was attired in her navy uniform.

Leading Seaman Barry Baxter, R.C.N.V.R., of Ottawa, a shipmate of the groom, was the best man. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of relatives for close friends and relations.

QUINTE W. I.

On February 8th, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell entertained the Quinte W.I. to a social evening and a program planned for grandmothers' meeting was held. There was an attendance of around fifty. The president, Mrs. A. Greatrix, opened the meeting. The convener, Mrs. A. Mitchell, took charge of the following program: Reading, "Do You Remember When?" Mrs. D. Atkins; paper, "How to Keep Young," Mrs. M. B. Weese; address, "Our District President." Mrs. H. Harrison read an appropriate poem, "Grandmother's Valentine" and gave a talk on "What to Salvage from the Past;" music, Manley Mitchell and Mrs. Ryan; reading and solo, "When Grandma was a Girl" and "The End of a Perfect Day," Mrs. F. Parrott; reading, "Be Careful What You Say," Mrs. S. Gummer. Mrs. Gummer was the only great grandmother present. Piano solo, Mrs. Ryan; song, "The Grandmothers," "When You and I were Young," music, Manley Mitchell and Mrs. Ryan; contest, "What We Have Now That Grandmother Missed." Good wishes from all the members were extended by the convener and were expressed to Mrs. H. Murphy that she might soon be fully restored to health. Kind thoughts and wishes were also expressed for Mrs. A. Snider, another great grandmother, who was not present at the meeting. Thanks were extended to Mrs. F. Mitchell for opening her home for such a pleasant evening, to Mrs. Harrison, who is always welcome as the district president, to Mrs. M. B. Weese for her lovely talk and to all others who assisted in the program. While the meeting was in progress, the gentlemen enjoyed an evening playing euchre and in social intercourse. Mrs. F. Mitchell and conveners served lunch. The March meeting is to be held at Mrs. F. Parrott's.

MOUNTAIN VIEW W. I.

The February meeting of the Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Will Burkitt on February 2nd with 20 members and 3 visitors. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Clark Spruy. Bills were then presented and voted paid. Letters and other printed matters were read and short discussions followed. It was voted that $10 be sent to Picton Red Cross. A short prayer followed. The topic, "Home Economics" was taken by Mrs. B. Anderson, who gave a well prepared paper and talk and many good mottos and examples were given to put in practise. Mrs. Clifford Barker gave a paper on "Meat Extenders or Alternates" and gave many useful recipes for left-overs, and ways to help out with meat dishes. A contest was put on by Miss Lillian Sprague with prizes going to Mrs. Clark Spruy and Mrs. Douglas Harves. Collection amounted to $3.20. The hostess served fresh fruit and a social half hour spent.

Wife Preservers

When substituting brown sugar for white, use weight for weight, not measure for measure, as brown sugar is lighter in weight per volume than white. Brown sugar should be packed solidly in cup; granulated should not.

HEALTH CHATS

DR. HERMAN N. BUNDESEN Health

OVERWEIGHT

Foods contain energy values. When you rest, work, or play, you use up this energy. If the food you eat daily contains more energy value than you use in your daily life, the excess energy is stored up in the form of fat. Extra fat means overweight. The extra weight puts a burden on the heart, injures the circulation through the arteries, damages the breathing organs and interferes with digestion. It also puts an added burden on the pancreas, a gland that manufactures substances needed for digestion—particularly insulin, which is needed for the utilization of sugar by the body.

How can a person tell if he is too fat? There are a number of ways. Some prefer to check their weight with a table showing about how much the average person should weigh at his age and height, but such tables are subject to great error.

According to Doctor Elmer L. Sevringhaus, of Madison, Wisconsin, the best way of telling whether or not you are too fat is to look in the mirror. A person should not attempt to reduce his weight to too low a level just to fit the styles of fashion, but, on the other hand, an excess of body fat is dangerous to health and should be gotten rid of.

Why do people get too fat? Some think that it is due only to the wrong kind of food habits. Dr. Sevringhaus does not agree completely with this idea. He thinks that people vary a great deal in their need for foods, depending not only upon the amount of exercise they take, but also upon certain characteristics of their bodies.

Overweight is rarely due to a disturbance in the glands of internal secretion, such as a lack of thyroid secretion. The problem is to maintain the right balance between the amount of food taken in and the amount of energy used up. If more food is eaten than is required to supply the body with the energy for work and other activity, a gain in weight is likely to occur. Some people find that they gain weight even if they eat little food. They are misled because there may be a temporary gain in weight, due to an excessive intake of fluids, or because they do not realize just how much food they are eating.

One of the patients studied by Dr. Sevringhaus was a woman about thirty years of age who lacked social contacts and had but few interests in her life. She had problems connected with an invalided mother. She took refuge from these problems by over-eating and, as a result, naturally gained a great deal of weight.

It has been noted that overweight seems to run in families. Whether this is an inherited tendency, or whether it is due to similar habits of eating and living among the members of these families, is difficult to determine.

One thing that seems certain is that reducing can be accomplished if a well-balanced reducing diet is employed.

Fashion Flashes

THERE'S NO HIDING the blouse with the brief, cardigan-type jacket of the new Spring suits. The soft shirtmaker type with neckline tied in a big, soft self bow is tops for this type of jacket and scattered flower prints on a white ground are nice.

ALWAYS LOVELY is the combination of brown with pink. A charming afternoon frock, a slim sheath of dark brown crepe has its deep sweetheart neckline piped with pink satin, that extends to form two big satin roses in the centre of the bodice.

ALMOST A UNIFORM, but a nice one, is the beaded peasant type blouse, a one-piece model made to look like a two-piecer through the black skirt. Made for early Spring evening wear is a pretty model with peasant blouse of starched chiffon in white with bands of tiny mother-of-pearl and iridescent blue sequins. Deep U neck with gathered line. Black triple sheer skirt.

READY FOR DUTY come Spring with almost any type of frock, suit or slacks is a self-tie belted wrap-around in nude pink fleece with semi-saddle shoulders, deep armholes and easy fullness.

A NICE ALLIANCE is satin with crepe, seen often for late Winter afternoon frocks. Black crepe is used for a street-length frock made with scroll-trimmed pink satin for the cap sleeves and pull-through band across the bustline. Nice with azure blue satin too.

HALF A HAT is better than no hat at all. A beautiful half hat is made of carnations shaded from pale pink to deep red and arranged across the head extending to below the ears at the sides.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's Considering Marrying Her Brother-In-Law

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My sister has been dead nine years, and for the past five years I have been deeply in love with her husband and he loves me. He does everything to make me happy and I know he never goes with anyone else.

He is overseas now, and when he gets back, do you think it would be all right if we got married? He has no children.

R. H. K.

Why not, if you're both in love? There is no law in this country against marrying a deceased person's husband or wife. Formerly such a law prevailed in England but it was rescinded in the reign of Edward VII, grandfather of the present King.

He Wants His Gifts Back

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I went with a young man for three years and we had planned to marry next June. His father and mother came over and discussed our marriage with my parents. My boy friend talks things over with his mother and then tells me about it.

We had an argument a few weeks ago about going out New Year's Eve. His parents wanted to go wherever we went. My father and mother never go any place with us. And I'm afraid now we're going to break up on account of this argument.

For my birthday he gave me a beautiful ring, and this past year he gave me a cedar chest. Now he wants both gifts back. Do you think I should give them to him?

C. K.

When a young man asks for the return of his presents, it shows a "shabby streak," don't you think so? The question of an engagement ring is a different matter altogether. The contract is broken and the thing which stands for the contract should be returned. But with birthday gifts and the cedar chest, well, it shows a side that might be trying to live with.

As for his parents wanting to go with you on New Year's Eve, it seems to me few young people would care for such a foursome on that date. If you decide to break with him, in your place I should return his gifts, for my own satisfaction, though the request is unusual.

Argyll Sergeants Entertain Officers And Their Wives

Three strips were tops on Saturday night when the sergeants' mess of the Argyll Light Infantry entertained the officers, their wives and sweethearts at a Valentine party. The whole upper floor of the Armouries was turned over to the sergeants for the occasion, which they had decked out in the traditional St. Valentine finery of red and white. Not that there was not plenty of pips and crowns about, but it was sergeants' night all around. The sergeants had arranged it; the sergeants were all there and they and their host of friends had a real time for themselves.

Red and white hearts were the order of the night as far as decorations were concerned and they were arranged in every possible spot. Even the tables were done in that particular color scheme.

It was just one grand informal party — one could try his hand at community singing, play cards, dance, play table tennis or merely sit around and chat. At midnight delicious refreshments were served which had been prepared by Mrs. Sam Johnson.

Silverleaf Lard

Now in good supply and very reasonably priced, this fine cooking fat should be on every housewife's shelf

There was a time not so very long ago, when there seemed to be a real risk that we in Canada might find ourselves short of cooking fats. Fortunately, the efforts of Canadian farmers have averted that danger and now there is no reason why every kitchen in Canada should not be supplied with a pound or two of that wonderful standby, Silverleaf Lard.

Not only is lard a very valuable source of energy but it also contains other vital elements absolutely essential to health. Use lard in delicious deep-frys, for pan-frying and of course in baked goods. It is good—good for you—and we now have enough.

Martha Logan

DEEP APPLE PIE

| | |
|---|---|
| 1½ cups sifted pastry flour | ½ tsp. baking powder |
| 1 tsp. salt | 7 tbsps. chilled Silverleaf Lard |
| | Ice cold water |

Mix and sift into a bowl the flour, salt and baking powder. Cut half of lard into these dry ingredients, to the size of wheat grains—then cut in remainder of lard, to the size of small peas. Sprinkle with cold water, and mix with a fork, adding enough water to make a dough which will just form a mass that cleans easily from the bowl. Chill.

FOR THE FILLING:

| | |
|---|---|
| Tart apples | ½ teaspoon grated nutmeg |
| Sugar, white or brown | 2 tablespoons butter, if available |
| 1 teaspoon grated Orange rind | |

Peel, core and slice apples. Mix sugar (amount depending upon tartness of apples), orange rind and nutmeg. Arrange apples and sugar mixture in alternate layers in a deep pie dish, dotting with butter. Moisten edges of dish. Roll out paste, slash and place over apples. Trim and crimp edges. Bake in a hot oven, 450° F., for 12 minutes, then reduce heat to 375° F., and bake until crust nicely browned, about 30 minutes.

Detroit Wings Bolster Hold On N.H.L. Second Place By Defeating Boston Bruins

Toronto Leafs Hold Third Place by Losing and Winning Over Weekend

CANADIENS TIE HAWKS

Four weekend National Hockey League contests served to widen the gap between the league-leading Montreal Canadiens and the tail-end New York Rangers, but did little to clarify the race for contending positions between the other four teams—Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks.

Only one of the six clubs took full advantage of their opportunities, Detroit defeating Boston 4-1 Sunday in its only weekend engagement. But the Wings failed to gain ground on the third-place Leafs, who whipped Rangers 6-3 in New York Sunday after dropping a 3-2 verdict to Canadiens in Toronto, Saturday.

The results left Toronto still four points behind Detroit and three points ahead of Boston. Chicago lost a chance to tie Bruins for fourth spot by playing to a 2-2 draw against Montreal at home Sunday after blowing a two-goal, first-period lead. It was the seventh tie for Montreal—against 24 victories and four losses —and all but one of the stalemates ended in a 2-2 score.

Canadiens scored five goals in their weekend contests to move seven games ahead of Detroit, but only four Montreal players figured in the scoring. Maurice Richard scored three times, twice against Toronto on plays with Elmer Lach and Toe Blake, and once against Chicago on a pass from Leo Lamoureux, who tallied unassisted against both Toronto and Chicago.

Boothman Scores Two.

Mush March and George Allen scored the Chicago goals against Montreal while George Boothman fired both Toronto counters. Against Rangers Sunday, Boothman again tallied, Lorne Carr scored twice and other Toronto scores were distributed evenly between Ted Kennedy, Elwin Morris and Gus Bodnar.

Leafs had to come from behind to win, as Ott Heller and Johnny Mahaffy scored early for Rangers. Heller scored his second goal midway in the second period, but Leafs had sewed up the game by that time. It was the 29th defeat in 37 games for Rangers.

Boston's two-game winning streak came to an abrupt end against Detroit, despite the return of Bill Cowley, who had been on the sidelines since Jan. 8 when he suffered a shoulder separation in a game at Toronto. B. Jennings, H. Jackson, both defencemen, gave the Wings a two-goal advantage in the first period and they never looked back. After a scoreless second period, Bill Quackenbush made it 3-0 before Norm Calladine produced Boston's lone counter on a play with Johnny Crawford. Carl Liscombe added a superfluous fourth tally for Detroit at 15:37 of the third period.

Carr's two points against New York, Sunday, stretched his total to 59, three fewer than Herb Cain of Boston, who leads the individual scoring race with 62 points.

1944 Golf Ball Situation Not Good Says Pro

Attention golfers . . . Beware! In checking a report coming from the Dunlop Tire and Rubber Company, it was ascertained from Bill Little, local "Pro", that the 1944 golf ball situation is drastic. Mr. Little said that no golf balls had been manufactured in Canada during the past two years and that none will be manufactured in 1944.

This throws the Belleville golf enthusiasts into the position of digging out their old golf balls and sending them in for re-conditioning but with a twenty-five percent chance of not receiving the balls back. Some golf balls have been used until they are beyond reclaiming and as such are discarded by the company. When asked to report on the number of golf balls available in the Belleville district, Mr. Little said that there were sufficient balls to give each golfer at least twelve apiece. So, if the game is to continue this coming summer, now is the time to get the job done. An individual cannot send golf balls to the company himself; it must be done by the "Pro" or by one of the sporting goods stores in the city. The companies have guaranteed at least 80 percent returns and will make a five cent allowance on each ball sent in.

A warning is also issued to non-golfers . . . please do not phone the hospital, or the police, if you should see one or more of Belleville's more prominent business men crawling on hands and knees, gnashing his teeth and tearing up great clods of turf and grass . . . he is only searching for a ball that has gone into the rough, and is definitely not insane. It might be a good idea to equip the club house with a large net . . . just in case.

Merriton Cage Team Looms As Contenders for Honors

(By The Canadian Press)

The star-studded Hayes Steel Basketball team of Merritton, Ont., looming as chief contender for Canadian Court honors this season, scored an impressive 53-33 win over the York five, leading Toronto Senior League Club at Toronto, Saturday night before the largest crowd in several years. With six American specialists in action, Merritton showed smooth action, one of the stars being Bruce Fountain, former All-American husky of Iowa University who scored seven out of eight four shots with ease.

Others who made every move count were Sal Maglie, former pitcher of the New York Giants, Angelo Pastore, former Syracuse University star, and D. Bazzanni, late of Niagara University. Their stylish play proved a revelation to Toronto fans. Former American ball-tossers also added brilliance to a preliminary game in which the R.C.A.F. team of Malton, leaders in the air force loop, worked out a 36-32 victory against the research stalwarts from Leaside, who boasted Ray Taylor, a former University of Michigan speed-artist.

Gilbert Dodds, the pace-making parson of Boston, won the Hunter mile in the 55th annual Boston A.A. games Saturday in 4:09.5 to break the six-year-old local record held by Glen Cunningham by half a second. Dodds finished 18 years ahead of Bill Hulse of the New York A.C.

Winner of the best-in-show title Saturday night at the Westminster Kennel Club exhibition in Madison Square Garden, New York, was Ch. Flornell Rare-Bit of Twi Ponds, marking the first time the award had been captured by a Welsh terrier. The dog is owned by Mrs. Edward P. Alker of Great Neck, New York.

Robert Coleman, coach of the team under the former manager, Casey Stengel, Saturday was named manager of the Boston Braves under a one-year contract. Coleman's first act was to appoint as Braves' coach Tom Heehan, manager of the Minneapolis Club of the American Association.

President Branch Rickey of the Brooklyn Dodgers Saturday announced the mailing of contracts to 28 players at the same or better salary terms as last year. He stated six Dodgers had already signed up for 1944.

In the rain at San Antonio, Tex., Sunday, Byron Nelson slopped through mud to register a 68 for a 206 in 54 holes to come within one point of the leading Johnny Revolta for the 72-hole $5,000 Texas open golf tourney. Running third was Harold (Jug) McSpaden.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By CHARLIE EDWARDS

Toronto, Feb. 14—(CP)—Vancouver expects to stage a $5,000 golf tournament this summer featuring many of the top United States professionals.

George Norgan, prominent sportsman, has been in touch with the P.G.A. which favors staging a Vancouver tournament because most of the big-name stars will be at the P.G.A. tournament at Spokane, Wash., Aug. 14-20 in any event. It's an easy hop from Spokane to Vancouver.

"If Spokane can put up $20,000, Vancouver shouldn't have much trouble with a quarter of that," says Morgan, who sponsored the big jubilee tournament in Vancouver in 1936 when golf's greatest stars completed for a rich purse.

If the big tournament is held in August, Vancouver's Quilchena course is considered the probable locale.

JUVENILES HOLD ONE-GOAL LEAD

Play Return Game With Trenton Here on Tuesday Night

Enjoying a one goal advantage the Belleville Juveniles, make their initial home appearance in the O. J. H. A. versus the Trenton juveniles at the Hume Arena on Tuesday night in the second game of the first round of Provincial juvenile play-offs. Belleville won the first game in Trenton 6 to 5 giving Bill Dennis's locals a one goal lead to take into the second game of a home-and-home series with goals to count on the round.

Coach Dennis signed Harry Boyd, former Grimsby forward now attending Albert College, and intends to use Harry Wardaugh, of the local junior squad, on the same line with Boyd tomorrow night. Coach Dennis has a fast skating sextette of juveniles with Morris Rollins in goal defended by a pair of hard-hitting defenceman in Doug Adams and Doug Green. Incidentally Adams scored the winning goal on a solo effort in Trenton. Bruce Bishop and Al Meagher were the chief goal-getters in Trenton, as the locals played strong team hockey. Coach Rome Taylor used five junior players against the Belleville kids in the first game, but it made little difference to the speedy Belleville kids. Then on Wednesday night the Belleville and Trenton juniors meet in an O. H. A. play-off game here.

GENERALS SWEEP TO 10-5 VICTORY OVER HAMILTON

Oshawa Earns 19th Win of Season and Stays Ahead of St. Michael's

LIONS WIN

(By The Canadian Press)

Oshawa Generals swept to a 10-5 victory on home ice Saturday night in turning back Hamilton Whizzers in a junior "A" fixture of the O. H. A., thus earning their 19th win of the campaign and keeping four points ahead of Toronto St. Michael's for leadership in group 1.

Ken Smith was again the main performer for Generals with four tallies while Curry turned in two as his share. Bob Love, Dawes, Ezinicki and Chenier dividing the rest. Murray Comfort stood out for Whizzers with three counters, Clancy and Tomiuk scoring one each. Hamilton remained in third place in the group standing.

At Brantford, in group 2, Gordon Tottle of the Lions whipped in the sole counter of the tilt to register a shutout against Port Colborne Recreationists. The score came after 15:45 of the third period. The result brought Brantford to within one point of Port Colborne for the third play-off spot in the group.

Saturday afternoon at Toronto, St. Michael's administered a 6-0 whitewashing to Young Rangers for the latter's 21st licking of the season against one win. To Gregoire fell the honor of scoring a brace of tallies, the others being distributed among Melong, Bauer, Schnurr and McCormack.

WEEKEND STARS

(By The Canadian Press)

Maurice Richard, Canadiens, who scored two counters Saturday night when Montreal defeated Leafs 3-2, and another last night when they battled to a 2-2 deadlock with Chicago Black Hawks.

George Boothman, Toronto, who made the two Leaf tallies Saturday night.

Mike Karakas, Chicago netminder, who held Canadiens to a draw despite an eight-stitch cut over his eye.

Gus Bodnar, Toronto's play-making centre, who scored one goal and assisted in three others when Leafs trounced Rangers 6-3 last night.

Harold Jackson, Detroit, who clinched Red Wings' 4-1 victory over Boston Bruins last night when he scored the second tally after he had assisted in the first.

HERSHEY BEARS BLANK BARONS TO BREAK STREAK

Cleveland, Up to This Game, Had Eleven Consecutive Victories

BEARS BEAT SUNDAY

(By The Canadian Press)

Cleveland Barons, leaders of the American Hockey League, had their record-breaking streak of 11 consecutive victories snapped Saturday night when they were blanked 5-0 by the second-place Hershey Bears.

However, paced by Pete Horeck who scored five goals, they came back last night to trounce the cellar-dwelling Providence Reds 9-4. Buffalo Bisons set back Bears 5-1 while Indianapolis Capitals defeated Pittsburgh Hornets 3-1 in the other league encounters.

Nick Damore, Hershey netminder, gained his fifth shutout of the season as Bears showed speed and skill when they whipped the leading Barons. Fred Hergert and Henry Lauzon scored in the second, and in the final frame Lauzon added another counter. George Patterson and Bud Jarvis bagged the other two.

Last night Providence Reds didn't have a chance when Barons staged a comeback. Horeck's scoring spree was unchecked. He bagged three counters in the first period, one in the second and the fifth in the third. Tommy Burlington got two counters while Lou Trudel and Les Cunningham bagged the others.

Roland Forget, Jack Toupin, Bill Whittet and Gordon Reed scored for Reds.

Heavy Penalty List.

In the Buffalo-Hershey game, Fred Thurier, Fred Hunt and Larry Thiebeault, members of Bisons' star forward line, each contributed one tally. Roger Leger and Bobby Walton got the other two counters.

Fred Hergert got Bears' lone score in the opening frame. Billie Moe, Hershey defenceman, and Walter Atanas of the Bisons, drew major penalties for a fight in the third period. George Patterson of the Bears joined them shortly afterward in a 10-minute misconduct, and also was fined 75 by Referee Billy Holmes.

Indianapolis scored two goals in the final frame to defeat Hornets 3-1. Jerry Olinski bagged the first tally for Caps at 17:58 in the second period. Cliff Barton tied the score less than a minute later.

Red Morrison and Winky Smith each scored a goal for Caps in the final frame.

A counter by Tony Hemmerling in the last two minutes of play gave Pittsburgh Hornets their 4-3 triumph over Providence Saturday night. Tony Demers led Reds' attack with two goals to tie the score halfway through the third after Hal Cooper had scored one in the opening frame.

Art Giroux and Lloyd Roubell each gained a tally for Hornets in the second Hemmerling bagged one in the first.

What's Doing in Sport

Edmonton. (CP)—Twice winner of the Dominion Curling Championship, the Edmonton Royal Rink, skipped by Cliff Manahan, cleaned up the 27th annual Alberta Bonspiel Saturday, winning the grand challenge, King Edward, Edmonton motors and grand aggregate trophies.

New Orleans. (AP) — Olympic Zenith, recently purchased by William Helis for $65,000, created a stir Saturday at fair ground by Copping the $15,000 Louisiana Derby against a strong field and became a prime prospect for the Kentucky Derby.

Miami. (AP) Woolford Farm's Silvestra, ridden by Ted Atkinson of Toronto, Saturday scored a narrow victory in the $5,000 Black Helen handicap at Hialeah Park. Director J. E. became a favored Kentucky Derby prospect by coasting to a win in a six-furlong event. The pari-mutuel handle for the day was $1,016,797, a new local betting record.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

Kept Appointment

Robinson had died and gone below. Hardly had he settled down when a hearty hand slapped him on the back, and into his ears boomed the familiar voice of a persistent traveller, "I'm here for that appointment."

"What appointment? I certainly don't remember making it."

"You don't mean to tell me you've forgotten it? Every time I came into your office to interest you in my proposition, you told me you'd see me here."

(Hockey roundup.)

This week will see the biggest hockey program ever staged at the Hume Arena. Starting tonight with one of those pleasing service league games the Deseronto "Mohawks" and the Mountain View "Bombers" tangle.

Tuesday night local puck fans will get their first glimpse of Bill Dennis' 1944 edition of the Belleville juveniles, the team that stepped into Trenton and won over Rome Taylor's kids 6-5 despite the fact the home sextette boasted of five of Stan Jackson's Trenton juniors aboard. Skipper Dennis says he is only going to make one change in his lineup tomorrow night when he will use Harry Wardhaugh, who is of juvenile age, from the junior ranks. The local juveniles have new red and white uniforms, they are pretty much all Belleville boys and should command strong following of local fans. The series is a home-and-home round with goals to count, giving Dennis' kids one counter to the good when they open hostilities tomorrow night.

Then on Wednesday night Toots Holway's Belleville juniors face elimination in defeat at the hands of Stan Jackson's Trenton kids, who won the first game of the group playdowns 6-5 in overtime last Friday. The same situation holds good for Jerry Quinn's Tweed juniors, who entertain Stirling the same night. In the first group play-off Belleville led the Trenton kids pretty much all of the way, only to lose in overtime. Holway's charges scored the first and third goals in the third period and bagged the initial counter in the overtime, but ultimately bowed out. District hockey fans have been getting plenty of thrills from junior O.H.A. games this season, but Wednesday night's affair should just about prove the tit-bit of the season, as the local sextette has its back to the wall.

On Thursday night there'll be another Air Force doubleheader while on Friday evening the Quinte Skating Club is presenting its gala "Ice Carnival" that boasts of named skaters from Toronto and Ottawa, as well as our own splendid talent. And that's the program at the arena for the next five nights.

Chet Ross of the Boston Braves and the twice-champion St. Louis Cardinals were the chief strikeout victims of Johnny Vander Meer, now of the U.S. Navy, while he was leading the National League pitchers in strikeouts for Cincinnati each of the last three years. Of Vandy's 562 strikeouts the past three seasons 110 came against the Cardinals, 99 against the Cubs, 93 against the Braves and 92 against the Phillies. He pitched 139 rounds against the Cards and 131 against the Cubs.

Ross was the individual leader in watching third strikes from Vandy's left arm whiz over the plate, fanning 14 times. Ross whiffed ten times in 18 turns at bat against Vandy in 1943 and connected with Johnny's pitching for only two safeties, one a double.

More than 14,000 Toronto hockey fans cheered as Ace Bailey and Eddie Shore clasped hands 10 years ago tonight at a benefit game for the former Toronto right-winger. Bailey's hockey playing career had been ended when he suffered a fractured skull, Dec. 11, 1933, in a collision with Shore in a game at Boston. On his recovery a benefit game was arranged with the Bailey-Shore reunion the attraction. Leafs won the game 7-3.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 362

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Stagger along with me through some more pointers on scoring. Points are what you are striving for in a bridge game. Know what points you can get for this or that.

Some of the points you win are for odd tricks. Odd tricks are tricks in excess of six. They must be taken in a contract that has been bid and made.

In clubs or diamonds, each odd trick pays 20. In hearts or spades, each odd trick pays 30. In no-trump, the first odd tricks pays 40 and each subsequent odd trick pays 30.

Only the made tricks you have bid can apply toward the making of a game. Before opponents do, if your side accumulates 100 points for odd tricks bid, you get credit for a game.

When you win two games, you get credit for winning the rubber. If you win the rubber before opponents have won a game, you get a bonus of 700. If they have won a game, your bonus is only 500.

In rubber bridge, it is possible to be paid a bonus for winning only one game. That happens when play breaks up before the finish of the current rubber.

For instance, your side won a game when a player had to quit. Your side gets a bonus of 300 points for winning one game in an unfinished rubber.

Another bonus for something in an unfinished rubber is when a pair has a part score in an unfinished game. Such a pair gets a bonus of 50 points.

In party bridge where the type known as game-a-hand is played, it is not rubber bridge. So, there can be no unfinished rubbers. But a bonus of 50 points is paid for making a part score in one deal.

Do some figuring with this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A Q J 8 4
♥A K 6
♦K
♣9 8 5 3
NORTH
♠K 6 5 3
♥Q 7 4
♦A 10 5 2
♣6 4

South became declarer at a contract of three spades and took 11 tricks. He gets 150 points for the five odd at 30 points each. But only 90 points, the three odd bid and made, apply on game.

In rubber bridge, if all the players quit after that, south would also get 50 points bonus for a part score in an unfinished game. In party bridge, too, even though play continued.

To some players, this is as clear as mud.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sarong Girl"

A real phenomenon of show business is Ann Corio, who comes to the Capitol theatre tonight as the star of the Monogram musical film, "Sarong Girl."

For years she packed every burlesque theatre in which she appeared, and her admiring fans ranged from sweatered laborers to the late Oliver Wendell Holmes, Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court, who never failed to see her perform when she played in Washington.

Credited with being the inventor of a new dancing technique in burlesque, Ann progressed to the point where she was earning a salary of $1,000 per week. For several years she remained at the top of the heap, until she suddenly abandoned the burlesque stage to make her debut as a legitimate actress as Tondeleyo in "White Cargo," at a salary of only $100. She had determined to become an actress, rather than merely a burlesque queen.

The cast supporting Miss Corio in "Sarong Girl" includes Tim & Irene, Bill Henry, Damian O'Flynn, Henry Kolker, Johnnie "Scat" and his band, Mantan Moreland and many other top-notch entertainers.

"Stand By For Action"

The added special attraction, M.-G.-M.'s "Stand By For Action" is the mightiest naval drama of all time! Drama unmatched since "Mutiny On The Bounty" spectacularly rode the waves! What a picture! Cheers for its heroism! Laughter for its humor! America will love it as it loves the navy!

You'll thrill when the captain says "We've got 22 babies aboard this ship! They were bombed out of Pearl Harbor! They were torpedoed at sea! But they're going to live, come hail or high water!" This man's navy is taking them home!

A great cast of stars including Robert Taylor, Charles Laughton, Brian Donlevy are in this naval drama "Stand By For Action" with Walter Brennan, Marilyn Maxwell, Henry O'Neill and Marta Linden.

The Canadian Universal News will also be shown.

AT THE BELLE

"Salute to the Marines"
in Color

As timely as a military communique, M-G-M's "Salute to the Marines", Wallace Beery technicolor starrer, is a tender, inspiring story of American heroes and is currently at the Belle Theatre.

A dramatic picturization of the U.S. Marine Corps, "Salute to the Marines" marks Beery's thirtieth year in pictures and one of the most colorful roles of his career.

The film also brings Fay Bainter, beloved and renowned stage and screen actress, and Beery together on the screen for the first time. Beery portrays a hard-bitten, lusty and garrulous Marine sergeant, veteran of 30 years' service. Miss Bainter is his peace-loving wife who persuades him to retire to a so-called "peace settlement."

Two-Fisted, Action-Packed

Action-packed, two-fisted and replete with Beery humor, "Salute to the Marines" shows the leathernecks in the Philippines. The story centres about Marine sergeant Beery, but it also pictures the typical Marine fighting his country's battles. It was filmed in co-operation with the U.S. Marine Corps.

Beery and Miss Bainter are supported by a noteworthy cast. Reginald Owen portrays a Nazi fifth columnist posing as leader of a peace-loving Filipino community. Ray Collins is Beery's kind but gruff colonel. Marilyn Maxwell and William Lundigan supply a romantic angle. Keye Luke is an ex-Filipino boxer. And Donald Curtis, a new screen find, is an infantry lieutenant who also seeks Marilyn's hand in vain.

"Salute to the Marines" moves at a fast clip. Action and drama are expertly balanced with humor. Battle scenes, vividly depicting an invasion of the Philippines, highlight this heart-warming story of the Marines.

The Canadian Paramount News and "Stork's Holiday", the latest of the popular M-G-M colorfun cartoons will also be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"In Old Oklahoma"

Occasionally Hollywood turns out a historical film of such scope, such universal appeal, such production values and such general excellence that it becomes a veritable document.

In their latest de luxe film "In Old Oklahoma," based on Thomson Burtis' story "War of the Wildcats", which opened to a most receptive audience at the McCarthy theatre on Saturday, Republic has done just that.

The picture has everything, as far as box office is concerned—the most brilliant of stars, beautiful settings and production numbers, action, suspence, thrilling romance, plus a stirring delineation of life in the earlier days of our national history in one of the most colorful of its settings.

John Wayne and Martha Scott co-star in the picture, being ideally cast since they are both perfect "types" to portray the pioneer spirit of self-reliance, adventure and bravery. John Wayne's characterization is typical of him—slow, easy going, earnest and sincere, while Miss Scott brings to her role the elusive whimsical quality that made her an overnight hit in "Our Town."

Albert Dekker's role as romantic rival of Wayne's for her affections is full of fire and vitality; he holds his audience throughout, and expertly handles a somewhat difficult characterization.

Marjorie Rambeau long a popular star of stage and screen contributes many a comedy sequence in her role of "Bessie" a rough-and-ready hotel proprietress.

Added attractions include the latest Andy Panda cartoon in technicolor Meatless Tuesday, and the latest World News.

5 CLUBS ELIGIBLE TO REPRESENT WESTERN CANADA

Many Will Need Replacements for Players Not Eligible to Compete

ESKIES LOOK BEST

Winnipeg, Feb. 14 —(CP)— Five clubs are eligible to represent Manitoba in the Memorial Cup playdowns this spring but fans believe the one that does will be a composition.

Both Winnipeg Monarchs and St. James Canadians who will battle it out for the Winnipeg south division crown are expected to add replacements for players prohibited from participating in the national playoffs under navy, army and air force bans.

Winnipeg Esquires, Canadian Athletic Club and St. Boniface Athletics, principals in the Winnipeg north division playoff picture are expected to follow suit. In fact the Esquires have already obtained the services of Billy Tindall, 17-year-old defenceman. Tindall is considered top rearguard in Manitoba junior hockey this season.

Playoffs for the Winnipeg north division title start tomorrow night when C.U.A.C. meets St. Boniface in the opening game in a best-of-three semi-final series. The winner meets Esquires in another series for the championship.

Eskies Top League.

Esquires topped the league during the regular season's play, scoring 16 wins plus a tie. C.U.A.C. had 11 wins and a tie for second place and St. Boniface five for third.

Monarchs and St. James launch their best-of-seven series for the south division championship Feb. 21 with the winner meeting the north division titlists for the provincial championship.

During the regular schedule Monarchs earned nine victories and St. James seven.

Port Arthur West Ends hold a two-point margin over H.M.C.S. Griffon for first place in the Thunder Bay junior league. The Westies have scored five victories compared with four for the Sailors. Port Arthur Flyers have three triumphs, Fort William Columbus Club none.

Port Arthur Shipbuilders top the Thunder Bay war workers senior league with three successes. Fort William Canadian Car, the other entry, has two.

CANADIAN ARMY TEAM OUTKICKS, OUTPASSES U.S.

Many of the Great Football Players of Dominion Take Part

SCORE IS 16-6

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Feb. 14 (CP Cable) — A Canadian army team that sparkled with talent outkicked and outpassed the American army Pirates and surged to a convincing 16-6 football victory before a roaring crowd of more than 30,000 at White City stadium yesterday.

With a roster bearing a similarity to a pre-war all-star selection, the Canadian Mustangs held their heavier opponents to a scoreless tie in the first half that was played under American football rules. Then they cut loose under Canadian regulations in the second half and finished the game with a razzle-dazzle touchdown in the last few seconds.

Outstanding in the Canadian triumph in this first "tea bowl" game were Lieut. Orville Burke, Ottawa Roughrider quarterback from 1936 to 1941, and Maj. Dennis Whitaker, a Hamilton Tiger great.

Burke Pivots Plays.

Burke pivoted most of the plays and two of his forward passes were stretched into touchdowns that brought the crowd to its feet. Whitaker, who won the D.S.O. at Dieppe and now is second in command of the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry, made a fine running mate on sweeping end runs.

The Mustang kicking was done by Sgt. Red Bell, former Toronto Parkdale collegiate player who never had major rugby experience. Other stalwarts with the Mustangs included Maj. Jeff Nicklin, Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Capt. Ken Turnbull, Toronto Balmy Beach, Lieut. Nick Pathouski, Queen's University, Kingston, Sgt. Doug Mackenie, Toronto Argonauts, Lieut. P. G. Shaughnessy, McGill University, Montreal, Lieut. Andy Bieber, Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who did much of the line-plunging, and Capt. Hawley (Huck) Welch of Hamilton Tigers.

128 RINKS OPEN ONTARIO SPIEL

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—Play opened today in the week-long Ontario Bonspiel with 128 rinks—more than 500 curlers—taking part in the annual classic. Eleven of the rinks are from the United States.

Twenty of the rinks come from northern Ontario with one of them—skipped by W. J. Card of Chapleau—winning a prize well in advance for the 1945 'spiel. He paid his entry fee for next year's event as he reported for this year's.

First draw today is at nine a.m. in the Royal York trophy. Other draws are at two p.m. three p.m., six p.m. and nine p.m.

NEWSMAN WRITES

And, the pilots added, although rations were good, they delighted in food parcels from home. They asked for packages of cheese, which arrive in good condition, crackers, tomato ketchup, (something they never see unless it comes from Canada), candy; above all, cigarettes. What becomes of cigarettes is a mystery which agitates every serviceman to whom we have talked. They are sent, but many times fail to reach their destination. One chap told us his wife mails him a thousand a week, but sometimes two months have gone by without a shipment—and the missing packages never do turn up. They made the suggestion that Canadian communities and service clubs "adopt" Canadian fighter squadrons, keep them supplied with the small luxuries which make so much difference to a pilot waiting for his dangerous call. It is something Canadians might like to take up.

By the way, the airmen said, do not send custard powder. That is one of the things Britain isn't short of.

* * *

The Wolf Squadron was very proud of its new crest, just approved by the King and not yet formally presented, showing an heraldic wolf in vivid red above the motto "Stalk and Strike," which seemed particularly appropriate. The motto of the Red Indians is "On the War Path."

And again on the subject of what the Canadian airmen want, one of them told us that when they moved to their present quarters, and were able to buy coca cola in the canteen, the drinking of beer and spirits was cut 90 percent. He mentioned that the previous evening he and five other young fellows went to the mess bar for a drink and every one ordered something soft. Had this not been available they still would have had a drink.

* * *

In the late afternoon we drove back to London to a conference with officials of the Ministry of Information about our tour of the provinces. As we entered the court they ran out over the main entrance the Union Jack with the Canadian ensign on the fly—may we call it the flag of Canada without entering a controversy? At any rate it was a nice compliment.

Then we went on to a reception given for us at R.C.A.F. Headquarters by Air Marshal Breadner, who was full of confidence, good humor, and above all pride in his men. "They are grand boys," he said.

That feeling is reciprocated, if one can judge by what we heard—the men think he's a grand chief One of them told us this story. A little while ago a Canadian squadron distinguished itself by shooting down eight German aircraft in seven minutes, or seven in eight minutes— at any rate a very fine piece of work. Somebody called the Air Marshal at his home in the evening, told him the news, suggested a message of congratulations to the squadron was in order. At once Air Marshal Breadner telephoned the station. In the mess of the victors there was a bit of celebration, and inhibitions were perhaps loosened.

The young officer who took the message thanked him and added "Why don't you come down and see us, Sir?" "I'll do that," the Air Marshal replied, and the next day he was there. The men of the R.C.A.F. will do anything for a commander so human, so competent, so much one of themselves.

Picton and District

Large Shipment Sent to Red Cross By the County

Picton, Feb. 14.—Shire Hall presented an interesting display of Red Cross work on Saturday. The articles were those to be sent in the next shipment to Red Cross headquarters and were the work of members of the various War Emergency Committees throughout Prince Edward County. Mrs. C. H. McGibbon, convener of the work room, was in charge.

Nearly 300 quilts were displayed with a variety of patterns. The ladies take great pride in their work and the quilts are very attractive as well as serviceable.

Long tables were covered with knitted goods for all branches of the Services, layettes were such to delight the hearts of recipients overseas, and a wide list of hospital supplies and clothing was also shown.

Picton Collegiate Junior Red Cross featured layettes and baby's blankets and afghans in their display. The wives of officers of the R.A.F. and the Home and School Club also contributed articles.

Articles suitable for the inclusion in layettes were placed in a baby's basket by the visitors and a nice lot was received.

This is an annual display and reveals the outstanding work being done by Prince Edward women.

Snow plows were called into action for the first time this year on Saturday. Snow during the night was accompanied by a strong wind which caused large drifts. All the main roads are passable but some side roads are blocked. Adding to the difficulties of motorists was the fact that the road beds are covered with ice and those cars which stall in the heavy snow have difficulty in extricating themselves.

POINT TRAVERSE

Feat Recalled

Point Traverse, Feb. 14—Thirty-two years ago today, Feb. 14th., 1912, Mr. George Bilkie, the lonely resident of the Main Duck Island, who was reported dead, arrived at Point Traverse after a thrilling experience of crossing 12 miles of frail ice from the Ducks, with a punt on runners and an ordinary pike pole. For the first two miles Mr. Bilkie had open water then a series of glare ice, rough hummocks, and a few pools of water. It took him eight hours to cross over to this mainland, arriving in an exhausted condition, having been ill all winter.

Mr. Bilkie's feat of more than a quarter of a century ago would be impossible today. The twelve-mile passage between the Main Ducks and this peninsula is open water. There is a large field of floe ice between the islands and any attempt to cross over by small boat or even on foot would be a hazardous one for even the most daring adventurer.

Fishermen Optimistic.

Commercial fishermen who operate from here and nearby points, have an optimistic outlook that a good run of whitefish will be netted this coming season. Many yards of new whitefish and herring net have been purchased by the fishermen, and it is their conclusion that the summer white fishing will be fair, at least.

Film on Preparation Of Nickel for War Use Is Now Available

Toronto — Painstaking preparation of nickel and its alloys, vital Canadian metals, for use in planes, ships and guns, is portrayed in a new 16-millimeter sound film titled "Men, Metal and Machines" which has just been made available for showing without charge.

The film, which was produced in co-operation with the United States Department of the Interior, is a tribute to Canadian resourcefulness in developing our resources of the metal that contributes rust-resistant properties, hardness, toughness and strength to the tools of war.

Intricate processes by which the coppr-nickle matter is separated into its constituents are shown in scenes of high pictorial quality. Giant overhead cranes charge the furnaces, and after careful inspection the white-hot molten nickel is poured into giant ladles. The 3,300 pound ingots are stripped from the molds, surfaces are milled and inspected, surface imperfections are removed by chipping machines.

In the hammer shop are produced the wrought forms of nickel and its alloys. Forging of sheet bars and rod blooms is shown. Finishing of special forgings, processing of rod blooms into billets, making of large rods, strip and wire, hot-rolling and cold-rolling are all pictured.

The film, which is already in demand by schools, colleges, churches and civic and business organizations, is being lent to those interested by The International Nickel Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

JUST WILD RUMOR

Chatham, Ont., Feb. 14—(CP)—Hon. St. Clair Gordon, chief commissioner of the Ontario Liquor Control Board and Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Kent west, yesterday described as "wild rumor" a report currently circulating in this district that he plans to resign his liquor control board post to become House leader of Liberal members for the Feb. 22 opening of the legislature.

Decision of King Not to Alter Title Quite Satisfactory

By DAPHNE FAMBRIDGE
(Reuters Court Correspondent)

London, Feb. 14—(CP-Reuters)—The decision of the King not to alter the title of Princess Elizabeth, who comes of age April 21, when she will be 18, has given general satisfaction here. I understand that personal as well as official and constitutional reasons led to His Majesty's decision.

The Princess herself was consulted as to her own wishes, I am told, and she expressed decided preference for the style and title by which she has always been known.

Queen Mary, whose counsel is often sought by the King, was another of those whose opinion figured in the decision, and it is also understood that the Earl of Athline, Governor General of Canada, and one of the senior members of the Royal Family, was asked for his views on feeling in the dominions about the matter.

No slight is, of course, intended or conveyed to the Welsh protagonists who sought to have the Princess made Princess of Wales. There were difficulties in the way of that proposal which were in the King's view, insuperable, and to have created any other title for the heiress presumptive would have been likely to cause dissatisfaction.

Given More Responsibilities

Although no drastic changes are contemplated in the Princess' way of living, her coming of age will mark a step forward in her responsibilities to the state and empire.

From her birthday onwards, she becomes, under the terms of the newly-amended Regency Act, one of the counsellors of state who will deputize for the King in any absence abroad and it is generally believed that the King intends to make her privy councillor, perhaps on her birthday, as a means of introducing her to some of the daily routine of official business that comes to the sovereign all the year around.

If this step is taken, she will be the first heiress to the throne ever to be a member of His Majesty's most honorable privy council and thus to share in the secrets of the Royal Council Chamber.

It is likely, too, that her public appearances will be more frequent than hitherto and that the King will probably permit her to accept the presidency of other offices on various bodies and institutions. But her education will continue under direction of constitutional experts and university professors.

LONG ROAD AHEAD

New York, Feb. 14—(CP)—Hugh Dalton, president of Britain's Board of Trade, yesterday warned Britons against complacency, saying, "We have a hard, steep, bloody path to tread before the war can be won either against Germany or Japan," the BBC reported.

CHAPTER 10

It is only a twenty-five minute run to Mount Vernon. Tony was off the train before it had fairly stopped, and jumped into a waiting taxi.

"Police headquarters,' he said, and five minutes later the taxi stopped in front of a long, low building on Mount Vernon's public square. "Wait for me," he said to the driver and hurried into the building and asked for the chief of police. He was shown at once into his office, and found him to be a tall, slim man with a lined and weather-beaten face, looking intelligent and good-humored. Tony introduced himself.

"Oh, so you're Antony Bigelow," said the chief, and shook hands. "My name's Jenkins. I read your column. I like the way you handle your crime stuff. What can I do for you?"

"I'm trying to get some further information about the suicide of Lawrence Terry last Monday," Tony explained.

Chief Jenkins took a folder out of a tray on his desk and opened it.

"The case is closed," he said, "and I was just going to file the papers. Let me see. Oh, yes, here it is. We got the call at three-thirty on Monday afternoon."

"Was it made by one of the family?"

"No—it was made by Dr. Hamilton. His office is right next door and the colored woman who works for them had run over and called him in. Terry's son had just found the body. I was out there inside of ten minutes.'

"Terry was dead?"

"Oh, yes; he had died instantly. He had sat down at his desk, written a little note saying that he couldn't stand his ill-health any longer and that he was going to end it. Then he had picked up his revolver—an old-fashioned Smith and Wesson .35 which he had had for a long time—put it to his right temple, pulled the trigger, and fell forward across his desk. He was dead before Hamilton got there, so Hamilton didn't even touch him, and I found him that way. His revolver was still in his hand, and there was blood—more blood than I'd ever seen before from a wound like that. The medical examiner said that was because the bullet had severed some artery."

"Did Terry have a permit for the revolver?"

"No. I dont suppose he'd ever thought of a permit. He had always lived in Virginia, and they don't need one down there.'

"He has a daughter, I understand.

"Yes, a mighty pretty girl."

"Was she at home?"

"No. She had run down to New York for something,' said the police chief in answer to Tony's question concerning Miss Terry.

That was the explanation, Tony told himself. She had gone to Max's place because she hadn't known of the tragedy . . .

"And she didn't get back that evening?"

"Oh, yes," said Chief Jenkins, looking at Tony in surprise. "She got back about an hour later. Why did you think she didn't get back?"

"Because I saw a girl in a night club Monday night whom I took for her. But I see now I was mistaken.' Tony explained.

"Of course you were," Jenkins agreed. "She wouldn't have been in any night club. She and her brother were both terribly upset. I called Bernstein, the medical examiner, and he looked things over; then he took the body down to the mortuary, got the bullet out and found it fitted the gun. There wasn't any other injury. The note and the fact that Terry had been ill for a long time with some sort of nervous disorder made it a clear case. So Bernstein wrote out a certificate of suicide."

"Where's the body now?"

"Sam Ware, the undertaker, took charge of it. I understand they are going to take it back to Virginia tonight. The Terrys came from there about a year ago. He was a professor or something."

Tony nodded.

"Just one thing more, Chief. What happened to the revolver?"

"I don't know. I suppose Bernstein has it. Why?"

"I just thought I'd like to see it."

"I'll find out," said Jenkins; he picked up the telephone and asked for Bernstein's office. He put it down again after a short conversation and turned back to Tony. "Bernstein says somebody must have taken the gun off his desk after the autopsy and stuck it away somewhere."

"It doesn't matter," Tony assured him. "I'm much obliged to you Chief," and he got back into his taxi and gave the driver the address of the Terry house.

Westchester Avenue, he found, was one of the principal residence streets, with prosperous looking homes surrounded by well-kept lawns and shaded by lofty trees, which were just showing the first tender green of spring. The Terry address proved to be an unusually attractive cottage, set well back from the street.

The door opened in answer to his ring and a plump colored woman of middle age stood looking at him. One of the Virginia servants, Tony judged.

"I should like to see Miss Terry," he said.

"Miss Leda ain't seein' nobody, suh."

"I have some information for her which she ought to hear," Tony persisted.

"I's sorry, suh, but Miss Leda ain't seein' nobody."

"Will you take a note to her?"

"Yes, suh, I reckon I kin do that."

He got out his pen, took one of his cards from his pocket, and wrote across the back:

> Miss Terry: The police will soon be here looking for you. I think I can help, if you will see me.

The woman closed the door and he could hear her walking away along the hall. In a few minutes she opened the door again.

"Come in, suh,' she said. "Miss Leda will see you,' and she led the way into a room at the right of the hall. "She said to wait here."

"All right," said Tony. "No hurry."

The woman left the room and he looked about it curiously, for he had seen the instant he entered it that it was the study where the tragedy had taken place. The walls were lined with shelves jammed with books. There was a couch by one of the windows, with a reading lamp beside it. A flat-topped desk stood near another window, and as he looked at it, his heart skipped a beat. On the desk stood a vase, and in the vase was a bunch of white carnations.

"Mr. Bigelow?" said a voice from the doorway behind him, and he turned to see a girl standing there—the same girl he had seen at Max's place with Jack McKibben. She had his card in her hand. "Why should the police be looking for me?"

Her voice was steady, but her face was very pale and her eyes deeply apprehensive. She was more charming, more fragile, than he had imagined. He would have liked to spare her, but there was no time for that.

"They are looking for you because you were with John McKibben Monday night,' he said, "first at Max's place, and afterward in his apartment."

Her face grew paler still, and she came a few steps toward him. "How do they know that?" she asked.

"They don't know it yet. But they will know it as soon as they see you. They've got your description."

"And they are coming here?"

"As soon as they find out that your father was one of McKibben's customers. Very probably they're on their way now. I suppose it was your brother who was chasing McKibben around that night with a gun in his pocket."

She looked at him and then again at his card.

"And you came here to get some gossip for your column?" Leda's lips were curling now. She tore the card in two and dropped the pieces on the floor. "You had better go."

"All right," said Tony, curtly. "Take it that way then. I saw you at Max's Monday. I saw that you were frightened. I thought I might help you. You are in a serious position, Miss Terry—both you and your brother. I don't know all the evidence the police have, but it is quite a lot. There is one bit right here in this room."

"What do you mean?"

"That bunch of white carnations. Carnations figure in this case? They're incriminating."

She took a step toward them and then stopped, listening. From down the street came the wail of a police siren.

"There they are now," she said. "What shall I do?"

Glancing out the window, Tony saw a police car swing up to the curb, and Duffy with two policemen jump out.

"Where is your brother?" Tony asked.

"He went down to the station to get the tickets for Williamsburg. We're leaving tonight. He should be back any minute."

There was a ring at the door.

"Did he kill McKibben?"

"No," Leda cried, "No, he didn't!"

'In that case," said Tony rapidly, "there is only one thing for both of you to do, and that is to tell the truth—all of it—and help the police find out who did. If he is guilty, you should refuse to talk at all until you have consulted an attorney."

"He is not guilty."

"Then tell all you know."

There was a tramp of heavy feet in the hall and Duffy walked into the room.

"Hello, Tony," he said. "So you beat me to it! Is this the girl you saw with McKibben at Max's place?"

"Yes."

"Now we're going places! Where is your brother, Miss Terry?"

"He went down town," she answered, almost inaudibly.

"Where to?"

"To the railroad station."

Duffy's face was suddenly alert. "Is he going away?" he demanded.

"Oh, no—not till tonight. He'll be back. . ."

Leda stopped as the front door opened and someone stepped into the hall.

"What's going on here?" asked a voice. And then a handsome, dark-skinned youth appeared in the door way. "What are these policemen doing here, Leda?"

"We're doing a bit of investigating, son," Duffy answered. "Come on in," and as the newcomer entered the room, the other two officers closed in behind him. "Now let's sit down, while you tell us all you know about the murder of Jack McKibben."

The boy stared back at the detective defiantly. "I don't know what you're talking about," he said.

"Oh, yes you do," Duffy retorted. "You might as well sit down. You'll be more comfortable."

Tony looked at the girl, pale and apprehensive, and then at her brother, tense and flushed with anger. The contrast between the two was striking. Leda, evidently the elder by a year or two, was blonde, gray-eyed, delicately built, with a face at once piquant and appealing—just the sort of girl who instantly arouses a man's protective instinct. It was evident that she was far better poised than her brother, with his dark and passionate face, full lips and brooding eyes.

"I have already advised Miss Terry to tell us the whole story, Jim," said Tony, to relieve the tension.

"That's right," Duffy nodded, "and I'd give her brother the same advice. Though, of course, it's his privilege to keep his mouth shut and get a lawyer."

"I don't need any lawyer," protested the boy quickly. "If you think I killed that fellow McKibben, you're wrong. That's what I started out to do . . ."

"Wait a minute," Duffy broke in. "I always like to begin at the beginning. And first, suppose we all sit down. That's better. Now, my boy, tell me first about your father."

His father, Terry said, had been professor of American history for many years. Leda had graduated from college the year before. He would graduate the coming June.

'How does it come you're at home now?" Duffy asked.

"It's Easter vacation. I've only been home since Sunday."

"How old are you?"

"I will be twenty in June."

The family had been a happy one, but two years previously a ghastly tragedy had struck it. Their mother had been burned to death. Their father had never recovered from the shock. He had tried to go on with his work for a time and then had been forced to ask the college for an indefinite leave of absence. His friends thought it just a nervous breakdown from which he would soon recover, but it was deeper than that. His local physician had sent him to New York to consult a specialist, and on the latter's advice he had removed to Mount Vernon the year before in order to have regular treatments. He had grown much better.

"Why, when I saw him Sunday," said the boy, "he seemed exactly like his old self. He was sure that he would be able to start work again in the fall, and was very happy about it. Monday morning, when he went for a treatment, he remarked that he was sure he wouldn't need many more. Leda can tell you that."

"Yes," agreed the girl, "he was taking an interest in things again. He seemed perfectly well. I was to meet him at three o'clock, and we were going to an art exhibit. I waited nearly an hour, but he didn't come . . ."

Her voice trailed away . . .

"And then you came on home?" Detective Duffy asked.

She nodded mutely.

"I didn't see him when he came home," young Terry went on. "The fact is," he added, flushing a little, "I hadn't done so well at the Easter exams and had some work to make up. There's a little shack in the back yard that I use as a sort of workshop when I'm at home and I took my books out there right after lunch, started a fire and settled down with them. I didn't know what time it was, but suddenly I heard somebody screaming. When I looked out the window, there was Lucy running down the path toward the shack . . ."

"Who is Lucy?" Duffy inquired.

"She's the cook — the coloured woman you saw .. "

"Go on."

"I ran out—she screamed something about father being shot. I ran into the house, into this room. Father had fallen forward across his desk there. Blood was . . all over everything. He had upset a vase of flowers. It was all over them."

"What sort of flowers?" Duffy asked.

"Carnations. He raised them in his greenhouse. There are some on his desk now."

Duffy glanced at the flowers on the desk and then his eyes met Tony's. "It looks like we're getting to the bottom of this case at last," he observed. "Was there a gun on the desk?"

"Yes, in his hand."

"Whose gun was it?"

"It was his — he'd had it for years."

"Go ahead. What did you do then?"

"I didn't do anything. I just stood and stared."

"Was there a note on the desk?" Tony asked.

"Yes, but I didn't see it then."

"Well, what happened?" asked Duffy.

"The first I knew, Lucy came in with the doctor who lives next door. He looked at father and called the police. They came and took charge of things. They found the note. It just said he had killed himself because he was so ill—and that wasn't so at all. It was because . . ."

HOPKINS' SON KILLED

Washington, Feb. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt Saturday night informed his long-time friend and adviser, Harry L. Hopkins, that Hopkins' 18-year-old son, Stephen, had been killed in the fighting to wrest the Marshall Islands from the Japanese.

Hopkins was on his way South, to rest and to try to improve his health, when he received word of his son's death. The lad, a marine who chose action in preference to service training in college, was buried at sea. He was the youngest of Hopkins' three sons by the first of three marriages.

TENNIS BALLS AT THAT

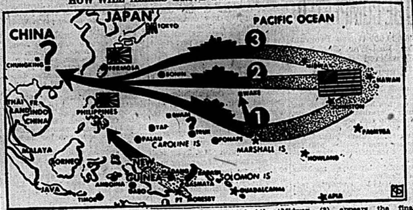
With Canadians in Italy, Feb. 14. (CP Cable)— Maj. Jim McAvity of Saint John, N.B., looked down from his armored command vehicle upon a sea of mud, snow and slush, and sighed "at last" as he opened his first Christmas parcel.

Its contents were: A dozen tennis balls.

HOW WILL ALLIES DRIVE STRAIGHT TO CHINA?



The recent declaration by Admiral Nimitz that "his forces intend to drive straight across the Pacific to China to gain bases for the final defeat of Japan" is certain to raise many questions which this map seeks to illustrate. Since he made the statement shortly after the Marshall Island victory. Kwajalein harbor (1) will doubtless figure prominently. Either Truk or Wake (2) must be openly defied by convoys or quick action taken against them. If Wake is knocked out this "straight drive" might challenge the Jap fleet to "come out." A more northerly route via Midway (3) appears the final possibility. Where will they try to land in China? That's as hard to answer as how a run near the Philippines or Formosa can be managed. As arrow indicates, action from New Guinea and New Britain may figure in the plans.

Independent Board of Radio Commissioners Favored

Quebec. Feb. 14.— (CP)— Glen Bannerman of Toronto, today told the Canadian Association of Broadcasters in his presidential address that development of radio in Canada has brought a "distinct danger to freedom of the air, to freedom of speech and to exchange of ideas".

Mr. Bannerman, in addressing the opening session of the Association's annual convention, criticized the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation and warned against centralization and warned against centralization of radio control and administration.

After reviewing proposals for solution of radio problems, Mr. Bannerman said he personally favored creation of a three-man Board of Radio Broadcasting Commissioners consisting of a full-time chairman and two members "who would be as independent as our judiciary".

He suggested they should be appointed for a period lasting until a set retirement age. The Board would pass on all applications for licences, would approve all applications and contracts from both CBC and private stations, and establish a minimum of regulations governing the CBC and private stations in the interest of service to the public.

Under the plan, said Mr. Bannerman, the CBC would continue to own its present stations and operate a national network. At the same time, if there is need for two networks, then the private stations should be given an opportunity to form the other network.

Present System Dangerous.

Mr. Bannerman declared the present system of broadcasting is dangerous to the best interests of the public and that there is a real danger of private radio being placed in a position where it is generally becoming impossible for it to meet its obligations to the community.

The press and radio should be the guardians of democracy, said Mr. Bannerman. "No system of broadcasting, no restrictive regulations, whether in the name of the people or not, must ever be allowed to prevent you from carrying out your obligations to your fellow men in your community", he added.

Mr. Bannerman said his criticism of the CBC did not apply to members of the Board of Governors personally. He declared it was "most unfair" to place upon the Board of Governors "the responsibility for establishing and developing broadcasting policy for all broadcasting in Canada".

"It is impossible for the Board in its brief meetings to deal fully and adequately with all the various matters connected with their responsibilities", he added. "As a result, there have been innumerable delays in dealing with policy matters and decisions have been put off from month to month".

Mr. Bannerman said the Board members "are the victims of a system of which tends to become more and more centralized and bound up in red tape".

Competition between the CBC and private radio was a good thing, said Mr. Bannerman, "except that the Board of Governors is placed in the position of a man umpiring a ball game who at the same time is the manager of one of the opposing teams. It doesn't matter how fair he tries to be in his decisions, he is bound to be suspected of favoring the team he manages".

ESCAPED RUSSIAN WAR PRISONERS REACH EGYPT

Tell of Atrocities at Hands of Germans — Heavy Death Rate Among Prisoners

Alexandria, Egypt, Feb. 14—(AP)—Beatings, torture and death from cold and hunger are the lot of Russian prisoners in German hands, five Red army soldiers who have escaped from the Axis said here.

The men now are at a British camp in the desert near here, awaiting repatriation after reaching the Allied lines in Italy.

Pte. Valentine Sizakim, an anti-tank gunner in the Red army's 96th Division, was captured in February, 1942, near Chernikov.

He said Russian prisoners were herded into vast German prison transit camps, then selected like cattle for heavy labor squads.

Conditions were so bad in one camp at Belaya Tserkov that 28,000 Russians died of cold and hunger, he said. At another camp, the daily death rate among a shifting population of about 13,000 was 150. Women and children were imprisoned and treated the same as soldiers, he declared.

Sizakim said he and thousands of others were shipped to the Ruhr and employed at heavy manual labor. They received only a small portion of bread and two bowls of soup daily. Many died.

CHRISTMAS PRESENT STOLEN

St. Catharines, Feb. 14 (CP)—Nine-year-old Joe Houlden today is without the black and white spaniel pup he had received for a Christmas present. Joe told that he was playing with his pet yesterday when a man got out of a car and seized the dog. As he got back into the car Joe called, "hey, that's my dog."

"Well, what about it," the man said as he drove away with the dog.

Charge Antonescu Hastening Rumania To Final Catastrophe

New York, Feb. 14 —(CP)— The Soviet publication, War and the Working Class, was quoted by the Moscow radio today as declaring that Premier Ion Antonescue and his associates were hastening Rumania to "her final catastrophe" by continuing to carry out the orders of Hitler.

The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission. It said in part:

"In 1941 Antonescue sent 28 to 30 divisions and four brigades of about 1,000,000 men, to the Soviet-German front. A sad lot was in store for this Rumanian army. Near Odessa and in the Crimea they lost about 250,000 men in dead and wounded.

"After the smashing of the Germans in front of Moscow, Antonescue sent further divisions to the Soviet-German front at Hitler's behest. By the first of March, 1942, the losses of the Rumanian army amounted to about 400,000 men.

"At the approaches of Stalingrad alone the Red army, in six weeks of fighting up to Jan. 1, 1943, smashed 16 Rumanian divisions.

"Later two other Rumanian divisions were destroyed together with the German 6th Army. After that the remaining parts of the Rumanian army were . . . destroyed or taken prisoner. Thus the Rumanian army was completely smashed.

"Now only a few severely-mauled Rumanian divisions remain in the Crimea and in the Ukraine to the right of the Dnieper and those are in miserable condition."

FATAL ENDING OF ACCIDENT.

Guelph, Ont., Feb. 14. (CP)—Injuries received when struck by a car at Hillsburg resulted in the death in hospital here of Benjamin Martell, 52, of Dundalk. Martell was walking along the railway tracks to a farm near the village when he allegedly stepped into the path of a car driven by Gordon Gregson, R. R. 1, Hillsburg. An inquest will be held.

Keeping Morale At High Standing Most Important

Toronto, Feb. 14—(CP)—A group of 40 educational officers of the R.C.A.F. in annual conference at the No. 1 Training Command here today were told by Air Commodore G. N. Irwin: "The most important task confronting you officers at the present time is that of keeping the morale of the men on a high standing."

The conference continues until Wednesday and is co-ordinated with similar meetings of Canadian army and navy educational service officers.

Wing Commander H. R. Low, the R.C.A.F. director of education, declared that at present there are more than 7,000 men and women of the R.C.A.F. who are making good use of their spare time in academic, business or technical courses as a result of educational facilities placed at their disposal by unit educational officers of the R.C.A.F.

Educational officers are also proving their worth, he added, by assisting ground crew personnel to acquire the necessary educational qualifications for transfer to air crew. "To-date, nearly 11,000 have re-mustered to air crew," he said.

TORONTO EXCHANGE

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—Golds were slightly lower this afternoon on Toronto exchange. Other groups posted sizeable gains. Volume was small at 249,000 shares.

Falconbridge and Nickel were base metal gainers against small declines for Ventures and Steep Rock. Bids for the golds were raised and sale went through at higher prices for Preston, O'Brien, Beattie, Queenston, San Antonio and Kirkland Lake.

Food, paper and miscellaneous industrials ruled higher. Senior oils held steady and Brazilian, Gatineau Pfd. and United Fuel A were weak utility issues.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 14 (AP)—Selective demand continued in today's stock market with a few rails and specialties exhibiting further quiet strength while many leaders refused to stir out of the neutral zone.

Wall Streeters returned from their lengthy holiday a bit more bullishly inclined as the news from the critical Italian battlefront seemed to have improved. Business and political questions still were viewed as handicaps by numerous customers.

Trends turned a shade mixed after a fairly steady opening and, with dealings slowing, fractional variations either way near the fourth hour left the general direction in doubt.

Canadian stocks were quiet with Dome Mines up a fraction and Canadian Pacific unchanged.

Braniff Airways made a new 1943-44 high.

Hopes for a whisky distribution to share owners provided another prop for Park & Tilford stock and for Dunhill International which owns a block of the former.

Robbery Foretold By Teacup Reader

Toronto, Feb. 14 (CP)—Mr. Sydney Silver of Toronto is just about convinced that tea-cup readers know what they're talking about.

"A few days ago a teacup reader told me: 'Your house is going to be broken into and you will lose heavily'," Mr. Silver said today after his home had been robbed of $1,600 in cash and $2,000 in valuables last night. "When I got home last night I took one look at the mess and fainted."

It was the largest house robbery of the year in Toronto.

Allan Mills

Allan Mills — Donald Stewart, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Stewart, of the 9th. Concession, was treated in Campbellford Hospital on Wednesday afternoon, following an accident in which he severely cut his left foot with an axe. He was working for Mr. Chester Meiklejohn, when the axe he was using glanced off a tree and cut through his boot into the top of the foot just below the ankle. Mr. Meiklejohn rushed him by car, a distance of seven miles, to the hospital and on arriving Stewart was showing signs of weakness from the loss of blood.

Mrs. Fred McKeown is spending a few days with Mrs. Bill Morton.

"They March Better on Tea"

Commandos march better on tea than on water. This fact has been demonstrated by an official test recently carried out in Great Britain. A Canadian battalion was undergoing a 12-days' course of battle training. The last six days were devoted mainly to marching, and during the period the footsloggers covered more than 280 miles. As an experiment, three out of four platoons were allowed to get all the water they wanted. The members of the fourth platoon were kept entirely off water and were served only with tea. The "water platoons" made good use of their water bottles, but the "tea platoon" was the only one to finish the course intact. Which only goes to show that there must be something in the soldier's traditional liking for "a cup of rosie lee." (Extract from the "Tea and Rubber Mail.")

SPEAKS FOR PRISONERS

Rochester, England (CP) — The Bishop of Rochester, Dr. C. M. Chevasse, urging service wives to remain faithful, said the chief hardship of so many prisoners of was is "not the food, not the ill-treatment, but the haunting fear that when they regain their liberty they will return but find no home."

The Modern Hearing Aid Gives Full Value For its Cost.

I was making a purchase in a store recently and as the clerk turned to a nearby counter I saw that he was wearing a small hearing aid. I told him I was a physician and interested in the hard of hearing because so many of these individuals seemed more willing to try to read your lips than wear a hearing aid. He admitted that he had formerly depended on lip reading and being as near the speaker as possible, but he found the strain severe, had been fitted with a suitable hearing aid and was now a part of his surroundings able to hear everything. It was a great relief as he was not now nervous or tense.

In pointing out the great improvement in hearing aids since the last war, Howard A. Carter, in Hygeia, states:

"A small vacuum tube hearing aid is essentially a midget radio. Just after World War I a head set radio, consisting of a heavy 6 volt storage battery, amplifier and detector, head receiver and B batteries weighed as much as 25 to 30 pounds and occupied a volume of two to three cubic feet. Research and refinement in technical skill have compressed the amplifier into a space a little larger than a woman's compact case and the batteries are small enough to be carried conveniently in one's pocket". Similar progress has been made in the art of fitting a hearing aid to match the particular loss of hearing. Complete with battery, the modern hearing aid—amplifier, receiver, and all—weighs about 12 to 14 ounces. That the hearing aid of the future may weight as little as one ounce seems possible, when we remember that the previous weight was 36 times more and the size 400 times that of the present hearing aid.

The thought then is that modern hearing aids, properly fitted to suit the type of loss of hearing present, make it possible for the hard of hearing to earn the same living as if they were not hard of hearing.

Further, and this means so much to happiness and health, the hard of hearing can now freely mix with friends and acquaintances and take part in all conversations, together with the full enjoyment of sermons, lectures and plays. When we think of all this means in life, the price and upkeep of a suitable hearing aid is well worth what it costs.

SUSPEND ITALIAN PAPER

Naples, Feb. 14—(CP)—Suspension for a month of the Italian Royalist political weekly L' Unione, published in Brindisi, by order of the Allied military authorities was announced yesterday by the Psychological Warfare branch of the United States army. Reason given for the penalty was that the paper published flattering remarks about former Duce Mussolini and printed "ambiguously insultant" remarks about the Allies.

GUERILLAS OVERWHELM GARRISON

Barcelona, Feb. 14 (AP)—Toulouse newspapers received here today said French guerillas in the upper Savoy region had overwhelmed a Vichy police garrison in the town of Eault and executed Jean Harvey, a pro-German police chief. Jacques Concerset, President of the Municipal Codncil, and his son-in-law were taken when the guerillas withdrew to the mountains, the newspapers said.

NEW TREMORS SHAKE CITY

San Juan, Argentina, Feb. 14 — (AP)—Three new tremors shook this quake-ruined city last night, injuring at least 30 persons who had returned to take up residence in the remains of their homes. An earthquake practically levelled the city Jan. 15.

DOUBLE HIGHWAY IN E. ONTARIO TO BE COMPLETED

$150,000,000 Works Program for Post-War Era to be Considered

MEET IN OTTAWA

Toronto, Feb. 4—(CP)—A highway works program for the post-war era has been prepared by the Ontario Department of Highways, estimated to cost over $150,000,000, which will be under discussion at Ottawa today when Minister of Highways Doucet confers with the highways ministers of other provinces.

Provincial highways ministers are conferring with the federal government to learn what the federal government intends doing financially in conjunction with the provinces in post-war work programs. In event of emergency or Ottawa declining aid, however, Ontario will be ready with its program, Mr. Doucet said here Saturday.

The Ontario program would mean proceeding first with maintenance of existing highways, closing of links between highways, and then branching into a development of new trunk highways.

One of the first roads to be considered, Mr. Doucett said, is the highway from Toronto to North Bay to relieve the conditions caused by heavy traffic to the summer resort district. Plans are now being considered on a route either east or west of Lake Simcoe through Muskoka to North Bay.

Another plan is for further extension eastward of the No. 2 double highway now developed to Newcastle, which would be extended further east, ultimately to the Quebec boundary as part of the Queen Elizabeth Way.

3rd Sidney

3rd. Sidney — Congratulations are extended to Mr. George Parry, who celebrated his eightieth birthday on January tenth.

Mr. Parry enjoys fairly good health, and lives retired at his farm home with Mrs. Parry and their son, Russell. In another part of the house their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Urvan Perry reside, and perform the farm activities.

New Markets FROM RESEARCH

NEW USES FOR NICKEL MEANT NEW JOBS IN CANADA

AT THE CLOSE of the last war, Nickel was no longer needed to build battleships and artillery. The demand for Canadian Nickel fell off sharply. Soon the Canadian Nickel mines had to close down.

But the men who managed these properties could foresee possible new markets for Canadian Nickel in the growing automobile, electric, radio, chemical and other industries. They organized a Research and Development department to work with engineers in these industries, and to promote the use of Nickel and its alloys wherever better materials were required.

Shortly, operations were resumed. In 1924, the Nickel industry opened a new mine. In 1926 it began enlarging its smelting and refining plants. Within a decade it was paying out 15 millions of dollars a year in Canada for wages.

Although the entire output of Canadian Nickel is today diverted to war uses, this industry has definite plans for the post-war period.

Then it will turn again to its peacetime markets, and will proceed to develop new markets based on research now in progress. Through its own enterprise, the Canadian Nickel industry plans still greater contributions to Canada's prosperity.

SALVOES OF BOMBS HIT ANCIENT MONASTERY

300 Germans Run Out From Building During the Attack

Old Abbey on Mt. Cassino Had Been Used as Observation Post by Enemy

FOUNDED IN 529A.D.

By LYNN HEINZERLING
(A. P. War Correspondent)

With the 5th. Army at Cassino, Feb. 15 (AP) — Scores of American heavy bombers poured salvoes of high-explosive bombs across the peak of Mount Cassino early today, some squarely hitting the famous Benedictine Monastery coverted by the Germans into a fortress.

High explosives from at least two strings of bombs smashed directly on the roof of the sturdy old Abbey, founded in 529 A.D. by St. Benedict.

Nazi troops have taken up positions there, Allied headquarters said, to send murderous fire against Allied troops assaulting the hill overlooking the town of Cassino.

Smoke poured from the roof of the Abbey itself, and the earth-shaking bombs sent up great plumes of gray and black smoke.

100 Planes Pound Positions

The BBC, in a broadcast heard by CBS, said "100 Flying Fortresses flew over the peak of Mount Cassino and pounded German positions there.

At the first explosion from the air bombs about 100 Germans ran out of the Monastery and were raked with fire.

After the second attack 300 Germans made a break for fresh cover but were caught in artillery fire.

(The German communique broadcast by Berlin radio said Mount Cassino Abbey was bombed "although no German soldiers were either in the Monastery or its vicinity. Heavy damage was caused.")

(Another German broadcast said the Monastery "was destroyed by British bombs.")

The 5th. Army has fought for nearly two weeks to seize the town of Cassino and the rocky peaks around the Abbey without damaging the old Monastery.

But the slopes of Monastery hill have been honey-combed with German machine-gun nests and sniper positions, and Allied officers said the enemy has been using the Monastery itself for machine-gun posts and artillery observation, and also a cover for Germans defending the hill.

Would Save Soldiers' Lives.

German use of the Monastery undoubtedly has brought death to Allied soldiers, and Allied officers said lives of more soldiers would be saved by removal of the Monastery as a dominating point on the battlefield.

Many of the relics stored in the buildings are believed to have been removed to places of safe-keeping.

The bombing followed a warning, carried by bursting time-shells that scattered leaflets over the area yesterday, advising the Monks and any Italian refugees there to leave.

Monks, Refugees Warned

Time-shells fired over the Monastery yesterday scattered leaflets declaring:

"Italian friends, beware! We have until now been especially careful to avoid shelling Mount Casino Monastery. The Germans know how to benefit from this. But now the fighting has swept closer and closer to its sacred precincts. The time has come when we must train our guns on the Monastery itself.

"We give you warning so that you may save yourselves. We warn you urgently: leave the monastery. Leave it at once. Respect this warning. It is for your benefit."

Indicative of the bloody fighting in the Cassino sector, 240 German dead were found in the Mount Castellone area north of Cassino. The Germans yesterday asked for a three-hour truce in order to bury their dead.

Patrol activity and artillery exchanges still marked this main 5th. Army front. Snowdrifts restricted activity on the 8th. Army front.

Lull at Beachhead

In the beachhead area, a relative lull in the fighting continued with mainly patrol actions, three days after a major German effort to pinch off the beachhead had ended in what a headquarters officer termed a costly failure.

The Nazis still clung tenaciously to factory buildings in the Carroceto area north of Anzio, buildings which have changed hands four times.

Eight Germans planes attempted to strafe troops in the bridgehead, but were driven off by anti-aircraft fire that downed two of them.

Four-engined bombers hit rail yards at Modena, Brescia, Ferrara, Mantua, Verona and Arezzo, while medium bombers attacked the Perugia railyards, and port facilities in Leghorn.

In all, the Allies flew 1,500 sorties yesterday, and destroyed 21 German planes, while losing one. The Germans put 60 sorties into the air.

Von Rundstedt Says 'Atlantic Wall' Cannot Be Outflanked

London, Feb. 15. (CP)—Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt, commander of German forces in western Europe, said yesterday the "Atlantic Wall" cannot be outflanked by an Allied invasion and added: "I look forward calmly to coming events."

"Among us Germans there is no tired Maginot mind," Von Rundstedt said in an interview broadcast by the Berlin radio. "I know that the enemy has completed his offensive preparations, but we are prepared."

He said anti-invasion defences include "large scale mining of the ground, flooding arrangements for turning the terrain into swampland, anti-tank obstacles and walls far more diversified than in the Maginot line."

Counter-measures against air-borne landings in the rear of these defences "were taken long ago," Von Rundstedt said.

Son a War Prisoner, Mother Receives His U.S. D.F.C.

Kitchener, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP). — Mrs. Julian C. Howard of Kitchener, yesterday received from an official of the United States War Department in Washington the United States D.F.C. on behalf of her son—Lieut. David C. Howard, of the U.S. Army Air Forces—now a prisoner of war in Germany.

The presentation, first of the U.S. D.F.C. to be made on Canadian soil, was made by Capt. Alder Jenkins.

Lieut. Howard, a native of Akron, Ohio, received the award for bringing his Flying Fortress back to England from a raid on Occupied France with two engines disabled and one propeller shot away.

Curfew Will Ring At 10 P.M. in Lindsay

Lindsay, Ont., Feb. 15. (CP) — Despite protests by Mayor C. Lamb that the town was relegating itself to horse and buggy days", the Lindsay Town Council passed a motion to have a curfew bell rung every night at ten o'clock. Following the ringing of the bell—police will check up on youth under 16 loitering.

The motion proved to be an expensive one, as Deputy Reeve Elliott, police commissioner, informed the council that it would necessitate the employing of another constable.

Germans Never Had a Chance With Gahagan Brothers Around

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadian forces in Italy, Feb. 15 (CP) — Sure and the Germans never had a chance when they ran up against the Gahagan brothers, Mike and Pat from Peterborough, Ont.

It was a bright moonlit night and steel helmets glistened like torches in the olive groves. The Gahagans, corporals both, Lieut. Geo. Hopper of Timmins, Ont., and Pte. Jimmy Fordred of Vancouver, were on patrol.

(Since this dispatch was written Lieut. Hopper, whose widow lives in New Liskeard, Ont., has been reported killed in action).

"It was three a.m.", said the officer discussing the action before his death, "a German patrol of six men coming out of our fines threw a potato masher at one of our patrols coming in. We decided to try to cut off the Jerries."

It was time for Hopper's patrol to return and as the four men stood talking about what they should do Mike Gahagan saw a German raise his head over a hill. The Canadians "froze" on the spot.

"They came on and Mike challenged them," Hopper said. "Immediately they spread out like cats and got around us."

Mike and Pat went out after two who were on the upper side of the Canadians. Stealthily they stalked the first German, working in on him until he had no choice but to surrender.

"Then," said Mike, "I ordered him in a mixture of English, French and Italian words to call in the other German. He shouted something and the second one surrendered too."

One German was a 19-year-old private and the other a corporal of 25, wearing an Iron Cross, first class, which he won in Russia. Both had dropped their weapons, but the little fellow, as Mike called the private, carried a grenade which he handed to Pat.

Mike intimated that Pat's reaction to this was the same as it would have been had the German given him a red hot coal. He didn't drop it, but he certainly didn't like it.

The other Germans got away, but two prisoners were a good night's bag, especially as not a shot was fired.

Said Hopper, summing up: "I always like to have the Gahagans around."

RUMOR REDS ASK UNCONDITIONAL FINN SURRENDER

Russia Reported To Have Demanded All Sea and Air Bases In Country

PEACE TALKS HEARD

Stockholm, Feb. 15—(AP)— The Finnish Leader Juhu Kusti Kaasikivi, has conferred with the Russian Minister to Sweden, Mme. Alexandra Kollontay and expects to meet with her again, a Finnish legation source said today.

Paasikivi, a former Finnish Cabinet Minister, has been a leader in the faction seeking peace with Soviet Russia.

There were rumors that Russian terms for an armistice were being sent to Helsinki today, but no confirmation of these reports could be found.

London, Feb. 15—(CP) — Soviet Russia is reported to have advised Finland she has no drastic designs upon Finnish territory but if the Finns want peace they must surrender unconditionally and grant Russian forces use of all their air and sea bases as well as internal communications facilities.

The London News-Chronicle in a dispatch from Stockholm said these terms had been "intimated unofficially" to Finnish leaders who arrived recently in the Swedish capital, presumably for the purpose of sounding out the Russians on the subject of peace.

Walter Farr, Stockholm correspondent of The London Daily Mail, wrote today:

"The impression I get is that Finland will be out of the war in a matter of weeks and possibly days."

There was no immediate confirmation of these reports from any source, and neither Helsinki nor Moscow gave any intimation that contact had been established as a basis for peace negotiations.

Helsinki dispatches, passed by the Finnish censors and relayed here through Stockholm, said there was no official indication that the government had asked for Russia's terms or was ready to do so.

It was clear, however, that the Finnish majority party—the Social Democrats — was putting strong pressure on the government to act and there were some intimations that the issue might precipitate a cabinet shakeup.

Hopeful Finland Will Get Out.

Washington, Feb. 15 —(AP)— American officials are more hopeful now of Finland's getting out of the war than they have been for almost a year.

The presence of several Finnish leaders in Stockholm, a logical spot for preliminary peace negotiations, has brought a reappraisal here of the chances for a Russo-Finnish settlement—and they are pronounced fairly good.

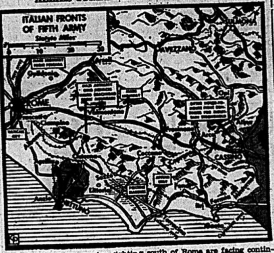
ALLIES FIGHT TO HOLD BEACHHEAD



Allied beachhead armies fighting south of Rome are facing continuous bombing and artillery fire from the Germans massed in the mountains above. British reinforcements, however, have arrived and are said to be outmatching the Germans. Change of weather has let the air arm do its work, more effectively too.

GERMAN GENERAL WEARIES WRITING RAID REPORTS

Rumor He Says Germans Won't Believe Stories of Air Raids on London

HE WANTS TO QUIT

Stockholm, Feb. 15 —(AP) — A Zurich dispatch to the Swedish newspaper Morgon Tidningen said today Maj.Gen. Von Wedl, Press Chief of the German High Command, had asked to be relieved of his task of writing communiques because German reports of air raids against London were exaggerated.

The dispatch said Von Wedl complained the Germans would not believe the accounts which sought to give the impression that the recent raids on London have been comparable to R. A. F. attacks on Berlin.

Accounts of the Sunday night attack on London published by the Berlin press said 700 bombers participated and large fires and explosions were observed.

616,161 Gals. Whisky, 9,474 Gals. of Gin Exported in 3 Mos.

Ottawa, Feb. 15 (CP) — A total of 616,161 gallons of whisky and 9,474 gallons of gin was exported from Canada during November and December 1943, and January this year, Trade Minister MacKinnon reported yesterday in the Commons.

In reply to a question by H. H. Hatfield (P.C.-Victoria Carleton), Mr. MacKinnon tabled figures showing that the bulk of the whisky export—537,332 gallons — went to the United States which also received 3,452 gallons of gin. The remainder of the exports went to other Dominions and British Colonies, South American and Central American countries and some French and American possessions.

(Figures showing the amount of gin and whisky produced and consumed in Canada during the three months were not available.)

BERLIN REPORTS LANDING IN NARVA BAY BEHIND NAZIS

London, Feb. 15 —(CP)— The Berlin radio said today a "small" Soviet amphibious force landed yesterday in Narva Bay behind the German line in Estonia.

The "landed enemy force made several attacks on a coastal battery but was repelled with heavy losses," the broadcast said.

GUNMEN ESCAPE

Stockholm, Feb. 15 —(AP)— Reports from Copenhagen said two unidentified men fired several shots at Dr. Erik Warburg, famous Jewish heart specialist, Monday, but none of the bullets hit him and the gunmen escaped.

Warburg was one of four physicians who attended King Christian when he was ill last year. The shooting took place in Warburg's office in the Danish State Hospital.

ARMY IN CANADA ACTS AS POOL FOR REINFORCEMENTS

Ralston Replies to Question Giving Reason for Large Home Force

70,000 N.R.M.A. MEN

Ottawa, Feb. 15—(CP)—Canada's troops called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act constitute a second line of reinforcements for the army overseas, Defence Minister Ralston said Monday night in the House of Commons.

He was replying to opposition speakers who asked the justification for keeping such a large home force.

If the time came when it was necessary to use them as reinforcements for overseas, the minister said, "I will have to make the recommendation."

Many people who spoke about the "home-army" or "the home-defence army" failed to realize there was only one army, "the Canadian active army." In it were a number of call-up troops who were not liable to serve outside Canada.

"These troops are doing jobs which someone else would have to do if they were not there," said the Minister.

What are they doing" asked Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC York Sunbury) —Col. Ralston said that was the same question be heard years ago from a section of the opposition which asked what Canada wanted troops for, why the government was preparing for war.

"We don't have these operational troops just for fun," said the Minister.

The operational troops numbering 3,950, included coast defence batteries on both coasts, fortress troops, searchlight units and close support battalions. There were 70,000 odd N. R. M. A. men in the army.

Howard Green (PC Vancouver South) said the difference of opinion between the government and the opposition was that the opposition believed National Resources Mobilization Act (call-up) troops should be sent overseas as fighting men. He asked why Canada should not send them to fight the Japanese.

Five Divisions Overseas

Col. Ralston asked if Mr. Green seriously suggested sending a force to fight the Japanese on a third front for Canada in view of the manpower situation.

Mr. Green said he did.

Col. Ralston said if that were done the first people to complain would be some Conservatives who now were talking of reinforcements.

Canada had five divisions overseas, two of them in Italy. To send another force against the Japanese would require still more reinforcements. Some critics now said the army was too big.

Mr. Green asked why a Canadian force was sent to Kiska in the Aleutians. Col. Ralston said that was before the troops went to Sicily. They had been sent to do an important job.

"The fact is," said the minister, "that we reached the peak about a year ago as far as sending new capital units overseas is concerned.

"Now my friend is suggesting we send another brigade."

GUNS OF WARSHIPS REACH ALL PARTS OF GERMAN LINE

Ships Take Part in Beachhead Battle as If Floating Over Battlefield

ARMY DIRECTS FIRE

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(A. P. War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 15 (AP) — Naval units are participating in the fighting on the Anzio beachhead almost as effectively as if they could float over the battlefield. Warships steam just off shore, opening up on enemy objectives with their big guns when and where requested by the enemy.

Six-inch, long-range guns of the cruisers engaged in this work can reach all parts of the present German front line around the beachhead and many vital communication, assembly and supply points, behind the German lines.

Present sea support is largely in the hands of the British navy, with some Netherlands ships participating. In the initial landing period, the American navy also played a big part.

In the battle of the beachhead, warships in addition to giving support just off the area, have waged day and night shellings off the coast between Anzio and the main 5th. Army front. This has effectively closed the coastal road to the Germans.

Eisenhower Supports Good News Coverage

Washington, Feb. 15 —(AP)— Director Elmer Davis of the United States Office of War Information said today Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower has given "heartiest support" to the suggestion that plans for news coverage of the European invasion should be woven into the battle plans. Davis said he hoped arrangements for the gathering and sending of news and pictures would be as well developed as those for the attacks on the Gilbert and Marshall Island groups.

Germans Suffer Great Losses of Men and Tanks

Two Soviet Armies Move Closer to Enemy Stronghold Of Pskov

KORSUN CAPTURED

By EDDY GILMORE
(A.P. Staff Writer)

Moscow, Feb. 15 (AP) — The Red army has halted a heavy tank attack launched by the Germans northwest of Zventgorodka in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue large Nazi forces hopelessly trapped in the Cherkasy pocket, the army newspaper Red Star said today, while at the northern end of the front two Soviet armies are moving closer to the German-held stronghold of Pskov.

Red Star said the German tank attack in the northwest corner of the upper Dnieper bend was exceedingly fierce and Field Marshal Fritz Von Mannstein apparently was unmindful of the number of men and machines he was losing. It was hurled against a narrow sector and was stopped after a slight, wedge-like penetration, the paper added.

Fighting was most violent northwest of Zvenigorodka, and west of captured Korsum, core of Nazi resistance in the Cherkasy death ring. Red Star said ranks of the enemy within the trap have been markedly reduced and even if a few tanks crashed the Red Army lines, the Germans' great losses would in no way compensate them for what they would find.

Of the 100,000 to 150,000 Germans originally reported trapped by the Red Army, there is reason to believe that not more than 50,000 remain, Red Star said. The capture of Korsum where resistance was particularly fierce saw many Nazis die, dispatches said, while the battles of the last few days have greatly increased the enemy death toll.

Describing the unsuccessful German attempt at rescue, Red Star said Soviet dive bombers turned the rolling land northwest of Zvenigorodka into a field of flaming tanks, while Russian artillery fired over open sights at the waves of German armor battering at the Red Army's outer cordon.

Mail, Next to Food, Most Important Thing in Life of Fighting Soldier

In this story a Canadian Press War Correspondent, back from six months at the Italian front, describes the importance of home town mail to Canadian troops in the line.

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

London, Feb. 15—(CP)—Next to rations, mail is probably the most important thing in the life of the fighting soldier. It's his only direct link with home, relatives, friends and sweetheart.

Some officers say it's a toss-up whether food or letters take first place in personal importance to the soldier, though most agree food comes first.

When there's a mail parade in a battalion, word is quickly passed around. The men who get mail can't conceal their delight. Those who don't can't hide their disappointment.

Rsm. Bill Adams of Winnipeg said once that the saddest sight he saw in Sicily was the first mail parade. All the gunners in his regiment dashed up when they heard mail had arrived. There were only three or four letters. "I've never seen so many crest-fallen men," he declared.

The average soldier probably would go through hell and high water all morning to get a letter from someone who means something to him. It's probably safe too to say that no person back home knowing a soldier in the field can do him a more welcome or greater favor than to write a chatty letter about home, describing living conditions, what people are talking about and little bits of personal news about the folks on his street.

Mail takes on all this importance because of the feeling of remoteness the individual soldier has several thousand miles from home, in a strange land, populated by strangers who aren't completely at ease even if he just passes the time of day. Lack of mail causes this sense of remoteness to become one of complete isolation.

A steady flow of letters between home and the soldier away from home is probably the way only to maintain family contacts that otherwise might suffer from long absence.

The army realizing that plenty of mail means plenty of morale maintains a postal system that carries letters right up to the frontline with as little delay as possible.

Parcels receive the same handling and in the few days before sion then engaged in the Ortona battle had orders that every effort was to be made to deliver them quickly so the troops would have tokens from their firesides Christmas Day.

Canadian gift cigarets are more than welcome to the troops. They are delivered as they arrive despite rumors among the Canadians at one time that their folks were under the impression cigarets could not be sent to Italy.

The troops in Italy are issued by the army with 10 cigarets a day but issue smokes, the same brand as given to other Eighth Army troops, were a standing joke among the Canadians, and Tommies as well as most of the Canadians said they were smokeable only when there was nothing else.

Issue of the brand in question now has been discontinued and better brands of English cigarets will be available. The others were the subejct of discussion in British Army newspapers for weeks and were even talked about in the British House or Commons.

Liberal Member Named Chairman

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Appointment of a Liberal member as chairman of the committee of the whole of the Ontario legislature was announced Monday by Progressive Conservative Premier Drew. The appointee is Roland Patterson, Liberal member for Grey north, who held the same post—unofficially deputy speaker—in the last legislature.

"Mr Patterson has informed me he will act in this capacity and a resolution for his appointment will be presented to the legislature," said the Premier, adding that the Grey north member had "won the confidence of all members for the fair and impartial manner in which he filled this extremely important office" in the last legislature.

Premier Drew announced some time ago that W. J. Stewart, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Parkdale, would be appointed speaker.

American Planes 'Operate at Will' In Marshalls

Washington, Feb. 15 — (AP) — United States Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox reported today that American carrier and land-based planes are "operating at will" in the Marshall islands area of the Pacific and are carrying out attacks on islands between the Marshalls and Truk, major Japanese naval base in the South Pacific.

He said islands in the eastern group of the Marshalls, cut off from supplies by American occupation of Kwajalein, and their garrisons may face starvation.

Knox said American bombers attacking enemy bases throughout the mid-Pacific are meeting only meagre Japanese fighter opposition and light anti-aircraft fire, indicating the enemy is short of ammunition and planes.

In the South Pacific, he reported American air forces are "vigorously pounding away" at Japanese installations in and around Rabaul which he said has "practically lost its usefulness as a major base."

Canadian Corps Fights As Unit

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Italy, Feb. 15—(CP Cable)—Formations of the Canadian corps, until recently serving at opposite ends of the British 8th Army front in Italy, now are fighting side-by-side under command of Lt.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar. For the first time, the Canadian corps is fighting as a corps. While fighting in the Orsogna area, Canadian troops served under British command.

FOOTWEAR ON RATIONS

St. John's Nfld., Feb. 15. (CP Cable)—Footwear was placed on Newfoundland's ration list today. Purchasers are entitled to one pair of shoes and rubbers between now and September.

FLOWER GIRL WITH ORANGES CAUSES NEAR RIOT, FINED

London, Feb. 15 —(CP)— An Oxford Street flower girl caused a near riot when she appeared yesterday with a few oranges—now as rare as gold nuggets in Britain—to sell as a sideline. Police dispersed the hopeful customers and took the girl to court, where she was fined 50 cents today for "obstructing the footway by causing a crowd to assemble."

Stirling Cheese Factory Production Report

Rawdon (Special) — Stirling Cheese and Butter Company manufactured 208,792 pounds of cheese from 2,506,514 pounds of milk during the past season, it was shown in the financial statement at the annual meeting held last week. This is an average of 12.29 pounds of milk per pound cheese.

Returns from the sales of cheese totalled $40,595, with provincial bonus amounting to $4,075, and the Dominion bonus totalling $2,411. The amount of money paid patrons was $37,339.

Mr. Walter Warren was elected to act as president of the company for the coming season with C. M. Sine appointed as auditor. Mr. Thomas Sarles will carry on as cheese-maker. During the meeting a memorial letter was read by Mr. J. Scott expressing the company's appreciation for the very efficient service the late John B. Thompson had rendered during his several terms as president of the factory.

Predicts Little Change In First Refrigerators When Production Begins

The first refrigerators to reach the consumer when production is resumed will not radical or revolutionary in design, predicts W. Paul ones, vice-president in charge of refrigerators for Philco Corporation, Philadelphia. This prediction is based on the premise that manufacturers, distributors and dealers will be anxious to get back into civilian business quickly, Mr. Jones aid. Immediate production and transportation of materials will offer plenty of problems in the early months after the war, even without the complications of radical designs and tooling up for new models. A period of transition between the pre-war and real post-war models should be desirable from many angles. Costly experiences in other industries has proved that the buying public reacts slowly and cautiously to radical design changes.—Marketing.

Protestant Chapel Is Dedicated At Mountain View

Group Captain John McNab, command chaplain for No. 1 Training Command of the Royal Canadian Air Force, officiated at the dedication of the Protestant chapel at Mounain View Bombing & Gunnery School on Sunday. Assisting in the dedication were Flt. Lieut. George Hamilton, Protestant station chaplain and Dr. James Semple and Rev. G. G. Wright, of Belleville.

The standard chapel are not designed for regular church parades, but are for prayer, meditation and samll religious gatherings. Attending at the dedication were Air Vice Marshal A. T. N. Cowley with Group Captain R. C. Ripley, commanding officer of the station.

Concrete Work On Reservoir Now Completed

Although concrete work on the 1,000,000-gallon water reservoir at the Belleville Water Filtration Plant has been completed for the past several weeks, there is little likelihood that the reservoir will be put into operation before Spring, it was announced today by Mr. Oswald H. Scott, manager, of the Belleville Public Utilities.

Work under progress at the present time includes the completion of the small pumping house at the west end of the storage tank, with the installation of pumping machinery and the completion of the connecting link between the reservoir and the Filtration Plant.

Inability to secure a sufficiently high labor priority at the time of initial stage construction retarded progress of the tank during the autumn months but with the easing of the labor supply at the time of the freeze-up construction work progressed favorably. All concrete work on the reservoir proper is now completed but scaffolding will be permitted to remain in place until the cement is perfectly set.

Concrete work is also completed on the small pumping house immediately adjoining the west of the reservoir, but the brick veneer finish and the instalation of pumping machinery is still in progress. Also water mains from the Filtration Plant to the reservoir, both supply and return mains, have to be installed.

Regardless of the progress attained in the finishing up operations of reservoir construction and machinery installation, it was doubted by the utilities manager if the equipment would be put into use before winter ended.

POLISH PREMIER DELAYS VISIT

London, Feb. 15 — (CP) — Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the Polish government in London has indefinitely postponed a scheduled visit to the United States it was announced today, because his presence here is necessary in connection with attempts to settle the Russian-Polish dispute. Nikolajczyk announced several weeks ago that he planned to go to the United States to present his government's views to Washington.

BELIEVED KILLED

FO. A. W. EDGAR

Word has been received by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Edgar, Bainsville, and his wife, Mrs. A. W. Edgar, Belleville, Ont., that Flying Officer Alexander William Edgar, previously reported missing in air operations over Germany, is now listed as missing, believed killed. FO. Edgar enlisted in the R.C.A.F., in June, 1941, taking his training at Debert, N.S., Victoriaville, Que., Starley, N.S., and receiving his wings in Moncton, N.B., in April, 1942. He was stationed at Mountain View, Ont., until his departure overseas in April, 1943. On January 30, 1943, he married Miss Mary Reta Wannamaker, of Belleville. FO. Edgar had seven operational trips to his credit before being posted as missing.

Rooke Island Taken Without Much Opposition

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 15 (AP)—Bloodless occupation of Rooke (Umboi) Island in Vitiaz Strait between New Guinea and New Britain was announced today in an Allied communique which told also of a 326-ton bombing of Japan's shattered Rabaul and Kavieng bases.

Americans who swarmed ashore met no opposition. Apparently the Japanese had moved out some time before.

A headquarters spokesman described Rooke Island as valuable to the Allies. It provices, with nearby Long Island, captured Dec. 26, control of both Vitiaz and Dampier Straits through which Allied shipping may eventually flow into the Bismarck Sea and Japan's Caroline Islands to the north.

The stepped-up offensive against Rabaul on New Britain continued Sunday with a heavy raid by 200 planes on all categories which unloaded 179 tons of bombs on the Lakunai, Tobera and Vanakanau airdromes with excellent effect. At least seven enemy interceptors were downed, at a cost of three planes.

Kavieng, on the northeastern end of neighboring New Ireland, was hit by 147 tons of bombs which smashed the airdrome.

Germans Capture Railway Town Of Koprivnica

London, Feb. 15 (CP)—German troops have captured the railway town of Koprivnica, on the Zagreb-Budapest trunk line 10 miles south of the Hungarian border, in a drive on Yugoslav position north of Zagreb, Marshal Joip Broz (Tito) announced today.

The town of Ludbreg, 10 miles northwest of Koprivnica on the Bednin River, also fell to the enemy, Tito said in a broadcast communique, but declared Yugoslav Partisans scored a major success when they destroyed installations in the mercury mines near the town of Idrija in Slovenia.

As a result of the Partisan raids on the mercury pits, Tito said, "production has fallen off 90 per cent."

Other German forces captured several villages in the Croat province of Pod Varina but in eastern Bosnia Nzai-commanded Chetnik detachments operating between Gratanica and Vigelina "have collapsed completely," many joining the 16th Moslem brigade of the Yugoslav army, the communique said.

Wendell Willkie In the Field For Nomination

Portland, Ore., Feb. 15—(AP)—Wendell Willkie last night formally announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination and selected Ralph H. Cake, Oregon's G.O.P. national committeeman, as his pre-convention campaign manager.

The 1940 party nominee said at a press conference the Republicans can win the 1944 presidential election only by offering proof to the electorate through its candidate and its platform that:

1. The United States can more effectively fight the war with a Republican instead of a Democrat as its president.

2. The Republican party has a more comprehensive understanding than the Democrats of America's post-war social and economic adjustments and responsibilities.

Buy Your Share in "Our" Corvette "BELLEVILLE"

The daily average of contributions made by individuals, clubs and organisations in the city to the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" FUND runs about $166.00. In order to reach the objective of $3,500, a daily average of $195.00 would have had to be maintained, but with only five days left of the campaign to go, and $1,318.50 needed yet, the daily average will be $264.00. Yesterday's total was $194.00. The outcome of the campaign was never in doubt, but the committee expressed the wish that more small contributions be made, making the "BELLEVILLE" a more personal matter to as many persons in the city as possible. It is still not too late for those who wish to take part in this worthy campaign and plan to make one of our ships as comfortable as possible for the men who will sail in her. Your contribution may be left at any of the Banks or may be mailed to Mr. H. D. Bateman, City Comptroller, City Hall. Cheques to be made payable to "H.M.C.S. BELLEVILLE FUND."

Humorous Incidents of First Great War Told by Speaker

After spending the past several weeks on a business trip throughout the southern United States, President Jack Deacon assumed his customary place as chairman of the regular weekly luncheon as club members met on Monday. During his absence the chairmanship had been taken by various club members and to this the president proferred his htanks, indicating he had no compunctions at leaving the destinies of the club in such capable hands.

Guest speaker at the luncheon was one of the club members, Mr. Art. Francis, manager of the Belleville branch of the Canadian Department Stores Limited. Mr. Francis spoke briefly of humorous incidences and experiences gained as a member of the Princess Pats during the last Great War, confining his remarks almost entirely to his association with the late Col. Charles Stewart of Halifax.

Splendid tribute to Col. Stewart, both as a man and as an officer, was paid by the peaker. He stated that the colonel's show of fearlessness while under fire and his ability to bring out the lighter side regardless as to the seriousness of the situation at hand, had done wonders in assisting to maintain the morale of the fighting men of his unit.

Killed Near Close.

After braving machine gun fire, the explosion of heavy artillery shells and mortar shells during numerous tours of the front lines, Col. Stewart had been killed near the close of the war. During the advance of Allied forces across open territory at the time of the collapse of the Hindenberg Line he had been killed as a shell exploded at his feet.

"He was the type of man who always sought the short way to gain an objective and once his mind was made up would stick to the destined route despite the fact a 40-yard detour may have meant he would be in comparative safety."

After some months as runner with Col. Stewart, Mr. Francis stated he had been possessed with a desire to join the flying corps, then a relatively new and dangerous branch of the service. Mentioning his desire to the Col. he was promised influence with the brigadier would be used to arrange for the transfer.

"One day several weeks later" related the speaker, "the Col. and I were touring the front lines when an Allied plane crashed in flames. The pilot had jumped out and was instantly killed as he was wearing no parachute.

Slightly nauseated by the sight the Col. had turned to his guide and aid "if it had not been for me that might have been you. I never even spoke to the brigadier about the transfer. I decided that you will remain in the infantry and be killed decently."

Heard Last Words.

The Colonel's desire to push ahead despite the danger was reflected in the last words he spoke, according to Mr. Francis. The Allied push on the Hindenburg line had become slightly disorganized and the various units were mixed up, but the Colonel said, "We must go on". Those were the Colonel's last words as shortly after a German shell burst at his feet. "Colonel Stewart's whole idea of the army was to be at the front with the men in the trenches," said the speaker.

Speaking of the immediate post war period, Mr. Francis urged that returning soldiers not be regimented too much. "After the experience of the front lines even the necessity of making a living will seem unimportant to the discharged soldier," he said. "He will be entirely at loose ends and may seem unable to settle down."

"Our present duty to the men in the fighting forces," concluded the speaker, "is to make the democracy in which we live worth fighting for."

"Mack" Robertson expressed club appreciation to the speaker, while Leo Riggs was at his accustomed place at the piano with Harry Moorman acting as song leader.

Large Amount of Clothing Needed For Thousands of Weakened Greeks

The entire population of Greece is literally without clothes and, unless large quantities reach them soon, many thousands of starvation-weakened Greeks will die. This statement was made today by Mr. Sam Pappas, president of the local Greek War Relief Committee, to a reporter of The Ontario Intelligencer when interviewed on behalf of the work the local committee is doing in their campaign to collect clothing for the relief of their suppressed countrymen and women.

Under present conditions families have sold their tattered garments to buy food. Now that food supplies are being shipped steadily, efforts must be made, it was pointed out here, to supply the needs of the gallant Greeks who will suffer even more if supplies are not sent immediately.

Items of clothing needed and which Canadians can supply are as follows: Wool suits for men, women and children; coats, jackets, skirts, separate trousers; knitted underwear, cotton or wool, in all sizes from infants to adults; sweaters, pullovers, cardigans, vests; dresses of wool, cotton, silk or rayon; all types of practical clothes for children, especially corduroys, cotton knit shirts, simple little suits, dresses and coats; men's shirts; shoes in good condition; blanket, towels, sheets and pillow slips. The peasants in the mountains are used to wearing long woollen underwear. Old-fashioned underwear of this sort that may be packed away in your trunks will be welcome.

Garments may be sent to the quarters occupied by the local Greek War Relief Committee, formerly the Income Tax Office at Front and Bridge Streets, where workers are on hand during the day to accept any donations of clothing, or, if you cannot bring the clothing to the headquarters, a call by telephone will bring a car or truck to your home where the clothes you have will be gratefully received from you. ## Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict Accidental Death

A verdict of accidental death was returned at the adjourned inquest looking into the death of five-year-old Harry Way before Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at the Court House last evening.

Playmate eye witnesses testified as to the children playing around railway cars on a C.N.R. siding near East College St., on Sunday afternoon when Harry Way climbed atop of a hopper coal car, slipped and fell off, striking his head on a rail. The eye witnesses were the deceased boy's two older brothers, Billie and Jack, and Billie Royle, a friend.

Dr. F. R. Ross attended the lad, while Dr. McKay testified that death had been the result of a fracture at the base of the skull. The lad never regained consciousness after falling from the coal car. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Way, 161 College Street. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson conducted the investigation that concluded when the coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death, attaching no blame.

The jury impanelled by Constable Thomas Thorne included Alex Pidgen, Joseph Walsh, Morley Mitts, George Wallbridge and Arthur Wilkinson.

City Council in Longest Session of Year Sets Tax Rate at Thirty-Seven Mills

Tax Rate Same as Last Year Although Expenditures Are Up

BY-LAWS PASSED

Belleville City Council set a tax rate of 37 mills for the year 1944, at their regular session on Monday night and passed the corresponding by-laws, that deals with the levying and collecting of the said taxes. The members tried very hard to reduce the tax rate but they were faced with an increase of expenditures from the Board of Education and a payment due the Public Utilities for the gas department, and expenditures in every department was pared to the bone to keep the tax rate at the same figure it was last year. Ald. H. J. Clarke read a lengthy report to the council on the financial condition of the city, which report was subsequently adopted and handed to the press and only after strenuous objection had been made by Ald. C. R. Clapp, who contended that the wording in the report should be "we" instead of "I".

Alderman Armstrong intimated that had not the estimates from the Board of Education been increased it would have been possible to give a tax rate of approximately 35 8-10 mills. Ald Follwell expressed the opinion the rate could have been lowered but for the Board of Education and said "the rate for this year can be laid at the door of the Board of Education". There was no discussion at all on the estimated expenditures and receipts and each by-law was passed through the various stages without a dissenting voice. Ald. Clapp did object to the report of the Chairman of Finance in that he believed it did not give the whole council the credit for keeping the rate the same as last year. "I do object to the word "I" throughout the report", said the Alderman. It was explained to Ald. Clapp "that it was a report to the members of the City Council and therefore the chairman of finance would have to use the word "I". Ald. Clapp: "Then let us accept the report and file it. I commend the Chairman of Finance on the splendid report but I think it should be "We" for we all had a hand in keeping the rate down".

Report Addressed to Council.

Ald. Clarke: "I addressed that report to the council and the first person had to be used".

Ald. Clapp: "I do not think that should go out to the Press in that form".

Ald. Pringle: "Anything that comes into this council can be used by the Press and this is a report and there is nothing to stop the reporter from using it'.

The council were in another order of business but reverted back to the acceptance of reports and communications and the report was then started to be read by the chairman of the committee, Ald. Charles Hyde. Ald. Pringle moved that it be taken as read and handed to the Press but Ald. Clapp moved an amendment that the word "I" be changed to "We" but his amendment was lost he being the only one to support it and the original motion was passed. The report of Ald. H. J. Clarke read:

Your Worship Mayor Rollins
And Fellow Members of the City Council

"In presenting for your approval and adoption, the estimates of revenue and expenditures for 1944, since the Press may wish to publish this statement, I thought it advisable to inform the ratepayers, briefly as to what was accomplished, on their behalf in 1943.

"When I presented the budget a year ago, I reported that our auditor had completed his investigation of our Sinking Fund and had found that the Fund was over-accumulated in the amount of $88,949.53 of which sum something over $10,000 properly belonged to Public School Funds and should be credited to the unpaid Public School debentures; I also stated that we hoped by making an appeal to the Municipal Board, to get permission to make certain adjustments in that Fund to the advantage of the ratepayers. We authorized our Auditor, Mr. F. A. R. MacFadden, C.A., to present his findings and recommendations to the Municipal Board on our behalf. Without going into tedious details, this in brief, is what has been approved by the Municipal Board:—

"(1) $11,000 in the Sinking Fund which properly belonged to Schools, has been transferred to the Provincial Treasurer and applied against the debenture covering King George School which matures on May 1st., 1952. This debenture is for $120,000. By the transfer, the annual levy on this debenture to its maturity has been reduced from $2,039 to $245 a very nice saving to the taxpayers of Belleville.

"(2) We are carrying approximately $112,000 of Sinking Fund Sewer debentures, maturing at various dates up to April 1962. In so far as the city's liability on these debentures, we are authorized to make no further levy either for principal or interest. Another substantial saving, but due to the varying dates of maturity, I cannot give you the exact amount for each year but I can tell you that the amount for 1944 is $2,128.65.

"(3) We have a number of pavements on which the debenture payments have all been collected, and these pavements in numerous places are showing signs of breaking up, due to water penetrating and freezing. Our Engineer has recommended for these pavements a treatment of asphalt and crushed stone. Several streets were treated in 1943 and the cost, over $6,000, was on proper authority, taken from Sinking Fund surplus. We have reason to hope that this process will lengthen the life of these old pavements by several years. We expect to continue treatment and method of payment until the last Sinking Fund debenture matures in April 1952. It is quite probable that at that date, there will still be some surplus in that Fund, and if so, it will then be necessary for the council of that day to consult the Municipal Board as to its disposition.

"While the final audit of our Treasurer's records to the end of 1943, is not fully completed, the auditor has assured me that we can safely use in our estimates of revenue in 1944, the amount I have placed therein.

"I wish to publicly commend our Tax Collection Department on what has been accomplished during my tenure as chairman of Finance, and particularly in 1943. Our total tax roll was $455,104.81 and of that total $417,197.65 had been collected at December, 31st., 1943. In addition $51,333.59 had been collected on "taxes in arrears" from former years. The total of uncollected taxes on December 31st., 1943, including those of 1943, was $56,306.17 as compared with nearly $200,000 a few years ago. This is certainly an excellent showing, and worthy of the highest commendation.

"I had hoped to offer you a more attractive tax rate for 1944. Our city levy is reduced by one mill, but owing to the fact that the Board of Education found it necessary to require an increase in "maintainence" charges of $13,500 and also from a slight increase in the debenture levy on the Collegiate and Vocational School, it was necessary to raise the school levy by one mill, the Collegiate rate by .7 mills and the Public School rate by .3 mills. I had hoped that increase of half a million in assessment and the retirement of over $100,000 of school debentures in the last few years would have provided sufficient money to meet the rising costs of education, but it has not worked out that way.

"Before I conclude, I wish to express my thanks and appreciation to the officials who have been so largely responsible for the preparation of these estimates, which I will present to you for your approval in a moment or two. It means much to the city and the council to have a staff of officials, so devoted to the public interests.

"In conclusion I will give you a comparison of the various rates for 1943 and 1944:

| | 1943 Mills | 1944 Mills |
|---|---|---|
| Public and Separate Schools | 10 | 10.3 |
| Collegiate & Vocational School | 7.9 | 8.6 |
| Local Improvements (City's Share) | 2.5 | 1.6 |
| Relief | 1.4 | 1.2 |
| General Rate | 15.2 | 15.3 |
| | 37 | 37 |

"All of which is respectfully submitted,

H. J. CLARKE, B.A.,
Chairman of Executive."

By-Laws Passed.

The by-laws adopted to complete the tax rate for the year were:—1.—To appoint a collector; 2.—To authorise collection and to provide penalties; 3.—To authorise levying and collecting of taxes for other than schools, city's share of Local Improvements and Unemployment Relief; 4.—Levying and collecting of taxes for Unemployment Relief; 5.—Levying and collecting of taxes for city's share of Local Improvement rates; 6.—Levying and collecting of taxes for purposes of the Roman Catholic Separate School; 7.—Levying and collecting of taxes for the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School; 8.—Levying and collecting of taxes for Public Schools; 9.—To appoint a committee to deal with all matters regarding purchase and sale of debentures and investment of the Sinking Fund. Other by-laws passed were one to permit drug stores to close at specified times throughout the week, an agreement with J. M. Wood and one with Gerald Vance, others for deeds of property to be conveyed to purchasers of city property, two to extend the time for purchasers of lots to build their houses and lastly one to stop up a portion of Lingham Street.

Dr. Brink Addresses Council.

Dr. G. S. Brink of the Department of Health, appeared before the council with respect to the erection of a sanatorium for tuberculosis in this section of the Province. Dr. Brink has spoken before many municipalities in this connection and all have appointed committees which will meet in one large conference to discuss this matter in every phase and try to arrive at some conclusion. A committee of Mayor Rollins, Ald. Woodley and Ald. Chamberlain was appointed. The speaker stated to the council:

"On behalf of the Honorable Dr. Vivian, Minister of Health, may I thank you for granting his request that I be afforded the opportunity of presenting to the members of this council the tuberculosis situation, (especially in respect to sanatorium beds) in this part of the province.

"I have in the last three weeks given the information to the county councils of Leeds and Grenville, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Hastings and Prince Edward, as well as to the councils of the cities of Kingston and Brockville.

"The object of my visit is to interest the officials of the counties and the cities as to the urgent need of additional sanatorium beds to serve the sufferers from tuberculosis, who are residents of this district.

Thirteen in Province.

There are thirteen sanatoria in the province with a total capacity of approximately 3,630 beds. The ratio of sanatorium beds in Ontario to the whole population is 1 to 1,045 persons. The ratio of sanatorium beds to population in the counties of Leeds and Grenville, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Hastings and Prince Edward, including Brockville, Kingston and Belleville is now about 1 to 2,300 persons.

"Any sanatorium in this district should serve all the above mentioned counties. There are 47 beds for the tuberculosis in connection with the Kingston General Hospital; the section set aside for this purpose is known as the Kingston Sanatorium. Part of this accommodation is satisfactory, but the greater part leaves much to be desired.

"The people of Belleville and vicinity who are unfortunate enough to develop tuberculosis are immediately handicapped as regards treatment because there are insufficient beds close at hand.

"If these sufferers are to receive the benefit of sanatorium treatment which offers the greatest hope of cure or arrest of the disease, the vast majority must enter a sanatorium in Western Ontario some hundreds of miles from their homes and friends.

"Last year there were 23 residents of Belleville receiving treatment in sanatoria. There were 20 in Western Ontario Institutions and only three in Kingston. The situation does not seem fair or just to the residents of Belleville, when those requiring sanatorium treatment have to enter sanatoria so far from their homes.

Belleville Saved $30,000.

"Since the Government relieved the municipalities of the payment of sanatorium maintenance charges for their residents in sanatorium in 1936, Belleville has been saved over $30,000. Against this saving your expenses in connection with post sanatorium care for your residents who could not provide adequate care for themselves has been less than $1,000. Further; twice as many patients have availed themselves of sanatorium treatment as was formerly the case.

"The counties of Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry built their own St. Lawrence Sanatorium in 1937 and now their patients are being treated near their homes and loved ones. Since the opening of this sanatorium, which resulted in an improved system of tuberculosis control, the tuberculosis mortality rate has decreased 40 per cent in spite of the increased industrialization in the Cornwall area.

100 Bed Sanatorium Proposed.

It is proposed to build a new sanatorium of one hundred beds in or near Kingston to serve the people of the nearby counties and cities. The capital cost of the sanatorium will of course have to be borne by the counties, cities, separate towns and the government. Unless beds are provided to serve the people of what might be described as mid eastern Ontario it cannot be hoped to control the disease as in other sections of the province already provided with good sanatorium facilities.

"The various county councils have appointed two or three representatives to give special study to this problem. It is planned that they will all meet at a not distant date, when further discussion can take place as to the best methods to follow to bring about a new sanatorium for this part of the province. It is suggested that this council do likewise and appoint two representatives to study the situation and meet with the representatives of the various counties, Kingston and Brockville at a later date."

Questions Invited.

At the conclusion of his address Dr. Brink invited questions and Ald. Hyde suggested, that the sanatorium be built somewhere in North Hastings, where the climate is considered of the best. Dr. Brink informed the Alderman, that climate made little difference in the treatment of the disease and if placed in an out-of-the-way place, it would be hard to get doctors, help, because the personnel required a little relaxation and like to be near a large town. He explained that it was proposed to build the sanatorium near Kingston, but Mayor Rollins argued that Belleville would be a more central spot than Kingston for the territory to be covered. Ald. McDougall suggested there were probably other diseases, that required the attention of municipalities but the speaker thought that tuberculosis was the most urgent at the present time. Ald. Chamberlain suggested, that Belleville would be half way between Weston and Cornwall, where sanatoria are now situated.

The insurance committee under the chairmanship of Ald. McDougall reported to the council on their findings, the report being accepted by the council. It read in part and there was no discussion on the subject:

"Your committee of W. L. McDougall, H. Armstrong, W. Harvey, Mayor Rollins and H. D. Bateman, met at the city hall, Wednesday, February 2nd., and considered various types of insurance available to cover the liability of the city to its employees, excluding the police and firemen who are presently otherwise protected.

"It is therefore recommended that the city broker be instructed to procure workmen's compensation insurance on all city employees, exclusive of firemen and police, at a

Report of Fire Chief to Council

His Worship Mayor Rollins and Aldermen of the City Council,
Belleville, Ontario.

Gentlemen: I beg to submit herewith a report of the activities of the Fire Department for the year ending Dec. 31, 1943.

During the year this department responded to 267 alarms, classified as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Dwellings | 89 |
| Business places | 44 |
| Factories | 8 |
| Pipes and chimneys | 61 |
| Hospital | 3 |
| Hotels | 5 |
| Electric motors and wiring | 7 |
| Grass | 29 |
| Churches | 4 |
| Cars and trucks | 16 |
| Miscellaneous | 2 |
| Tar | 4 |
| City dump | 6 |
| Theatres | 2 |
| Smoke investigation | 13 |
| False alarms | 3 |
| Calls out of city | 11 |
| Gas stations and garages | 5 |
| Dry cleaners | 2 |
| Oil burners | 2 |
| Gasoline | 2 |
| Calls to drowning accidents | 2 |
| Inhalator calls | 2 |
| Calls to rescue people in bay | 2 |

One two-year-old child was burned to death.

There were 663 inspections made of all classes of buildings, and 110 complaints answered during the year. 175 extinguishers were recharged for school and the public.

Equipment used at fires: 16,550 ft. of 2½ inch hose, 7,200 ft. of booster hose, 450 ft. of master hose, 1,520 ft. of ladders raised, 19 tarpaulins used, 249 hand pumps used.

There were 1,520 gallons of water used from booster tanks and 1,340 gallons used from hand pumps. The amount of chemicals used; Pyrene 3 gallons, liquid foam 20 gallons, soda and acid 30 gallons.

190 men were detailed to theatres and dance halls and public functions during the year for public protection.

There were six fire drills at the city schools during the year. There were 80 first aid classes held during the year and 80 hose and ladder drills at the hall.

The health of the men on the department has been fair, with the exception of one accident. James McDonald lost 28 days.

For the purpose of comparison the following table of fire losses is presented:

| Year | Calls | Property Value | Loss | Insurance |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1939 | 282 | $508,937.88 | $50,974.43 | $279,650.00 |
| 1940 | 255 | 232,843.00 | 41,265.68 | 174,214.00 |
| 1941 | 296 | 556,940.00 | 9,035.74 | 459,925.00 |
| 1942 | 256 | 330,425.00 | 10,696.45 | 571,150.00 |
| 1943 | 267 | 864,056.94 | 22,207.82 | 675,097.70 |

The A.R.P. Auxiliary Fire Fighters have made good progress during the year. We had 16 fire-drills with hose and ladders, as well as lectures. A.R.P. 1½ inch hose laid, 6400 ft., ladders raised 560 ft. There are 17 men still on roll call, with full equipment, and we wish to thank them for their attendance and the interest shown in their work. The auxiliary force is handled by Assistant Chief G. Vance.

I would recommend the purchase of a small car for the Fire Chief's work and 300 feet of 2½ inch No. 1 double jacket hose, also a small electric saw for cutting through floors and doors and two gallons of liquid foam.

The Water Works Department has given the best of attention to keeping the fire hydrants in good condition during the year. There are some hydrants in the city that are too low and I would request that they be raised.

The Police Department has also given full co-operation whenever their assistance was required.

In conclusion I would like to express my appreciation to all city officials and residents of Belleville who have generously co-operated with the Fire Department in the discharge of their duties during the past year.

Yours respectfully,
W. J. LYNCH, Fire Chief.

American Bombers Continue Attacks

London, Feb. 15 (CP)—American four-engined bombers today attacked German fortifications in northern France for the fourth time in five days, after earlier smashed against targets in the same area by R.A.F. and American medium fighter bombers.

The assault followed a night in which no Allied operation were reported and Britain enjoyed its first raid-free night since Feb. 10.

Today is the eighth consecutive day targets in northern France have undergone Allied attacks.

DIES SHOVELLING SNOW

Peterborough, Ont., Feb. 15 (CP) W. J. Moore, district cheese inspector, dropped dead in front of his home at 675 Water Street, at noon today while shovelling snow. He is widely known throughout the district, and was formerly a cheese-maker. He is employed by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Some Startling Facts

Ontario Prisons and Reformatories report for the year ending March 31st., 1943, shows a continuing decline in the number of persons sentenced to prison yearly while the population is rising. In the year there were 18,551 whose offences brought sentences, which is far below what it was in 1939 when 27,926 were sentenced. However the decrease during the past year occurred in fact during the early part of the year and during the balance of the year committals and sentences continued steady. So it appears, says the report, that the decrease for the last four years actually ended late in the summer of 1942.

The report comments "that as a province and as a nation, it is a serious matter that at the time when human resources are so greatly needed many persons cannot or will not restrain their anti-social tendencies and play a manly part in the present world crisis."

Who are these people who were sentenced? During the year an intelligence test was given a fairly average group of prisoners with the following results for the group:

17.89% mental defectives, 12.35% borderline intelligence, 28.65% dull normal intelligence, 40.09% normal intelligence, 1.02% superior intelligence.

And on the score of education tests for those above the borderline intelligence showed, that only 2.96% had an education equal to their own statement, 4.10% had an education superior to their own statement, 92.94% had an education inferior to their own claims. Only 14.12% had entrance standing or better and 61.28% had less than grade six standing.

The surprising fact is that in this average group 41.11% were found in the purely normal and superior intelligence group and 92.94% of those who were in these normal or superior intelligence groups had an exaggerated and unwarranted opinion of their education and abilities.

What brings these boys and girls to prison? The report of Provincial Secretary C. F. Neelands says "it has been found that the largest single factor is the lack of proper training in childhood, chiefly in the home. Many of the prisoners come from broken homes. Many come from unbroken homes where the parents worked hard to provide their children with shelter, clothing and food, but failed to work hard and together in training these children, totally oblivious of the fact that the latter was the most important of all the necessaries of life.

"Some prisoners came from home conditions so sordid that crime is the natural and inevitable result," the report says.

"Lack of proper home training is chiefly responsible for prisoners in normal and superior intelligence groups finding themselves in trouble. They do not properly use their intelligence, because they were not trained to think properly. They are careless thinkers and therefore live carelessly.

"The mentally defective child requires more than average intelligence direction, good habit-forming care and vocational training over a number of years over a lengthy period of years in order to fill a useful place in life. It is obvious that where a child of this type develops any of the home conditions mentioned above the resultant adolescent or adult is a misfit and anti-social and probably will continue as such despite the best efforts to correct.

The report lays stress in the importance of detection of juvenile delinquency in its early stages to present the facts to the parents of such and assist them to correct. It is of supreme importance that full efforts be made while the children are in the early habit-forming years.

No Mystery About It

A couple of years ago there were figures going the rounds to show that 1941 or 1942 was the year of desting for the world. All one had to do was to take the birth-year of a leader, add to this the year in which he took office, then add the number of years in office and the present age and you would get twice the year in which the adding was done. So President Roosevelt's figures would this year be his birthyear, plus 1933, when he took office, plus 11 years in office, plus 62 his present age—total 3,888, or twice 1944.

How wonderful? No it is not wonderful at all. It is easy to see why the figures total the same for Mr. Roosevelt's year of birth, and his age 62, total 1944 (the present year) and his year of taking office plus the number of years in office makes the same year 1944. This will hold for Churchill, Stalin and any person living, take the year of birth, the year he or she did anything, add the number of years since that was done and also his age and what have you, 3,888—twice 1944. Next year it would be 1945 and so on.

It proves nothing and it is not even witty or funny. It is odd such a ridiculous claim for figures will go the rounds and not be squelched—it means nothing but doubling the years of any person living.

Two years ago it worked out at twice 1942, so what of prophecy that was supposed to attach to the "mystic" figures!

Europe's Folk Song

The treasure box of European folk song is inexhaustible, Nicholas Slonimsky writes in The Christian Science Monitor. There are gay songs and songs full of melancholy. There are rapid songs in the major key, and slow songs in minor keys. There are old songs conceived in the ancient modes, and there are songs of recent origin that sparkle with profane vivacity. There are songs with an oriental lolt, found in the music of the Balkan nations. And then, there are the songs of a people who have suffered a full measure of cruel agony, the songs of the Jews. And the merry songs of the Gypsies, are they still heard in their familiar haunts of Southeastern Europe?

There exists in Europe a political and intellectual underground that the Nazis have never been able to destroy. There undoubtedly exists a musical underground. What new songs will arise from the present oppression? Will a new "Marseillaise" call the people to arms? The tapping of the rhythm and the wistling of the four-note motif of Beethoven's "Fifth Symphony" has proved so potential a symbol of V for Victory in the occupied territories, that the Nazis took cognizance of its appeal, and even attempted to steal the symbol for their own use.

A French monarch said when the mob outside the palace shouted a revolutionary song: "I have no fear of the music of my compatriots." The Nazis are more shrewd than this old-fashioned potentate. They listen to the songs of Europe with an attentive ear. The songs they do not like they silence by decree. But not for long! Europe will sing again!

Why They're Doughboys

(Sidney Skolsky, in Reader's Digest)

During the Mexican campaign the American soldiers called the Mexicans "adobe boys," because their uniforms covered with mud, were the same color as the adobe huts. Then, during World War 1, the word now spelled "doughboys," was used by American soldiers to describe themselves after they were covered with mud during the battles in France.

Heard in the Guardhouse

(Boston Globe)

The soldier in the guardhouse was looking disconsolate. Another prisoner spoke to him. "How come your here anyway?" he asked.

"On account of the furlong," said the first prisoner, sadly.

"Furlong!" repeated the other. "You mean furlough."

"I mean furlong," said the first prisoner. "I went too fur and stayed too long."

Respecting General's Privacy

(Manchester Guardian)

General Montgomery, in battle-dress, walked with his 14-year-old son recently into the crowded dining room of a London hotel. The diners knew it was he and knew what he had come for. The staff had orders that he was not on any account to be disturbed, and his fellow-guests respected his privacy.

MY LADY'S TAILOR

There is a gentleman down town
Who sells my Nellie hat and gown
And knows as much, I'd say, and more,
Of millinery and its lore
As any seamstress of renown.

He stands and eyes her up and down
And with a smile or with a frown
Says: "Yes, my dear!" or, "Darling, no!
Beyond this door you must not go
With such a hat or such a gown!"

I've led a busy life and so
I'm ignorant of furbelow,
Of ribbon, satin, silk and lace,
Of knowledge I possess no trace,
As Nellie told me long ago.

But since compelled to judge am I
By how the fashion strikes the eye,
I'll say, with me, if she'd confer,
The hats that fellow sells to her
I'd never, never let her buy!

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

With the R.C.A.F. in Britain, Feb. 15 (CP)—It is for trips like the one PO. J. S. Lees, a Chilliwack, B.C., pilot, made to Leipzig that Canadians are winning so many decorations.

His Lancaster was raked from stem to stern by cannon and machine-gun fire, yet he carried on, bombed his target and made a perfect landing at base afterwards with his flaps unserviceable and two burst tires. Hardly a point of the aircraft escaped damage in an attack by an enemy night fighter.

Not one of the crew was injured though the flying suit of Flt. Sgt. E. T McLeod of (13 Ritchie St) Saint John, N.B., the rear-gunner, was torn by a cannon shell. The wireless operator was PO. J. F. Brown of (185 St. Cyrille St.) Quebec.

Another engagement, this time with four enemy fighters, was reported by the crew of a Moose Squadron Halifax. Things started to happen after they had dropped their bombs on Frankfurt but the big aircraft was brought back safely and undamaged.

During the second attack, Sgt. J. C. Link of Canning, N.S., saw tracer from his rear guns enter the cockpit of one enemy aircraft and there is a possibility it was destroyed. During the third attack all but one of Link's guns became unserviceable and the pilot, PO. J. R. Morrison of (133 Broughton Ave.) Montreal West, Que., was obliged to do some violent evasive action.

Other Canadians in the crew were FO. M. C. Andrews of (30 Seaton St.) Toronto, navigator; FO. E. A. Hieland of North Vancouver, bomb aimer; Flt. Sgt. W. R. Touchie of Fairview, Alta., wireless operator, and Flt. Sgt. J. C. McNary of (751 Bridge Ave.) Windsor, Ont., second pilot.

Distinction of being the tallest Canadian in the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group belongs to Sqdn. Ldr. J. W. (Junior) Bootle of (3755 Trinity St.) Vancouver. He stands six feet, 1 1-2 inches and weighs 215 pounds. "You ought to see y brother, though," says the squadron leader, who is an accountant officer. His brother is six feet, seven inches tall.

The Lion and Bison Squadrons have acquired new adjutants...Flt. Lt. O. R. Martin of (89 Fairlawn Ave.) Toronto is with the Lions and Flt. Lt. C. R. Higgens of Nelson, B.C. is with the Bisons.

Back in Britain after a prolonged spell in the Middle East are Flt. Lts. George Munro of Stratford, Ont., and Bill Bentley, of London, Ont., both intelligence officers....They're spellbinding station officers with tales of the mystic east.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Some knowledge of what was needed by Canada's new settlers in 1784 may be discovered in a petition sent to the Governor of Upper Canada. A few of the requests were: "That Boards, Nails and Shingles be found each Family for Compleating such Buildings as they shall see Cause to Erect for their Convenience at any time for the space of Two years from and after their first Arriva l at Cataraqui with Eighthy Squares of Window Glass to be delivered shortly after their first arrival at Cataraqui & Ammunition with one Felling Ax be allowed for each Male Inhabitant of the age of fourteen years . . . One Plough Shear & Coulter . . . Leather for Horse Collers . . . Two spades . . . Three Iron Wedges . . . Fifteen Iron Harrow Teeth . . . Three Hoes . . . One Inch & half Inch Auger, Three Chisels (sorted) One Gouge, Three Gimblets, One HandSaw & Files, One Nail Hammer, One Drawing Knife, One Frow for splitting Shingles, Two Scythes and one Sickle, One Broad Ax . . . All the above to be allowed, for Each Family. One Grind Stone allowed for every Three Families." The petition also asked for clothing, provisions, horses, cows, sheep and seeds such as wheat and corn as well as potatoes and pease.

Meanwhile, out West, the fur hunter was striding into an era of great prosperity. Transactions involved a great deal of bartering, which made it necessary to keep exact account of articles taken to the scene of trade. Many of the clerks engaged by companies to do the figuring were apprentices and were engaged for five or seven years. For such services they earned the sum of approximately $500, with lodging and clothing supplied!

PRINCIPAL REINSTATED

Toronto, Feb. 15 —(CP)— After stormy debate, Board of Education of suburban York Township voted 5-4 last night to reinstate Bruce W. Clarke as principal of Runnymede Collegiate at a salary of $4,500 yearly and to pay him $2,500 in settlement of claims against the Board resulting from his dismissal Feb. 13, 1943. At the lengthy meeting, opponents of Clarke heckled and booed Board members who supported reinstatement.

FISHING BOAT MAKES HAUL OF $8,000 IN TIRES

Gloucester, Mass., Feb. 15 —(AP) —The fishing dragger Frankie and Rose yesterday netted one of the best and most unusual catches of the year. The vessel hauled out 126 large truck tires floating in the water about two hours after it left port. Captain Joseph Sinatra valued the catch at approximately $8,000 and said the Coast Guard had taken charge.

BREN GUN

Their Bren guns spluttering volleys of leaden disaster, Canadian soldiers in Italy have proven that man for man they are fully equal to the best trained enemy troops.

A versatile weapon, equally useful for stationary and mobile firing, the Bren is a favorite among Canadians. Small, compact and easy to handle, it is particularly adaptable for troops advancing.

While it cannot make much impression against a tank or armour-plate, the Bren through long and constant usage has been proven more efficient where bodies of infantry troops face each other. It is capable of firing both single rounds and bursts.

Soviet Letter:—
Thirst for Revenge Overcomes Refugee at Sight of Devastation

A Russian refugee, who fled from the Ukraine during the German occupation, tells in the following story what it is like to return home.

(Written For The Canadian Press)

By U. SMOLICH

Moscow, Feb. 15 (CP)—I left my home in the Ukraine in the autumn of 1941 and travelled with long and weary columns of refugee children, distracted mothers and quiet, but melancholy aged folk.

Our train moved at a snail's pace from station to station. The permanent way on either side was shattered. Behind us and in front were bombed junctions. For two weeks the train proceeded in a southerly direction and then headed north.

Two years later I returned home. I travelled by plane this time, making the journey in two hours. It is indeed a terrible sight to see towns ruined and destroyed by the Germans. But even more terrible was the view from the aircraft of dozens of villages razed—dead places amid beautiful meadows and on the banks of crystal clear streams.

The scale of destruction was overwhelming. The thirst for revenge overcomes everything. When the plane landed women and children came rushing to meet the passengers. We stood there smiling in embarrassment, drinking in the air. But, alas, no longer could we smell the aromatic Ukrainian soil.

Children came running up and pulled off their caps. "How do you do," they shouted in chorus.

Terrible Sights.

We now felt that we were really in the Ukraine where everybody welcomes you whether he knows you or not. The liberated villages, although terrible sights, possess a certain beauty. In the day time they hum with voices of men and women clearing away debris, repairing dwelling houses, restoring power stations tramway lines and sewage.

Despite the skeletons of burned out buildings, the streets were filled with people going to and fro about their business with an air of festivity. At night, however, death pervaded the lampless streets.

"Dead" buildings assume their grave-yard aspect and cold autumn winds penetrates through thousands of gaping holes.

"Yet, to inhabitants, there is nothing so near and dear as these ruins. They flame with blood from wounded hearts. To these ruins belong every breath, every thought of future. On these ruins we will build a new, brighter and even better Ukraine.

The enemy left us a country terrible in its desolation. But mighty efforts of the Soviet state together with herculean labors of the people, have averted the dangers of epidemics and famine and the people are not battling the cold winter.

TITO PRAISES YUGOSLAVS FIGHTING IN RUSSIA

Moscow, Feb. 15 —AP)— Marshal Josip Broz Tito), commander of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation, sent a message today congratulating Yugoslavs fighting with the Russian forces and expressing gratitude to the Red army "for its leading role in liberating enslaved countries."

HOMES FLOODED

Cornwall, Ont., Feb. 15 —(CP)— Basements of some 20 homes southwest of Cornwall have been flooded to depths of four to five feet by waters of the St. Lawrence River.

An ice jam in the river east of here is believed responsible for the high water level, 19 feet above the normal summer level.

In 1787 the legislature of South Carolina changed the name of the state's chief seaport from "Charles Town" to "Charleston."

The Whig party in the United States survived less than twenty years. In 1836, as the successor of the National Republican party, it nominated William Henry Harrison for President. He was defeated, but elected four years later. Clay was the Whig candidate in 1844, but was defeated by Polk; Taylor was elected as a Whig in 1848 and, after his death in office, he was succeeded by a Whig, Fillmore; Scott, the last Whig nominated, was defeated by Pierce in 1852. All the Whig Presidential candidates except Clay were soldiers.

A pleasant event in the form of a social evening took place at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. George Clapp, Dunbar St., on Saturday night, when members of the combined staffs of the Capitol and McCarthy Theatres, in which Mr. Clapp is projectionist, gathered to enjoy a party together. Manager W. Fawcett, Mrs. Thelma Kerwin and Mrs. McGeachie, of the McCarthy Theatre were present. The Capitol was represented by Manager and Mrs. T. A. Mascaro and projectionist, Arthur Sweet. A number of outside friends were also present on the occasion. A dainty lunch was served and Mr. Clapp proved himself a most worthy host and his wife a very charming hostess. This was one of a number of parties which have been held alternately by the staffs of the two theatres during the past year, and like the others, this one was also a great success.

Good Companions Club Members To Call on Newcomers

The second meeting of the Good Companions Club was held in Tabernacle Church on Feb. 11th. Despite the inclement weather, the group was enthusiastic and interested.

The program opened with a short religious service conducted by the president, G. W. Wright and assisted by Dr. Myers. Several well-known hymns were sung with Mrs. G. W. Wright as pianist.

The chief item of the program was an interesting and instructive address by Mr. William Lockyer, representative of the Children's Aid in this district. He paid special emphasis upon their work in behalf of the dependent's allowance for those in the armed forces. He emphasized the crowded housing conditions and expressed the wish that the members of the club would seek out wives of the men in the armed forces, not to offer them sympathy but friendliness, companionship and some aid in making their life more pleasant in this community. He pointed out that those with children whose husbands were overseas or at some distance, would appreciate an hour of respite to shop or go to some form of entertainment.

The meeting thanked Mr. Lockyer for his remarks and it was decided that each member present would call on five such families to offer them that friendship they desire.

Refreshments were served.

40 Airmen Guests At Valentine Dance Of Dee Bee Club

The Deacon Shirt Company Dee-Bee Club sponsored a Valentine dance on Monday night in the I. O. O. F. hall when forty airmen from No. 5 I.T.S. were guests of the club. Featured band for the affair was the Modernaires Orchestra from Trenton, which played both smooth and jive rhythms for the occasion. The arrangements for the dance was under the leadership of Miss Margaret Meeks and her committee. The master-of-ceremonies, in the person of Mr. Bill Van Tassel, conducted several prize and novelty dances which created a great deal of amusement for everyone. The spot prizes were won by Miss Mary Calbury and Mr. Jim Yates and Miss Gertrude Bell and Mr. Alec Burley. The winners of the Sadie Hawkins number were Miss Mary DeGenova and Mr. Albert Browns, while the door prize of a $5 War Saving Certificate went to Mr. Fred Daly.

BRIDGE ST. UNITED CHURCH FRIENDSHIP GROUP

The Friendship Group of Bridge St. United Church held its weekly meeting in the Sunday School rooms on Sunday evening. The program included a sing song and a short play by the C.G.I.T. Rev. Wm. ## Reliance Aircraft Valentine Dance Attended by 350

One of the most successful social affairs reported since the formation of the organization, the Reliance Aircraft Association sponsored a St. Valentine dance in the Trianon Ballroom on Monday night. Approximately three hundred and fifty people were in attendance to celebrate the merry "Fourteenth." There were representatives from the three services, the Navy, Army and Air Force, not to forget the civilian populace too. Dress was optional, so as a result some of the young ladies were in floor-length attire and others showed their preference in wearing street-length ensembles. And who could play better music for the party than Flt. Lt. Buff Estes and his Trenton R.C.A.F. Orchestra who proved his great versatility in music with his modern renditions of popular dance numbers. The two spot dances went to Miss D. McLennan and Mr. William Cross and Miss Gwen Kitchen and Mr. Allan Ross. Lucky winner of the door prize was Miss E. Strudwick. Not even the jitterbug fans were disappointed last evening because one of those hep-cat numbers was conducted, with a prize being awarded to the best contestants. The dance, arranged through the efforts of the social committee, comprised of Mrs. E. Dalrymple, Miss Jeannette Hall, Messrs. Jack Darlington and Jim Shapley realized highly gratifying results.

To Brighten Rainy Days

White water-proofed taffeta raincoat.

By VERA WINSTON

SOME OF the coats dedicated to old Jupiter Pluvius are so good looking that it is a great temptation to wear them when it isn't raining. Of this type is this attractive rain coat of white waterproofed taffeta with collar of black velvet. Three black buttons, one at the neck and two at the waist, fasten the ample lapover. A small peplum lends additional chic, and the separate bow tie worn under the collar is optional.

Wife Preservers

When you are buying turkish towels be sure that the foundation of the towel is firm. A firm foundation cloth is necessary to hold the pile yarns in place. A loosely woven, sleazy foundation material allows the pile to pull out, the fabric that is left takes up too little water, and it soon goes to pieces.

Eyebrows Profit by Mascara

Barbara Britten brushes upward when using eye make-up

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS WITH light colored eyebrows and lashes will find that mascara is a good friend. Darker lashes bring out the allure of the eyes, give them depth and a touch of the mysterious.

When a solid mascara is used, dip the small brush in water, let the water drain away so the bristles are barely moist, then whisk them over the darkening agent. Brush upward. It isn't safe to darken the lashes of the lower lids; often there's a bit of moisture there and muddy puddles on the cheeks never brought beauty dividends to any woman.

Removing Mascara

Remove mascara with a light cream or cleansing oil. If you try to take it off with soap and water, you may be in for an inky mess, although it can be done, of course. Some beauticians apply vaseline to the lashes before they use mascara.

They also spread it on the eyelids, claiming that shining lids make eyes brilliant, more dewy looking. Well, dewy eyes are what the lassies are after. Why not try it?

Eyelashes don't stay with one for a very long time. They moult, new ones take their places unless the papillae from which they emerge have been damaged, which happens sometimes to the girl who suffers from styes.

Care of Eyebrows

Eyebrows are benefitted by the use of lubricants. One can use vaseline, lanoline or mineral oil, the oil being a bit more convenient as it washes out quickly and easily. Apply it after the facial washing at bed time, giving a light massage to the underlying flesh. Use your eyebrow brush afterwards as brushing imparts vigor to the growth. Don't want a vigorous growth? Nonsense. Eyebrows are staging a come back. Those little wispy ones are old stuff.

A ROYAL HAT

At one time it wouldn't be news if the Royal Family got new clothes every day. But since the war they have been making the old ones do. So when Princess Elizabeth, who may sit on the throne of England one day, blossomed out in this new bonnet, it made headlines. The hat has military lines, with small peak and high pleated crown.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Stand Tall and Look Snappy

Young girls with rounded shoulders believe that life is bitter. Their families nag them, do a lot of back slapping, tell them to pull themselves up and together. The poor dears feel that they are picked on. But they should understand that those who love them can't bear to see their young figures going sloppy. With shoulders rounded the heart is crowded, the lungs are cramped so that the blood is not properly aerated. The tissues of the breast will, in time, lose youthful firmness. So, if you are one of the slumpish darlings make up your mind to sit pretty, stand pretty, carry yourself like a soldier on parade. It is well worth while to do that.

Many girls in their middle teens have notions of their own about posture. They see a slinky, long robed doll on the silver screen who assumes the outline of a question mark, or maybe a snake, and they think she's grand. They try to be copy cats. The result is not precisely the same. The tummy is thrust forward, the chest caves in, the back takes on ugly lines.

It isn't only graceful appearance that demands the erect figure, but health as well. Girls of splendid carriage have better digestions, more colorful complexions, greater vitality than those who let their shoulders fall forward. Their muscles are resilient.

The careless pose suggests lack of spirit; the erect one is snappy; the girl looks wholly alive, on her toes.

Poor posture, because it throws the body into unnatural lines, causes fatigue. When poor posture is corrected, one is vitalized. Women who do things and get places always stand erect, carry themselves splendidly. Haven't you noticed that? Self respect keeps them from looking awkward.

With the backbone tall, the chest lifted, the head balanced, the muscles contract and tighten, the blood streams march, nourishment is carried to every cell of the body. The avenues of elimination are more likely to function normally.

You want to be a smart dresser? Then remember this; many a woman who spends little money for clothes has a reputation as a lady of fashion. She puts into her attire something more than flesh and bones, she puts in poise, gracefulness, physical splendor. And she can't do that if she has a hump on the upper storey of her back because she is too lazy or thoughtless to maintain correct carriage.

TO CLEAN RUBBERS AND RAINETTES

Don't let drab, streaky rubbers spoil the effect of a smart ensemble, when it's so easy to make them new-looking by a simple home treatment. To brighten your rubbers, rub them with a wet rag dipped in a solution of one-third ammonia powder and two-thirds water. Finally wash in "soapy-rich, grease-dissolving" suds and rinse well with clear water.

Fashion Drawing Has Become an Attractive Profession

BE A FASHION ILLUSTRATOR

As you glance through a pile of magazines and papers you can't help noticing the great amount of attractive fashion drawings. Easily to see that it is indeed a money-making profession.

For anyone skilled in the art and with a definite flair for the original in dress designing, the field of fashion illustration should hold great interest.

Of course if you want to be a successful fashion illustrator you must have an observant mind, good memory, active imagination, good taste, respect for accuracy, a sense of proportion and balance, plus a strong ambition to succeed.

These fundamentals are not as binding as they seem because if you are at all enthusiastic, every-thing will fall in quite simply.

Our 32-page booklet not only describes how to draw the fashion figure but also gives pointers on various other angles—for example, how to picture furs and fabrics accurately. It is full of helpful suggestions for the novice.

Slim Lines For Spring

Cardigan Jacket Suit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE CARDIGAN jacket looms up as the big news in suit jackets for spring. This cardigan suit accents a slim waist by the curved folds that go from the high set pockets around the back. Flaps simulate hip pockets. The skirt is straight in back with inverted pleats in the front. It is made of deep gray worsted. Worn with it is a gilet of brown crepe with a softly rolled collar that softens the cardigan neckline of the jacket.

White Collar Woman

I am the White Collar-Woman.

I am often called "the Backbone of the Nation"; but I sometimes suspect that I am its bone of contention. Just now I am as well-picked as a turkey bone.

Clever young social reformers, just out of college, write withering books about me. I buy them and read them and say, "Is THAT so!" But that's all I ever do about it.

Alas, I am not "organized" and have nobody to lobby for me or speak up for me. Sometimes I haven't even got a clean white collar So What?

I cheerfully ride on busses and always stand in the subway because I haven't the enterprise to battle with the young and husky who beat me to a seat.

When a gentleman offers me his seat, I gratefully say, "Thank-you-so-much" — and immediately feel very mid-Victorian.

I buy more than my quota of war-bonds, always give ration-points, carry my own parcels, overpay my maid, give her the best radio in the house and never contradict her. I tremble when she leaves at night, and am thrilled when she shows up next morning.

I permit profiteers to mulct me, tradesmen to sneer at me, salesman to bully me, waiters to keep me waiting and always pal with taxi-drivers: I pay super first-class prices for duper third-class portions in restaurants; and 1944 prices for everything out of the same salary I earned in 1940. Everything has gone up except my income. That is as fixed as a show girl's smile.

I work hard for my living, exist on a budget, wear cotton stockings and do without all luxuries rather than patronise the black market. Because I dread inflation more than I ever dreaded the Japs.

Between the high taxes on the one hand and the high cost of living on the other, my pocket-book is thinner than the butter with a dollar dinner and flatter than Berlin after an air-raid.

I am neither a "realist" nor a surrealist and have never had high blood-pressure, a front page scandal or a post-war plan for Utopia. But I've had four varieties of the "flu", and many rosy promises and kind words from party politicians every election day.

I do not ask for a "Beautiful New World". I shall be grateful if victory and peace come in time to save a little of the pleasant old world with everything just as it was—for the boys to come back to!

I MUST believe in heaven and a fututre life because here on earth I am just about as esteemed and loved as a German mark.

I read the Scriptures for comfort. I NEED comfort. I am the White Collar Woman.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S A LONG TIME since we've seen the fruit-trimmed hat. A pretty model is a forward-tipped pillbox of blackstraw cloth with a border of fruits in bright colors interspersed with green leaves and velvet bows.

DRESS UP a suit or frock in an easy, inexpensive manner. Just take two contrasting squares of mousseline, organza or chiffon, featherstitch them together, roll the hems, and there you are! Drape, twist, arrange and tie them any old way.

IT'S A PLEASURE to choose from the new array of rain coats, but it's difficult too, for designs are many. Useful and nice is a coat of proofed cotton gabardine in army tan, done on trench coat lines. Double breasted, with button-belt in back, it has a detachable hood.

BOMBERS DOWN MOHAWKS 13 TO 9 IN SPIRITED GAME

Win Puts Mountain View Squad Within Point of Second Place

Coming in bunches, like grapes, a total of 22 goals were scored as the Mountain View "Bombers" downed the Deseronto "Mohawks 13 to 9 to move up in the Quinte R.C.A.F. service hockey league at the Hume Arena Monday night. A handful of faithful fans saw some wide open puck chasing with the Mohawks leading 3-2 at the end of the initial frame The score at the end of the middle frame was 7-5 for the Bombers, however, and then the two squads collectively flashed the light no less than ten times between them in the final stanza. It was the Mohawks' fifth consecutive loss, but they went down battling, while "Dutch" Cain's Bombers moved to within one point of second place 1 victory.

Some new faces were added to the roster of both teams, but the player who caught the eye of the local civilian following was a tall lithe defenceman for the Mohawks by the name of Clements, who comes from Western Canada and played senior hockey with the Air Force in Calgary last night. Besides being a prolific puck-carrier Clements proved an artist at stick handling, a strong blocker and what one might term an all-around good hockey player for any man's league. The fact he scored two goals and set up plays for two more in perfect style pretty much proved his worth to Coach Lalonde's Mohawks.

Bombers Carry to Much Power.

Although the Bombers 13 goals were pretty much divided after the gong had sounded Dan Cowley, Humphries, Dickson, Fuger, McHeavey were all in on at least a brace of counters each in the wildest scoring spree seen in the district service league this season. The fact the game was wide open and saw so much scoring was proven in the fact that only two minor penalties were meted out all night. Actually the Bombers carried too much general knowledge and team play for the Mohawks, who were forced to revert to their speed. Gariepy, in the Mohawk nets turned in a strong effort for two periods, but was given rather shaky defence. However, with 22 goals being fished out from behind the goalies last night it didn't speak any too well for the defence of either team, although Dan Cowley seemed to stop many shots at Reading in the BBombers' nets. On Thursday night two games of service league hockey will be played at the Hume Arena.

The lineups:

Mountain View: Goal, Reading; defence, Savard and Cowley; centre, McReavey; wings, Bauer and Fuger; subs, Aube, Ducquette, Boudreau, Humphries, Dickson and Mechinauk.

Deseronto "Mohawks": Goal, Gariepy; defence, Wickens and Clements; centre, Himlirich; wings, Brenchly and Lalonde; subs, Flookes, Hirdlack, Finn, Baker and Zatelny.

Referees: St. Louis and Holway of Belleville.

SELLOUT CROWD IS EXPECTED

Cleveland, Feb. 15—(AP)—Lightweight Champion Beau Jack, the boxing industry's latest perpetual motion machine, trains his rapid fire artillery on veteran Maxie Berger in an over-the-weight 10-rounder in Cleveland's Public Hall tonight.

A sellout crowd of around 11,000 is expected to cram the hall in expectation of seeing the former Georgia bootblack turn in a shining ob on the Mintreal welterweight, winner of 16 straight.

"It kind of looks like I'm the forgotten man there," says Maxie. "To read all the headlines a person might think Jack was going into that ring alone.

"The fellow deserves his share of the headlines, of course. He's a champion all right, but with a little break in the luck and some sharp counter punching I could catch up with my share of the headlines the day after the fight. And I think I've seen enough of him to know how to counter him properly."

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 15 (AP)—Imperturbable Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., laid down a three-under-par 68 yesterday to gallop in with the Texas open championship and $1,000 in war bonds. The finish was one of the most drastic in the 22-year-history of the tournament—Revolta closing out with a fine 273 for the 72 holes. Byron Nelson was just one stroke behind coming to the 18th.

Juniors Need Game to Stay In the Running

It's win or face elimination for the Belleville Juniors Wednesday night when they meet FO. Stan Jackson's Trenton kids in the second game of the district group junior O.H.A. playdowns at the Hume Arena.

In the first game of this series the Trenton kids eked out a 6-5 overtime win over Coach Toots Holway's Belleville lads, at which time the winning goal was very much disputed. Trailing one game in a best-in-three series the Holway-led charges are faced with the problem of winning Wednesday night or hanging up their hockey sticks for the season.

Billie Holway and Al Gordon are scheduled to return to the Belleville line-up Wednesday, both having missed the opening game of the group finals. Their presence should elevate the local juniors' chances to a marked degree. However, Stan Jackson is quite confident his Trenton kids are good enough to take the series in two straight. "We can't take any chances on a possible third game", remarked Jackson at practice last night.

Also Wednesday night the Stirling-Marmora Combines are playing in Tweed in a similar series. At the Hume Arena here tonight the Belleville Juveniles enjoy a one goal lead to take into the second game of a home and home series with Trenton in the first round of the O.J.H.A. playdowns, Belleville having won 6-5 in Trenton last week. These juveniles play a fast all-out style of hockey that pleases the fans.

ALBERT COLLEGE WINS OVER B.C.I.

Senior C.O.S.S.A. Cage Game One of the Best in Some Time

Two well balanced senior Interscholastic cage quintettes took to the floor in a scheduled Bay of Quinte Senior C.O.S.S.A. basketball game at Albert College, Monday afternoon, when the home squad eked out a 25 to 21 win over the Belleville Collegiate Institute hoopsters. Both teams had been well coached with the result a strong defence was set up and proved hard to penetrate.

Norman McLeod led Coach Pepper's victorious Albert College on the attack with ten points, Fulford getting seven and Watson six, while Gord Bankier kept pace with McLeod by potting five baskets for ten points with Mason adding six more for the Church Street "Collegians".

The line-ups—Albert College—McLeod 10, Jessop 1, Watson 6, Orr 1, Fulford 7, Boyd and Rankin. Belleville Collegiate Institute—Mason 6. Bankier 10, James, Garrow 1, Wood 2, Locke, Bush 2, Smith, Wiggins and Kellebb.

Referee—Jack Dickens.

ALEMITE LASSIES CONTINUE TO WIN

Hang Losses of 35 to 22 on Bell-Sargents in Ladies Cage Loop

Continuing undefeated in the Belleville Ladies Basketball League Frank Martin's Alemite lassies hung up their fifth win, in as many league games, by taking the Bell-Sargent gals into camp 35 to 22 at the Y. M. C. A. last night. It was the best stand the losers had made this year.

At the halfway mark Coach Kokesh's "lockmakers" were only trailing 15 to 10, while Martin's lassies, paced by Marion Salisbury, raced through for 20 points in the last half while the losers could notch but 12.

Betty Gilbert, ace scoring threat for the Alemite, lead the scorers of the night with 11 points, one better than her teammate Marion Salisbury and Ruth Allison, of the Sargentts, who scored ten points each. Ruth Oliphant and M. Gariepy registered six points each, while Dot Ronsky and Miss Barnhardt four points for the losers' cause.

The line ups:-

Belleville Sargents, Wheeler 2, Allison 10, Barnhardt 4, Fox, Gariepy 6, Randall, Appleton, V. Fox, Millis and Doolittle.

Stewart Warner-Alemites, Ronsky 4, Gilbert 11, Oliphant 6, Rowbotham, Salisbury 10, Scott, Mansfield 4, Simchism and Vincent.

Referee, Herb Burley, scorer, George Garrow, Timer, Gerald Bongard.

Former Queen of the Courts Preparing for Comeback

(By The Canadian Press)

For the third time Helen, former queen of the tennis courts, is coming out of retirement after doctors had told her less than a year ago she might never play again when they had removed infected bones from her playing hand following injuries caused by fighting dogs. But Helen Wills Moody Roar is playing three and four time a week on the courts at Los Angeles in preparation for her comeback.

Helen Wills captured the United States championship seven years in a row; came back after a two-year retirement to win the Wimbledon crown in 1935; retired another three years but returned to win it again. Now 38 years of age and after 15 years of competition since she captured her first title at Berkeley, Calif., in 1921, she is making progress. Before trying any strenuous tournament play she plans to engage in a number of exhibition matches.

Following his discharge from the Canadian army, defenceman Joe Cooper, with New York angers four years ago, said yesterday in Montreal he would join Chicago Black HHawks of the N.H.L. if permitted to cross the border. He played with Ottawa Commandos against Quebec Aces in the Quebec enior League last Sunday.

The sale of the Sacramento Club of the Pacific Coast League to Tacoma, Wash., yesterday was protested by the Sacramento Chamber of Commerce which asked president Sam Breadon of the St. Louis Cardinals t name a price for the club franchise without any strings attached.

Secretary Eddit Brannick of the New York Giants announced yesterday Joe Medwick, veteran outfielder obtained from Brooklyn Dodgers yast June, was the first to sign his 1944 contract.

Toronto, Feb. 15. (CP)—Motto of the Patricia Bay R.C.A.F. men's basketball team is "keep 'em winking".

When the Air Force announced extension of its ban in participation in hockey with civilian teams to include all sports, a spokesman said continued participation of the Pay Bay Gremlins in the British Columbia cage league after the ban was first announced probably would be "winked at" but it was indicated Gremlins would have to withdraw from further competition outside garrison play.

Apparently headquarters is still winking because Gremlins are still playing in the coast circuit. And latest word from the Gremlins is that they expect the winking to continue right through the spring while the Pat Bay fliers whoop through the Interprovincial play-offs in defence of their national championship.

Incidentally, Gremlins are far from a one-man team. When they scored their fourth straight league win the other night in Vancouver, beating B.C. University 44-37, their redoubtable scoring star, Norm Baker, was held to two points but Porky Andrews got 15 and Pop Pay 14.

Herbie Cain In First Place Of Scoring Race

Montreal, Feb. 15—(CP)—Herbie Cain of Boston Bruins picked up five points, all assists, during the last week of National Hockey eLague play and went into undisputed possession of first place in the league's official point standings.

The N. H. L.'s figures put Lorne Carr of Toronto in second spot, two points behind Cain, with whom he had been tied last week. Seven points behind Carr, with 53 points each, coe Doug Bentley and Bill Mosienko of Chicago.

In fourth spot is Boston's Bill Cowley, who returned to action Sunday night after a layoff of ore than three weeks due to injuries. Cowley is still only 10 points off the pace although he has played 10 games less than the other leaders.

Cain leads in goals with an even 30, while Carr has 28 and Mud Bruneteau of Detroit 27. In the assist departenmt, Elmer Lach of Canadiens moved into the lead wis 36, two ahead of Clint Simth of Chicago and Buddy O'Connor of Canadiens, and three ahead of Cowley.

Harold Jackson of Detroit has moved out in front in penalties with 64 points in the box so far, a minute more than Mike McMahon of Canadiens.

OVER A MILLION OFFERED FOR BASEBALL CLUB

Brooklyn Jeweler Discloses That Amount Offered for Dodgers

PLAYERS SCARCE

By TED MEIER
(Associated Press Sport Writer.)

New York, Feb. 15. (AP)—A bid of $1,010,000 has proved insufficient to buy a controlling interest in the Brooklyn Dodger National League Baseball Club.

Max O. Meyer, Brooklyn jeweler, made that disclosure last night in announcing he and his associates had decided to drop their efforts to purchase the club because "we were confronted with the proposition of assuming additional financial burdens which we felt we could not take on".

Meyer did not explain the nature of the additional financial burdens, but persons acquainted with the club's financial setup indicated he may have referred to $150,000 or $200,000 in unpaid salaries due several directors of the club.

The Meyer group had hoped to purchase 75 per cent of the club's outstanding stock. Meyer explained they were ready to pay $260,000 for 25 per cent of the stock held by the Edward McKeever heirs and $750,000 for the 50 per cent, held by the heirs of the late Charles Ebbets.

Meantime Branch Rickey, president of the Club, learned the Dodgers may not have the services of four players during the forthcoming season.

Outfielder Dixie Walker and Catcher Bobby Bragan, both of whom live in Birmingham, Ala., notified the Dodger front office they have been reclassified 1-A. Pitcher Bill Sayles had enlisted in the Army Air Corps after passing a pre-induction physical examination at Portland, Ore. Star second baseman Billy Herman has applied for a job in a war plant near his new Albany, Ind., home.

Algiers (AP)—Many British, American and French soldiers left the arena during the North Africa Allied boxing championships yesterday when the referee awarded the decision to a Dayton, O., scrapper against an Algierian Arab serving in the French navy. After the uproar of disapproval, the official announced he had penalized the Arab for a foul blow.

New Haven, Conn. (AP)—Thomas Burlington of the Cleveland Barons was six points to the good in the American hockey league scoring table after a week's harvest of three goals and five assists. His total of 63 points compared with 57 for both Lou Trudel and Les Cunningham, also of the Barons.

Camden, N.J., Feb. 15 (AP)—Robert R. M. Carpenter, Jr., 28-year-old president of the Philadelphia Phillies of the National Baseball League, became the first major league club president to be accepted for army service Monday, when he passed his physical examination at the Camden Armor.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Jones was waiting for a bus when a stranger approached and asked the time. Jones ignored him. The stranger repeated the request. Jones continued to ignore him. When the stranger finally walked away another passenger said curiously: That was a perfectly reasonable question. Why didn't you tell him what time it was?

Jones: Why? Listen. I'm standing here minding my own business, and this guy wants to know what time it is. So maybe I tell him what time it is. Then what? We get to talking and this guy says: "How about a drink?" So we have a drink. Then we have some more drinks. So after a while I say: "How about coming up to my house for a bite to eat?" So we go up to my house and we are eating ham and cheese in the kitchen when my daughter comes in, and my daughter is a very good looking girl. So she falls for this guy and he falls for her. Then they get married, and any guy that can't afford a watch I don't want in my family."

(Lotta scoring.)

Although they were potting goals almost at will when the "Bombers" beat the "Mohawks" in one of those all-out service league games last night, plenty of good hockey was thoroughly enjoyed even if the Bombers won something like 13 to 9. The score indicates the game—it was wide open with only two minor penalties being called. However, the puzzling part of the Bombers is the fact they boast of the best team in the league, that is on paper, but still they are in third place. They have one former N.H.L. player and five who played senior hockey last season.

Skipper Lalonde introduced a new defenceman on the roster of the Mohawks last night and this lad from Western Canada was the talk of the arena patrons. He reminded one of Barnes, who came down out of Calgary to play with Peterboro a few seasons back and was a sensation. The Mohawks' new find is also from Calgary way, his name is Clements and we felt he is a better stick handler than was Barnes. Last night Clements scored a couple and set up enough perfect passes to almost win the game singlehanded. He's worth dropping around to see in action Thursday.

(High hoop news.)

Frank Martin's Alemite lassies continue to dominate the city girls' cage loop, last night they chalked up their fifth consecutive win by beating Bell-Sargents 35 to 22 with Betty Gilbert and Marion Salisbury the chief scoring threats. However, Coach Kokesh's Sargent girls are improving, as was seen when they scored 22 points against the unbeaten Alemites. Later in the season when hockey dies down these girls' cage games will be playing to packed galleries.

In Interscholastic cage circles Coach Red Townsend's Belleville Collegiate seniors dropped a 25 to 21 decision to Albert College and that's high class basketball scoring. Both squads seem to be well balanced this year and it will be interesting to see them in action after each has had a home game to their credit. Norm McLeod, of Albert, and Gord Bankier for B.C.I. showed the way for the scorers with ten points each. However, Watson and Rankin backed McLeod up with points, while only Mason was of any help to Bankier and company.

(Hard at it.)

Mrs. Olivia Weese, who for these many years has been featured as a solo artist whenever local ice carnivals roll around, has taken on a new role this year. Mrs. Weese will direct the annual Quinte Skating Club ice frolic at the Hume Arena this Friday night. A pantomime entitle "The Court of Old King Cole" will precede the solo figure skating exhibitions, that may include some talent from either Toronto or Ottawa. In the meantime the local skaters are practicing diligently and hope to present their greatest ice fantasy.

Mike Ridley will give one of those daring exhibitions he is noted for and several local pairs are reported to have completed new routines. One of the features will team together Barbara Bews and Bill Davies, another the Kerr sisters, Marilyn and Doris. Margaret Williams and Connie Maker will do a report performance of their skating that was so well received last year. There will be a complete program of fancy and figure skating.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 303

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

I know you. Maybe not with that face. But as a composite of all types of bridge players. And do you know what? You're smarter than you think.

You are a little bit of a lion, an ox, a lamb, some of your tablemates, Cumbersome, Four Asels, Dims, Blackhead, Quirk, Vanderect, Sedlets, Darkener, Morefeet and the Kibitzer.

Consequently, you think some things are right that are not; and some are right that you think not. Since most of your playmates are in the same fix, you are not always sure which is which.

When you start with a bid, you use a measuring stick guided by some system or instinct. But somewhere in your head is the idea that you can take some tricks and keep opponents from taking some.

So far so good. After all, that's all a bid is supposed to show in the long run. And when you know the least your bid should show, your method of determining it is indisputable.

Horse Sense tells you exactly. It tells you in unmistakeable terms that you can grasp with a minimum of effort. Its only fault is that compared with other ways, it sounds too easy to be good.

An opening bid of one in a suit should show a minimum of five suit tricks (high cards and short cards); four high cards (aces, kings, queens); two sure tricks (A K, K Q, A); and a biddable suit.

Start a new deal by going over this hand:

♠ None
♥ A K J 8 4
♦ A J 10 8 4
♣ A 5 4

You have four sure tricks (A K and two other aces); four high cards (three aces and a king); seven suit tricks (four high cards, and three short cards in spades); two strong suits.

Not only has it enough for an opening bid of one in a suit. It has extra values to show later. And with two same length suits, first show the higher rank. So, your opening bid is one heart.

You would have known that without me.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Sarong Girl"

"Sarong Girl", the Monogram musical comedy which opened an engagement at the Capitol Theatre last night, is composed of many ingredients which add up to really superlative entertainment. There are girls galore; there is plenty of catchy music, both vocal and instrumental; there is a highly amusing comedy story; there is an excellent cast, including a preponderance of comedians—and there is Ann Corio.

It was not without good reason that the luscious Miss Corio was known for a good many years as "the loveliest lady of burlesque". In the picture her natural charms are supplemented by an excellent performance in the starring role, furnishing definite promise of a successful career as a screen player. The cast also includes the noted comedy team of Tim & Irene (Ryan); the no-less-capable colored comedian, Manton Moreland; Bill Henry and Damian O'Flynn as the other two points of a romantic triangle with Miss Corio; Johnny "Scat" Davis to make music, at the head of his band and otherwise; Henry Kolker, Mary Gordon, Betty Blythe and other players.

"Stand By For Action"

The added attraction on the same program is a salute to devil-may-care lads who keep the convoys of freedom steaming! For action, for thrills, it's the mightiest naval drama of all time. Don't miss seeing "Stand by For Action" starring Robert Taylor, Brian Donlevy, Charles Laughton, with Walter Brennan, Marilyn Maxwell, Henry O'Neill and Marta Linden.

The Canadian Universal News completes the grand double feature show.

AT THE BELLE

"Salute to the Marines" in Color

Bringing to the screen one of the epic chapters in American history, M-G-M's "Salute to the Marines" is a vivid picturization of the men and way of life of the "fightin'est men in the world." Starring Wallace Beery in his first technicolor photoplay, the picture now at the Belle theatre.

Noted for his inimitable diamond-in-the-rough" characterizations, Beery portrays the type of role that has made him famous. He is a patriotic Marine sergeant, veteran of 30 years' service.

Together at Last.

Fay Bainter, beloved stage and screen actress who scored recently in "The War Against Mrs. Hadley," makes her initial screen appearance with Beery one long to be remembered.

Packed with action and typical Beery humor, the picture travels at a fast pace. Battle scenes, which climax the story, are some of the most thrilling Holloywood has ever filmed. The setting is the Philippines, just before and immediately following the Pearl Harbor catastrophe.

Capable Cast in Support.

Other capable members of the cast include Reginald Owen, who plays a Nazi fifth columnist; comely Marilyn Maxwell, Beery's daughter; William Lundigan, leatherneck flier who seeks and wins Marilyn's hand; Keye Filipino punch-drunk boxer friend of Beery; Donald Curtis, infantry lieutenant also after Marilyn's hand; and Ray Collins, Wally's gruff but inherently kind colonel.

"Stork's Holiday," is the title of the latest Metro-Godwyn-Mayer color fun cartoons, presented on the same program with the Canadian Fox Movietone News.

AT THE McCARTHY

"One Foot in Heaven"

Entertainment in every sense of the word is what McCarthy theatre patrons will find next when they see the Warner Bros. film "One Foot in Heaven," it tells the story of a person and his typical American family. Typical, in that they laugh at the same things, share the same joys and sorrows, and have the same problems as any family, anywhere in the United States. It is a quaint, nostalgic tale containing much warm humor, with the average midwestern small town for its background. It opens in those gay days just after the turn of the century and continues through the riotous days after the Armistice of World War 1.

"One Foot in Heaven" has a grand cast featuring Frederic March and Martha Scott in the starring roles, with Beulah Bondi, Gene Bockhart, Elisabeth Fraser, Harry Davenport, Laura Hope Crews, Moroni Olsen, Frankie Thomas and a host of other fine players in the supporting parts.

Frederic March, always one of the best of the screen's dramatic actors plays the role of father, a benevolent tyrant whose outward discipline and outward sympathy makes him one of the screen's most lovable characters. His constant struggle to keep both his family and his congregation in line proves a lifetime task, that is fraught with heartaches and happiness. Martha Scott, famous for her stage and screen performances in "Our Town" is cast as the parson's wife, a role for which she is perfectly suited. Martha's continual problem is that of trying to strike a happy medium between father's discipline and the children's human inclination to cut up once in a while and forget that their father is a minister, and that they are supposed to provide an example of good conduct to the other children.

Drama as great as their dancing The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers with Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan, Lou Fields and Janet Beacher, is the second feature attraction opening next at the McCarthy theatre.

TORONTO NAVY DEFEATS MAJORS BY 8-4 COUNT

Thwart Effort of Hamilton Team to Gain on St. Catharines

ALWAYS ON TOP

(By The Canadian Press)

The unpredictable navy steamed through with an 8-4 triumph against Hamilton Majors in the senior series of the Ontario Hockey Association at Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens last night, thwarting any effort on the part of the visitors to overtake the leading Saints of St. Catharines who are at the top of the league standing with seven points to spare over the Hamiltonians.

Hamilton started off in fine style in each period with at least one counter but the sailors did the finishing each time the tars were out in front 3-1 at the close of the first and ran it up to 5-2 in the second stanza, then outscored the visitors 3-2 in the final dash.

Hugh Barlow and Dave Livingstone tied for Navy scoring honors with a trio of twine-ticklers each. Hal Baycoe, former Winnipeger and Snyder notching one apiece. Dillon Brady scored two of Hamilton's tallies, with singles for Doug Runions and Davey.

The Toronto Blue Jackets play a return game at Hamilton Wednesday and the Majors and St. Catharines will have three scheduled engagements after that, with each playing Navy once more before the closing date, Feb. 26. If the Saints lose all remaining starts, Majors can climb into first place with wins in their four games, which can be classed as an outside possibility.

ONTARIO SPIEL GETS UNDER WAY

First Day's Play Ends Early This Morning With Few Upsets

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)— All 128 entries in the 17th annual Ontario bonspiel saw action in the first day's play which ended early this morning with two rounds completed for the Royal York trophy and 29 matches played in the Sieberling Trophy competition.

Upsets were few in the opening day's play, most notable being the 12-10 defeat by J. H. Spiers' Barrie rink of Toronto Royals, skipped by Ed Young, co-holder last year of the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy for highest aggregate. The Chapleau rink of A. McN. Austin also met first-round defeat at the hands of G. H. Weld's Toronto Granite entry . Rev. J. S. Shortt's Toronto High Park rink, the Kirkland Lake rink of Jerry Abrams and E. F. Priddle's Gore Bay entry all won opening rounds in the Royal York trophy competition but were eliminated in the second round.

Don Best's powerful Kirkland Lake rink swept through the first two rounds with convincing wins over Toronto and Orillia rinks, as did the rink skipped by J. F. Shaw, well-known Sault Ste. Marie curler. Perry Hall's Kitchener rink was also a double winner.

First round play in the Sieberling trophy event, open to first-round losers in the Royal York trophy competition, saw victories for rinks skipped by D. H. McNabb of Orillia, J. R. Rae of Wingham, and A. McN. Austin of Chapleau.

Play continues today with three draws, first of which will see first-round completion of the Sieberling trophy competition and beginning of play for the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy, which continues for the two afternoon draws.

ELMER ROBINSON STRUCK ON HEAD BY FALLING LIMB

Rendered Unconscious by Blow, Gash Requires Nine Clips

Bancroft, Feb. 15 —(Special) — Elmer Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Robinson of Monteagle was quite badly injured Friday afternoon while cutting logs in the bush. A falling limb from some nearly tree fell striking Elmer on the head passing right through the hat he was wearing and gashing his head quite severely. He was rushed to Bancroft and treated by Dr. O. W. Anderson. It required nine clips to close the wound. The young man was knocked unconscious by the blow and when he regained consciousness was at a loss to know from where the limb came unless it was a dead branch that broke off with the wind.

Mr. H. H. Loucks, Public School Inspector for Bancroft and District moved into the duplex home owned by C. W. Mullett this week end, Mr. Loucks previously occupied the Dr. Embury residence but this has been purchased by Mr. Collie Stringer who moved into this home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stringer returned home from Huntsville on Friday having spent a week's vacation with the latter's sister, Mrs. Milton Fisher.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy McGhee and family of Huntsville spent over the weekend with relatives in town.

Mrs. E. Ketcheson of L'Amable received word Saturday morning that her mother had suffered a broken leg.

The Ladies of Bancroft Chapter O. E. S. No. 157 held a Valentine bridge and euchre party in the Chapter Room Friday evening with an excellent turn-out there being thirteen tables of card players. Everyone reported having a splendid time. During lunch following the cards the prizes were awarded to the winners as follows: Bridge- Miss B. Haase and Mr. Howard; Euchre- Mrs. G. Haighton and Mr. S. W. Palmateer. The drawing for the blanket also took place at this time and Miss Betty Lou Ellerbeck was the winner of blue wool blanket.

Mr. Ross Viscoff of the R. C. A. F. of St. Thomas spent the weekend with his wife and relatives in town.

Grim Picture of Enemy Power Painted As Prelude to Further Discussion of Army Estimates

Party Leaders to Read Correspondence Respecting McNaughton Situation

INVITED BY KING

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Feb. 15—(CP)— A grim picture of the power of the enemy yet to be destroyed before the United Nations can think of victory was painted for the House of Commons on Monday by Defence Minister Ralston as a prelude to further discussion of his army estimates.

When the discussion today, the leaders of the three major opposition parties and Hon. Grote Stirling (PC—Yale), a former Defence Minister, will have for the first time the "inside" story of the granting of extended leave to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and relieving him of the overseas army command.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King yesterday intervened as Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, pressed Col. Ralston for more information on the McNaughton situation to suggest a conference of party leaders to read and discues all correspondence. Mr. Graydon agreed at once and the conference was set for today.

All Leaders to Attend

Attending will be Mr. Graydon, Mr. Stirling, M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. Leader, and John Blackmore, new democracy leader.

Col. Ralston declared he is a realist, not an optimist; and he professed some alarm at the way people were leading themselves to believe the war is over or nearly over. His summary of reasons for the contrary view was one of the bluntest statements of the war outlook delivered recently by an United Nations leader.

"It is a fact that there is not uch evidence that German military power has decreased and there is no sign that the Japanese troops have lost any of their willingness to fight and die to hold the outsposts which protect their home base," he said.

"In both Europe and Asia great forces of well-trained enemy troops, well led and well equipped, are ready to fight—and they do fight . . . She has more than 300 well-trained division. She has millions of foreign workers in her war industries."

60 New Divisions in Germany.

To back up his statement German military power has not materially decreased, he said that during the last year Germany reformed, re-equipped and raised more than 60 new divisions, each with 600 machine-guns and 300 heavier weapons. In their armament were new models of tanks, self-propelled guns, rocket guns and other equipment equal to and in some cases better than anything the Allies have.

Looking back, the Minister recalled that it took 3½ years to drive the enemy out of Africa and get into the fringe of Europe in Italy.

Looking ahead he said:

"The continent of Europe has still to be retaken. The superb fighting in Russia has still to be matched. China must be liberated and Hong Kong Avenged. Burma, Malay, Singapore and the Philippines must be regained and the Southwest Pacific cleared. The enemies of mankind must be forced to unconditional surrender."

Col. Ralston set out to reply to questions about Gen. McNaughton asked by Mr. Graydon following the Minister's statement Friday. He gave particulars of the two medical reports on the General's health which he had given the House previously and said both were obtained on the instructions of Gen. McNaughton himself.

He disclosed that at one stage the General's doctors allowed no one to see him on business except Maj.-Gen. P. J. Montague, Senior Combatant Officer at Military Headquarters in London.

Leave Would Not Have Been Granted.

He told Mr. Graydon that if it had not been for ill-health Gen. McNaughton would not have been granted leave and relieved of command at the time he was.

During questioning in committee the Minister was asked repeatedly about the future role of home-defence troops called up under the National Resources Mobilization Act. He said they are doing a job in Canada which would have had to be done by others if they were not there and that they constitute a "second line of reinforcements" for overseas service, should they become necessary.

"If we can get it I would rather have a volunteer army," he said. "If the time comes when it is necessary to do something else, then—as I have said before—as far as I am concerned I will be ready to make the recommendation."

The Minister said there are just over 70,000 home-defence troops not available for service anywhere. Of the total, some 34,900 are on operational duties in Canada and at posts in Newfoundland, Labrador and other outposts; some 18,000 are in process of training; and the remainder are on non-operational duties in servicing units, in depots awaiting transfers, and on yeave.

Trenton and District

Trenton—(Special)—The Ladies' Auxiliary of the R.C.A.F., under the convenership of Mrs. W. Staveley, held a most delightful Valentine Tea in their rooms on King Street on Monday afternoon, with a large crowd in attendance.

The many guests were received by the president, Mrs. R. Weese, while tickets were taken by Mrs. W. J. Province.

The tea table, in charge of Mrs. Wilcocks and Mrs. MacKell, was most attractive with a red crystal bowl of white carnations and pussy willows and tall white tapers. Pouring tea were Mrs. O. E. Fortune, Mrs. B. F. Joyce, Mrs. C. V. Wilkins and Mrs. W. Bain. Serving the guests were Mrs. B. Garka, Mrs. M. Perry, Mrs. A. Purdon, Mrs. L. Smith, Mrs. S. E. McDonald, Mrs. W. Shelly, Mrs. F. Pafford and Mrs. Thompson under the convenership of Mrs. Lowenstein, while the kitchen was in charge of Mrs. Pearce and Mrs. Turland.

Delicious home cooking was sold by Mrs. W. E. Baker and Mrs. Orr, while Mrs. Bartlett and Mrs. D. MacDonald sold aprons and other articles.

A Valentine cake was raffled and was won by Mrs. Caron while Mrs. Orr and Mrs. Perry won flowers. The lucky ticket for the cake was drawn by Mrs. Murray Dixon, while Mrs. R. Weese drew the tickets for the flowers.

In the very near future the ladies of the Auxiliary intend opening their rooms on King Street for the girls in the service, where they may go over the weekends on Saturday and Sunday for reading, studying or just to relax.

CHAPTER 11

His voice had risen to a shrill cry.

"Wait a minute, son," Duffy broke in. "Take it easy. I can guess what happened next. The police and the coroner looked things over and then took your father's body away. What time did your sister get home?"

"I don't know. It was after that."

"It was nearly five o'clock," Miss Terry said. "I waited for father at the Grand Central galleries for nearly an hour. Then I decided that something had happened to detain him, went downstairs and caught the four-fifteen, which reaches Mount Vernon at four-forty.'

"Okay," Detective Duffy nodded. "What next?" he added to the boy.

"The coroner sent his car for me and when I got to his office he said that I could arrange with some undertaker for the funeral. I told him I didn't know any undertaker, so he arranged it for me. While he was telephoning, I saw father's revolver on his desk and put it in my pocket."

"What did you do that for?" Duffy asked sharply.

"It was his. I wanted it."

"To kill someone with it?"

"No. I didn't want to kill anybody—not then."

"Later on, eh? Well, let's hear about it."

"I came back home," the boy continued. "Lucy said Leda was lying down and I went to my room to rest a little myself. I wasn't feeling any too good. And when I started to lie down, I found a letter from father pinned to the pillow. When I read it, I understood . . ."

His voice was breaking again.

"Where is the letter?" the detective asked.

Mutely the boy drew a letter from his pocket and handed it to the detective.

It was beginning to grow dark in the room, so Duffy took the letter and walked over to a window. Tony read it over his shoulder:

My dear son and daughter:

The note that I will leave on my desk is for the police and the public. This is for you.

As you know, your mother's death was a terrible shock to me, and I thought for a time that I should never get over it. Recently, however, I have been much better. I thought I would soon be well. But something happened today which has set me back again and made it impossible for me to keep on living.

As I teacher I never made much money—just about enough to live on. Your mother had an inheritance of $30,000, and this we agreed to keep intact for you.

The money had been placed in securities of various kinds and when I came to New York I brought them with me. I thought it might perhaps be possible to invest the money in such a way that the principal would be safe, and at the same time yield a larger income. I was advised by a person whom I trusted to consult a broker named John McKibben. He was confident that he could increase the income by at least a third without risk. So I turned the securities over to him, impressing upon him the necessity of keeping the principal intact.

Today I learned that the entire investment had been wiped out. I was shown a balance-sheet, but it meant nothing to me. I think it has really been stolen, but that makes no difference. McKibben could probably be punished, but the money would still be gone.

I do not feel that I can go on. I am too ill and too discouraged to start over again. It is cowardly, I know, but I have no courage left. My life insurance will take the place of the money I have lost.

To you, Franklin, I would add one word. Your nature is impulsive. Try to control it, or it may lead you into serious difficulties. You will always be wise to ask your sister's advice. Leda has a far cooler head than you have.

Good-bye, my dear children, and forgive me for what seems like deserting you. I should only be a drag on you and a misery to myself. I have always loved you.

Your father,
Lawrence Terry.

Duffy folded the letter and put it in his pocket, asking: "What did you do after you had read the letter?"

"There was only one thing for me to do," the boy answered hoarsely.

"What was that?"

"Kill the man who killed my father."

Duffy grunted and queried: "How did you go about it?"

Lucy had told him that Leda was still asleep, so Franklin had scribbled a line, "I am going to see this man McKibben," placed it with his father's letter in an envelope, and gave it to Lucy to give to his sister when she awakened. Then he had gone for a moment into the study. He had looked down at the desk where his father had lain. He saw the blood-stained flowers. One of them was soaked with blood, which had dried upon it, turning it to deep red. Franklin picked it up, broke off the stem and slipped the flower into the buttonhole of his coat.

"What was the big idea?" Duffy asked Franklin Terry.

"I don't know exactly," the boy answered glumly. "Lots of things were running through my mind. I thought it would give me courage, or that it would help me find McKibben—my father's blood crying for vengeance would lead me to him. And then I decided that I would put it on McKibben after I had killed him."

"Which is just what you did!" Duffy snorted.

"Yes, I put it on him. But I didn't kill him. I didn't have the chance.

"All right. Tell us."

Franklin Terry had put on his hat and overcoat and left the house. He made sure that his father's revolver was still in an overcoat pocket where he had dropped it. He hurried to the station. The train reached New York a few minutes before eight. He looked up McKibben's address in a telephone book, called a taxi and drove to the apartment house, but the broker was not at home.

"You didn't get there till nearly nine," Duffy pointed out. "What were you doing all that time?"

He had walked about for a while, the boy said, planning just what he would say to McKibben before he shot him. He wanted him to understand why he was being killed. He realized that he would have to get him alone so that there would be no interference, and that he would have to cover him quickly with the revolver or McKibben would overpower him. McKibben's apartment seemed the best place.

And then Franklin felt suddenly weak and realized that he had had no dinner, so he stopped in somewhere and had a couple of cocktails and something to eat. Then he had taken a taxi to Central Park West.

"Now be careful and tell exactly what happened after that," said Duffy. "Every little detail."

"It was the elevator boy I spoke to," young Terry went on. "I asked him which floor McKibben's apartment was on and he said the sixth. I told him to take me up. The apartment was at the end of the hall, and there was a stairway just opposite it, by which it would be easy to get away.

"No one answered the bell and when I came down, I asked the elevator boy where McKibben was likely to be. He said at some night club, probably, and named three or four. I got another taxi and had the driver take me around to them and a lot of others. One or two doormen knew him, but it wasn't until hours later that I found any trace of him. It was a place called Max's, and the doorman told me that McKibben had been there and had left. He thought he might have gone on to some other club, and I tried a few more and then decided that the only thing to do was to go back to his apartment and wait for him."

"What time was it by then?" Duffy asked.

"I don't know—about half past one, I guess."

"So you went back to the apartment? Did anybody see you?"

"No. The doorman was nowhere about and I waited till the elevator started up to answer a call. Then I slipped in and started up the stairs."

"You didn't want to be seen, then?"

"Of course not! I was going to kill a man."

"All right. Tell us how you did kill him."

"I tell you I didn't kill him," Terry protested. Thus far he had told his story with remarkable self-control but now he began to halt and stumble. (Tony, glancing at Leda, saw that she was watching her brother with face deadly pale, her hands clenched in her lap. The idea flashed through his mind that now the boy was coming to a part of the story which he and his sister had rehearsed together and realized that he must go carefully.)

"Well, get on with it," said Duffy. His urbanity had left him. His voice was rough, his face grim. Perhaps he, too, suspected that the boy was planning to conceal something.

"I—I went up the stairs," Terry continued. "I took my time. I saw that it was going to be harder to do than I had expected. I didn't meet anybody. I got up to the sixth floor. I was just high enough on the stairs to see the door of McKibben's apartment—610 was the number—and I stopped to get hold of myself. While I stood there, leaning against the wall, the door opened and a man came out. He had a letter in his hand. He didn't have any hat or overcoat on, and he left the door ajar, so I knew it must be McKibben and that he was going to drop the letter in the mail chute. I slipped across the hall and through the door. There was a light in the entry of his apartment and in the first room, which was a bedroom. The next room was dark and I turned into it. I thought I would hide till McKibben came back. I saw it was another bedroom and I sat down on the bed, got out my revolver and waited."

Franklin Terry was shivering now and speaking so thickly that he could scarcely be understood.

"What were you waiting for?" asked the detective.

"I thought maybe it would be better if I waited till he undressed. Because I was shaking and had to get hold of myself. I heard him come back in and shut the door. He went into his bedroom and then I heard him say something—and then there was a shot and a heavy fall."

"And I suppose you ran away?" Duffy inquired ironically.

"I jumped up and started for the door and fell over something—I don't know what—but I went down on my knees. I thought maybe I'd be shot, too, and I waited a minute with my pistol ready, watching the door.

"But nobody came and I didn't hear anything. Finally I got up and went out into the hall and looked into the other bedroom. There was a man lying on the floor."

"Nobody else?"

"No—I looked all around, for I thought somebody else was there. But there wasn't anybody. So I went in and looked at the man. It was the same one I had seen come out of the door with the letter. There was a big black spot on his shirt front. The room smelled of gun powder."

Ma was reading her paper and pop was reading his, saying, Yee gods it's appalling.

I suppose you're reading about the war, ma said, and pop said, Yes, it hits me with a fresh shock every time I read the names of those terrific battlefields. The Neeper Bend, Burma, New Guinea, it's appalling, he said.

Isn't it awful? ma said. I forgot to tell you Maud Hews's new maid has quit already. That makes the fourth in two months, she said, and pop said, say, this is terrible.

Yes, isn't it the limit? ma said. But then everybody seems to be having maid trouble, she said, and pop said, I was speaking of this bus crash right in the nayborhood, didn't you read about it?

Why, no, what happened, where was it, oh dear, was anybody hurt that we know? ma said, and pop said, Practically everybody, but not seriously, fortunately. I'll read you the account, he said.

Which he started to, saying, Two crowded busses collided at Garwood and Maple streets this morning, violently shaking up all the passengers and slightly injuring twenty. Among the injured were Mrs. Raymond Taggert, contusions os the right knee, Mrs. Samuel Pike, abrasions of the left ear, Mrs. Frances Pincus, wrenched little fingers of both hands, Mrs. Yewstace Hews, scraped elbow—

Why that's perfectly gassly, ma said. Imagine, they're among my most intimate acquaintances. And to think we were just talking about Maud Hews hardly a minute ago. Why, that's terrible, everybody I know seems to of been on those busses, I can hardly get my breath, she said, and pop said, Shall I go on with the list or shall I tell you that the whole thing is a figment of my imagination to prove to you that no calamity is ever real to most people unless it's no further off than the next corner?

The result being ma claimed she was so upset pop had to take her to a movie to take her mind off.

CITY COUNCIL

cost of $2.65 per hundred of payroll for ordinary employees and 25 cents per hundred per payroll for clerical employees, which it is estimated will produce a cost of $750 annualy on the present payroll. The coverage obtained to be full coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Act for all employees subject to that act and voluntary compensation with employers' liability subject to limits of $10,000 for one person and $20,000 for one accident for all employees who do not come under the Workmen's Compensation Act. There is to be no limit of liability under the policy insofar as award of the Workmen's Compensation Act are concerned.

(Signed.) W. L. McDOUGALL."

Committee Given Power To Act.

A request from the Mead Johnson Company was received to close part of Bleecker Avenue, south of Dundas Street and directly in front of their property. This matter was referred back to a committee of Aldermen Armstrong, Clapp and Chamberlain, this committee to have power to act as the Company wishes an early decision on the matter. The lease was renewed on the auditorium, where the Selective Service offices are located. The Quinte News Service, wishing a better distribution of a Toronto paper, requested permission of the council to erect news stands on the corners of the business section, so that workmen could pick up their papers on the way home. This was referred back to the committee without comment but will be a matter of debate, when it comes up again in council.

To Designate Streets.

Streets will be properly designated in Belleville in the near future according to a recommendation "that the regional planning committee give consideration to placing name signs on all Belleville Streets, where they are not presently marked or where the markings have been destroyed or obliterated and that street numbers be placed on proper poles. The committee is requested to report back to council as to cost". In connection with recommendation forwarded to the council from the War Planning Commission, regarding consideration of Riverside Drive, and the starting of improvements in parking conditions to relieve our business section from heavy truck traffic, the council recommended: "that a committee consisting of Aldermen Clapp, Armstrong, Hyde, Woodley, and O. H. Scott and J. G. Galloway be appointed to go into the matter of obtaining right-of-ways and options on all buildings and present this material to council and that the council is further prepared to support this committee by application to the Municipal Board for the necessary funds to carry out the work, providing the costs are not out of reason in proportion to the returns this development will render the Corporation".

There was a long list of inquiries, Ald. Follwell asking for an explanation of the recent raise in rooms at the General Hospital and why a subsidy had not been asked for from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board with respect to hospitalization?"

Ald. Hyde, a member of the Hospital Board answered the question to the satisfaction of the members. Ald. Woodley asked about the housing situation from the chairman, Ald. Allin and he was informed, that the committee is waiting word from Ottawa. Ald. Allin stated, that the committee had only fifty requests for homes at the present time. Ald. Clapp wanted to know, what was going to be done with the $4,000 worth of wood now owned by the city and not moving. "We don't want to be stuck with this over another year", said the Alderman. A motion was introduced and carried that the wood dealers be contacted by the Comptroller for a price on the wood and a report be given the council. This motion was carried.

Wanted Minutes Read.

Ald. Allin was most insistent that the minutes of the last meeting be read before the council took up the business before the members. It was moved, that the minutes be taken as read due to the lateness of the hour and the fact that the council had a heavy agenda. Ald. Allin wanted a certain part of the minutes read and the members agreed, that Ald. Allin should have the portion requested read. The part wanted was the recommendation regarding the sign to be placed at Evans Street. In this connection Ald. Follwell asked if the city could give a deed to that part of the land upon which the sign was to be erected and was informed, that the City Solicitor would be able to determine that matter, when the title was searched and that he would advise council.

Sympathy Expressed.

Under the heading of general business, a motion by Ald. Hyde and seconded by Ald. Trudeau was passed that the clerk express the sympathy of the council to the family of R. A. Elliott for their irreparable loss of a loving husband and father and one, who had contributed much to the progress of Hastings County. Ald. Allin made a presentation of the photograph of the 1936 council to the members and Ald. Butler assured the Alderman that it would be hung in the chamber at the earliest possible time. The Alderman was thanked for his consideration.

Notice of Motion Given.

Before the council adjourned, Ald. Pringle introduced a notice of motion, "That at the next regular meeting of the city council a motion will be made that whereas the ratepayers of the city of Belleville have for the past several years paid sum or $12,000 annually being the annual instalments of principal and interest due on the bonded indebtedness of the gas plant and that for the past three years there has been a deficit of $10,000 and opinion seems to be that there will be a future annual loss to be born by the taxpayers, a committee be formed to investigate the immediate closing of the gas plant having in mind its effect on war industries converting over into electrical equipment and of private gas users and a plan of compensating any gas user, who may suffer an unfair loss as a result of the closing of the plant".

The council adjourned at midnight after one of the longest sessions of the year, caused a great deal by the reading of the several bylaws necessary to set the tax rate for the year.

Leese Declares Hard Battles Lie Ahead

With the Canadians in Italy, Feb. 15—(CP Cable)—Lt.-Gen. Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the British 8th Army in Italy, in a message to Redpatch, weekly newspaper of the Canadian 1st Division —now part of the Canadian corps serving in the 8th Army—warned Canadian soldiers "hard battles lie ahead," and promised they would play a part in the final Allied assault upon Germany.

Reviewing the part the division played in the Sicilian campaign last summer, Sir Oliver wrote: "To me it was a real pleasure to have the division with the 8th Army," and added: "I know they will earn fresh laurels in the hard battles which lie head."

POLICE COURT

Two extremely old offenders of the art of "tipping the elbow" will be out of circulation from their cronies for some considerable time to come. One, Burton Corby, Sidney Township, was sentenced to serve three months in the common jail after pleading guilty to a third offence of intoxication charge before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd this morning. The other was a local offender of longer standing so Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. asked for the maximum sentence of six months at hard labor, which was granted. "Can I serve it in the hospital at Brockville?" asked the latter. "No." was the reply.

Deputy Chief Harman pointed out the police had given this pair repeated "breaks" and consideration, but no longer could overlook such continued actions.

Woman Pays Fine.

A woman, who was arrested Saturday last on a drunk charge, paid the conventional ten and costs prior to the court and therefore did not have to appear before His Worship in public today, while the same principle applied to a sailor lad, who became a little too boisterous at a public dance on Saturday night and today paid $7.50, including costs, when he admitted to disturbances of the peace.

WORTH OF SERVICE PROVED

Toronto, Feb. 15 —(CP)— Pte. Jim Van Wart, home from Sicily, gave his first donation at a Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic here yesterday. Overseas with the 12th Canadian Tank Corps, he was in hospital three months after a brush with the Nazis. Twelve blood transfusions given him there saved Pte. Van Wart's life and, incidentally, proved to him the worth of the blood donor service.

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost. If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results, your druggist will gladly return your money.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Feb. 15. (CP)—Minor index gains were netted by the industrials, golds and western oils on the Toronto Stock Exchange today and the Base Metal list was unchanged in the average. Volume was down to 228,000 shares for the first three hours.

Trading in C.P.R. was the feature of the industrial section. It gained 5-8 to 11 7-8 on the news that a dividend was to be paid next month. Brazilian, Fanny Farmer, Ford A, Montreal Power and Canadian Car and Foundry aded minor fractions.

The gold stocks were quiet. Some of the stronger issues were McIntyre, Chesterville, Springer Sturgeon, Kirkland Lake and O'Brien. Wright-Hargreaves, Kerr-Addison and MacLeod-Cockshutt displayed moderate weakness.

British-Dominion, Alberta Pacific Consolidated, Pacalta and East Crest were stronger western oils. Home Oil weakened 5 to $3.40.

WALL STREET

New York, Feb. 15 —(AP)— The Canadian Pacific dividend on the common stock, first in 12 years, imparted further strength to Rail stocks today and assorted market leaders displayed recovery inclinations.

C. P. Common opened up ⅛ on a block of 3,500 shares and later extended this gain to ⅜. Aircrafts came to life and, with dealings picking up moderately, advances generally ranged from fractions to a point or more near the fourth hour.

Bidding reluctance still was evident for many Utilities and Industrials as potential purchasers awaited Presidential action on the tax bill and further news from the slightly improved Italian battle area.

Canadian Stocks apart from Canadian Pacific were also firm. Hiram Walker gained a fraction and McIntyre was unchanged.

Supported in the curb were Cuban Atlantic Sugar, American Cyanamid "B" and Cities Service.

Action of Canadian Pacific directors in voting a 50-cent payment to shareowners against the last previous disbursement of 31¼ cents in April, 1932, buoyed hopes that other pleasing railway declarations might be in the offing.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Cattle trade was slow on a plain quality supply with prices about steady up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves, hogs, local lambs were steady. No sheep were offered. Unsold from yesterday were 50 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion marketing service were: Cattle 300, calves 200, hogs 800, lambs 30.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: Butcher steers and heifers $10-$11.65, a few weighty steers $12-$13, butcher cows $7-$9 with canners downward to $5, bulls $7-$8.75, fed yearlings mostly $12-$13.

Calves: $16-$17 for choice with other vealers downward to $11.

Lambs: Western lambs 25 cents higher $13.50, a few locals steady $7-$13.

Hogs: $17.15 dressedweight, sows $13 dressed.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Feb. 15. (CP)— Livestock receipts: Cattle 70; sheep and lambs 14; hogs 237; calves 57.

Calves were a shade stronger. The few cattle offered were mostly cows. Good cows sold up to $9, with medium $7.25 to $8.25, and common butchers' down to $6.25. Canners, cutters $5 to $6 and bulls $7 to $9.

Veals $12 to $16, with bulk between $14.50 to $15. Grassers mostly $8. Lambs $10. Sheep $3 to $6.50.

Hogs $17.15 for B-1 dressed. No demand for sows.

HOGS

Toronto, Feb. 15 (CP)—Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Dressedweight: Chatham $16.40 plus transportation, Hamilton $17.05 delivered, Hull $16.95 delivered, Stratford $17 delivered.

PAUL ROBESON WINNER

New York, Feb. 15 —(AP)— Paul Robeson, Negro-singer and actor, has been named winner of the American Academy of Arts and Letters' 1944 medal for good diction on the stage. Previous winners of the award include Walter Hampden, George Arliss, Lawrence Tibbett and Lynn Fontanne.

HOLSTEIN HEIFER MAKES FINE RECORD

A two-year old purebred Holstein heifer, owned by Longwell Brothers, of Foxboro, has produced 10,262 pounds of milk in a 304-day milking test to win a place in the Honor List in the Canadian Record of Performance for purebred dairy cattle. The record by the Longwell Brothers' heifer, Colantha Posch Rita, was made commencing October 20, 1941, with the average test over the 304-day period being 3.32 per cent butterfat.

Consecutive Term Added to Sentence Already Given

"I can't think of a meaner or more contemptible trick", remarked Magistrate J. L. Lloyd as he sentenced Pte. John Auld, alias Forbes, to six months in the Reformatory, after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a fraternity pin and $14.00 in St. Catharines last December. The case was heard here today. Auld had been convicted of stealing an airman's purse containing $51 here some time ago, when he was sentenced to six months. Then only last week he admitted to stealing money in Orillia when arraigned before Magistrate J. B. Garvin here and given three months to run concurrent with the original six months. However, today Magistrate Lloyd made it clear today's sentence was to run consecutively, thus assuring Auld of at least a year in the provincial penal institution.

Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., read the charge that had been dispatched to Belleville by Chief Shennan of St. Catharines. "Auld, who went under the name of Forbes, was befriended around Christmas time and kept for a week by a kindly family in St. Catharines simply because he was wearing an army uniform. When leaving he stole the fraternity pin and the money", explained Mr. Donnan as he suggested Auld had "no sense of decency".

Pte. John Auld is the soldier, who was arrested in Belleville some time ago masquerading as a Canadian paratrooper and wearing numerous military buttons and insignias. Later it was found he was a deserter of six months' standing.

TRENTON AIR STATION PLANE MAKES FORCED LANDING NEAR BAYSIDE

Forced down into a field north of Bayside late Monday afternoon, an R.C.A.F. training plane from the Trenton main station, made a landing resulting in considerable damage to the undercarriage. However, the crew escaped with minor injuries, it was learned after the two occupants had been rushed to the R.C.A.F hospital for examination. The plane pancaked out after coming down at low level. It was left in a ploughed field until Tuesday when wrecking crews burrowed through snow banks to remove the wreckage to nearby No. 6 Repair Depot.

Night Fighter Team Scores 5th Victory In Grim Battle

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 14. (CP Cable)—Two of the five German aircraft shot down last night over Britain fell before guns of R.C.A.F. Mosquito planes, all of which returned safely to bases.

One was destroyed by Sqdn. Ldr. J. D. Sommerville of Parry Sound, Ont., and his observer, FO. D. G. Robinson of Transcona, Man., while the other was shot down by FO. Fayne Denis Schultz of Bashaw, Alta., and his observer, Flt. Lt. V. A. Williams of Hamilton, Ont.

The victory by Schultz and Williams was their fifth as a night-fighter team. Their victim was a Junkers-88 shot down after a grim six-minute battle which Schultz said later "seemed like an eternity".

Their Mosquito was riddled and the engines and gasoline tanks holed before the enemy craft plunged into flames in the sea near the coast. After the battle the Canadians considered bailing out of their damaged aircraft but made an auxiliary air field and landed with a flat tire and with one engine functioning.

Schultz said the enemy pilot "was evidently dead before the enemy machine started its final dive, but the gunner poured withering fire into us".

"I could actually see the gunner swinging in his turret, firing at us", Williams added.

Schultz and Williams each received the D.F.C. last December after shooting down three aircraft in one night. They have been flying as a team for more than a year.

Somerville, who is 33, and his observer were on their first operational flight together. They sighted an enemy plane at 18,000 feet over the sea. After being severely hit, the enemy disintegrated in mid-air. Later the pair damaged another enemy plane with a short burst of fire.

Rawdon

Rawdon—Mrs. Don Campbell opened her home for the February meeting of Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society and the roll call was answered by fourteen members. Three children and five visitors were also in attendance.

Mrs. Ross Hoard played quiet music and the president, Mrs. T. F. Townsend, gave as an opening thought, "The Bible is the only book that speaks to men in all languages." Mrs. John Holmes read a sketch of the missionaries who were recently welcomed in Toronto and a poem, "God is Shaping the Soul." Prayer was offered for Miss Hunt, Miss Clarke and Miss Paddock. Thanks were extended for a letter of sympathy the allocation was presented and the Bay of Quinte branch asked that Dr. Ming Chong, South China, be remembered in prayer this year.

The world day of prayer will be held in Mount Pleasant United Church February 25th.

Mrs. Sid Demorest gathered the offering and it was dedicated with a hymn. The president read a letter of appeal for famine sufferers and this will be dealt with as a congregation. The temperance and stewardship secretaries spoke briefly. Mrs. Reid read a story from the January Monthly. The Bible lessons were given by Mrs. Ira David, Mrs. Will Potts, Mrs. M. Wrightman, Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Earl McAdam. Mrs. Edgar McKeown sang "The Good Shepherd." Mrs. F. Jeffs gave a synopsis of the 5th chapter of the study book based on "The Inspiration of Worship." She closed with this message from the chapter, "In a world torn asunder, one tie still holds, the words which bind the followers of Jesus Christ to one another and to their Lord." In prayer Christians of all lands can still come together.

Marmora

Marmora—The annual dance of Marmora L.O.L. 319 was held in the Town Hall on Friday. The Jones Orchestra furnished music for the occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Shannon visited relatives in Peterboro on Sunday.

Sergt. Frank Grant of the R. C. A. F., Guelph, spent the weekend at his home here.

Mr. Bernard Doyle of Peterboro, spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Doyle.

Among those who attended the funeral of the late R. A. Elliott at Woodstock were Messrs. S. B. Wright, J. A. O'Brien, Col. A. V. Yates, L. K. Crawford, C. H. Buskard, H. C. Barlow, W. Mumby and Mrs. C. Seaton.

ENGINE TROUBLE DEVELOPS

Toronto, Feb. 14 —(CP)— FO. R. E. Talkington started out in a Harvard plane yesterday for California via Selfridge Field, Mich., and Chicago, and came down on the lake opposite Sunnyside, a couple of miles from his starting point at the Island Airport.

A Toronto lifesaving crew dashed up in a speedboat, rescued the airman from his plane which had developed engine trouble, and within two hours he was off again in another plane.

SUFFERING FROM ACUTE CHEST CONGESTION MAN ASKS FOR "More Mustard"

MR. JOHN ALTIN, of Medicine Hat, Alberta, recalls being rushed to hospital back in 1918 critically ill with an acute chest congestion. The only remedy being used was pure mustard applied in poultices.

"I was so low one day that the nurse gave me to understand that I was in a very dangerous condition. I said, 'just forget about that and bring on some more MUSTARD', which she did right away. The new poultice was no sooner on than my breath came easier and I commenced to improve. Here's one man who can vouch for the value of mustard for it certainly helped to break up that acute condition".

Mrs. Altin uses mustard poultices to treat the Neuralgia in her shoulder. She says a good mustard poultice helps to relieve the distress very quickly.

Mustard Relieves Many Aches and Pains

The strongest proof of the value of mustard in treating so many common ailments is the fact that thousands of folks like the Altins depend on it year after year. Always keep mustard handy in your house in case of emergency, to relieve chills or colds, or when you feel depressed by Grippe or other Winter infections. Use mustard in foot baths, complete baths, poultices or plasters to relieve pains of Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Arthritis, Neuritis, over-tired muscles, etc. Never leave a poultice on longer than twenty minutes. If symptoms are serious call your doctor promptly.

Be sure that you buy famous Keen's D.S.F. Mustard made entirely from highest quality mustard seed, and packed to preserve its uniform quality and full medicinal strength. Sold by grocers and druggists everywhere.

St. Peter's Church Young Women's Club

Madoc — The Young Women's Club of St. Peter's Church met at the home of Mrs. James Watson with an attendance of seventeen members. Mrs. Clark as president, opened the meeting. The devotional period was conducted by the convener of this committee, Miss Loreen Connor. The treasurer reported a bank balance. It was decided that the club meet the third Thursday in the Red Cross rooms for work. It was also decided that the club sponsor a skating party on Feb. 21. The president then turned the meeting over to Mrs. Larson, who, in her capable manner, gave a splendid talk on the life of Sankey, one of the famous gospel hymn writers. The meeting was closed with prayer by the president. A lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Whytock and Mrs. H. Keller.

United Church W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of the United Church met at the home of Mrs. Lowery for its February meeting. The business period followed, reports received and the reading and approval of the minutes. The date was set for the C.G.I.T. re-affiliation service. Plans were made for a tea at the home of Mrs. Caverly, the afternoon to be spent in piecing quilt blocks for war work. The world's day of prayer is to be held in the United Church on Feb. 25. The society decided to make a special offering to China and India Relief Funds. The study book chapter was presented by Mrs. E. Burnside.

Clark, director-in-chief of Public Relations for the Defence Department, said last night in an address to the Toronto branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

SURVIVORS REACH CANADA

Ottawa, Feb. 15—(CP)—A handful of bewildered and crest-fallen survivors of the once-proud battle cruiser Scharnhorst, sunk by British naval units in a battle off Norway's North Cape last December, have arrived in Canada, part of a group of about 800 enemy prisoners of war who have joined the thousands of others in Canadian and United States prison camps.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

Managing The Heart Case.

When an individual, apparently in good health, is suddenly stricken with a heart attack—coronary disease, coronary occlusion, coronary sclerosis—he and his family naturally live in fear of a second and possibly a fatal attack. They are not aware that some patients survive a number of attacks. That fear of a second or fatal attack has spoiled and is spoiling thousands of lives is only too true. Sometimes the family physician, in his efforts to make the patient live "carefully" has put too much stress on being careful and the patient and his family live pratcically in terror of a second attack.

In an attempt to reasure these heart patients, they are advised by family physicians to report regularly to the heart specialist who by careful questioning and the use of the fluoroscope (Xrays) and electrocardiagraph—which records the electrical changes caused by the contraction of the heart muscle showing its rhythm and strength—is able to lay out a plan or program by which they can live safely.

The treatment of the heart attack itself is in most cases a hypodermic injection of 1-4 to 1-2 grain of morphine which quites or relaxes the heart muscle and the bloodvessels. In some cases the injection of morphine is followed by continuous administration of oxygen. If pain persists a dose of tincture of opium (laudanum) is given.

In Medical World (London) Dr. Fred Willins states that after the attack the patient should lose weight, endeavor to have the bowels move regularly, avoid gas forming foods—onions, lettuce, cauliflower, fresh bread—reduce or discontinue tobacco in any form, chew his food properly and avoid overeating. Rest after meals will prevent the appearance of discomfort.

I believe this last part of the advice given is very important as a great many patients have an attack immediately after eating and perhaps after taking very light exercise such as a short walk. Many find that four light meals a day give them freedom from any "tightness" across the chest. Taking a part of their evening meal at 4 p.m. is a simple method of getting four meals a day. Eating a part of the noon meal at 10.30 am. gives five meals a day.

Hon. Charles Daley May Be Given New Portfolio

Toronto, Feb. 15 —(CP)— Hon. Charles Daley, Ontario Minister of Labor, may be given the portfolio of planning and development which Premier Drew forecast Saturday in a speech at London, the Telegram said Monday.

The Premier announced that a bill setting up the new portfolio would be introduced after the first session of the 21st legislature opens Feb. 22.

The Telegram said that Mr. Daley already has been directed by the Premier to proceed with work on post-war planning.

400 P.C. Increase In Permit Holders

Toronto, Feb. 15—(CP)—Number of liquor permit holders in Ontario has increased 400 per cent. from 250,000 to 1,250,000 since liquor rationing became effective early last year, it was stated at Queen's Park.

Officials said the increase was due to persons who had never owned permits buying them to use for others.

They denied a report that liquor stores would close before the end of February, as they did in January when all liquor sales were halted for the last two business days of the month.

TO ENFORCE WAGE CONTROL ACT

North Bay, Feb. 15 —(CP)—Hon. Charles Daley, Ontario Labor Minister, announced that all lumber operators in Ontario would be advised that the government's new wage control order would be enforced starting yesterday. The announcement followed a meeting of members of the Ontario Regional War Labor Board, of which Mr. Daley is chairman, with lumber operators here from northeastern Ontario.

NO DESIRE TO FORCE ELECTION

St. Thomas, Ont., Feb. 15—(CP)—A defeated bill will not be allowed to stand as a vote of lack of confidence when the Ontario Legislature opens, Bert Leavens, Provincial C.C.F. secretary, said here last night, as the C.C.F. has "no desire to force Mr. Drew to call another election—that matter will rest entirely in his own hands."

UNCONDITIONAL

There is little belief that Russian demands at this time would be too severe for the Helsinki government in view of the military situation in which the northern nation now finds itself.

It is believed the Russians would be willing to make an armistice based on the boundaries set up in March, 1940, which deprived the Finns of 16,000 square miles of territory, including the city of Viipuri and the naval base of Hangoe, on the Baltic Sea. This settlement followed the Russo-Finnish war of 1939-40.

The Finns might not like the Russian armistice terms but there is nothing they can do about it except keep fighting in the certain knowledge that eventually they will face overwhelming assault. The Russians want the territory, as part of the Karelo-Finnish republic presumably to afford greater protection to the city of Leningrad, and to improve their naval position in the Baltic.

Another problem the Finns face in any peace move is what to do about German troops now in their country. Estimated at three to six divisions, these are threatened with loss of their supply lines through the Baltic as Russian armies advance into Estonia.

A third problem has to do with supplies for the Finns themselves. Finland must import a large part of its food as well as its oil. This probably could be solved with help from Sweden, although Russian assistance also would be necessary and the aid of Great Britain and the United States might be required.

The Allies would win two great advantages in getting Finland out of the war. Russian would be relieved of military commitments on that front and Germany would be deprived of a co-belligerent, giving the German people one more warning of their own eventual defeat.

The United States—unlike Great Britain—did not enter the present Russo-Finnish war and for many months sought to devise some formula by which the Finns, Russians and British could end hostilities. These efforts ceased last spring.

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Feb. 16. (AP) — The R.A.F. smashed Berlin last night with the greatest load of bombs ever dropped on a single target—well over 2,500 tons which cascaded down in a smothering 20-minute attack by 800 to 900 heavy bombers. The largest force of R.C.A.F. bombers ever to fly from Britain accompanied the R.A.F. in the smashing assault.

Forty-three aircraft are missing from the night's operations, which included other forays. Four of the missing planes are Canadian.

The Air Ministry first listed 45 planes lost but later announced the toll was 43.

The bomber command waited two weeks to deal this crushing blow against the capital of the German Reich. Not since Jan. 30, when Berlin was hit by a force approaching 800 planes, had it made a major attack.

It is believed that the armada sent over Germany last night comprised the greatest number of planes ever to fill the Reich's skies in one night's including 1,000 heavy bombers and more than 200 lighter craft. Berlin received the contents of 800 to 900 big bomb rays.

Fire Four Miles in Air.

Billows of flame swept through the city when the assault was finished. Crews of reconnoitring Mosquitos reported a large field of fire, with smoke pluming four miles into the air.

A smaller force of Lancasters made a feint attack on Frankfurt-on-Oder, 50 miles east of Berlin, and Mosquitos bombed targets in Western Germany and Holland. Mines also were laid in enemy waters.

The heaviest raid on Berlin was on the night of Jan. 20 when more than 2,300 tons were dropped within an hour. The R.A.F.'s heaviest previous raid on a single target was its attack on Hanover with 2,500 tons last Sept. 22.

A Swedish report quoting private advices reaching Stockholm said all bus, tram and underground traffic was disrupted. Berlin correspondents of Swedish newspapers were almost completely silenced, but the German-controlled Scandinavian Telegraph Bureau reported from Zurich that the heavy attack started many fires.

Returning pilots agreed a ceiling of heavy clouds over Berlin prevented accurate observation of the results and also impeded the defences. They said flak over the target area was intense but inaccurate. Fighter opposition was light as compared with some of the previous Berlin attacks.

Berlin now has received almost 25,000 tons of bombs in a series of 15 heavy attacks beginning Nov. 18, 1943. The total heavy bombers lost on these night raids is 467, in average of 31 a raid.

Frankfurt-on-Oder, a city of about 70,000, was attacked once before, in October, 1940. Its main industries manufacture machinery and chemicals and it is important as a railway centre.

Returning fliers said they encountered no more than ordinary anti-aircraft fire and only a few night fighters, although enemy interceptors sprinkled flares all over the sky.

Traffic Congested Over Target.

Indicating the scarcity of opposition, 35 Lancasters manned by British, Canadian and Australian crews took of from one field in Britain and 35 came back. Not one bore a scratch.

Traffic over Berlin was so congested as the big planes thundered in on their bombing runs that one pilot reported he almost bombed another formation of heavy bombers beneath him.

One Lancaster completed its 92nd raid to establish a record for the R.A.F. bomber command.

Prior to last night more than 22,000 tons of explosives had been dumped on Berlin in the current campaign to knock the city out. In the last heavy attack the night of Jan. 30, which cost 33 planes, 1,500 tons of bombs were loosed on the Nazi capital.

That raid was the third massive assault on Berlin in four nights.

RCAF Sent Out the Largest Force Ever To Operate From Canadian Group

ALL GO TO MAIN TARGET

By LOUIS HUNTER
Canadian Press War Correspondent.

With the R.C.A.F. Bomber Group Somewhere in England, Feb. 16 — (CP Cable)—Heavy bombers of the Canadian bomber group joined with squadrons of the R.A.F. and other Dominion air forces last night in dealing Berlin the greatest weight of bombs ever to hit a single target during the war.

An R.C.A.F. communique today said "the largest force of heavy bombers ever to operate from the Canadian group" participated. It was composed of Lancasters and Halifaxes.

Four Canadian planes are missing.

All day yesterday I watched ground crews making ready the great bombers for the night's work.

Then in the half-twilight of late afternoon block bombers queued up on the perimeter of both sides of the runway at the Canadian air station here, and one after another they thundered off for Berlin.

Over the station hundreds of bombers from other stations, all bound for the same destination, could be seen in the darkening sky.

This return to the task of levelling the Nazi capital brought the Canadian group's greatest effort.

All the Canadian planes taking part in last night's operations were assigned to the main target, although the night's work for other formations included mine-laying and diversionary bombing.

Since then R.A.F. Mosquitos have been over the city three times.

Follows Daylight Assault.

Last night's raid on Berlin followed another furious daylight assault upon targets in Northern France yesterday by hundreds of Allied planes, including large formations of American heavy and medium bombers, and fighter-bombers escorted by R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. fighters.

Total Allied losses in these operations were two medium bombers and four fighters, a communique said last night.

The main target of the daylight raiders was again the French invasion coast, where secret German installations in the Pas-de-Calais area were subjected to the fourth searing bombardment in five days.

Large Area Afire.

Mosquito crews that flew over Berlin after the main attack said a large area was afire and columns of smoke were rising 20,000 feet high.

A communique said the bombers "took the offensive against Germany in very great strength, flying in all operations over 1,000 sorties.

Canadian Troops in Italy Use Wide Variety of Specialized Slang

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 16. (CP)—Canadian troops in Italy talk their own brand of slang. It's a mixture of Canadian slang, English slang, English idioms with the addition of a number of Italian expressions picked up here and there in Sicily and Italy.

It's common for one soldier to greet another with an Italian "Good Morning", — pronounced "Buon Giorno". Hardtack biscuits have come to be called "biscotti", a term many Canadians learned because everywhere they went people with outstretched hands called for biscuits in their Italian tongue.

For the same reason some soldiers call cigarets, "sigaretti"; chocolate, "cioccolatto"; and water, "acqua". The most common beverage in Italy is wine which some call "vino", others, "bingo".

"Grazie" for "thanks" has also crept into the soldiers talk.

They still use English expressions such as "let's get crackin'" for "let's go", and "I've had it", for any number of things meaning failure, disappointment or frustration of plans.

A soldier will say, for instance: "I've lost my tin-hat—I've had it", or "he's had it—he paid 1,000 lire for that watch: I'll bet it isn't worth 100".

Roadside tea-making is called "having a brew-up". Among tankmen the term "brew-up" means burned out. Joe had a brew-up means his tank was burned out.

The enemy is usually called "Jerry" and more often the singular "Jerry" is employed instead of the plural—"Jerries". The Italians are known as "Eyeties".

Friendly aircraft that accidently bomb or strafe their own troops are called "Mitchellschmitts". Anti-aircraft guns are still "ack-ack guns" and their fire bursting in the air is still called "flak". Ammunition is "ammo'."

The German multiple-barrelled mortar is known as "Moaning Minnie", "Wuping Willie", and sometimes as "The Andrews Sisters". The heavy mortar Canadians use is sometimes called the "stovepipe". Corned beef is known simply as "bully", rather than "bullybeef".

If you walk up to someone and ask "what is the form?", it means you want to know what the plans are. "What's doing?" or "What's cooking?" are just about as good.

A tommygun is simply called a "Tommy" and "Bren gun", a "Bren". An artillery unit's forward observation officer is called a "Foo".

An overly-nervous soldier may be termed "Windy", and one who suffers from exposure to heavy fire may be called "shell-wacky".

"Bump" means to encounter, such as when one patrol bumps another.

When a Canadian sniper picks off a German, the German is "Finito", or finished.

RECALL OF NAZI UNITS IN FINLAND REPORTED URGED

Said General Dietl Requests Hitler to Order Movement to Avoid Entrapment

DIPLOMATS CONFER

Stockholm, Feb. 16 —(AP)—Col.-Gen. Edward Dietl, German commander in northern Finland, is reported to have urged Hitler to recall his troops to avert their entrapment by a Russian-Finnish peace, direct negotiations for which now appear to be under way.

A German source said the request was relayed to Berlin Tuesday night and asserted there were indications that a number of transport officers, essential for any large-scale movement, already had been assigned to Dietl's command.

This informant expressed doubt that Hitler would follow Dietl's advice, particularly in view of the fact that the Russians recently have recaptured vital nickel mines in the Ukraine, leaving Finland as Germany's chief remaining source of that vital metal.

He said, however, that Col.-Gen. Hans Juergen Stumpff of the Nazi air force had virtually abandoned his Finnish headquarters in favor of Oslo. Stumpff also was reported to have ordered the withdrawal of German fighter and bomber squadrons from airfields in Finland to Norway.

Seven Divisions.

It has been estimated that Germany now has about seven divisions in Finland. Their presence undoubtedly has caused the Finns to proceed cautiously in the matter of effecting a separate peace with Russia, for fear of reprisal measures which the Germans might take.

While Helsinki would neither confirm nor deny that peace negotiations with Russia are under way, it was disclosed that Juhu Kusti Paasikivi, former Finnish cabinet minister who arrived here last week, conferred yesterday with the Soviet minister to Sweden, Mme. Alexandra Kollontay.

Rumors persisted, meanwhile, that Russia would insist on military occupation of strategic Finnish cities for the duration of the war with Germany as one of the terms of peace with Finland. The Finns were reported to be strongly opposed to any such concessions, although the Russians were said to be ready to guarantee Finland's independence after the war.

Many Invasion Features Will Be Terrific Blow To Nazi 'Atlantic Wall'

Ross Munro, Canadian Press War Correspondent who landed at Dieppe with the Canadian forces in the great "reconnaissance in force" Aug. 19, 1942, examines in the following dispatch German boasts about strengthened invasion coast defences.

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

London, Feb. 16 (CP).—While the Germans boast of strengthened French coast defences and revive their propaganda phrase, the "Atlantic wall", Allied second-front chiefs here have a few aces up their sleeves to deal in the western invasion.

Allied invasion secrets will remain a mystery until D-day but there are many features of the attack that will be a tremendous shock to the enemy.

Unparalleled Bombardment Likely.

The Germans probably will have to face an air and sea bombardment without parallel and the vaunted coastal defences such as those they mention at Dieppe will have to be amazingly good to stand up for long against this onslaught.

Following Monday's boast by Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt, commander of German forces in western Europe, that there would be no withdrawal from France when the attack comes, another Axis boast came yesterday.

German Boast.

George Schroeder, correspondent for the Nazi Transocean Agency, claimed in a broadcast heard by the Ministry of Information that defences at Dieppe, scene of the gallant Canadian "reconnaissance in force" Aug. 19, have been "thoroughly overhauled".

"If any British we took prisoner at Dieppe a year and a half ago were to return they would not believe their eyes," Schroeder claimed, "because Dieppe has been thoroughly overhauled since, according to what was learned during the action. Provision has been made against the possibility of the Atlantic wall being turned by mass landings of airborne troops."

(Of the 5,000 Canadians who made up the bulk of the troops engaged in the Dieppe operation, two-thirds were casualties — 3,350 dead, wounded, taken prisoner or missing.)

Huns' Ulterior Motive

There may be an ulterior motive behind the German bragging. Canadians remember that before the invasion of Sicily the Germans publicly lauded the "impregnable Mediterranean defences."

Von Rundstedt even made a tour of Sicily to check the defences but when the Canadians landed they found practically nothing there.

This will not be the case in Western Europe but even so the Germans probably will be over-playing the defensive strength of places like Dieppe in an attempt to force some 11th.-hour doubts on the Allies.

The Dieppe defences the day of the raid were principally strong points in houses, machine-gun nests, pill boxes and hidden and well-sighted artillery and mortars which the navy and air force had difficulty in reaching.

Smash Way Through

The Germans probably have done a lot of work with concrete since, creating new and more permanent gun emplacements. But concentrated Allied heavy bombing day and night and naval bombardment by battleships, cruisers and monitors, rather than the small fleet of seven destroyers used at Dieppe, should be able to smash a path through the coastal defences.

The Allies have made vast advances in combined operations technique since Dieppe. If the Germans learned something about defence then, the Allies learned far more about attack for every combined operation since has been compounded of the experience gained at Dieppe. Now an advance system of assault against defended positions has been worked out.

BLOCKADE, RAIDS ALONE WILL NOT DEFEAT JAPANESE

Gen. MacArthur Makes Statement After Recent Successes by This Means

MUST DEFEAT ARMY

Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, Feb. 16 (AP). — General Douglas MacArthur said today Japan cannot be defeated through blockade and bombing alone.

"We must defeat Japan's army and for that purpose our strategy must devise ways and means to bring out ground forces into contact with his at decisive points," he said in a special statement.

The Allied Southwest Pacific commander made his comment following discussion of recent successes in his sector in which blockade and bombardment played a vital part.

The general was asked if he thought Japan could be defeated through blockade and bombing alone. The answer was a decisive "no".

"Both of these are powerful weapons indeed but decisive results in modern war can only be achieved through the combined efforts of all three forces — ground, naval and air," MacArthur declared. "No one or no two of them can obtain victory.

Army Strongest Element.

The strongest military element of Japan is the army which must be defeated before our success is assured. This can only be done by the use of large ground forces. It's useless and misleading to talk of short cuts. They do not exist.

'It's teamwork of a united, well-balanced command used as a unit and not the preponderance of any one element that is essential to victory. We delude ourselves if we plan otherwise. Just as is the case with Germany, we must devise ways and means to bring our ground forces into contact with his at decisive points."

Gen. MacArthur said the old concept of Japan as a predominantly maritime nation based upon her island empire is no longer "factual", adding:

"With her immense holdings on the Asiatic continent, Manchuria, Korea and Northern China, to say nothing of her southern mainland conquests, she has become intrinsically a continental power with her greatest potential inland."

CANADIAN PRESS NEWS WELL LIKED BY SERVICE MEN

Col. Ralston Says U. K. Publication Has Been Genuine Success

NEED READING MATTER

Ottawa, Feb. 16—(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston said last night in the Commons that the Canadian Press News, published in the United Kingdom for Canadian service men and women, has been "a real, genuine success" and widely appreciated.

The Minister said news for publication was cabled overseas by The Canadian Press. The paper received wide circulation, with about one copy for every four or five men.

M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. Leader, asked if it would be possible for members to see the news cabled overseas.

"Better still, I will have a few copies sent up to the House," said Col. Ralston.

He had some part in having this newspaper made available since he had been "ashamed" in November 1940, to have some men overseas ask him who had won the world series.

"I decided then we better have a newspaper," he said.

The army also was having published a booklet "Canadian Affairs," under direction of the wartime Information Board. It was designed mainly for use of study groups.

Maj. Leslie Mutch (L—Winnipeg South) said Canadian Affairs should be distributed on the same generous scale as Canadian Press News. Col. Ralston said he would see that more copies were sent out.

In Italy a paper called the Maple Leaf now was being published in Naples for Canadians. It was being served with news from home sent by CP.

During a visit to the Mediterranean area he had been impressed with the shortages of magazines. Mail and reading matter did much to aid the troops' morale.

Maj. Mutch said men in the services were vitally interested in the future and in rehabilitation plans. Men overseas sought further information on programs now being drafted and had asked why someone was not sent to keep them informed.

ALLIED WARSHIPS AGAIN BATTER BEACHHEAD NAZIS

Foe Captures Aprilia While Fighting at Cassino Continues To Be Fierce

ROME AREA BOMBED

By RELMAN MORIN
(A.P. War Correspondent)

Algiers, Feb. 16 (AP) — American siege guns have opened a concentrated bombardment of Monastery Hill and "breaches" have been opened in that main sector of the German line overlooking Cassino, it was announced today, but in the invasion beachhead to the west Allied headquarters acknowledged the loss of Carroceto (Aprilia), ten miles north of Anzio.

Allied warships again battered the Germans ringing the beachhead and R.A.F. Wellingtons flung down block-busters in a night attack.

United States artillery opened up on Monastery Hill following the aerial destruction of the historic Mount Cassino Abbey, which the Germans had converted into a fortress.

German infantry presumably was still in possession of the key hill, above besieged Cassino, where violent battling swept into its fifteenth day.

Held One-Third of Town

The fighting increased in intensity as American soldiers who already hold one-third of the town, continued the methodical destruction of house after house which the Nazis have converted into miniature fortress.

The lull in ground fighting in the beachhead continued, the communique reporting only patrol clashes in the Cisterna and Carroceto (Aprilia) areas.

Headquarters said Carroceto was in German hands. Fierce fighting has swirled in this neighborhood, with a canning factory there changing hands four times. Allied forces had pushed four miles north of Carroceto to the outskirts of Campoleone, 16 miles from Rome but German counter attacks forced them back.

Well Armored Pill Boxes

While Allied heavy bombers gave direct support to infantry on both the beach and main 5th Army front, dive-bombers struck a sharp series of blows at railroad yards in the suburbs of Rome, plastering the Trastevere and Tiburtina freight yards through which German supplies and reinforcements were moving southward.

The Paris radio said the Rome area was attacked again today and that Castel Gandolfo was hit yesterday.

In the town of Cassino, Allied troops were forcing their way thru' blistering machine-gun fire from pillboxes in the dwellings. These strongpoints, protected by armor plate three to four inches thick, each are held by two men, aiming machine guns with periscopes without exposing themselves.

Men of Canadian Corvette Hepatica Display Courage in Rescuing Crew

Ottawa, Feb. 16 (CP).—This is a story of cool seamanship and courage displayed when the Canadian corvette Hepatica fought 20-foot seas and snow squalls to lay alongside a blazing tanker, rescue 23 men and help salvage part of a 7,600-ton cargo of fuel oil and a deck load of twelve planes.

An unidentified tanker crewman was lost, 600 tons of oil burned, and one plane was damaged .

Announcement of the Atlantic rescue was made today by Navy Minister Macdonald.

Lieut. J. A. Ferguson of Canso, N.S., is captain of the Hepatica. She was proceeding through snow squalls and rough waters in convoy when a bright flash was seen.

She found a tanker with her bridge and superstructure ablaze. Another tanker with defective steering gear had sideswiped her and deflected her into the path of a liberty ship. She thus suffered blows on both port and starboard, the second collision killing her wireless operator and igniting some high-test gasoline carried by the ship's motorboat. Fire flared up, fanned by the strong wind.

Mostly Chinese.

Twenty-three of the crew, most of them Chinese, were taken aboard the Hepatica and another twelve aboard another ship.

The tanker's captain and remaining crew meanwhile fought the blaze and after two hours began to bring it under control, signalling that they had decided against abandoning ship. To test his engines, the captain asked Lieut. Ferguson to return two engineers taken aboard the Canadian corvette.

Although the fire was still burning, Lieut. Ferguson laid his ship alongside. The first attempt at shooting a line failed. Lieut. Ferguson again closed the tanker and this time a line was passed successfully by hand and a sea-boat pulled in. The boat crew included AB. R. S. Cuthbert of Merritton, Ont.

Less than four hours after the outbreak of the fire the engineers had been returned to the ship and put on enough steam to proceed. The Canadian corvette assumed the role of a "seeing-eye dog" for the stricken ship and after two days led her safely into port.

Officers of the Hepatica include Lieut. W. G. Leonard, Toronto; Chief Skipper Garland Vatcher, Halifax; Lieut. Pierre Desaulles, Montreal; and Sub-Lt. D. B. Douglas, Winnipeg.

German Retreat Lines Choked With Trucks, Infantry

Other Russ Forces Closing in for Kill On Remnants of Cherkasy Survivors

GUERILLAS ACTIVE

London, Feb. 16 (CP).—Russian armies had the heat of battle turned on the Germans today on at least six sectors of the 2,000-mile front and were marking up gains so consistently they seemed to have an excellent chance of throwing the Nazis out of the country in the remaining five weeks of the winter.

In the north, the Russians moved down along two railroads and a highway and hammered the Germans farther back toward the great communications centre of Pskov. They bombed and shelled the Nazi retreat lines choked with trucks, carts and infantry.

In the Ukraine Red army forces closed in for the kill on an estimated 50,000 Nazi survivors of a force of probably 100,000 trapped by the Red Army since Feb. 3 in the Cherkasy area. Moscow's midnight communique said 1,800 more Germans were killed, 60 of their tanks wrecked and seven-counter-attacks to break the death ring were repelled.

In the drive on Pskov, Leningrad troops struck down from Luga, killing more than 1,400 Germans and capturing 40 communities. One force reached the rail station of Serebyanka and a mile farther the town of Kalbutitsy, 16 miles south of Luga and 75 miles northeast of Pskov. Gorodets, 15 miles south of Luga, also was captured.

Push Along Railway.

West of this section, other Red army troops pushed down the Narva-Pskov railway along the east shore of Lake Peipus.

On other sectors the Germans apparently were being forced to choose quickly between disaster and retreat. These are at Vitebsk, in White Russia; the area southwest of Shepetovka near the Polish frontier; Krivoi Rog in the Dnieper bend west of the Cherkasy trap and southwest of Rowne (Rovno) in pre-war Poland.

The advance toward Pskov in the north, however, was more spectacular, for it exemplified Russian fighting tactics as well as any campaign to date—the strategy of fighting down highways and side roads rather than attacking on a straight-line front.

Units of Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's Leningrad army are within 17 miles of Byelaya and closer to Keofilo-Pustin. These two towns are the immediate Soviet objectives before the main attack on Pskov begins.

The Red army is being aided by bands of guerillas who infiltrate behind German-held villages to cut vital supply routes and who then join with the main Russian forces when they close in on the enemy.

St. Clair Gordon Resigns As Chief Of O.L.C. Board

Toronto, Feb. 16 (CP)—A St. Clair Gordon, Liberal member of the Ontario legislature for Kent west, has resigned as chief commissioner of the Ontario Liquor Control Board, a position he retained after Premier Drew's Progressive Conservative government assumed office last year.

Mr. Gordon's resignation was announced last night by the Premier, who made public the letter of resignation Mr. Gordon had written Jan. 20 and his only reply, dated Feb. 15, accepting.

Premier Drew explained that he had hoped that Mr. Gordon, who had retained the office at the Premier's personal request, would reconsider his resignation.

Mr. Gordon who was elected as member for Kent west in 1934 and re-elected in 1937 and 1943 said he was resigning because of the demands of his business interests. He was named minister without portfolio following the 1937 election and was appointed liquor commissioner in 1939. He became provincial treasurer in March, 1943, and delivered the budget speech at the last session of the legislature.

Mr. Gordon, whose home is at Wallaceburg, now is in hospital at Chatham where he will soon undergo a tonsil operation.

In announcing the resignation, Premier Drew said that a new commissioner will be named shortly. The appointee is expected to be a prominent business executive and will not be a member of the legislature.

Attorney-General Blackwell will act as liquor board spokesman in the legislature, which opens next Tuesday.

It was stated at Queen's Park that no further changes are contemplated in the liquor board. Roy Elmhurst will continue as deputy commissioner.

International at a Glance

(By The Canadian Press)

AIR — R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. crush Berlin under greatest weight of bombs ever dropped on a single target, well over 2,500 tons, losing 45 planes, including four Canadian; Frankfurt on the Oder also hit.

ALLIES — hit railyards near Rome from air; destruction of German-occupied Benedictine Monastery on Mount Cassino confirmed by reconnaissance; warships shell German lines around Anzio beachhead; Germans hold Carroceto (Aprilia) in beachhead area.

RUSSIA — Russian armies continue drive toward Pskov in north; 50,000 survivors of trapped German 8th. Army in south are being steadily cut down.

FINLAND — Finnish government reported in direct peace negotiations with Russia but Moscow does not confirm.

ARGENTINA — Pro-Axis army officers seize Buenos Aires foreign office in move aimed at preventing declaration of war on the Axis.

PACIFIC — New Zealand troops with American support occupy Green Islands to end Solomons campaign; Allies heavily bomb Rabaul.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

CPL. JOHN CALBURY RETURNS TO ENGLAND

Veteran of the Sicilian campaign Cpl. John Calbury, son of Mrs. Grace Calbury, 89 Front Street, has been returned to England on furlough after convalescing in base hospital in North Africa, according to word received by his mother. The word was received by Mrs. Calbury from her son's wife overseas.

Enlisting in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment early in the war, Cpl. Calbury went overseas with the First Contingent in 1939 and went with his unit to the Mediterranean war theatre. On July 28th last during the Sicilian campaign he was shell shocked and since has been in hospital. It is not known whether he is up for reboard or whether he will be returned to Canada.

THIRTEEN INCHES SNOW FALL IN PAST WEEK

With a depth of approximately thirteen inches of snow having fallen over the district during the past few days, snow shovelling has suddenly become the order of the day. Since the weekend householders have been kept busy shovelling snow off sidewalks, while insult was added to injury Monday night when another six inches of winter's white mantle descended.

PRESENT PAINTING TO ART GROUP

The Art Association of Windsor has received its first picture for its permanent collection, a winter scene painted by the well-known Canadian artist, Manly MacDonald of Toronto. The painting was the gift of the Medical Association of Windsor. Mr. MacDonald, the artist, is well known in Belleville and district for he was born in this county and was educated hereabouts. He has held a number of exhibitions of his work in this city.

TRUCK OVERTURNS AFTER HITTING DRIFT

Suddenly coming upon a packed snow drift along Highway No. 2 east of Milltown, a Swift Canadian Company transport plowed into the heavy drift with such force, that it turned over late Tuesday night, Harry Harris, driver of the vehicle, informed Provincial Police by telephone. A load, that consisted of crates of eggs and butter, was partially hurled from the over-turned vehicle. Garage assistance was obtained, the truck righted and after the load was restored the vehicle proceeded to its destination, but only after having to negotiate several other heavy snow drifts between Belleville and Milltown. Later the Department of Highways' snow plow passed through and opened the highway for traffic.

FOUND WANDERING IN SUB-ZERO WEATHER

Reports that three horses were wandering at large and without shelter during the recent sub-zero weather were given to Provincial Police here Tuesday night. The animals are said to have wandered of the premises of a person other than the owner. Provincial Police turned the matter over to Inspector Thos. Thorne of the Humane Society for further investigation.

Queen Alexandra H.&S. Club Meets

The February meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club took the form of a "pot-luck" supper served in the school Tuesday evening. The tables were gaily decorated in the spirit of St. Valentine and a large number of parents and teachers sat down to a delicious supper brought by the members.

During the business portion of the meeting, Mr. James Barclay, president of the men's organization, gave his report, stating the various things the men of the H. and S. Club hoped to accomplish. A few things mentioned were the starting of a Hobby Club for school-age boys and girls, the organization of supervised sports at recess and a hobby fair.

Miss Eleanor Finkle delighted the large audience with a piano solo. Miss M. Robbins was the speaker of the evening. Her subject was "Child Delinquency." Miss Robbins was recently guest speaker at the Young Women's Guild at Tabernacle United Church where she spoke on the same subject.

Mrs. James Barclay expressed the thanks of the association at the conclusion to Miss Robbins.

Concession Roads Tight With Snow After High Wind

North-south highways and concession roads were blown full and packed tightly with hard wind-driven snow during Tuesday's high wind on the tail of the season's worst storm. However, highway officials stated at noon today district roads were rapidly being opened up. Highway No. 2 east and west of the city was opened up early today, prior to which several vehicles plowed into snow drifts and east of Milltown a large truck over-turned as the result of a sudden impact into a drift.

"So heavy was the snow driven into packs by yesterdays' high wind that one of our snow plows broke down while trying to open up the Madoc Road. However, the plow was later repaired and the road is now open", reported Larry Langlois, Hastings County roads engineer.

With main trunk highways passable, including Highways No. 2, 14 and 37 out of Belleville the county road plow still had to open up concession roads, especially the north-south roads that blew full of snow. "If motorists find it necessary to proceed off main trunk highways I would advise them to use chains for the next day or so, as it will take considerable time for our plows to clear all side roads in this section of the county", warned Mr. Langlois.

Clothes and Shoes Are Much Needed By Greek People

Almost the entire population of Greece is without clothes. Unless large quantities reach them soon many thousands will die from exposure. Warm clothes and sturdy shoes are needed to replace the bundles of rags they wear today. Just think of it—30,000,000 garments, shoes and pieces of bed clothing are needed to help save the Greek people. Will you see what you can spare and send it to the Local Greek War Relief Committee Headquarters, Bridge and Front Streets (Old Income Tax Office) before the end of February.

There are no clothing factories operating in Greece. Greek women cannot even find material or thread to mend clothes or make new garments. Approximately one half of the population is without shoes or coats. That is why this appeal is made to you to send any of the following items to local headquarters: Wool suits, coats, jackets, skirts, trousers, sweaters, men's shirts, simple dresses in all materials, sturdy shoes, every kind of children's clothing, blankets, towels, sheets and pillow slips, knitted and woollen underwear. Send what you can as quickly as you can to the local committee, or telephone either 123—1442 or 2004 and a car will be sent to your home to pick up whatever clothing you can give to this most urgent cause.

Canadian Servicemen Find Cost of Living High in Newfoundland

Canadian servicemen stationed in Newfoundland are finding it hard to meet the rising cost of living, according to Herb Morton, Canadian Y.M.C.A. War Service area secretary for Newfoundland, visiting National Headquarters of the Y.M.C.A. in Toronto. Morton has served with the Y.M.C.A. in Yarmouth, North Sydney, St. Catharines and Halifax, and has been in Newfoundland since August 1941.

Eggs are 90 cents a dozen, milk is 34 cents a quart, butter 80 cents a pound (but most people use margerine) potatoes are $4.50 a bag, bread is 18 cents a loaf, and Christmas turkeys were 75 cents a pound, Morton told an interviewer.

Despite high prices Canadians are finding Newfoundlanders "the most hospitable people in the world," the Y.M.C.A. secretary said. "Nothing is too much trouble for them; they have opened up their homes; their girls and women are kind to our men; and long after the war Newfoundlanders will hold a place in the affection of our men."

Eighteen Y.M.C.A. supervisors serve the troops in 44 different positions in Newfoundland, Morton said. The "Y" operates two clubs, Caribou Hut at St. John's (owned by the St. John's War Services Association) and the Y.M.C.A. Red Triangle Club. Both clubs serve 2,400 meals a day, and provide 500 beds nightly. In addition to organizing recreation, sports, dances, religious services and craft clubs for the men, the Y.M.C.A. visits scores of the ships docking at Newfoundland ports each month. Men aboard are given magazines, books, writing paper, small games, sports equipment and musical instruments. One hundred old gramaphones were put aboard ships recently. Fifty radios were also provided by the Y.M.C.A.

Religious services held by the Y.M.C.A. are attracting large crowds in the Red Triangle Club and Caribou Club, Mr. Morton said.

Parking By-Law To Be Enforced

There is a by-law in the City of Belleville that prohibits all-night parking on any and all city streets. In the summer time the city sweeper is operated at night in order to endeavor keeping the city streets in as clean and tidy a condition as possible. In the same light the city snow plow must operate over city streets during and following heavy snow and wind storms, such as swept down over the district on Monday and Tuesday.

With city police in co-operation no less than 27 motor cars were found to be parked on the public thoroughfares of Belleville after midnight Tuesday thus impeding the progress of the city snow plow. Police stickers were affixed to the windshields of all motor vehicles found parked on city streets, where the snow plow operated Tuesday night. All offenders were instructed to report at the police station this morning.

"As this is the first occasion of such necessary action this winter the offenders were merely warned and instructed as to the city parking by-law that prohibits all-night parking on city streets anytime in the year", said Chief Constable Probert today. Subsequent offenders will be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, as such practices seriously impede the progress of the city snow plow to clear the streets of excess snow.

District Anglers Protest Placing of Hoop Nets In Muscote Bay at Annual Meet

Directors Asked to Explore Possibilities of Reforestation as a Means to Improve Fishing and Hunting

WINNERS ANNOUNCED

A recommendation that the new executive of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Protective Association look into the possibilities of reforsetation with the view of improving hunting and fishing in the Quinte area was passed unanimously as members of the organization met at their annual meeting Tuesday evening at the local Y.M.C.A.

The matter was introduced by Mr. Bryon Lott, well-known Sidney township personality, who indicated the measure should be started by the organization as part of a rehabilitation program.

"There are hundreds of thousands of acres in Hastings county, which are today yielding, nothing," he stated. "It would be a splendid gesture to start a reforestation program, and I think the time is ripe, that money should be spent, even if only on a small scale."

He appreciated the fact, that the present generation would not live to see the benefits of such a program but urged that measures be taken immediately that future generations might reap the benefit. He cited splendid growths of pine in reforestation lots on the farm of Col. Roscoe Vanderwater of Sidney, and also those to be seen in Northumberland county and in New York state as splendid examples of what might be accomplished. "It is the only way, which we will accomplish anything from a fish and game standpoint," he concluded.

Increase in Membership.

In his position as president of the Association Mr. J. E. Shortt reviewed the past year's work of the organization indicating there had been a splendid increase in membership. Memberships had increased from 172 in 1942 to 273 last year, he stated, making the local organization, one of the largest branches in the Federation. He also reviewed the business of the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters, held recently in Toronto, citing some of the programes of the various provincial branches.

Secretary treasurer Irvine Hefkey read the club's financial statement which showed a balance of $73 with $134.50 having been taken in through membership fees during the past year. He also noted the year's expenditures.

Elmer "Sandy" Sandercock read Dr. Van Blakslee's report on the restocking program for the past year, indicating a total 128 lakes and streams in the district had been restocked. Twenty-seven lakes had been restocked with lake trout; 11 with pickerel; 41 with speckled trout; six with brown trout, one with rainbow trout; four with herring, one with Atlantic salmon; 13 with 'lunge and 24 with bass.

Contest Winners Announced.

Fred Croft announced the association contest winners for the past year, the speckled trout catching honor going to Capt. W. H. Bottum with a four pound, four ounce beauty. H. C. Bird took the second prize with a trout weighing three pounds and three ounces.

Harry Langabeer took the 'lunge catching honors with a musky weighing 23 pounds four ounces, while Fred Sprague caught an 11 pound, two ounce pike for top honors in this class. The small mouthed bass title went to Perc Welsh with a six pound, four ouncer and J. Thrasher, second prize with a four pound eight ounce fish. The salmon trout prize went to A. Lennox. It weighed 16 pounds, eight ounces.

Hunting prizes went to "Sandy" Sandercock for shooting the largest buck, a 225-pounder, dressed, while George Wallbridge won the doe shooting prize with a 145-pounder. Both deer were shot in Hastings county.

Hoop Nets Discussed.

Mr. Croft also brought up the question of hoop nets having become legalized in Muscote Bay. He stated that it was a queer thing if an association the size of the local Anglers' club could not have a place to fish which was free of such nets. He intimated, that hoop nets would destroy the 'lunge and pickerel fishing in Muscote Bay if they were permitted to be used. The discussion gave rise to a recommendation to be forwarded to the Federation that all hoop nets be taken from Muscote Bay.

Answering questions on fish and game regulations Mr. Herb McCabe, district game inspector, indicated that smelts could be taken any time, and also gave the answer to why hoop nets were being permitted in Muscote Bay. There are now four licenced hoop netters in the Bay of Quinte he said.

The Bay of Quinte was opened to hoop netters because of a wartime emergency, according to Mr. McCabe. A scarcity of fish had developed with the rationing of meats and as a result the department had licenced commercial fishermen to place the nets. All district waters bordering Lake Ontario had been thus treated.

Mr. McCabe intimated that the Bay of Quinte had been opened to hoop netters on his own recommendation, he deeming the fish were necessary as a war measure. "These licences are good for the duration of the war only," he said. "And commercial fish only may be taken. At the present time there are no waters in Hastings county open to hoop netters, but if I thought the fish were needed I would recommend to the department that it be permissible to catch game fish for commercial uses."

He claimed that hoop netting does not harm game fishing because scavenger fish only are caught with the result there is greater amounts of natural food left for the game fish. Game fish caught in hoop nets are not harmed and may be again liberated. Also hoop netters have agreed not to place nets in the bay until after October 15th closing date for the pickerel season.

Directors Named.

The list of directors from which the executive for the current year will be chosen was appointed at the meeting. The following were appointed as directors: Claude Belnap, J. E. Shortt, Elmer Sandercock, George Wallbridge, Cap. Bottum, Dr. Van Blakslee, F. Croft, H. Legate, I. Hefkey, F. Sprague, Chas. Bishop and Russ White.

Movie reels on fishing and on sports were included on the night's program.

Tokyo Wants 'Increase Of Fighting Spirit' of Occupied Territories

20 CHARGES LAID

Sydney, N.S., Feb. 16 (CP). — Twenty charges of theft were laid yesterday against 14 members of the Royal Canadian Air Force as the sequel to an investigation into alleged thefts of R.C.A.F. rations from the force's station near here. Twelve of the airmen immediately entered pleas of guilty before Magistrate Smith McIvor. Another pleaded not guilty, and the 14th, in hospital, was unable to appear in court.

New Addresses Should Be Given To 'Fag' Chairman

Reports have been received by the Kinsmen Fag Fund officials to the effect that some Belleville boys overseas may not be receiving their quota of cigarettes sent by the Kinsmen as regularly as anticipated. This may be due to the fact some of the boys have changed their addresses of late. In the event of such new postal addresses of Belleville boys serving overseas such changes should be immediately forwarded to "Buster" LaBarr, chairman of the Kinsmen Fag Fund. New addresses can be left in any Kinsmen Fag Box or handed directly to any member of the club, Chairman LaBarr announced today.

The following Belleville boys were sent individual shipments of 300 cigarettes through the fund this week:—

H. W. Beaumont, C. W. Bellis, W. M. Bishop, R. Bridge, C. E. Burley, T. B. Burley, R. B. Calbury, E. K. Clarke, A. G. Cole, D. R. Cole, F. E. DeCarlo, Wm. Donovan, J. W. Ellis, C. B. Emerson, V. G. ### MRS. HILDA (NEIL) FRASER
(Thurlow Township.)

After a lengthy illness Mrs. Hilda Fraser, widow of Peter Fraser, died in the Belleville General Hospital, this Wednesday morning.

The late Mrs. Fraser made her home for some time with her daughter, Mrs. Roy Palmer, 2nd Concession of Sidney Township. She was in her 53rd year, and was born at St. Ola, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Neil. At various times she lived at Lakefield, Trenton, Weslemkoon and Belleville.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Roy Palmer, Sidney Township, and Mrs. James Mancarrow, Trenton; two sons, Malcolm Fraser, Batawa, and Private John Fraser now serving overseas; one sister, Mrs. Frank Gunter, Ormsby; two brothers, E. Roy Neil, Trenton, and Ray Neil, Mountain View. Her husband died in Sept. 1940.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church St.; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

WILLIAM JOHN MOORE
(Formerly of Ivanhoe)

William John Moore, a former resident of Ivanhoe, died suddenly as the result of a heart attack which came upon him while he was engaged in removing snow from the walks of his residence, 675 Water Street, Peterboro, shortly before noon on Tuesday, Feb. 15.

The late Mr. Moore was born in the northern part of Hastings County and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Moore. For a considerable time he was engaged as a cheesemaker in this county and after being at the Beulah Cheese Factory for ten years, he was appointed dairy instructor with headquarters at Peterboro. For the past eighteen years he discharged in an efficient manner the duties of this office and he was highly regarded by many friends in the cheese industry, as well as by many friends and acquaintances outside his business life. Old friends in Belleville, Ivanhoe and other parts of this district will learn with sincere regret of his sudden passing.

In religion, Mr. Moore was a member of George St. United Church, Peterboro and fraternally he was a member of Madoc Masonic Lodge and of Tanner Loyal Orange Lodge.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Ethel Fleming; three daughters, Mrs. Ray Grant (Lottie); Mrs. Robert Miles, (Laura), and Miss Margaret Moore, all of Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. James Martin, Chicago, Ill., and Mrs. Isaac Brown, Bonarlaw; three brothers, Mr. Jackson Moore, Belleville; Mr. Thomas Moore, of Springbrook and Mr. Norman Moore, of Trenton.

Resting at the Grant Funeral Home, 68 North Front St., the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE MRS. MARY E. PHILLIPS

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Etta Phillips, widow of Norman W. Phillips, took place from her late residence, 226 Charles Street, on Tuesday afternoon. The service in the home was conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of the Church of St. Thomas, who also said the committal prayers at the family plot in Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were three sons, Mr. James A. Phillips, Mr. George Phillips and Lt.-Col. J. W. Phillips; two sons-in-law, Dr. M. J. Clarke and Mr. Roy G. Stafford, and Mr. Fraser Vipond, (Westmount, Quebec).

Major C. S. Slack Of Dental Corps Arrives Home

Picton, Feb. 16. — Among the Canadian servicemen who arrived from overseas this week was Major Carmen S. Slack. He arrived in Kingston, early Tuesday morning, and will spend leave with Mrs. Slack here, before reporting to military headquarters in Kingston.

Major Slack is a native of Smiths Falls, and graduated from the Royal College of Surgeons, University of Toronto. In 1925 he came to Picton and practiced until enlistment. When Hastings and Prince Edward was mobilized here in September 1939, he was on the dental inspection board. After enlistment, he served at Kingston, Lindsay and Debert, N.S., going overseas in October, 1941. In August, 1942, he was promoted from the rank of captain to that of major.

Major Slack has spent a time in military hospital in England and while overseas covered a wide district as dental inspection officer.

Honor Dr Roblin.

Dr. S. H. Roblin, who has acted as chairman for Prince Edward County during five Victory Loan campaigns, has resigned, as he is 85 years of age, yet very active. In appreciation of his splendid leadership and enthusiasm, Victory Loan salesmen gathered at his home and presented him with a smoker's stand. Donald Baxter referred to the patriotism and zeal with which Dr. Roblin had carried out his duties. Colin Carter also paid tribute and letters were read from Loan officials. During these loans, Prince Edward had raised five and a quarter million dollars, in a little over three years. A social time was spent.

Kinsmen's Club.

Formation of a Kinsmen's Club here is being discussed. A dinner meeting will be held tonight when district officers will attend. About 25 young men have signified their intention of attending.

Foxes Plentiful.

Foxes are very plentiful in Prince Edward County this year and Harry Cowan of the Outlet is finding the hunting a profitable sport. So far this winter he has shot 21 of the animals. The war has boomed prices for pelts.

In Scharnhorst Action.

It is officially revealed that the Canadian destroyer Iroquois was one of the ships in the convoy, which was attacked by the German battleship Scharnhorst, later sunk by units of the British Navy. Leading Seaman Teddy Goodwin, whose wife lives in Kingston, and whose mother, Mrs. Andrew Goodwin resides here, is a member of the crew of the Iroquois which has figured in several exciting actions.

92nd Birthday.

Mrs. Charles Minaker, who resides on Grove Street, is marking her 92nd birthday tomorrow. Most of her life has been spent here. She enjoys good health and is active daily, looking after her housework. She especially enjoys listening to the radio programs.

Laymen Meet.

At the Laymen's Association of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Tuesday night, members heard an interesting talk on the canning industry by J. D. Baxter of Bloomfield. The Rector, Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne announced that Bishop John Lyons would be present at the next meeting, Feb. 25, and the Belleville Laymen would be guests. Each member at the meeting wrote a letter to a serviceman overseas telling them cigarettes were being sent them by the Association. A social time was spent.

Basketball.

Wellington Consolidated School boys' basketball team visited Picton Collegiate for a exhibition game with the juniors. Picton won 51-12. Scorers for Wellington were D. Smith 6, Donald Leavitt, Ronald Hendry, 2 each. Rand led Picton scorers with 18, Lipson 9, Rankin and Hepburn, 8 each, Leverton 6, and Bowers, 2. Wellington was without the services of three regulars due to illness. A return game is planned.

War Bride Here.

Among the 200 British war brides who arrived in Canada last weekend was Mrs. William Breakenridge. Her husband is with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Italy and she will visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Breakenridge. She was accompanied by her small son, Richard. The vastness of Canada, the bright lights and abundance of unrationed food and clothing were remarked upon by the war bride, who said she was very pleased to be in Canada.

Wing Commander J. Shaw-Kennedy and Mrs. Kennedy entertained at their home Tuesday night to mark the host's birthday. Guests were 34 R.A.F. officers and their wives. Carnations and daffodils centred the dining table. Music was provided by F.O. Merry.

Capt. Harry Welbanks, Mrs. Welbanks, Mrs. Carmen Welbanks and Linda, are visiting relatives in Syracuse.

WORLD'S OLDEST ABBEY NOW DESTROYED

Here is a view of the famous Benedictine Monastery at Monte Cassino, which, the Allied Command charges, has been converted into a fortress by the Germans and therefore subject to assault. The monastery is the oldest in the world. It stands on the top of Monte Cassino, overlooking the town of the same name and is astride the road to Rome. It was established by St. Benedict in 529 A.D. in the ruins of the Roman temple of Apollo.

TWO MORE NAZIS PERISH

A British paratrooper looks down impersonally at the bodies of two Germans whom he and his patrol comrades had just killed on the Garigliano front, Italy. The Germans elected to fight it out when the patrol cleaned out a troublesome machine-gun nest and so became just two more names on an ever-lengthening list.

FASTEST MOTOR

If the wheels of an auto could turn this fast, a car equipped with the new General Electric motor shown above would operate at 10,000 miles per hour. Weighing but seven pounds and with a rotor scarcely larger than a man's thumb, the motor makes 120,000 revolutions per minute, believed to be the fastest for any motor ever built. It will be used for grinding and drilling airplane parts.

Ralston Assumes Responsibility For Sending Part of Canadian Army to Sicily and Italy

Denies Action Means 'Breaking Up' of the Canadian Army

TELLS BITS OF HISTORY

Ottawa, Feb. 16 —(CP)—Defence Minister Ralston assumed full responsibility in the Commons Tuesday night for the sending part of the Canadian army to Sicily and Italy but he denied it meant the "breaking up of the Canadian army."

"The decision was to use the Canadian army where and how it could best be used," he said.

Into the story of the decision he wove bits of history, of great decisions in the making for the forces for the United Nations: The fact an offensive on Western Europe from Britain was contemplated in 1943 but the "plans did not materialize," the fact the big drive is coming "this year" from Britain and the location of the "major thrust" was settled at the Teheran conference of Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and Marshal Stalin late in 1943.

The reason for Col. Ralston's speech was criticism from T. C. Douglas (C.C.F.-Weyburn) during discussion of army estimates in the war appropriation resolution.

Acceded to Request Denied.

Mr. Douglas expressed fear Canadian authorities were having less and less to do with deciding matters of strategy and employment of the Canadian army and said many people wanted the army kept together. He suggested the government acceded to a request from the British High Command to separate part of the army for service in Sicily.

To this Col. Ralston gave a flat denial. There was no such request, he said. He himself had been looking for employment of the army outside Britain. He had asked for a Canadian component in the North Africa force and been given good reasons why it was not possible.

He had not relished the thought of the whole army waiting in Britain for one giant offensive in which the total Canadian investment in lives, not to speak of money, would be risked without any appreciable number of the troops having battle experience.

When a western offensive was contemplated in 1943, the Minister said, the Canadians had to face the prospect of going in all together without battle experience because they could not be detached from their duties in the defence of Britain. When the Sicilian operation was started instead, the opportunity came. The 1st Division made its great record. Later is was decided to send more troops and form a corps which gave more officers and men battle experience.

Deals With Criticism

"I really think,' 'he said, "that those who talk about breaking up the army ought to think of where Canada would stand at the present time in the eyes of the world and in the eyes of her own soldiers if we had not had that opportunity last July to show to the world that notwithstanding the fact that they had not been permitted to fight for three years, Canadian soldiers were not stale; that they could fight as did their fathers 25 years before them and in fighting give a good account of themselves."

Already, he said, the corps in Italy—as autonomus a Canadian formation as the corps in the First Great War — was contributing battle-trained officers and men "to the organization which is going on in the United Kingdom."

He would have announcements in that connection later, he said (presumably concerning transfers of senior officers).

The speech gave Col. Ralston a chance to deal with criticism which he said he had heard over a long period. He said he was glad to know the creation of the overseas army formation now was regarded as "a constructive step."

It had been criticized as too big, as a means of providing jobs for generals. From time to time the government had been criticized for keeping the troops in England. Now there was criticism at breaking up the army.

Promises Investigation

The Army discussion for the day opened up with an airing of the circumstances surrounding the return of the forestry corps to Canada. Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC—York-Sunbury) said the 2,000 men brought back from Scotland were not well looked after at Debert (N. S.) Camp. Col. Ralston promised to look into that.

contending soldiers were better off army's first idea was that the men should be detailed to work as soldiers in lumbering operations in Canada on army pay and allowances, but lumber operators had not been willing to accept them on that basis because it might cause dissatisfaction among other workers in the industry.

That led to a comparison of the pay and allowances of soldiers with the pay received by workers in industry, with some members contending soldiers were better of and others that industrial workers were better off.

So far, the Minister said, 558 Forestry Corps men have been given extended leave for work in the bush and 692 more are available for such work. Others have been transferred to other units or given leave for other essential work.

Another statement by Col Ralston was that there are about 11,000 army deserters now, an increase of 2,000 since last May. On the average the number apprehended each month is a little lower than the number who desert, he said.

RECRUITING SUSPENDED

Ottawa, Feb. 16 (CP)—Announcement at London, Ont., yesterday, that enlistment of recruits for the R.C.A.F. Women's Division has been suspended at No. 9 recruiting centre there recalled the statement of Air Minister Power in Ottawa Dec. 2 that while airmen and airwomen still would be recruited for certain ground trades "only a few" were needed in each category to bring the trade up to complement.

ALLIED WARSHIPS

Photographic reconnaissance has showed that the Benedictine Monastery was destroyed yesterday in the attack by heavy and medium bombers and artillery fire. Only a small portion of the west wall was left.

Infantrymen who watched the assault said the bombing was "extremely accurate and successful."

Immediately after the planes left, Allied artillery shells began dropping into the Monastery ruins and the entire area around.

The Germans may have tried to rush infantry back into the ruins, but whether they succeeded was not known here. The bombing smoked out nearly 300 Nazis.

Clearing weather brought almost every type of Allied aircraft into action and heavy bombers also struck at the Poggibonsi railyards 20 miles sout hof Florence. Nine enemy planes were downed, including four over the beachhead, while the Allies lost one.

Bridges, highways, supply dumps, gun positions, command posts, and enemy troops and motor transport throughout the whole area between Rome and the fronts to the south were raked with fire and high explosives.

The Germans launched their first attack in several weeks against British 8th. Army positions, sending infantry and light tanks against Indian troops. The assault, described as on a small scale, was beaten back.

THIS IS TITO OF YUGOSLAVIA

If you could deliver the head of the man, left, here, to the Germans, you could probably write out your own cheque—for whatever a German cheque is worth. He is Josip Broz, better known as Marshal Tito, leader of the Yugoslav Partisan army. The man with him is an aide.

The Greeks Need of Clothing Is Desperate!

FOOD is essential, but what about clothes . . . and particularly in the winter months? Thousands of people in Greece, and children especially, are almost naked. Since Germany occupied the country factories have not produced any clothes. Today, practically 50 percent of the population is almost naked. Fifty percent of the 200,000 children receiving food at soup kitchens are without coats or shoes. Does this touch your heart? It does. Well, please go through cupboards and see what you can spare. Items needed are; wool suits for men, women and children; coats, jackets, skirts, trousers for men and boys; knitted underwear, cotton or wool in all sizes; woollen clothes such as sweaters; woollen and cotton dresses for women and girls; shirts; shoes in good condition and in all sizes, blankets, sheets; pillow slips, towels.

Winter's Storm

Winter's turn has come with over thirteen inches of snow falling since last Friday. Though most persons kept as it were their fingers crossed when speaking about the weather and the remarkable spell of weather until just lately, the heavy precipitation surprised a good many people. Everyone was waiting to see how long the spell would last and hoping it would last for a considerable time.

But there were many who looking forward towards spring and summer hoped for snow. So have many in the country also hoped because there was a shortage of water. Frost is said to have penetrated deep into the ground as a result of the lack of protection of snow.

For the first time this winter there are reports of blocked sideroads owing to the drifting of the light snow of Monday night's fall.

Responsibility on Nazis

German forces with utter disregard of the character of the Benedictine Monastery on Mount Cassino in Italy took advantage of the Allied desire to avoid damage to sacred property and converted it into a German fortress from which to fire upon the United Nations' forces. As explained by leaflets dropped about the Monastery by Allied planes, every step had been taken by the United Nations' forces to avoid striking the building. Meanwhile the battle swept closer and closer to the sacred structure and the Germans maintained their use of the structure for the purpose of observation and as a post from which to fire upon the Allied forces.

As pointed out in dispatches the Germans no doubt through the use of the building for fighting had brought death to Allied soldiers and it was pointed out by Allied officers that the removal of the Monastery would mean the saving of lives since it would remove this dominating place of vantage over the terrain over which the battle is being waged.

Every effort was made to protect any monks or refugees who were still within the building by warning them to escape before the Allied guns were turned upon the Monastery. It is believed sacred articles had been hidden safely outside.

On Tuesday the bombs were loosed over Mount Cassino and it is reported that the roof of the building was struck and that a plume of gray smoke rose from the building.

The proof that the enemy had been making use of the structure was given by the fact that three hundred of the Germans ran out of it after the first and second Allied air attacks.

Nazism is utterly ruthless against body, soul and spirit, property and sacred things. It profited by the Allied noble impulse to spare if possible the Monastery. So the Allies have been forced regretfully to take the action of turning the guns on the abbey. These United Nations' soldiers are fighting in a cause that is for world betterment, for freedom and the liberty of every kind for man. The action the Allies took was the only action that they could take for the enemy was using the privilege of sanctuary to try to kill and maim Allied soldiery and to prevent the Allied plan.

The deed of the Germans in making use of the sanctuary and sacred property to achieve what they could not do in battle calls to mind a notable line in Shakespeare, "No place, indeed, should murder sanctuarize." That is what the Germans were trying to do, take sanctuary in the Monastery and guard themselves while sending death down upon the Allied troops.

Will this be a lesson to the Germans not to repeat this act of sacrilege by using the building for war? Time will tell.

If they were a fair enemy, they could have remained away from the building and it would have passed through the struggle unscathed. So on the heads of the German Nazis rests the responsibility for the damage or destruction of the Monastery.

Letters to the Troops

William Stewart, Canadian Press war correspondent, touched on the importance of the service man's mail in a letter in the newspapers yesterday and soldiers who have been overseas and have returned will substantiate what he says about this service which friends render to the cause of the forces by keeping in contact with the boys overseas by letter, newspaper and parcel. Sailors, soldiers and airmen have in their letters home stressed how much they appreciate the receipt of letters.

This thought cannot be too often stressed in order to avoid any slow-up in the writing of letters. The flow of home correspondence should be maintained at a high peak.

Outside of food, letters take first place as the best direct link with the family at home, their friends and the society they knew in Canada. No morsel of personal news is too slight for them to be interested.

The correspondent says that lack of mail causes the sense of remoteness in a strange land to become one of complete isolation. Don't let that happen.

So that Canadian Press story should encourage relatives and friends of the troops, the seamen and the airmen to write more and more letters for the letter is a builder of morale, one of the essentials of a serviceman.

There are so many things to write familiarly about in a letter that no one should run out of news and good-natured chatting. Nothing of home that one can tell will fail to attract the attention and interest of the boys abroad.

The post cards marking festivals, holidays, anniversaries and birthdays also serve to keep the absentees on the great mission of freedom in closest touch with the people they know back in the cities, towns, villages and countryside of Canada. Snapshots and other photographs of friends and familiar scenes are welcomed by these men sojourning for the space of the war in another country. And parcels with all the evidences they contain of kindly and loving thoughts, together with gifts of food and other things likewise serve the brave boys.

The Marshalls

The Allied Nations have shown Tojo that they are on the way to extract from Japan the empire which she stole in the Pacific. In the raid on the Marshall Islands, the Japanese garrison of about ten thousand was practically wiped out and the Americans in one week had possession of this strategic base which furnishes the means of another step closer to Japan.

Japanese leaders have seen the Allied offensive develop in the Pacific, so that Japan has lost her thrust and the United Nations are taking heavy toll of the enemy on the sea, in the air and on such islands as the Marshalls, while the United Nations' offensive gains.

The Cook

(Providence Journal)

The one person in the world, it seems, who can't escape the relentless eye of Duty is the cook. All nature conspires against cooks. They are hopelessly pitted against ravenous, elementary forces as insistent as gravity, as perfidious as fortune, as unfeeling as destiny. From New Zealand comes a dramatic instance. A small force was besieged by the Japanese. All the officers were wounded and the cook took command. He held the Japs off all night, killed a number, and did a good job all round. But when dawn came and the fighting ended, the cook began to look troubled. "What's the matter?" his buddy asked. "I've got to get out of here. I should be getting breakfast ready now." This is beautiful in its simplicity. From time immemorial The Cook has had to drop everything else and at the appointed time rush off to his pots and pans. He (She, too. Sex is but an incident in this cosmic drama) is first to stir in the cold, gray dawn, busiest at noonday, and still going strong at nightfall. There is no respite, no long unbroken contemplation of comfort and joy.

INCIDENT

The sky was filled with deadly flak
  And the bullets struck like rain.
There seemed no chance of getting back
  To the English coast again.

The tail of the ship was blown in two
  And part of the wing was gone.
"Jump!" said the pilot to his crew,
  And they did so, one by one.

There came to his side a boy white-lipped,
  Of hope he thought was none.
He whispered: "Sir, my 'chute is ripped!"
  Drawled the pilot: "Son, hang on!"

"Things are mighty thick up here just now
  But I'm heading for the 'drome.
Just hang on, son, for awhile!
  Papa will take you home!"

And in they came with the battered ship
  Almost touching the channel foam.
With courage, rare, from a desperate trip,
  Papa had brought him home!

50 YEARS AGO

February 16th., 1894.

The Y.M.C.A. has a strong hockey team as was evidenced by their play last evening; they faced a good team from the Bay City Club and won by a score of 3 to 0. The following composed the teams: Y.M.C.A. — MacDonald, Taber, Holton, H. Kelso, Jamiesan, Thompson and Lockett. Bay City team — Mussen, H. Hamilton, C. Armstrong, Powell, H. Armstrong, Quay and L. Hamilton.

As a winter month February, as usual, heads the procession.

Mr. Robert Wilson of the Brown Foundry here, left today for Picton where he will repair the boilers of the Steamer Alexandria.

Mr. James Haggerty, Reeve of Huntingdon, and his son, Richard, were in town today.

Mr. Herbert Hulme is home from Toronto to spend a few days.

McNaughton Matter May Be Dropped For Time Being

Ottawa, Feb. 16—(CP)—A strong impression prevailed on Parliament Hill today that nothing more will be heard in House debates for some time of the granting of leave to Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton and relieving him of the overseas army command.

While leaders who attended an inter-party conference in Prime Minister Mackenzie King's office yesterday declined to comment on what they heard, read, discussed or agreed upon, their silence was taken as agreement to let the McNaughton matter drop for the time being at least.

Should such be the case, it would appear they were satisfied the information given to them by Prime Minister Mackenzie King supported his statement to the House Monday that further discussion might be against public policy.

Interviewed after the conference, Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, was cheerful but declined to say whether he was satisfied or dissatisfied with the meeting. He also indicated his party's attitude on the matter was not fully decided but refused to say whether or not he would bring it up in the House again.

Mr. Graydon met his followers in caucus immediately after the meeting and before the afternoon session of the House and presumably reported to them. Nothing was said in the House about Gen. McNaughton.

Head of Bank of Canada Favors Developing Foreign Trade to Dispose Of Surpluses and Buy Goods in Return

Ottawa, Feb. 16. (CP)—Graham F. Towers, governor of The Bank of Canada, said yeserday in the bank's annual statement that while the Dominion cannot go on indefinitely piling up big increases in the public debt without an intolerable straining of the national economy, debt increases sufficient to look after war and post-war readjustment needs can be handled without embarrassment.

While the interest burden on the federal taxpayers is 52 per cent higher than at the beginning of the war, he said, when figured in relation to the national income it is really less now than 20 years ago.

The report set the net interest charge on the Federal Treasury at $220,000,000 a year, compared with $145,000,000 at the outbreak of hostilities.

Mr. Towers said the key to Canada's ability to carry interest charges on the public debt after the war will be the maintenance of a high level of employment and income.

Two Courses Open.

Two courses were open to Canada, as to other nations, when the war ended. One was to specialize on what it could produce best and sell its surpluses to other nations. The other was to build up a self-contained economy by subsidies for those products Canada consumes but cannot produce economically.

Mr. Towers said he favors specializing and developing Canada's foreign trade to dispose of surpluses and buy goods from other countries in return.

Warns Against Promoters.

He urged that holders of Victory Bonds and War Savings Certificates be guarded against promoters who by high pressure methods seek to persuade them to exchange government securities for dubious or worthless securities.

The bank reported net profit for 1943, after providing for contingencies, of $15,911,478, compared with $8,872,478 in 1942. All last year's profits went to the Federal Treasury except $1,568,647 added to the bank's rust fund. Increased profits were largely due to larger holdings of government securities.

Need International Trade.

Mr. Towers dealt with the need for international trade after the war. He referred to the United States, British and Canadian plans for post-war international monetary agreements. While the plans were open to criticism, something along that line was essential, he said.

The only alternative would be bilateral credits which, sooner or later, would be accompanied by trade discriminations in favor of the countries extending credit. This would be likely to promote economic imperialism and international discord.

The stock of the Bank of Canada is all owned by the government and it does not have an annual meeting of shareholders but the annual report was passed at the last meeting of the bank's directors, Feb. 7.

The bank's note circulation at Dec. 31 was $874,395,312 of which the general public held $751,500,000 and the commercial banks the balance. The banks' note circulation increased $180,777,381 in 12 months. The chartered banks note circulation dropped to $42,200,000 from $60,300,000 the year before.

While the government had borrowed $7,654,000,000 or about half its monetary requirements during the war, there had been many important offsetting factors. Considerable amounts were used to redeem government and Canadian National Railways securities in London and New York. The C.N.R. had been able to pay interest on its securities held by the public and securities of both the government and the company had been converted into issues at lower interest rates as they became due.

While the net interest load on Federal government borrowings had increased 52 per cent since the war began, Mr. Towers said, the real burden of public debt charges depended on the taxable capacity of the economy

National Income Doubled.

"National income has aproximately doubled since before the war, and taxable capacity has increased a good deal more, because surplus income over and above basic food, shelter and clothes requirements has increased proportionately more than total income.

"In relation to taxable capacity, therefore, the burden of Federal and C.N.R. debt charges has declined substantially during the war period. It is also less now, in relation to national income, than it was 20 years ago, when net interest charges were about $135,000,000 a year and national income was less than half its present level."

Dealing with the Feb. 8 reduction from 2 1-2 to 1 1-2 per cent in the interest rate on central bank loans to chartered banks, Mr. Towers said the bank of Canada's lending facilities have been required on few occasions and for small amounts. He did not expect the commercial banks would require to borrow from the central bank in the future to a much greater extent than in the past.

Saving by the people was as urgent as ever, and the first and foremost financial policy must continue to be the winning of the war.

The War Today— Huns 'Atlantic Wall' Outflanked Already by Vast Underground

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Field Marshal Karl Von Rundstedt, commander of German forces in western Europe and one of the outstanding soldiers of our time, manages to convey the impression of a great faith in Germany's destiny in his statement that he is prepared for the coming Allied invasion.

Maybe Von Rundstedt is bluffing when he says there will be "no withdrawal in my field of operations." However, I see no reason to doubt his sincerity.

He means business. We should be asking for trouble if we didn't recognize this and realize that the invasion easily may produce a conflict which will far exceed in violence anything this or any other war has seen.

However, Von Rundstedt seems to have stretched a vital point when he said that Hitler's Atlantic wall can't be outflanked by invasion.

Outflanked Already.

It's outflanked already—before the invasion has started. It's outflanked by the vast underground army of Frenchmen and men of other nationalities of the occupied zone who are all set and waiting for the invasion day.

That's the Allied "secret weapon," and it may prove to be the most destructive in our armory. The units of this army will be everywhere—behind the Germans, in their midst, on their flanks.

Millions in French Underground.

In France alone the underground army runs into many millions, who are organized and are kept in touch with the fighting French leaders in Algiers by liaison men. These brave folk carry on ordinary occupations in the daytime, and perform their patriotic tasks under cloak of night. They plan and train for the future, they carry out sabotage against the enemy. It's dangerous work—a fact which Nazi firing-squads proclaim grimly each dawn.

Military Underground.

There's another force in France, better organized and more formidable than anything of the sort the Nazis have encountered. This is separate from the civilian underground army and is composed of former officers and men of the disbanded French army—once one of the world's most powerful fighting machines.

These trained soldiers don't engage in the ordinary sabotage, but are being kept under cover for the invasion day. One of their big jobs will be to seize and hold strategic points for the invading forces —an invaluable service which may turn the scales.

Military Necessity.

No reproach attaches to the Allied 5th Army for the distressing necessity of bombing and shelling the Germans out of the ancient Benedictine monastery atop Mount Cassino. The Germans were holding up the Allied offensive by utilising the building for military purposes. We held our fire as long as possible and then had no alternative but to shoot.

One wonders what may happen to the priceless relics of Rome if we lay siege to the capital. Certainly if it suits Hitler's evil purposes, he won't hesitate to use the churches as shelter for his troops. That would present the Allies with a tough problem.

WRONG NAME GIVEN IN REPORT

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

In the report of the meeting of the Belleville Industrial Commission appearing in your issue of the 9th inst, there was a statement that William Nielson Limited, well known ice cream manufacturers of Toronto, had purchased suburban property in Thurlow Township upon which to establish a distribution depot from which to serve their customers in the Belleville area.

I regret to inform you that in this report there was an error in the name of the company concerned. Instead of William Nielson Limited, it was another corporation which purchased the property mentioned.

This inadvertency was entirely due to an error on my own part in the hurried preparation of the copy for my annual report to the Industrial Commission and is not to be attributed to the compositors in the newspaper office. I express the hope that the mistake will not occasion embarrassment to the corporations concerned.

J. Owen Herity,
Industrial Commissioner.

DID NOT WRITE LETTER

Belleville, Feb. 15th., 1944
The Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
Dear Sir:

In regard to a letter signed "A Taxpayer" which appeared in your issue of February 2nd., I may say, that, as you are fully aware, I am not the author or writer of the letter and can claim no merit or blame for the ideas contained therein. When I write a letter to anyone I always have the courage to sign my name.

Yours sincerely,
H. B. Fetterly.

Editor's Note: The letter signed "A Taxpayer" and published in this newspaper on February 2nd., to which Mr. Fetterly refers above, was not written by Mr. Fetterly nor was it signed by him. It was written by another person who gave his own name as well as the pen-name "A Taxpayer" and who is known to the Ontario Intelligencer.

This newspaper has never known Mr. Fetterly to ask publication for an anonymous letter and gladly makes this statement of explanation.

British, Dominion Casualties in Italy Sept. 3 to Feb. 12

London, Feb. 16 —(CP)— Prime Minister Churchill today announced in the House of Commons that British and Dominion casualties in Italy from the landing last Sept. 3 until Feb. 12 were 7,635 killed, 23,283 wounded and 5,708 missing—a total of 36,626.

He said this did not include R.A.F. and naval casualties.

YOU'D BE SURPRISED!

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

Protected, 1944, by The George Adams Service.

CAUSE OF TIDES

Tides are caused by the gravitational action of the sun and moon upon the rotating earth.

Theoretically all the stars, planets and satellites in the universe produce separate and distinct tides, but their influcence, of course, cannot be detected.

The moon is nearly two and a quarter times more potent as a tide-producing agent than the sun, because the tide-generating force of a body depends not only on its mass but also on its distance from the earth.

Although their effect may not always be appreciable, the tide-producing forces exert themselves on all bodies of water in proportion to their size and depth, even on ponds and pools.

It is not true, as sometimes stated, that there are no tides in such bodies as the Mediterranean Sea and the Great Lakes.

The same forces produce tides in these bodies, but their area is relatively small and the tides are so slight that they are generally masked by differences in mean level resulting from winds, changes in atmospheric pressure, and the discharge of rivers.

At Chicago the tide in Lake Michigan rises only about two inches.

The subject of tides is exceedingly complex because of the motions of the earth and the moon and because the actual operation of the tide-producing forces is modified by numerous local factors, particularly the location and configuration of the oceans.

The pull of the moon tends to separate the solid part of the earth from the more mobile waters, which therefore pile up.

When the moon is over a body of water it pulls the fluid upward and sets a tidal wave in motion. But the earth and the moon are swinging around a common centre of gravity and pulling against each other, the moon actually causing the earth to deviate slightly from what would otherwise be its normal path. Therefore, while the moon is piling up the water on its own side of the earth it appears to push it out on the opposite side. In reality the more mobile water merely takes a slightly greater orbit than the solid part of the earth does when the entire earth is held back by the moon.

The more or less free water on the opposite side of the earth bulges away from the moon much as the passengers in the rear seat of an automobile are thrown outward when the machine suddenly turns a sharp corner.

Picton and District

Prince Edward Co. Red Cross Soc. Produced 22,888 Articles in 1943

Picton, Feb. 16 — A total of 22,888 articles were made for Prince Edward branch of the Red Cross last year, it was reported at the annual meeting. This is an increase of 10,858 over the previous year and reflects the continued interest of the members. The chief increase was in hospital supplies.

Quilting is one of the chief projects with 1,071 quilts and blankets turned in, an increase of 69 over the previous year.

Hospital supplies included 16,474 articles, the 3,630 articles of civilian clothing included 821 for babies as well as 40 complete layettes each containing 36 pieces, each layette being counted as one article in the total. Other articles included 330 survivors' bags, 100 first aid kits.

There were 311 knitted articles for the Women's Auxiliary Services and 2,025 knitted articles for the men's services including 705 pairs of socks, 210 pairs of seamen's socks, 250 pairs gloves and mitts, 340 sweaters, 285 helmets, 60 turtleneck tuck-ins.

A total of 282 articles were sent to the R.C.A.F. hospital at Mountain View, as well as curtains and rods, mats, table cloths, towels, books and magazines. Christmas parcels, not included in the total. The R.A.F. hospital, Picton, received 91 knitted articles and other comforts.

$26,271 Receipts.

The financial report showed receipts of $26,271.74, of which $15,000 was a grant from the county in lieu of a canvass. There were 601 paid members. Individuals donated $2,207 and units $5,288.

Expenditures totalled $20,732.60, including $3,235 for materials, $17,000 to Red Cross Headquarters, $234.15 to various funds, $150 to R.A.F. for tea truck. Rent, postage, printing and other administration expenses totalled but $73. Assets totalled $5,893.14 and liabilities $366.91, leaving a surplus of $5,893.14.

Judge McLean, President.

Judge E. H. McLean was re-elected president; Mrs. C. H. McGibbon, Miss Naomi McDonald, E. B. Purtelle, Mrs. E. L. Bronskill, vice-presidents; C. G. Rutter, secretary and E. L. Bronskill, treasurer.

Picton Boy Appointed.

Local people have more than a passing interest in the appointments made in connection in the educational changes proposed by Premier G. A. Drew. Two of the appointees have local connections.

Cecil F. Cannon, one of three assistant superintendents of elementary education, was formerly principal of Picton Public School. He is a native of Leeds County and a graduate of Queen's University.

Named editor-in-chief of text books is Sidney D. Holmes, a Picton boy whose sister, Miss Eleanor Holmes, is librarian here. He is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Hedley Holmes. The former was registrar for the county many years until his death.

Mr. S. D. Holmes was born in Liverpool, England, coming to Canada at an early age. He attended Picton Public School and on graduating from the Collegiate Institute joined the R.C.A. He was wounded at Passchaendale in 1917. On his return from overseas he attended Toronto University where he was an honor graduate in chemistry and minerology. He also received his degree of B. Paed. there. He was Professor of Pedagogy at Mount Allison University, Sackville, N.B. He taught Science at Oshawa Collegiate and at Jarvis Collegiate in Toronto. He had previous editorial experience which equips him for his new duties.

RAWDON

Pte. Alfred Powell Writes How He Spent Christmas in Italy

Rawdon—The following excerpts were taken from a letter which has been received from Pte. Alfred Powell who is with the Canadian army in the Mediterranean area. Pte. Powell spent a few years in this district and his friends will be interested to read about him. The letter was written on January 5th a few yards from the water's edge of the Adriatic Sea.

"Well I spent Christmas Day in a barn which we were glad to get in as it was raining. That morning I received a parcel from my wife and Christmas night we found a house with a stove in it and we got a kind of a dinner.

We had canned turkey, boiled potatoes, cabbage, date pudding with melted chocolate bars for sauce, tea and cake. When we finished eating we went back to the barn to sleep. We could hear the boys at the front still fighting to take the town which was about three miles away."

"The other night I was writing to my brother in India and 'Jerry started to shell the town where we were staying. About eleven o'clock several came over and then one took the shutters off the window so decided to move for the night to a cave in the valley and everybody dressed and took their blankets and rifle to the cave."

Point Traverse

Point Traverse—Commercial fishermen residing here are harvesting ice from South Bay waters, which is used for icing fresh caught lake fish during the season.

Strong northeast winds have driven a large field of floe ice in between the Duck Islands, which extends for several miles into the eastern part of Lake Ontario.

Milford school, which was closed several days due to an epidemic of scarlet fever, has been reopened.

Owing to a water shortage, two saw mills at Milford are unable to operate at the present time. It is not likely that until the spring thaws commence will the mills be able to run.

Their whitefish nets locked in ice-covered South Bay waters, fishermen are waiting for a shift of favorable winds that they may retrieve them.

The season's first blizzard swept across this area on Sunday piling high drifts of snow in the roads.

RECEPTION

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Bondy (nee Hilda Reid), 26 Johnson St., will be at home to their friends and nieghbors who wish to call on Wednesday and Thursday from 8-10 p.m. this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Whytock, Madoc, have received a cable from their daughter, Lieut. (N. S.) Jean Whytock, saying she had arrived overseas.

Mrs. L. Allore is progressing satisfactorily after a major operation at the Belleville General Hospital.

The many friends of Mrs. Jean Wilson, wife of Flt. Sgt. Wilson will be glad to know that she has left the Belleville Hospital and is convalescing at the home of her uncle, Mr. Harvey Scott, Point Anne.

On Tuesday afternoon during the weekly euchre held at the home of Mrs. S. Bushill, Donald St., Mrs. L. Ceigler was presented with a lovely decorated cake and a silver casserole pie plate in honor of the 42nd anniversary of her wedding. After everyone had chorused "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow," a delicious lunch was served by the hostess. On Saturday, Mrs. Ceigler also received a silver cheese and cracker dish from her sister, Mrs. F. Shortt.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Ketcheson entertained a few of their friends on Saturday evening at their home, 8th Con. of Thurlow, it being the occasion of their 25th wedding anniversary.

A delightful St. Valentine party was held Monday night at the home of Mrs. Ralph Batty, 13 Frank St., when friends arranged the evening following her confinement to her home through illness for the past four weeks. The party was a complete surprise and the guests enjoyed themselves at cards. The winners were, Miss. Theda Shoebridge, Miss Jean Neverey and Mrs. Maurice Dulmage as consolation winner. Following a dainty lunch served by the hostesses, Mrs. Batty was given a seat of honor and presented with appropriate valentines for which she expressed her thanks to the various guests.

The Knights of Columbus held a Valentine social evening on Monday night in their club rooms on Front St. The party was spent in playing euchre, the prize winners being, Ladies, Mrs. F. Domenico, Mrs. F. High and Mrs. G. Clapp; Men's, Mr. F. Domenico, Mr. W. Westfall and Sgt. J. Mitchell. The merrymakers were also entertained with a short skit called "Romeo and Juliet," starring Bernard Scanlan as the famous lover of fiction and Bob Temple in the feminine role of Juliet. Sergt. Mitchell played the piano for a round of community singing. The door prize was won by Mr. Ed. Thomas and the special prize winners were Mrs. George Lee, Mrs. A. Cruji, Mrs. Harris and Mrs. B. Root.

Sgt. Pilot Ronald Aston, Ilford, Essex County, England, spent the weekend with his aunt, Mrs. Roy Hinchey, Dufferin Ave.

Friends of Mrs. Catherine Juby, 14 Jones St., will be sorry to learn she is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Gordon Hubbs, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hubbs, who underwent an operation on his right eye in the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday, is progressing satisfactorily.

WEDDINGS

BOWERMAN—BOND

Picton, Feb. 16—A wedding of wide interest was solemnized at St. Michael's Rectory, Belleville, on Saturday, when Miss Helen Bond, daughter of Mr. James Bond and the late Mrs. Bond was united in marriage to Alva E. Bowerman, all of Picton. Rev. A. E. O'Donnell officiated at the quiet ceremony. The attendants were the bride's father and her sister, Miss Catherine Bond. Mr. Bowerman is sherriff of Prince Edward County. After a short trip, Mr. and Mrs. Bowerman will reside on his farm near Picton.

BOOTH — BRANSCOMBE

Picton, Feb. 16 — Snapdragons decorated the church of St. Mary Magdalene for the marriage at two o'clock on Saturday of Mary Kathleen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Branscombe, Spencer St., Picton and Sgt. John Henry Booth, R.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Booth, Oxford, England. Rev. W. G. Hope Swayne officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length dress of white with satin fitted top, sweetheart neckline, full net skirt over satin. Her floor-length veil of embroidered net was held by a cluster of white flowers. She also wore a strand of pearls and carried a nosegay of red and white carnations.

Miss Audia Way was bridesmaid and wore blue chiffon with a fingertip veil held by rosebuds. She carried pink carnations. PO. Peter J. R. Viney, R.A.F., whose home is at Bournemouth, England, was groomsman. Wedding music was played by Frank Bronskill and ushers were Sgt. S. E. Beesley and Sgt. G. Richardson.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. For travelling to points east, the bride donned a blue dress with black accessories. On their return they will reside on Centre, St., Picton.

Women's Activities

UNITED P.E.-BELLEVILLE CLUB

The United Prince Edward-Belleville Women's Club spent a delightful afternoon at the home of Mrs. Frank Lent, Bleecker Ave., when cozy rooms and a warm welcome from the hostess contrasted sharply with the chilly wintry day. Mrs. Weese presided. The program convener put on a contest, "Our Popular Soaps" and two humorous readings were enjoyed. Dues were paid and officers re-elected for the coming year. A delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Lent and her assistants. As the club was organized just a year ago, Mrs. Lent presented a birthday cake bearing one tall red candle, which was blown out by Mrs. Weese. Mrs. Will Barber also celebrated her birthday and "Happy Birthday" was sung in her honor. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Lent for her hospitality and the meeting closed with the "Mispah."

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Faces and Figures

If you were to be born into the world again, and had your choice, which would you rather possess—a pretty face or a beautiful figure? Ask that question the next time some of your friends drop in for the evening. There will be an abundance of lively conversation.

You can put up as good an argument on one side as the other. If a girl hasn't a charming silhouette, she will lack chic and style. Unless posture is snappy, her clothes will be just that much dry goods transferred from the shop to personal display. Posture conveys a suggestion of spirit or lack of it, but it is the face that one reads character, knows at a glance whether a girl is sweet as honey or sour as a lemon.

Speaking of a society leader in one of our large cities, a woman said:

"Mrs. A has the most beautiful arms, back and shoulders I have ever gazed upon."

Her friend remarked, "I never noticed them. Whenever I've seen her, my mind centred on the fact that her face carries an expression of discontent and arrogance."

Pretty face or lovely figure? A woman can use both in the business of living.

It is a pity, but defects catch the eye first. That's why we should catch them before they get worse. Unpleasant emotions wreck many a good-looking countenance, stamp ugly marks upon it. That seems unnecessary. A little self control, more tolerance, greater sympathy for the failings of our fellow creatures, will help the face to stay young, carry a glow of tranquillity.

There's no call for giving all attention to the figure and little attention to the face, or turnabout. There's no sense in wondering which means the most—face or figure—in summing total attractiveness. The thing to do is to regard the composition that is you with a critical, intelligent eye and make such improvements as are possible.

Keep all your beauty kettles boiling. Because you must sliver down fatted calves, you don't have to let your hair go fuzzy. Even the girls in the primary beauty class know that.

Any number of beauty qualities are within finger reach—a soft, lovely voice, scrupulous cleanliness and daintiness, freshness of appearance, gracious manners, graceful movements, interesting conversation; all these are the backbone and substance of charm.

Women are funny. One dumpling-shaped dear will gobble bonbons, fling money away wildly on complexion and hair. Another will buy every reducing contrivance in the land, yet never give a thought to her appearance north of her Adam's apple. It beats us!

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How Can a Man Come to His Senses When He Hasn't Any Sense?

Strange human documents come to this column. Here's a man with a devoted wife and two children, who falls in love with a girl, and says he "never knew what love was before." (Pardon the old gag.)

He courts this girl and doesn't tell her he's married. He demands a divorce from his wife, probably because she has always given in to him. His argument is he doesn't intend to tell the girl anything about his wife and children until after he is free.

When his wife says she must tell her mother so she can go home and take the children with her 'til she can earn enough to stand on her own feet, he demands the same reticence as he does concerning his courtship. Similarly he objects to his own mother knowing anything 'til he's free.

His wife tells me she has been through the direst poverty with this husband, living on bread and tea for days, staying in bed to keep warm when there was no coal. Now that he has an excellent job, obtained through the influence of her family, he wants to share his prosperity with this new love. The wife asks me: "What sense do you make out of my husband's demands?"

My reply is I never look for sense in the senseless.

Do you remember the old fairy tale of Patient Griselda? The worse her husband treated her, the harder she smiled, and the more idiotically she forgave his behaviour. Without doubt this distracted wife has a larger dose of "Patient Griselda" in her makeup than is good for her or good for her husband.

In her letter she states that time after time she decided to leave her marital prize when she found evidence of flagrant infidelity, but she always hoped he'd do better. She forgot that weak and self-indulgent people never do better. They've no sense of obligation except to themselves and no sense of obligation to girls they court and are too cowardly to tell they've a wife and children at home.

My correspondent shouldn't lose a moment in telling her own mother and the man's mother the state of things at home. Tell the girl, too, if she can find her, the man is married.

Belleville Musicians Awarded Honors In Music Festival

Take Part in First Annual Kiwanis Music Competitions in Toronto

Five pupils of Rev. Sister M. Bibiana, teacher at the St. Michael's Music Studio, registered as piano solo contestants in the Toronto Festival and all five gained honor standing.

Entrants in the Mozart competition for the 14-year-old class, were Miss Barbara Forhan, Miss Rose Marie Scanlon and Mr. Ralph Beasley. All three gained first and second class honors and were complimented for their high standard of performance by the adjudicator, Max Pirani, Vancouver, professor at the Royal Academy of Music.

Thirteen-year-old Joan Kay, talented young musician who competed with some forty others in the role of Haydn's "Arietta Con Variazione" got first-class honors and fifth place in the order of merit.

Donna Marie Cameron, contestant in the piano solo class for those 8 years old, captivated the judges and large audience by her finished style of playing and her winning personality. She won first-class honors and ranked third in a class of thirty-five.

More than 4,000 competitors from 64 localities participated in this first Kiwanis Festival sponsored by the Toronto branches of this organization and 712 of these competitors entered as piano solo contestants. This splendid enterprise, which proved such an outstanding success, will make music history for the City of Toronto.

Those who were privileged to take part from the City of Belleville, will be stimulated to a more intelligent standard of performance in the great art of piano playing. Friends of these promising musicians will follow with keen interest their advances in the realm of music. While great credit is due these performers, the gratifying proof of their ability is due largely to the inspiration, constant supervision and loyal co-operation of their parents who, with the vast majority, realize the cultural value of music in the home.

Form 10A Students Enjoy Jolly Party

Students of Form XA, Belleville Collegiate, twenty-four in number, spent a jolly evening Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Button, 40 North Park St. Owing to the inclement weather, the original plans for skating and a scavenger hunt had to be cancelled. The evening was spent in dancing, the music being supplied by Dorothy Dobbs and Mrs. Button, while some of the boys and girls played table tennis. The winners of two spot dances were Allan Galbraith and Barbara Robson, Bob Barlow and Marietta Sandercock. Mr. Davidson, form master, joined the group during the evening. Miss Gene Button came home from Brighton to be with the happy crowd. On behalf of the pupils, Mr. Davidson presented Mrs. Button with a box of chocolates and a very pretty handkerchief. Several of the girls helped in serving the refreshments and the party broke up soon after midnight.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Graduation Gifts

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

As High School graduation draws near, I wish you would please answer these questions about thanking for graduation gifts. Should all gifts be thanked for by notes? For example, when an older woman, say a friend of my mother's who lives in our city, sends me a graduation gift, how should I express my appreciation? Should I (1) telephone her to thank her, (2) go to see her to thank her, or (3) write and mail a thank-you note to her? Your answer is to be on our Bulletin.

A Senior.

One of the most significant things that your diploma is going to mean to your relatives and friends is that NOW you will be expected to write a good letter. Good handwriting, good letter-form, good letter-personality. Else why, they will wonder, did you deserve that diploma?

So if they give you the pleasure of receiving a gift from them, they will expect you to give them the pleasure of receiving a letter of appreciation from you. And they'll expect you to show your graduation achievement in writing an especially fine letter, to show your good manners in writing it promptly, and to show your sure sense of appreciation by thanking first for their kind thought, then for the gift, and then commenting enthusiastically about particular features of the gift.

No waiting until you chance to see them or go to see them to say the words you should write. No "ducking" of your letter writing duty by casually telephoning your thanks. You can go to see them or telephone them after you've written your thank-you notes . . . then you and they will have a better and more comfortable time if you are fortified by the thought that you "mind your manners."

For An Informal Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My daughter is to have an informal wedding in our church parlor, with only the members of the immediate families present. Is it customary to invite the pastor and his wife to the wedding dinner? We are not very well acquainted with his wife.

2. How should I introduce the pastor to the bridegroom's mother? He has D.D. after his name.

J. R.

1. It isn't necessary for you to invite the pastor and his wife to the wedding dinner. (1) He won't expect to be invited, since the dinner is to be only for the members of the families. And (2) since they are not both close friends of yours, they would not expect to be included in such an intimate family group of guests.

2. Say, "Mrs. Allen, may I present Doctor Worthy." If further explanation is needed (and it probably won't be, unless her name differs from her son's), you may add, "Doctor Worthy, Mrs. Allen is Tom's mother."

Don't Call Them by First Names

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am 19 years old and "go steady" with a boy in the service. I see his mother and father very often, and I am wondering if I am correct in calling them by their first names, instead of "Mr." and "Mrs." Am I?

R. A.

No; you have no right to call this mother and father by their first names unless they definitely give you this right. I hope your haven't already done this.

'Triangle Times' Staff Sponsors Valentine Dance

The staff of the Red Triangle Hostess Club newspaper "Triangle Times" sponsored a formal dance in the Trianon Ballroom on Tuesday night in honor of the good "Saint Valentine," when all the groups of this organization entertained Air Force personnel of the district stations.

The girls, all decked out in their formal attire, mingling and dancing with the boys in Air Force blue, to the music of the Melody Makers Band from Trenton Airport presented a very festive and exceedingly attractive scene. Adding to the gaiety of the atmosphere were the decorations of the dance hall, adorned with red and white hearts, cupids and all the finery of St. Valentine's Day.

In honor of Mr. Ron Hupfield, who is leaving the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville to go overseas in that particular capacity, Miss Mary Moult, on behalf of the club, presented him with a leather writing case and an identification bracelet. Ron, in turn, introduced to everyone his successor in the person of Mr. Harold McKaig.

Red Cross Tea Given by C.W.L. Is Gala Affair

The Knights of Columbus rooms, arranged with decorations in the color schemes of red and white, was the setting for a Red Cross tea under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League on Tuesday afternoon. The affair proved a great success with very gratifying results realised.

Receiving the guests were Mrs. George Wilson, President of the league and Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick, Red Cross convener, and inviting them into the tea room was Miss Kate Dolan.

The tea table was beautifully arranged for the occasion, spread with an ivory lace cloth, flanked with tall white tapers in silver candelabra and centred with a silver basket of red tulips and buddleia. Pouring tea were Mrs. James Lynch, Mrs. W. R. Thompson, Mrs. A. B. Collins and Mrs. Bulger.

Assisting with the arrangements for the social were Mrs. T. Morrell, Mrs. T. J. Flurey, Mrs. W. Allore, Mrs. V. McIntyre, Mrs. J. V. Boyle, Mrs E. Logan, Mrs. P. J. Lynch, Mrs. S. Upper, Mrs. James McAuley, Mrs. F. VanNorman and Mrs. M. Stork.

In charge of the homecooking table were Mrs. W. Frawley, Mrs. J. F. Thomas, Mrs. G. Boyd and Mrs. J. J. O'Connor.

Bridge and euchre were played during the course of the afternoon, for which Mrs. E. Finkle planned the arrangements. Winners for bridge were Mrs. Harold Bateman, Mrs. John McIntosh and consolation, Mrs. Ferguson. The lucky women for euchre were Mrs. T. Mascaro and Mrs. C. Lattone, while the travelling prize went to Mrs. M. Donovan. The draw on the bouquet of flowers was won by Mrs. F. VanNorman.

SEEN EVERYWHERE according to report, is the frock made with the sleek, unbelted overblouse top, somewhat on the order of a middy or jumper. Nice in dark brown crepe, the overblouse edged with brown taffeta piping where it joins the skirt, the piping ending in a smashing big taffeta bow at the sides.

DROP BLOCKBUSTERS ON BEACHHEAD

For the first time in warfare, giant R.A.F. four-engined bombers, such as are shown here, have been put into action by the Allies in Italy. Capable of carrying "blockbuster" missiles, they are giving fine support to the hard-pressed ground forces.

We Are Winning Second Round Of Battle of Beachhead

—Alexander

By DANIEL DE LUCE
(AP War Correspondent)

On the Anzio Beachhead, Italy, Feb. 16. (AP)—Gen. Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of Allied armies in Italy, declared Monday that "we are winning the second round of the battle of the beachhead".

Using strong, unqualified language to express the conviction that the Anzio landings would lead to success, the general gave the clearest statement on the beachhead situation yet made by any high military source.

"We won the first round with our surprise landing—a beauty!" Gen. Alexander said "I assure you the Germans opposite us here are a very unhappy party. As Kesselring (Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring, commander of German forces in Italy) once said, if you allow the enemy to consolidate a bridgehead, then the enemy will keep it.

Germans Realize Battle Lost.

"The Germans realize they've lost the battle though events have not gone as swifty as we ourselves hoped", he continued. "Had everything been perfect, we might have gone straight through to Rome in the first round".

Gen. Alexander said he had been upset by reports that Press dispatches had alarmed the home public, and asserted: "There's no basis for pessimistic rubbish".

He stated that "we are near the end of the second round, and we are winning it. The third round will come when we've built up for a strong push, gathered our forces, and start our punch."

He added confidently: "We will pull it off."

Not Comparable to Dunkirk Or Salerno.

He remarked that the situation here is not comparable to Dunkirk or Salerno.

"I was at both places. This is different. I've been in a good many battles since the summer of 1942—from Alamein to Anzio and none has been lost", he said. "I see no reason why we should lose this one".

His statement that the Allied amphibious force is on the way now to winning the second round—that is, defeating German efforts to wipe out the beachhead, appeared substantiated by the disappearance of fierce German pressure since last Thursday.

His forecast that the Allied force would be reinforced so powerfully that it would ultimately break out of the German siege ring and march toward Rome was the most cheering statement fighting men here could possibly receive.

A jeep whisked Alexander from division to division, from brigade to brigade. He talked to men of all ranks and at the Press Conference praised the troops' fighting spirit and morale.

25 Lost When Ship Crashes on Rock

Portsmouth, N. H., Feb. 16—(AP)—Twenty-five members of the crew of 45 on a 7,244-ton British freighter were lost when the ship struck Boon Island ledge, about 12 miles off York, Me., in a driving blizzard Public Relations Office disclosed today, with approval of the British admiralty.

The motor vessel crashed onto rock at 2:23 p.m., E.D.T. and, pounded all night by terrific seas, broke up Saturday morning with the forward half remaining fast on the ledge and the aft half floating away to sink later, Chief Engineer Svend Haagensen related in an interview.

Rescue ships stood by but could not get close enough to take off the men. The rescue craft, including Coast Guard and U. S. Naval vessels, rendered daring service, however, in picking up survivors from the tempest-ridden seas. Thirteen bodies were recovered later.

Thirteen of the survivors were taken to Portland, Me., and seven more were brought into Portsmouth. Nearly all required hospital treatment.

Chaplin Relieved Of One Burden

Los Angeles, Feb. 16 (AP) — Charlie Chaplin's slim shoulders, weighted beneath a series of criminal and civil actions, were relieved today of one burden—red-haired Joan Berry's charges that he is the father of her four-months-old daughter.

Counsel for Chaplin and Miss Berry adopted the verdict of a medical board that the 54-year-old British-born actor was not the father of the child, as she had alleged in a paternity suit against him.

"Under the terms of our stipulation the decision is conclusive," said J. J. Irwin, attorney for Miss Berry, 24, who bore the baby, Carol Ann, last October. "We must and will abide by the doctors' decision.

Chaplin had denied paternity but paid Miss Berry some $15,000 for medical expenses and agreed to undergo a blood test to settle the matter.

Chaplin, with six others, also is charged in Grand Jury indictments with having conspired to compel Miss Berry to leave California after a quarrel at the actor's Beverly Hills home.

Unsuitable Publicity Goes to the 'Basket'

Montreal, Feb. 16 (CP) — Weary editors "who daily thumb their way through reams of publicity releases" today found a champion of their cause in Col. B. F. Castle, president of the Washington, D.C., Milk Industry Foundation, addressing the annual meeting of the National Dairy Council.

Col. Castle, who remarked that about 80 per cent of his own publicity ideas are "killed" before they reach the editors' desks, said:

"Editors are getting too much unreadable copy, copy that is despatched to the editors' desk without thought or reason.

"After all, no editor has the time these days to have items rewritten and what usually happens is, they are cast aside."

V.O.N. APPOINTS 1944 COMMITTEES

Educational Work is Stressed—H. B. Fetterly Named Secretary

The first regular meeting of the local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses for the year 1944 was held in the Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday night. Miss Bernice Arbuckle, in her newly appointed office as president, expressed in her opening remarks her pleasure at seeing such a large attendance and extended a welcome to the new members. Mr. H. B. Fetterly was appointed secretary following the resignation of Miss Jean Freeman. The minutes of the December meeting were read, and the general business was transacted including the reading of the bylaws and the appointment of the standing committees which are as follows:

Finance — Messrs Ed. James, T. K. Franklin, J. J. Trudeau.

Clinic—Mrs. Madill, Mrs. Brearly, Mrs. Burton, Mrs. Rutherford, Mrs. Foy, Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Lattimer, Mrs. Fetterly, Mrs. Airhart and Mr. N. Edwards.

Tag Day — Mrs. Foley, Mrs. Hitchon, Mrs. Wardner and Mrs. Lent.

Supply—Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Lynch, Mrs. Frances, Mrs. Wims, Mrs. Gilroy, Mrs. Moynes and Mrs. Campbell.

Car — Mr. Herb Fox, Mr. T. D. Ruston, Mr. L. A. Kells.

Publicity—Miss Margaret Ethier, Mrs. Airhart, Mr. T. K. Franklin.

Representatives to National Office — Miss B. Arbuckle, Mr. E. S. James and Mr. T. K. Franklin.

Committee Working Unit.

Miss E. M. Gordon, in giving the Nurses' Report for the month, said that the Victorian Order Committee is a working unit and contains the machinery to make the wheels go round in this visiting nursing organization. She expressed her appreciation of the assistance she received from all the organization's members when she requested it. In thinking of the importance of the V.O.N. Board Member, Miss Gordon thought it fitting to quote from an address given at last year's annual meeting of the V.O.N. for Canada by Mrs. Pembroke, a member of the Montreal Board. Mrs. Pembroke said in part: "We, as Board members and volunteers, need to recognize how important our contribution has been over the years—how as advisors and planners, many times behind the scenes, we have helped to build a strong Home Front, for professional workers alone and single handed could not have done it. Our part has been to see that their schemes have reached fruition, theirs to show us the need. During the war, we have had to sell the Home Front in our community chest campaigns—we must raise even more money to progress, in spite of the huge demands of war. This is the Board member's job."

Need of Extension.

"A new awareness of better health for everyone challenges us of the V.O.N. Boards. I sometimes am very worried about the curtailment of some of our educational work, when government health plans are becoming increasingly important. I think on us, as lay people, and as members of the V.O.N., rests a great responsibility to see that our service is extended rather than curtailed, that proposed legislation meets a need and is sound, and to study carefully all the implications of the new plans. We must believe that our contribution to the post-war world can only be great as our knowledge of our own community and of Canada as a whole is great. I think that without glamor or fanfare, without even complete public understanding of our work, the V.O.N. will carry on its appointed task believing that it is part of the keystone of the nation's social services."

A Nurse's Day.

For the interest of everyone Miss Gordon gave an account of a nurse's day in the district concerning the visiting nursing service. "The work is never dull," she said, "and there is never a day which does not call on the nurse's tact and resourcefulness." In January 523 calls were made and 95 new cases admitted. Three home confinements were attended. A number of mothers and new babies were admitted on return from hospital for care and supervision and many ill patients were given nursing care. As usual, a number of the calls were to homes of the families of the servicemen.

During the month, whooping cough immunization series, which was started in November, was completed, 55 children receiving their three doses of the vaccine. 103 babies and pre-schoolers attended the Child Health Conference which is held at the Kiwanis Centre each Friday afternoon.

The approval to give a month's student experience in May to a nurse taking her Public Health postgraduate course at Toronto University was granted.

FISHING SEASON SUCCESSFUL

Chatham, N.B., Feb. 16. (CP)—The smelt fishing season which closed on New Brunswick's north shore last night was the most successful in years, fishermen having received from 12 to 15 cents per pound—the highest prices since the First Great War. The catch was larger than usual, and favorable weather resulted in practically no damage to nets or other gear.

WHERE DESPERATE BATTLE RAGES

Here's a close-up of the Anzio-Nettuno beachhead area in Italy, where the Nazis are hurling everything they have at the Fifth Army forces. Here the Allies are fighting a crucial battle to hold off growing numbers of German men and tanks seeking desperately to drive the Allies back into the sea. The black line indicates the battle section and the arrow breaking through the line points to Aprilia, where the fighting has been most desperate and which Germans claim to have captured. Other arrows show points at which Nazi pressure is aimed.

Veteran Airman of Early War Period Tells of Experiences to Men's Club

Former operational tactics of R.A.F. medium bomber squadron crews when raiding enemy targets in occupied Europe and in Germany were related to members of St. Andrew's Men's Club at their regular monthly dinner meeting, Tuesday evening, when they were addressed by Flying Officer Charles Cleland, D.F.M., of Mountain View.

Member of the R.A.F. since prior to the opening of the present war, P/O. Cleland was a full-fledged wireless air gunner when hostilities broke out in 1939; he acted as crew member of reconnaissance units over Germany at the outset of the war, saw action during Dunkirk, and since has bombed many of the German strongholds along the invasion coast. He is a native of the Montreal district and went to England in 1938, on a cattle boat to enlist in the R.A.F.

Speaking of life in France prior to whirlwind attack of the German army upon the lowlands, the speaker intimated the French had felt safe behind their Maginot Line stronghold. They had the R.A.F., the British Navy and the French Army of seven millions of men. The whole picture changed abruptly with the German attack.

Flew at 'Low Depth'

Then the R.A.F. reconnaisance planes were called up to fly at "low depth" over enemy territory to determine the advance of the German Army. Returning pilots were interrogated by Lord Gort and other high ranking army officials and the movements of Allied forces to best cope with the opposition. So rapid had been the German advance that it was hard to find where the Nazis were headed.

"We saw refugees streaming down the road for days", recounted the decorated flier who now is on instructional duty at Mountain View. "First would come the Rolls Royces, then horses and carts and finally refugees afoot. At Amiens we were cut off and I made my escape on a bicycle in company with Lord Gloucester".

Assisted at Dunkirk.

After four days leave in England the speaker was back on the job assisting in the protection of the evacuation from Dunkirk. He made ten flights over that embattled area and then was detailed for duty to France until the time of the French capitulation.

Experienced R.A.F. airmen were almost worked to death in those hectic days during the aerial battle for Britain. So short of adequate machines and fliers following the French capitulation and before the battle of Britain that pilots often took off to chase German planes without guns in their aircraft. "It was just a big bluff," stated the speaker. Only experienced crews were permitted to go aloft to battle the Luftwaffe during the battle of Britain.

Flying Officer Cleland had helped bomb the German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst while they were tied up at Brest and often raided the submarine base at Lorient. "We knew we couldn't do much damage to the battleships" he said. "They had 17 inches of armor over their decks and no bombs of that time would pierce it. All we could do was blow off the superstructure."

The escape of the two battleships up the channel had been planned for months according to the speaker. Germans had waited until heavy fog shrouded their movements and had a full day's start before the R.A.F. discovered the ships were on the move. The Luftwaffe had 1,000 fighter planes spotted along the coast to provide aerial protection.

Operation of Bombing Squadron.

The flier went into detail of the operation of a bombing squadron at that time. A squadron may consist of any number of planes but only about one-third of the total strength would be sent out on operations. Another third would be kept in reserve and the remainder would be in repair. Discipline of aircrew was almost an absent quality in England. "Those boys know what they have to do and want to be treated as men," he said. "The good commanding officer realizes this."

Flying discipline was another thing entirely, however. Perfect timing on a bombing mission was absolutely essential as they must never be late on a bombing mission. Tribute was paid to the officers in charge of planning big bombing operations. Everything was worked out in detail, including formation, time of arrival and departure from the target.

Tricky Enemy.

German fighter pilots during the early war period were smart. A group of fighters would attempt to lure away the fighter escort accompanying British bombers, then other fighters would swoop in to shoot down the bomb carrying craft. Also on the return to home bases, German fighters would attack unsuspecting British crews at the coast. British crews learned by experience.

"Air Force officials appreciate that planes and men must be lost if wars are to be won," concluded FO. Cleland. "But despite the dangers there are no breakdowns in aircrew spirit unless caused through overwork or as the result of fatigue. Then civilians don't really understand what has happened. True the boys get scared, but they are not afraid."

S. Gordon Robertson introduced the speaker, with W. S. Turner expressing the club appreciation.

The meeting took the form of the club annual with Vice President H. B. Stock presiding in the absence of "Hick" Fairbairn. Election of officers was conducted by Mr. Robertson with the following being appointed. President, H. B. Stock; Vice President, W. S. Turner; Treasurer, Lorne McDougall and Secretary D. Fleming. Jack Deacon acted as song leader and Mrs. W. S. Turner as pianist.

No Comment Made By Soviet Union On Finn Rumors

Moscow, Feb. 16—(AP)—The Soviet Union had no official comment today on reports abroad that Finland is seeking peace terms.

The Russians have received full reports on Finnish shelling of Leningrad and other participation in the war at the side of Germany. Thus the people regard the Finns with almost the same hatred as they have for the Germans.

The Russians certainly would insist on hard terms to end the war.

People in Moscow seem to be taking the view that, with Leningrad liberated, the Red Army can crush Hitler's northern ally when it chooses and measure Finland's punishment solely as an army affair.

Mussolini Says He's Like Japs In Dooming Ciano

Berne, Feb. 16 —(AP)— Benito Mussolini says he's like a Japanese warrior and hopes Japan will understand his attitude toward the execution of his son-in-law, Count Ciano.

Der Bund of Chiasso told today of an interview between Mussolini and a Japanese correspondent.

"I had to sentence him (Ciano) to death since I, exactly as a Japanese warrior, put honor above everything else," Mussolini was quoted as saying. "I am sure the Japanese nation will understand my conduct."

INSOLENT NOTE SENT BY GERMANY STIRS ARGENTINA

Nearly Brought Country to War With Reich and Precipitated Ouster

MINISTERS RESIGN

Montevideo, Uruguay, Feb. 16 (AP). — Germany's curt protest against detention of the German military attache, Gen. Friedrich Wolff, brought Argentina close to war with the Reich last week, a diplomatic source said today, and precipitated yesterday's palace revolution ousting foreign minister Gen. Alberto Gilbert.

This source, conversant with the swiftly-moving events in Argentina, gave this version:

Germany on Friday sent an insolent note to Argentina through the Swiss government. The note declared that charges of Nazi espionage in Argentina were a "lie", and that Germany would hold Argentina responsible for treatment accorded to Wolff. It threatened reprisals against Argentine diplomatic representatives in Nazi-controlled territories.

Gilbert angrily demanded a declaration of war against Germany, and rupture of relations with Spain on grounds it also was implicated in Axis espionage in Argentina.

But he was unable to persuade the Nationalist officers to agree to war. There were signs of unusual military preparations in Argentina during this time.

Gilbert and two other state officials were forced to resign as a result.

Left In Precarious Situation.

President General Pedro Ramirez himself apparently was left in a precarious situation by the coup, engineered by a group of reactionary army officers who seized control of the foreign ministry.

The sudden turn of events caused Gustavo Martinez Zuviria, who had resigned earlier as minister of justice and education because of his opposition to the break with the Axis, to withdraw his resignation, advices from Buenos Aires said. Former Minister of Interior General Luis Perlinger was reported to have taken similar action. Resignation of Foreign Minister Alberto Gilbert, Presidential Secretary Gonzalez who controlled the press and radio, and of Foreign Undersecretary Oscar Ibarri Garcia were announced by the president's office last night.

Four-Day Indoor Carnival Planned By the Argylls

A number of particulars have been released concerning the coming indoor carnival to be held in the Belleville Armouries on March 1st., 2nd., 3rd., and 4th. The show is to be under the personal direction of Mr. Bill Garden who conducts the grandstand performances at the Belleville Fair, being greatly interested in this project.

The profits derived from the carnival will be put into the Regimental Fund and will be used to supply sports equipment, entertainment and other necessities the Department of National Defence does not furnish the Reserve Army. Under the general chairmanship of Col. B. C. Donnan, chairman of all committees, Lieut. Orloff Lloyd will officiate as chairman of the carnival, Lieutenants E. Shapiro and J. Marvell, Sergt.-Maj. Ted Schwab and Sergt. Bruce Lattimer will serve as daily chairmen. Major B. O. Sisler will control the proceeds of the carnival as chairman of finance.

A free performance will be held for school children at 4.15 p.m. on Wednesday, March 1st., at which time a full show will be arranged for their entertainment.

Games of all descriptions will be run for the profit of the players and the Regimental Fund. Dancing will follow the evening stage show with music by the orchestra accompanying the artists who are coming with the show. The C.W.S.F. will be in charge of the canteen during the four days and four door prizes of five dollars each will be given each night. Admission will be twenty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children.

King George Home and School Club Observes 13th Anniversary

The thirteenth anniversary of the founding of the King George Home and School Club was observed at the regular monthly meeting of the association members held Monday evening in the school auditorium. Befitting the occasion, fourteen candles decorated the tables, one of them in honor of the club founder, Mrs. Courtice, and all being lighted by past-presidents of the association.

Guest speaker for the evening was a member of the Board of Education, Mr. H. B. Fetterly, who spoke on "Education and Its Relation to Health." He stated that education started at birth and continued throughout life. It was the outgrowth of Christian religion with civilization being dependent upon Christianity. Religion was based upon two commands, namely, the love of God and the love of neighbors.

To be successful in the imparting of knowledge to young children, a school teacher must be saturated with the love of God, according to Mr. Fetterly. A healthy body was necessary for a healthy mind, he said.

Reflecting his knowledge of Children's Aid Work and of the V.O.N., Mr. Fetterly cited instances of malnutrition and bad housing conditions which had been noted throughout the county. Lack of cleanliness and sanitation had also been noted. Bad relationship between parents created problem children, it was held. The speaker highly commended the work of the junior Red Cross organizations in the schools and advocated a full-time medical health officer for the city, and a unit of nurses to join with the Children's Aid Society and the V.O.N. to bring about better health conditions.

The public school band, under the leadership of music director, Mr. George Maybee, provided the entertainment for the evening, a special feature being a cornet solo by Jack Fenn. The splendid progress of the school band under Mr. Maybee's directorship was commented upon by the evening chairman.

Mention was made of the school project and of the work of the pupils in assisting in the purchase of new blinds for the assembly hall. The pupils raised $23 through paper salvage and sales of the school paper, "The Courier," and including a donation of $1.40 by two girls, Marjorie Ingram and Myrtle Reid. The girls staged a party at the home of Myrtle's mother, with Mrs. Reid supplying the refreshments. A report of the War Service Unit was given by Mrs. Vandervoort, it being revealed two complete layettes had been acknowledged and with three others completed. There was also a good balance. Mrs. Ward announced the next meeting would take the form of a discussion on child problems. The attendance prize was won by Miss Wedden's room.

Attending at the meeting was Mr. L. A. Kells, principal for city schools and Mr. Wallace and Mr. Anderson of Ann St. School. The Queen Alexandra movie projector was used to screen two films which were interesting and instructional. Principal Charles Brown expressed the appreciation of the association to the guest speaker of the evening, to the band and its leader, Mr. Maybee and to the two officials from Ann St. School.

Only Short Time Left in Which To Donate to HMCS Belleville Fund

There is, of course, a lot more to making a navy than merely building ships. The best-built ships in the world would be useless without well-trained crews of hard-working and healthy men, with a full knowledge of the jobs they have to do. The navy trains these men to take their places aboard the vessels of the Royal Canadian Navy and uphold the traditions they have inherited from the greatest navy of all, the Royal Navy. They are trained to withstand hardships quite unknown to the average warrior of either army or air force, to fight a fight where there is no turning back should the going get too rough, where there is no cover to which men might turn for protection. These are truly brave men.

Somewhere in the Dominion of Canada there are men and young boys being trained to take their places aboard the "BELLEVILLE" when she is commissioned. Perhaps they are not being trained for this specific ship, but there are other corvettes coming off the ways of the shipyards across Canada, ships that are exact replicas of what the "BELLEVILLE" will be. Today they are enjoying the pleasures and comforts of their homes, the security of a peaceful night's sleep, good food and the hundred and one small incidentals that go to make life pleasant. These men are preparing right now to give up all these things to ship aboard a corvette, some to the "BELLEVILLE" where their life will take on an austerity next to severity. With the expenditure of a few hundreds of dollars, we in the City of Belleville can equip their future home in such a manner that some, if not all of the things they have left will be provided for them.

About $900 is still needed to complete the H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" Fund. This sum will buy warm clothes; along with the amount already subscribed by citizens in Belleville it will give the men and officers a radio, a washing machine, electric irons, furniture of a comfortable type for relaxation when off watch, equip a library and supply sundry articles not furnished by the naval department which will give every man aboard the feeling that there ARE people at home who have not forgotten him. Belleville should be proud of her desire to make the "BELLEVILLE" the finest ship in the Canadian Navy.

Weather conditions point to a rather uncomfortable Tag Day on Saturday. There are several groups of women's organizations, lodges and clubs in the city who are going to be standing on the street corners during the business hours. Support them by buying a H.M.C.S. "BELLEVILLE" tag. A dime or a quarter is not much, but every one will go toward making this project a first-class success. Support those who protect you.

Plastic Surgery Patients Welcome 'Jam Sessions'

London, Feb. 16—(CP)—Nothing cheers patients at a plastic surgery hospital in England so much as visits from their fellow airmen and airwomen, and each weekend members of the R.C.A.F. from London headquarters, laden with musical instruments, candy, cigarets and good will invade the hospital.

The latest "jam session" was put on by LAC.'s Harold Duffield, Guelph, Ont.; Bob Burns, Perth, Ont.; Stewart Sanders, Windsor, Ont.; Carson Martin, Toronto and Siggie Johnson, Sinclair, Man., of the R.C.A.F. overseas dance orchestra.

...or how to be welcome in Newfoundland

Between the warm-hearted fisher folk of Newfoundland, Come in and sit down is the natural salutation to a friend. Just as kindly is the Have a "Coke" of the visiting Canadian soldier. In St. John's as in St. Thomas, to offer a Coca-Cola is to win a new friend. Around the world Coca-Cola is the welcome invitation to the pause that refreshes—the universal symbol of a friendly way of life.

Belleville Juveniles Advance Into Next Round of Playoffs By Defeating Trenton 7 to 4

Local Kids Win Both Games Collecting 13 Goals on Round

FIRST LINE STARS

Flashing too much hockey class all along the line, the Belleville juveniles romped home to a 7 to 4 win over Trenton at the Hume Arena Tuesday night, thus winning their round 13 to 9 and advancing to the second round of the Ontario Juvenile Hockey Association playdowns. Coch Bill Dennis' kids had won the first game of a home-and-home series, goals to count on the round, by a 6-5 score in Trenton last Friday.

The period scores were 2-1, 4-1 and finally 7-4 before a slim gallery of puck faithfuls, who were treated to some high class minor league hockey. Trenton scored the first goal of the game to knot the series at that time. However, the smoother-working Belleville sextette rallied strongly and scored the next five goals before FO. Stan Jackson's Trenton juveniles entered upon the scoring scene again. Then Trenton scored three times to bring the game count to 5 to 4 for the homesters, but the fast skating Belleville trio of Boyd, Meagher and Wardaugh cinched the piece with late counters.

Boyd Heads Scoring List

Harry Boyd, flashy Belleville centre ice play-maker, headed the scoring list with three goals and an assist, Lyall, Bishop, Green and Meagher flashing the red light once each. Scott, a Trenton junior, paced the visitors with a brace of goals, Bangay and Robertson getting the other two.

Dennis' front trio of Harry Boyd, flanked by Al Meagher and Jack Wardaugh was by far the smoothest working trio used by either squad, counting in five of the locals' seven markers. Belleville's defence of Green and Adams showed a willingness to hand out heavy bodychecks and helped to keep the score down in the first 50 minutes. Robertson, Scott, Bangay and Johnson were the pick of Coach Jackson's vanquished Trenton squad.

Ice Lightning Fast

The ice was lightning fast as less than 200 fans welcomed Belleville's strong 1944 juvenile squad in their initial home debut. Trenton took the initiative and were rewarded when Robertson scored from close in to knot the round score at six-all. For the next forty minutes it was pretty much of Belleville as Coach Dennis' home team dominated the territorial play and scored five successive goals. Jack Boyd carried the rubber right into the Trenton net for the game's equalizer with Adams starting and Jack Wardaugh passing at the blue line. Roddy Lyall raced in off left wing on Wardaugh's second successive pass and made it good to have Belleville lead 2-1 before the second period rolled around.

Hemmed Trenton In

The local trio of Boyd, Meagher and Wardaugh literally hemmed the Trenton kids into their own zone for the better half of the middle session before Boyd scored his second goal on a perfect pass from Al Meagher almost at the goal mouth. Bruce Bishop rang the bell for Belleville's fourth goal on a pass from Soule and Doug Green opened the final stanza with a beautiful solo effort as he split the defence and made no mistke once inside alone.

Trailing 5-1 Trenton rallied to score three successive goals, Scott getting two, one from Johnson and the other a strong lone effort, while Bangay rifled in Robertson's pass during a scramble in front of the Belleville net. Boyd, Al Meagher and Roddy Lyall returned to the ice with the result Belleville bounced back into the picture when Meagher made sure of Boyd's pass and on the subsequent face-off Boyd didn't hesitate from the drop of the puck until he had scored a la lone ranger. Only two minor penalties were meted out, both to Belleville.

Juniors Play Tonight

Tonight at the Hume Arena the Belleville juniors meet the Trenton juniors in the second game of the group junior O.H.A. play-offs when the locals must win to remain in the running.

The line-ups:

Belleville—Goal, Rollins; defence, Adams and Green; centre, Coleman; wings, Lyall and Bishop; subs, Meagher, Reeves, Soules, Boyd, Ostrom and Wardaugh.

Trenton—Goal, Thomson; defence, Robertson and Harvey; centre, LaMorre; wings, Couture and Johnson; subs, Barker, MacDonald, DeMille, Scott and Bangay.

Referee—"Speedy" St. Louis, of Belleville.

Summary:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1st Period | |
| Trenton, Robertson | 7.11 |
| Belleville, Boyd (Adams, Wardaugh) | 9.51 |
| Belleville, Lyall (Wardaugh) | 16.16 |

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Feb. 9—(CP)—Jot down the Falcons as the team most likely to sweep through to the Canadian Army Overseas hockey championship. Here's why:

Led by a former Toronto Maple Leaf, the club features former professional and senior-calibre players. In topping the Canadian Reinforceents League the Falcons were unbeaten in six games. They scored 38 goals and allowed only six to drift into their cage.

A couple of dashing lieutenants make up the first-string defence in Lex Chisholm of Oshawa, last season with Toronto Maple Leafs, and Moe Swords of Ottawa, an Ottawa Army team stalwart last winter. Other rearguards are Pte. J. E. Callum of Pembroke, Ont., formerly with Pembroke Lumber Kings, and Pte J. B. Brown of Medicine Hat, Alta., once of Kimberley Dynamitors.

The forward lines show plenty of skill and speed with such names as Ptes. Fred Giesbrecht of Pembroke, another Lumber King; Vince Germann of Regina, who has worn the colors of Hershey Bears and New York Rovers; Tommy Dunn of Medicine Hat, late of Trail Smoke Easters, and Andy Bruce, who started with the Elks of Brandon, Man., and later performed with Montreal Army.

Among others are Lieuts. George Hood of Gananoque, Ont., Queen's University and Kingston Hockey Club, and Chappie Chappel of Oshawa, an Olympic hockeyist with the English team before the war, and Cpl. Leo Blondin of Ottawa, who played with Hull Volants. Pte. Carl Hewitt, Kingston, guards the nets.

Coach and master-mind of the all-star outfit is Capt. Dave Campbell of Montreal, long associated there with Canadiens and Victorias. His assistant is Pte. Sammy Godin of Ottawa who played with such pro clubs as Ottawa Senators, Buffalo Bisons and Cleveland Indians.

A full-blooded Indian who can give any amateur welterweight in Britain a hard battle, Tom Settee, did the expected as his outfit, the Regina Rifles, won nine of 11 bouts in the team boxing semi-finals of a Canadian divisional unit.

The husky rifleman from Prince Albert, Sask., who took the Canadian army crown two years ago, tuned up for this spring's individual title bouts by decisioning Gnr. R. A. Siddon of Alix, Alta., member of a field regiment.

The only knockout of the semi-finals came when Sgt. E. Miller, 206-pound artilleryman from Portage La Prairie, Man., disposed of Rfmn. E. Kallichuk of Cupar Sask. in the third round. The loser participated in the 1943 Canadian Army championships.

196 Members of the American League With Armed Forces

By the Canadian Press

The annual red book of the American League, issued at Chicago yesterday, discloses 196 playing members of the eight teams now serving with the armed forces but the clubs still have a combined roster of 260 players for the 1944 season. Some of these may be lost to baseball, however, before the League opening April 21.

Survey showed Chicago and Washington Sentors to be in the best position with regard to personnel, each with 39 players, followed by New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians with 32 each. Philadelphia Athletics came through the winter with a squad of 30; Boston has 26 players while Detroit Tigers are at the bottom of the list with only 25 ball-tossers.

Becaus of limitation of movement in his right arm, Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler, pitcher of the New York Yankees, yesterday was accepted for only "limited service" in the U. S. Army at Fort McPherson, Ga. With the same arm, Chandler pitched the Yanks to two World Series victories against the Cards last fall and won 20 games during the regular season.

Although he is deaf, which makes him 4-F for the Army Draft, Bill Voiselle yesterday signed at New York to play with the National League Giants. Last year he won 10 and lost 21 games as a pitcher with Jersey City.

Bill Cowley, veteran centre of the Boston Bruins, has been lost to the N. H. L. club for another 10 days, it was announced at Boston yesterday, because of water on the left knee resulting from a bump with Flash Hollett in Sunday's game with Detroit Red Wings.

One of the fastest cricket bowlers from the colonies ever to tour England, George John of Port of Spain, Trinidad, died yesterday at the age of 57. During the West Indian tour of England in 1923 he was credited with taking more than 100 wickets.

The five-year-old First Fiddle came with a rush to win the $3,500 lecompte handicap by two lengths yesterday at New Orleans td defeat Pop's Pick and Rounders, thus upsetting the dope for Saturday's $25,000 New Orleans handicap.

A 15-round title bout for the featherweight chapionship of the world was arranged yesterday between Phil Terranova of New York, the Champion, and Manuel Ortiz of Los Angeles, bantamweight champion, to be staged in Los Angeles March 29. Terranova was guaranteed $15,000 and expenses.

Toronto, Feb. 16—(CP)—Vancouver is all cluttered up with rumors it may enter the Pacific Coast Baseball League this year. It is reported Vancouver interests have acquired the Sacramento Senators franchise and that final arrangements depend only on completion of purchase of Athletic Park, long-time baseball and football arena, by another group which would either lease or rent the Fifth Avenue Park to the baseball club.

Reports say the group attempting to buy the ball park is the same one which controls Seattle Rainiers of the Coast League. Emil Sick is Rainiers President. The reputed price is $37,500. The park is owned by the C. P. R.

A Vancouver entry in the Coast League would be the West's year venture into Class AA ball, on a par with International League clubs in Montreal and Toronto. Athletic Park will accommodate 7,000 for baseball—has, in fact, housed 9,000 for soccer.

Incidentally:

Montreal Royals of the International Ball circuit have sent 1944 contracts to 28 players. Old familiars being offered contracts include pitchers Al Sherer and Wes Flowers, outfielders Gilly Brack and Walter Whipple and infielders Alex Hooks and Red Barnhart. . . Danny Holden, Vancouver High School baseball pitcher, has been asked by Brooklyn Dodgers if he is available for spring Training. He said yes an now is waiting at the church . . . Bill Cowley's chances of overtaking Herb Cain in the N. H. L.'s individual scoring race are slim because they are on the same forward line and a majority of their points come simultaneously.

Round and About:

Growth of curling is so rapid in Manitoba, particularly among youngsters, that construction of more and larger rinks is indicated in the immediate post-war period . . . The Jack Gordon efficiency medal, Alberta's "most valuable player" hockey prize 25 years ago in the Herb Gardiner era at Calgary, is still in circulation, won this year by Sugar Jim Henry . . . Andy (Toronto Star) Lytle suggests the Stanley Cup be awarded this year to New York where the fans have turned out in record numbers to see Rangers become "the greatest losers since Eve put up that special job on Father Adam."

What's Doing in Sport

Washington—(AP) — The Draft Board yesterday re-classified Sammy Angott, N.B.A., lightweight boxing champion, as 1-A and ordered him to report for final physical examination here Feb. 28. Angott is scheduled to defend his title against Juan Zurita, March 6, and may ask to have the examination transferred to Los Angeles, scene of the scrap.

Trenton—(CP) — Charlie Box, former Toronto football and lacrosse player, has been appointed chief sports officer of the Trenton R.C.A.F. station in succession to Flt. Lt. F. E. Horton, transferred to Winnipeg. Box, who holds the rank of flying officer, was captain of the 1939 Mustangs when they captured the intercollegiate gridiron title.

Mexico City—(AP)—President S. B. Gonzalez, of the Mexican Polo Association announced yesterday teams of the United States and Argentina had accepted invitations to participate in the second international polo tournament here in April.

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 16—(AP)—The Hartford Courant said today that Willie Pep, who holds the New York version of the world's featherweight championship, has been given a medical discharge by the United States navy, it is thought that ear trouble was the medical reason for the fighter's discharge.

HAD 50 WINE PERMITS

Toronto, Feb. 16—(CP)—Robert Adams yesterday was fined $1,560 or 360 days by Magistrate J. L. Pritchard following conviction on 15 charges of having fictitious permits for the purchase of native wine. Accused admitted having 50 permits which did not belong to him.

Cleveland, Feb. 16—(AP) — The batteries for last night's game—oh, we forgot, it was a boxing match—featured Beau Jack, the New York conception of the lightweight championship, in the pitcher's box, and welterweight Maxie Berger—who should have known better—on the receiving end.

Berger, 27-year-old New York and Montreal leather pusher, figured his bout with the former Augusta, Ga., bootblack would put him into the big-time. He did receive a sizeable check, but he'll go back to club fighting.

Leaping in to register with slashing left hooks and following up with staggering rights, the Beau took all except the sixth round on the Associated Press score sheet—he missed that one because Referee Joe Sedley penalized him for low punching.

Berger went down for a two-count in the seventh after absorbing a choice assortment of the Jack artillery but he managed to stick it out for the full 10 rounds.

The Beau came into the ring at 138 pounds for his over-the-weight match, five and three-quarter pounds less than his opponent. The gross gate of $30,040 represented 8,206 customers.

New York, Feb. 16. (AP)— The Dodgers' farm system apparently was that finally soured Jeweler Max Meyer on the deal to purchase 75 per cent of the Brooklyn Ball Club . . . After looking things over Max decided he didn't have the dough to shoulder all the potentially expensive appendages that went with the Club. . . . For 16 golf tournament rounds so far this winter, not counting the Phoenix play-off, Jug McSpaden has averaged 68.75 strokes and Byron Nelson 69.05.

Sherts and Shells.

With 49 scoring points so far, Toronto's Gus Bodnar already has busted the National Hockey League's rookie scoring record. . . The National Football League is thinking about overhauling its statistical system to include yardage, touchdown passes, percentage of interceptions and a few other odds and ends in deciding the passing champions next fall. . . And probably the only guy who will understand it will be the Bears' signalcaller. . .

Whose Here?

When Lieut. Benny Leonard, Herb Pennock and Charley Brickley met at a recent war bond rally in Wilmington, Del., the former lightweight champ's first question was: "which one is Herb Pennock? I've been wanting to meet him for years". And about the same time Pennock remarked, looking at Benny: "There's the greatest two-handed pitcher I ever saw".

EVEN ON SEASON

(By The Canadian Press)

In a crucial contest of the scheduled Junior "A" series of the Ontario Hockey Association before 7,610 spectators at Toronto Tuesday night, St. Michael's College administered a decisive 5-2 trimming to Oshawa Generals to come within two points of leadership in Group 1 held by the visitors. The students soon left no doubt of their superiority in the night's play by monopolizing all the scoring until the third period, when Generals bagged their two counters in quick succession. No tallies were registered in the final 15 minutes of the fray.

A minute after the opening face-off, Frank Dunlap came through with the first for Collegians, Lindsay and Dave Bauer following to make the count 3-0 for the initial period. To Red Lindsay went the honor of notching the sole point in the second stanza, this being his second success of the evening. In the third, Joe Sadler scored No. 5 in less than three minutes when Oshawa took over.

In Group 2, Galt Kists gave a smart display at Brantford to trim the Lions 8-2, thus keeping them in fourth spot in the standing, the encounter being featured by a fistic demonstration in the second period with Referee Dinty Moore sending both teams off the ice to cool off. The game was delayed 27 minutes because of the fracas. Curik of Galt, set the pace with four goals, other scorers including Podolsky and Ubriaco. Jeffrey and Jolly counted for Lions, both Brantford scores coming in the first period. Galt trotted out a newcomer in Win Mousseau of Powassan.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Three old prospectors were snowbound for the winter in Alaska and agreed that they would alternate weeks in doing the cabin chores. It was further agreed, so as to keep things more peaceful, that whenever anyone complained, he had to assume the balance of the week's work, in addition to his regular turn.

One cold morning old Rattlesnake Pete got tired of his housework, and decided a generous portion of kerosene in the oatmeal might bring out a complaint and excuse him from further duty that week. The first of his unsuspecting friends who tasted the oatmeal spread his first mouthful across the cabin and roared: "Some ornery galoot has put coal oil in my oat meal," and then remembering the fate of the one who criticized, he quickly and even louder exlaimed: "But I like it that way!"

(New sports officer.)

FO. Charlie Box, brother of Toronto's well known football star, Ab Box, has been promoted to the post of chief sports officer at the Trenton R.C.A.F. main station last week. FO. Box comes to Trenton well qualified to assume the post left vacant when FL. "Buff" Horton was recently promoted to the post of chief sports officer of the No. 2 command R.C.A.F. at Winnipeg. FO. Box reviewed the extended athletic and recreation intramural program set up by FL. Horton and intends to carry it through for the present semester.

Another airman well known to Belleville wrestling fans was posted out of Trenton the other day in the person of Sergt. Ted Miller, who was given an opportunity to display his wrestling wares by Promoter Frank Tunney last fall. After making his debut at the Hume Arena, Ted was given a couple of bouts in the Maple Leaf Gardens.

(Slur on burlesque)

According to an Associated Press despatch, the Congress of the United States is wrestling with a new problem—what to do about women wrestlers, says Doug Vaughan in the Windsor Star. Their public performances, a congressional committee was told, are nothing less than burlesque shows and should be stopped. The witness, the Rev. Oscar Blackwelder, was one of four Washinton clergymen who testified Wednesday on the causes of juvenile delinquency in the Capital. What women wrestlers have to do with juvenile delinquency, we wouldn't know. But we do agree that watching the female of the species grunt, grip, grimace and groan is nothing more than a burlesque show—and the very lowest of burlesque. In fact we think it is a slur on what we understand as burlesque. We have at least seen some burlesque shows that we've enjoyed and never yet have we departed with anything but a feeling of nausea after watching a couple of she-elephants paw one another round. If the U.S. Congress really wants to know what to do about women wrestlers we'll be glad to tell them. But the information will have to be forwarded in a sealed despatch—it wouldn't look good in public print.

(Juveniles look good.)

Bill Dennis' Belleville juveniles advanced to the second round of the Provincial Juvenile Hockey playdowns after beating Trenton 13 to 9 on the round, winning 7 to 4 last night. The local kids, barring a little carelessness in the latter stages of the third period, showed too much class all along the line, especially the front line trio of Harry Boyd, Al Meagher and Jack Wardhaugh. The smart passing plays tried by Dennis' kids was a treat to watch at times. Of course there are a lot of rough edges to polish off but the kids are trying and the fans are missing some good hockey that is being dished up by the juveniles. The few fans present went for Harry Boyd, the pivot man on Dennis' high scoring line. His style stamps him a player the fans like to see in action, his passes being in a scoring position pretty much of the time. Both Meagher and Wardhaugh seemed to play much better, when teamed with Boyd, as did Roddy Lyall.

However, Boyd wasn't the only cog in the locals' winning machine as Doug Green and Don Adams showed the willingness to body check incoming opponents. True enough this pair aren't as proficient as seniors, but at least they were willing to try and that's exactly how players learn—trying. Up front coach Dennis' crowd needs a little more practice in the art of taking advantage of those long passes up to the opponents' blue line or that new centre red line attack. Just what team Belleville meets next is not know, but it may be Whitby in the event Kingston is not entered this year.

The fact the Trenton team boasted of no less than four junior players last night speaks all the more for the prowess of the locals, whose only addition was Jack Wardhaugh, a junior of juvenile age and a stick-handling wizard.

(Remember when)

The conclusion of the Olympic winter games at Garmisch-Partenkirchen eight years ago tonight found Norway in front with 121 points, Germany in second place had 57 and Canada was ninth with nine points, four of which were gained in hockey as the Dominion pucksters failed for the first time to win the Olympic hockey championship, which went to Jimmy Forster and his English team. Even though Forster was a Canadian.

(Wants spitter back.)

The "vitamin-filled rabbit ball" the major leagues are using just doesn't meet with the approval of Big Ed Walsh, the old Chicago White Sox iron-man hurler. He would like to see the return of the outlawed spitball to give the pitchers a better break.

"Only one in 20 pitchers can throw a real curve today," declared Big Ed, a 4-game winner for the Pale Hose in 1908. "Put the spitball back in and let 'em get their curves with it. Or put a ban on this danged rabbit ball. This generation is too home-run conscious."

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 394

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There are lots of snooty bids in bridge. Many of them are not worth hobnobbing with. Others are the McCoy. Like a one-jump bid. Now, there is a bid with real class.

You have this hand,

♠A K 10 3 2
♥Q 7 6 2
♦K 7 6 2
♣None

Your hand contains a strong spade suit; two sure trickks (AK); four high cards (ace, two kings, a queen); seven suit tricks (four high cards, and three short cards in clubs).

That hand of yours has all the needs for an opening bid of one spade, and then some. But suppose your partner has started with an opening bid of one heart and you have that hand. Jeepers!

Your partner shows, among other things, a minimum of five suit tricks. With your seven, you already see 12 tricks. Not only do you see enough for a game. You have visions of a slam.

Before he knows what you have, partner expects two tricks from you. A normal bid from you will show only three tricks. With a hand like yours, he deserves better advice from you.

So, you must employ a bid that is not usual. And a one-jump is one of those things. It is a signal that says: "Pal, we have a game in something. Don't let this bidding die short of game."

If the one-jump is at the first opportunity, it also guarantees two sure tricks. That classy bid promptly fortifies him with the dope he may need for the best future operations in your pair.

All bids follow the order of choice in T-A-N; takeout, assist, no-trump. So, even with your powerful support for his heart suit, you first takeout to spades. One-jump at once to two spades.

Don't sit back there and preen yourself with the knowledge of what a beautiful hand you have. Let your partner in on it. When you have enough, give partner the one-jump signal.

AT THE BELLE

"Salute to the Marines", in Color

Screen veteran Wallace Beery makes his first appearance in Technicolor in M-G-M-'s "Salute to the Marines" now closing at the Belle Theatre.

Although he has appeared in fifty-three feature length films since beginning his screen career 30 years ago, he has never been photographed before in color. The cast includes Fay Bainter, Reginald Owen, Ray Collins, Keye Luke and Marilyn Maxwell.

The Canadian Fox Movietone News and another Metro colorfun cartoon, "Stork's Holiday", precede the feature attraction.

"The Iron Major", Appealing

Glowing with sincerity and realism, RKO Radio's new starring vehicle for Pat O'Brien, "The Iron Major", comes next to the Belle Theatre.

The film brings to life the inspiring career of the late Major Frank Cavanaugh, famous football coach and World War I hero who led his regiment at Verdun with the same dauntless spirit with which he led his grid squads at Dartmouth and Holy Cross and Fordham.

A man who symbolized America and the American ideal of fighting for what a man believes, Cavanaugh imbued his football squads with his own attitude, whipped them to a pride and loyalty and determination that outweighed odds of size and strength, and brought his teams long strings of victories.

The outcome is a notable and brilliant motion picture that covers in compelling fashion the whole of Cavanaugh's career from his school-boy days in Worcester to his death ten years ago, points up with telling clarity the motives that lay behind his actions, and the inspiration that he furnishes to every American today.

In the title-role O'Brien gives one of the finest performances of his many years on the screen, a performance for which he is ideally fitted. Ruth Warrick does a splendid job as his understanding wife, and Robert Ryan is extraordinary convincing as the young priest. Leon Ames,Bruce Edwards and Russell Wade are also outstanding in supporting roles.

"Coastal Command" True Drama

A grand, inspiring film document is "Coastal Command", released by RKO Radio and made with the cooperation of the British Air Ministry and Admiralty, announced as the added feature attraction on the same program.

It is the factual story of the men who shepherd convoys, sink submarines and bring about the doom of Nazi surface raiders.

A new community sing film presenting hits of yesterday and tomorrow will also be exhibited.

AT THE McCARTHY

"One Foot in Heaven"

"One Foot in Heaven" the Frederic March-Martha Scott co-starring film which opened at the McCarthy theatre today has something brand new to offer in the way of screen entertainment. Based on the best-selling novel by Hartzell Spence, it tells the story of a "practical" parson and his family in the first part of the century. Spence's own family are the characters in the real-life story and they have been brought to life delightfully by the able cast of players.

There is humor, warmth and the spirit of abiding faith in the story of the man who served God nobly, with one foot in the heaven and the other very solidly on the ground. His was no Sunday job, but an all week job of solving the problems, easing the sorrows, sharing the joys of his congregation. In his tasks he was ably assited by his wife who stood by him in all times of stress and subtly engineered him into the right decision in many of his problems. To their three very human youngsters fell the task of serving as models for the children of the congregation, and the job wasn't always an easy one. Romance and drama and rich humor were integral parts of the Spence family life and they are integral parts of the motion picture.

Besides Barch and Miss Scott the talented cast includes Frankie Thomas, Elizabeth Fraser, Harry Davenport, Beulah Bondi, Moroni Olsen, Vera Lewis, Jerome Cowan, Ernest Cossart, Nana Bryant, Roscoe Ates, and dozens of others.

The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle

The true love story of the dancing idols of an exciting yesterday including a great cavalcade of the dances that created a world-wide sensation. The Story of Vernon and Iren Castle starring Fred Astaire, and Ginger Rogers with Edna May Oliver, Walter Brennan, Lou Fields and Janet Beacher is the 2nd feature now at the McCarthy theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Let's Face It"

Beginning next at the Capitol Theatre Paramount's new musicalaugh film, "Let's Face It", will be seen, with Bob Hope and Betty Hutton co-sarred, supported by Dona Drake, Cully Richards, Eve Arden, ZaSu Pitts, Marjorie Weaver and Raymond Walburn.

The film is a picturization of the Cole Porter stage hit and some of the original tunes have been retained. There is an additional one by Sammy Cahn and Jule Stype called "Who Did? I Did! Yes, I Did!" which is sung as a duet by Betty and Bob.

Hope once again plays a soldier but this time his troubles are not confined to the camp grounds as they were in "Caught in the Draft". He wanders afield and winds up where you might expect—in the guardhouse, all because he needs money to marry Betty and tries to earn it by entertaining three restless but rich wives.

"Blazing Guns"

Ken Maynard and Hoot Gibson, the "Trail Blazers" featured in Monogram's "Blazing Guns", which opens next at the Capitol Theatre, are genuine all-round cowhands. Each man can rope, ride and shoot well enough to outclass most competition, Gibson at one time having won the title as the world's champion cowboy. They exhibit all these talents in "Blazing Guns", a rip-roaring saga of early western days.

A colored cartoon and the serial "Secret Service in Darkest Africa" complete the big bill.

Ken Watson Wins Grand Aggregate

Winnipeg, Feb. 16 —(CP)— Ken Watson, winner of the Dominion Curling Championship in 1936 and 1941, Tuesday night captured grand aggregate honors at the 56th annual Manitoba bonspiel, climaxing a day that brought him four victories and stretched his undefeated string in the 'spiel to 15 games.

Watson's fourth victory was an 11-5 triumph at the expense of Jimmy Welsh of Winnipeg Deer Lodge in the semi-final of the Eaton event and coupled with the double defeat of Harry Morrow's Melita, Man., entry, guaranteed Watson the aggregate crown.

T. Johnson of Baldur, Man., became the first trophy winner of the spiel by defeating J. D. Henry of Manitou, Man., 12-9 in the final for the City Hydro trophy.

Derby Nominations Closed at Midnight

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 16 (AP)—Nominations for the seventieth running of the Kentucky Derby closed at midnight yesterday as track speculators forecase a subscription list exceeding last year when 110 thoroughbreds were named for the classic.

The list of three-year-old nominees, whose requirements are a $25 nominating fee, and formal registration with the Jockey Club, will not be made public for three weeks. Owners have until Derby eve, May 5, to post the $500 entry fee

Platters, rated for many savants as the outstanding two-year-old last year and a leading rival to Pukka Gin and Occupy, will be on the list of nominees.

The names of Occupy, Belmont Futurity winner, and the crack fillies Durazna, Harriett Sue and Miss Keenland are also reported in the hopper.

The list is almost sure to include also such stars as Olympic Zenith, Gay Bit, Weyanoke, Pensive, Black Badge, Alorter, Jezrahel, Rodney Stone and Director J. E.

76 Rinks Remain Unbeaten in Spiel

Toronto, Feb. 16 —(CP)—Curlers participating in the 17th annual Ontario bonspiel today continued play in the Birks-Ellis-Ryrie trophy event and opened play for the North American Life trophy after resting from their labors with broom and stone last night to take part in the annual banquet.

Three widely known curlers—Peter Gilbert of Chatham, W. A. Mahoney of Guelph and S. A. Morrison of Meaford—were presented with life memberships in the Ontario Curling Association at the banquet which was attended by 592 persons.

Twenty-six rinks remained unbeaten as the third day's play started this morning.

Toronto Skaters To Appear Here

Miss Wilson and "Vi Vi" Smith Will Skate at Ice Carnival

Two of Canada's outstanding figure skaters will supplement the annual Quinte Skating Club Ice Carnival at the Hume Arena on Friday night in the person of Miss Virginia Wilson, of the Toronto Skating Club and runner-up for the Canadian ladies senior figure skating championship at Ottawa recently. The other feature skater is petite "Vi Vi" Smith, heralded juvenile skater also from the Toronto Skating Club. These two outstanding skaters will be featured along with a galaxy of Belleville figure skaters from the Quinte Skating Club. Prior to the figure skating exhibitions a pantomime "The Court of Old King Cole" will be presented in suitable surroundings.

Of the local skaters to be featured in solo and doubles of fancy and figure skating Mike Ridley will again thrill the patrons with his skating acrobatics. A sensational double is being prepared by the local juvenile team of Marilyn and Doris Kerr, and a repeat performance from last year of the skating of Margaret Williams and Connie Maker. Bill Davis will skate with Barbara Bews in another doubles, and also with his sister, Mrs. Olivia Weese. These are only a few of the galaxy of skating stars to appear along with Miss Wilson and petite "Vi Vi" Smith, Canada's outstanding 12-year-old fancy skater at the annual Quinte Skating Club Carnival here.

Soldiers to Watch Airmen Playing

Thursday night being the monthly "sports night" for the officers and men of all ranks of the First Battalion Argyll Light Infantry the troops will be treated to a special evening of entertainment. They will parade at the armouries and then march as a unit to the Hume arena where they will take in the double-header of hockey in the Quinte R.C.A.F. service hockey league. The teams playing include Trenton "Flyers" versus No. 6 Repair Depot and Mountain View versus the Deseronto Mohawks.

NOTED MUSICIAN DIES

London, Feb. 16 (CP)—Dr. Harvey Grace, 69, editor of the magazine "Musical Times" since 1918, died here today. Widely known as a musician, he was organist and choir leader Chichester cathedral from 1931 until 1938.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating breakfast and ma said, Finish those hot cakes, Benny, before Nora brings in some nice fresh ones.

Aw, I dont think I want any more, I dont even know if I'm sure I want to finish these, I said, and ma said, Well, that's a strange statement coming from such a source, I must say.

When a boy doesn't bite a hot cake, that's news, pop said, and ma said, Dont you feel well for land sakes?

Oh, I guess I feel all right, only I had a bum dream just before I woke up and it must of kind of spoilt my appetite, I said, and ma said, Well try to forget it, it's all over and done with now.

Not necessarily, pop said. All life is but a dream, and often the effect is just about the same whether a thing actually happens or whether we only imagine it or even if we merely dream it. If we get out of the wrong side of the bed and step on a tack, it's no more likely to start the day wrong than if we simply dream we've stepped on a tack and cant even quite remember what we dreamed, except that it was unpleasant, he said, and I said, Well I remember what I dreamed all right.

Good, because in that case all you have to do is laugh it off, pop said. Tell us about it and we'll laugh it off with you, he said, and I said, Well, I dreamed I worked in a candy store, and there was a sign up saying, Employees please help themselfs.

And you call that a bad dream for land sakes? ma said, and I said, Sure, because I didn't have any teeth and the only kinds of candy in the store was about a thousand different kinds of hard candy.

Yee gods, laugh it off by yourself, pop said, and just then Nora brought in the 2nd batch of hot cakes and I couldn't stand the smell and took some.

The Red Carnation

By Burton Stevenson

CHAPTER 12

"Was the man dead?"

"His eyes were open," answered the boy thickly, "and he was staring up at me looking sort of surprised and for an instant I thought he was going to say something. Then the life seemed to go out of his eyes. I guess he died right then."

"What did you do?"

"I saw the white carnation in his buttonhole. It reminded me of my red one, so I changed them. Just then I heard a bell ringing. I think it had been ringing for a long time, but I hadn't noticed it before. After a minute I realized that somebody was at the door, ringing the bell. I didn't know what to do. I was scared—I was more scared than if I had really killed him." Franklin passed his hand across his forehead as though he were living that dreadful moment over again.

"What did you do?"

"I knew I had to answer the bell so I put my hand in my pocket with the pistol still in it, and went to the door and opened it."

"Was there somebody there?"

"Yes. It was Leda." Suddenly the youth dropped forward and put his head in his hands. "That's all," he said hoarsely. "Don't ask me any more."

Duffy took a deep breath and got to his feet. "Let's have some light," he said and went over to the door and snapped on the switch. Then he sat down again and looked at Tony. "What do you think of it so far?" he asked.

"It seems to make sense. It hitches up with what we already know."

"I'm not so sure," the detective declared. "Too many coincidences, if you ask me."

"They do happen," Tony pointed out.

"Yes, but I always wonder whether they haven't been arranged. And there are one or two things."

He stopped abruptly and rolled his cigar to the other side of his mouth, as he always did when he was disturbed about something. He was looking at Leda Terry, slipped forward in her chair as though she had no strength left in her body, staring at her brother, a wrinkle of perplexity between her eyes.

"All right, sister," said Duffy abruptly. "Let's have your story."

The words brought Leda upright in her chair. In an instant, the doubt and perplexity in her face were wiped away. There was not the slightest trace of fear in her eyes as she looked at Duffy, but there was a great weariness.

Leda began her story in a voice low but clear. . . . She had been so shocked by her father's death and by the police investigation which followed it that she had gone to her room to lie down as soon as her brother had been driven away in the coroner's car, and almost at once had dropped into a sleep of utter exhaustion. Lucy had finally come to her bed and waked her.

"I hates to disturb you-all, Miss Leda," she said, "but I's worried about that boy. He rushed out just now lookin' mighty queer. And he done give me this letter."

Leda read the line her brother had written her and understood instantly. The ancient law . . . A life for a life. Her brother, hot-headed and impetuous, intended to find this McKibben and kill him. She must stop that at any cost, and there was no time to lose.

"Get me my gray evening gown, Lucy," she said.

"Why an evening gown?" Duffy broke in.

"Because I didn't know where I should find Mr. McKibben," she explained. "I thought it might be at some night club or restaurant which I could not enter unless I had on an evening dress."

"You're an expert in night clubs, I suppose?"

"No—I had never been in one."

"And you chose the evening of your father's death to make your debut," he remarked.

A spasm of pain crossed her face. "That's not fair!" she protested. "I was thinking about father. But I had to find my brother. I had to save him somehow."

"You didn't have to dance," Duffy retorted. "You did dance, I believe?"

"Yes—I couldn't avoid it. Mr. McKibben was insistent and I had to wait for my brother to prevent another tragedy."

Leda's story continued: She changed into the evening dress, phoned for a taxi, caught up her hand-bag, drove to the station and just managed to catch the 7:50 train for New York. She knew her brother was at least half an hour ahead of her—and so much could happen in half an hour!

"It was 8:20 when I got to Grand Central," she went on. "I jumped into the first taxi that came along, gave the driver the address, and told him to hurry. I don't think it took us over ten minutes to get to Central Park West. I paid the driver, ran up the steps, and told the elevator boy to take me up to Mr. McKibben's apartment. Just then the other elevator opened and a man stepped out.

"'There's Mr. McKibben now,' the boy said."

"Just one more coincidence!" Duffy muttered grumpily.

"I am telling you exactly what happened," said Leda.

"All right. What did happen?"

"I said, 'Oh, Mr. McKibben, I must speak to you for a moment.' He was surprised, of course, and looked me up and down; then he took me to a corner of the lobby. I said, 'My brother is looking for you to kill you. You mustn't go out tonight.' He sort of laughed and said, 'So you don't want me killed?' I said, 'I don't care if you're killed, but I don't want my brother to do it! He laughed again and said, 'I am always prepared to take care of myself,' and then he looked more serious and said, 'Who is your brother, anyway? I don't know him.' I said, 'He's the son of Lawrence Terry, who killed himself this afternoon. He stopped grinning then and said, 'Killed himself? That is sad, indeed! Come along and we'll talk it over' and he took my arm and let me out to a taxi. We got in and he told the driver to drive around Central Park."

Leda told him about her father's suicide. "It's too bad," McKibben said, when she finished, "but it wasn't anything I could help. I've got a date, but if you'd like to come along to help protect me, it's all right with me. I'd like to meet your brother and explain things."

Then they had picked up Lily Edgerton and had dinner some place and had gone on to a night club, she didn't know where and McKibben had drunk a lot and had made her dance. Leda could see that deep down underneath he was uneasy, and finally he had announced that they were going home. In the taxi, Lily had been very cross and when they got to her hotel, McKibben wouldn't go in with her, as she wanted him to do but get back into the taxi and told the driver to take them back to his apartment.

By the time Leda had got thus far along with her story, her words were getting jumbled together.

"Take it easy now," said Duffy gruffly. "We're getting to the important part and I don't want you to leave out anything. Nor put in anything."

Tony wondered if the detective had noticed one or two discrepancies. If he had, he made no sign.

"Now, then," Duffy went on, "what happened in the taxi?"

"Nothing happened."

"You don't mean to say McKibben didn't make any—er, advances?"

"No. He seemed to be worried about something."

"Did you feel a pistol in his pocket when he rubbed against you?"

"He didn't rub against me. I sat over in my corner."

"And he sat over in his corner?"

"Yes."

"All right. Let's get along. You got to the apartment. Every little detail, mind."
